Now, it is shown by the testimony in this case, fairly and clearly and beyond controversy, that 1,166 are the correct figures. That brings the minority of the committee face to face with 28 votes to come out of the 37 majority, as claimed by them, leaving only 9 of their claimed majority for the sitting member. That brings us uncomfortably close together, as my friend from Texas [Mr. MOORE] will find when he comes to argue upon the basis of his minority report. The Calvert County Journal, edited by the attorney for the sitting member, gives the official figures on the 10th day of November, and I offer this merely as corroborative of the statement that the returns now on file show the same thing. The Calvert County Journal gives the figures for Mudd at 1,166. The Democratic editor of that paper was a witness before the committee, and his testimony is in the record. In that testimony he swears that he carefully collated the returns immediately after the election, and that the returns as published by him, to which I have called the attention of the House, are correct. Consequently there is nothing to breathe any suspicion on the returns as they now appear on file in the office of the clerk of the county of Calvert. Those are the original returns.

The footings that were sent to the governor were nothing more than the general result. We go behind the returns to attack the returns with the returns in this particular case; but we go back to the original returns in Calvert County, and there is no controversy that they are correct and they are the original evidence.

In computing these returns, no matter which way you figure, whether you figure with the minority report backwards or with the majority report forwards, you find a majority in favor of the contestant if you correct the returns from Calvert County. So that that question is a vital one, and the clerk who made the addition himself swears that he made a mistake; and he was a Democrat. I do not say that as giving him greater credit or standing before the House, but merely for the purpose of calling attention to the fact that he is an interested witness adverse to the contestant. The deputy clerk, who made the footing himself, says that if it does not agree with these original returns it is wrong; that the original returns show the correct figures.

There was no controversy about it at the time, and the mistake of 28 votes in Calvert County should be corrected. Now, adding the 28 votes in Calvert County and the returns that had been locked up in Charles County, you have, taking the minority's figures for it, a plurality of only 9 for the sitting member. In order to make that plurality they count out 1 vote upon which there was a "sticker" for Mr. Mudd. Some Republican or Democrat, I don't know which, who voted for Mr. Mudd, was so anxious to vote for him that he got a "sticker" and stuck Mudd's name upon the ticket, so that it appeared there twice, and that vote was not counted for Mudd; the minority in their report threw that vote out. There can be nothing clearer than that the fact that the name of a candidate appears upon a ticket twice furnishes no reason why the vote should not be counted for him at least once. Nothing is better settled than that, and when you make this rectification it reduces by one the 9 majority claimed for the sitting member.

Mr. COMPTON. Where was that "sticker" stuck? Was it not upon the words "For Congress?"

Mr. LACEY. It is claimed that it was over the words "For Congress," and it is claimed by the sitting member, and by his counsel, and by the minority that, inasmuch as the "sticker" got over the words "For Congress," the ticket should not be counted.

But there are authorities holding that even if the words "For Congress" had been erased, if the name of the man running for Congress was written on the ticket or printed on the ticket, the omission of the words "For Congress" would not prevent the vote from being counted. It is said, however, that there is a law of the State of Maryland preventing such a vote from being counted. But this House is the "judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members" and has always held that where a man's name is upon the ticket, either in print or in writing, and is the name of the only man running for the office or the man who is understood to be the candidate for that particular office, it shall be counted.

Then there was a scratched ticket in Calvert County which was not counted for Mr. Mudd. That scratched ticket is testified to by Mr. Perran, the same Democratic editor to whose evidence I have already called attention. He says that the vote was not counted, yet it appears that Mr. Mudd's name was clearly upon the ticket.

Mr. Mudd also received three votes, one for S. N. Mudd, one for S. E. Mudd, and one for Mudd. Under the rule laid down in the case of Wallace vs. McKinley in this House these votes should be counted.

I wish to call the attention of the House to the recapitulation which I will incorporate in my remarks, not taking time to read it, showing the official returns as they actually appeared after correcting the returns of Charles County and Calvert County. I will also give in tabulated form the vote by counties, incorporating this statement in my remarks without reading it.

RECAPITULATION.

County or city.	Sydney E. Mudd.	S. N. Mudd.	S. E. Mudd.	Mudd.	Barnes Compton.
Anne Arundel County.	3,015	1			2,776
Baltimore city.	3,186				2,472
Baltimore County.	743				1,020
Calvert County.	1,166				896
Charles County.	1,864				1,714
Howard County.	1,550				1,764
Prince George's County.	3,004				3,072
St. Mary's County.	1,732		1	1	1,366
Total.	16,280	1	1	1	16,280

Total vote for Mr. Mudd..... 16,283
Total vote for Mr. Compton..... 16,280

Mr. Mudd's plurality..... 3

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman summarize those statements so that we may understand their character?

Mr. LACEY. Yes, sir; I will give a summary of the statements if the gentleman desires to hear it. Here is the summary as given by the majority of the committee:

For Sydney E. Mudd..... 16,279
For S. N. Mudd..... 1
For S. E. Mudd..... 1
For Mudd..... 1
"One ticket upon which Sydney E. Mudd's name appeared twice and Mudd's name was not counted in the above returns"..... 1

Total..... 16,283
For Barnes Compton..... 16,280

Plurality for Sydney E. Mudd..... 3

Then further along there is 1 vote for — Compton, which is also counted, giving to the contestant upon the face of the returns a majority of 2.

Mr. CRISP. That does not include the recount—

Mr. LACEY. No, sir.

Mr. CRISP. Which the gentleman admits was a gain of 19 or 20.

Mr. LACEY. Next comes the question of the recount to which my friend from Georgia calls my attention, and upon which I intended next to speak. It is a little remarkable that the recount in Maryland, like the recount in West Virginia, seems always to result on the Democratic side, or substantially so. There was some gain on both sides; but the result is a gain of 19 or 20 votes in favor of the contestee. But the committee and the contestant waived that question and gave to the contestee the benefit of that recount, which, upon the face of the returns, after the recount is had, would again give the majority to the sitting member. There is no question, however, between the majority and the minority of the committee as to the fact that there are certain errors in the poll-lists which ought to be corrected; and when those errors are corrected the majority is transferred again to the other side.

Among the statutes of Maryland there is a strict registration law. After the registration is made at the county seat, the clerk or county officer sends copies of the poll-list to the various voting precincts, and those copies should and must agree with the original registration. It is conceded by the minority of the committee that where the poll-list fails to agree in some unimportant particular with the original registration the voter should have his vote counted, notwithstanding it is refused because of the failure to have an accurate transcript made.

Mr. COMPTON. Where it is identified.

Mr. LACEY. Yes, where it is identified. Now, I call the attention of my friend from Texas again to this question. He says in the report:

We have reached the conclusion that whenever a voter did tender his vote and his name was upon the list of voters furnished to the judges of election, although the middle name or initial might be wrongly entered, still his vote should be counted as it should have been received by the judges, the object of registration being for the purpose of identification of a voter, or if the name given by the voter was idem sonans with the name registered. By applying this rule a number of votes claimed by each side, as will be hereafter shown, must be rejected.

There are certain names which I will hand to the reporter to be incorporated in my remarks, not taking time to read them; and adopting this rule the minority have given a credit for 18 of those votes to the contestant; and after giving that credit of those 18 votes there is a majority of 37 votes against the contestant, according to the finding of the minority. But after correcting, as I have already stated, the computation of the minority by subtracting 28 votes in Calvert County, there remain only 9. After we have made the correction by counting the 3 names, S. N. Mudd, S. E. Mudd, and Mudd, after correcting by allowing the ticket upon which Mr. Mudd's name appears twice; after correcting by admitting the vote in Calvert County upon which the scratch appears, it makes 6 to come from these 9, leaving us only 3 votes apart upon the minority report.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if we adopt the rule stated here that the votes should have been received, although the middle name or initial letter may have been wrongly entered, let us see how many additional names there are that ought to be counted for Mr. Mudd in this contest.

John Henry Thomas gave his name to the judges of election as "Henry Thomas," and because he called himself "Henry" instead of "John Henry" his vote was thrown out. Now, according to the spirit of this report of the minority, if not in accordance with its letter, the vote of John Henry Thomas ought to be counted. The vote of David R. Brooks is excluded because his name was on the books as David W. Brooks. Now, I will ask my friend from Texas, when he comes to address the House, to state upon what theory he excludes the name of David W. Brooks, after saying that where the middle letter is wrong the vote must still be counted. After laying down this position when the name of David W. Brooks appears, which ought to have been David R. Brooks, the gentleman refuses to count it.

So with Benjamin F. Gamble. His name was given as Benjamin Gamble. Why does the gentleman throw out that vote? Simply because the "F." standing, no doubt, for Franklin, was omitted from the name. That is a mere oversight, and I do not see how the gentleman can explain to the House any reason for throwing out the vote. It is in direct conflict with the rule laid down in his report.

In this manner we find 37 as the total majority figured for contestee by the gentleman representing the minority, but I am inclined to think he was a little too generous, and that he will be disposed to modify his minority report in the House, because, unless he does so, he must by his own logic count these 3 votes for the contestant. The vote of John Taylor was rejected because his name appeared as John E. Taylor, and he gives as another reason for throwing it out because he claims that John Taylor did not press his right to vote with sufficient earnestness or force.

Isaiah Chester was on the poll-list as Isaac Chester. In reading it off, no doubt, by the parties having charge of the registration, the error occurred because of the similarity of the words Isaac and Isaiah. The words, sounding alike, were mistaken for each other. The next is the case of Robert Reed, who is excluded, not because his name is wrong, but because the number of his house was incorrectly given. Taking the minority report, and on the logic of the argument these votes must also be counted for the contestant. Lev Cure was not counted because his name was written Lem. James W. Clements was not counted for the reason that his name appeared as John W. Clements. You must count the votes of Gamble, Taylor, Reed, Cure, and Brooks for the contestant, following out the strict letter of the minority report.

This, Mr. Speaker, brings us to the consideration of the question of repeaters, to which reference is made in the report.

There were certain gentlemen, or individuals, I might say, not gentlemen, that went to other precincts in this district and voted upon some other person's name than their own. When the true man came to vote he found his name checked off—that somebody else, some repeater had come in, taken possession of his name, and voted in his stead. Why should not these votes be counted? The reason given in the minority report is as follows:

If when these parties offered to vote the names they respectively gave were checked, and either they themselves or others had voted on their names, the judges of election could not receive their votes, for the reason that otherwise they would have allowed 2 ballots to be cast by one registered voter. We therefore reject these 6 votes.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Will the gentleman yield for a question.

Mr. LACEY. Certainly.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. What evidence is there that the voters who voted on these names were repeaters, and not the persons who owned the names themselves?

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. The registered voters themselves swear that they did not vote.

Mr. LACEY. The voters swear that they registered, that they saw their names registered, that they tendered their tickets, that they were refused the right to vote upon the alleged grounds that some one had previously voted upon their names.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Still that does not answer the question. What evidence is there, I ask, that the other parties were not those who were entitled to cast the vote and have their votes counted?

Mr. LACEY. It is not disputed in physical laws that no two bodies can occupy the same space at the same time, and that, I think, is a sufficient answer to the question. It is true that we did see at the exhibition of Hermann in this city a few days ago two rabbits rubbed into one by a trick, but you can not make two votes out of one registration when the voter himself swears that he went and registered his name, saw it put on the record, that the same voter went to cast his vote and was refused; and all of this raises a conclusive presumption that the other man, who did not do it, who did not testify, and who used the name of the individual who did register, was a repeater, and the right man did not have the opportunity to cast his vote.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. But were there not two or more persons of the same name exactly claiming the same locality?

Mr. DALZELL. There is no evidence to identify them as the parties here referred to.

Mr. LACEY. There is no evidence as to the other man at all. But there is one conclusion which may be reached with perfect safety, or at least a presumption, and it is that they did not vote for Mr. Mudd; for a repeater, if a Democrat, at least, usually takes a Republican's name to vote on, and if there is such a thing as a Republican repeater—and certainly no testimony has been brought forward to show that there was any in this district—he would naturally take a Democrat's name to vote on so as to gain as much advantage for his party as practicable. And to say that one man has lost his vote because some one else has voted on the name of the true man, and therefore exclude him, is to attempt to make two wrongs do one right, and is as much of an injury to the man who has been deprived of his vote as if some other man had cast a fraudulent vote.

Now, it seems clear, Mr. Speaker, on a moment's reflection, that these six votes ought to be counted for the contestant. They were registered voters. That fact is not controverted; all of them were insisting on the right to vote, but were excluded from voting by the election officers.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. LACEY. Certainly.

Mr. CRISP. What would the gentleman do with the six repeaters?

Mr. LACEY. If they were identified, if they could be identified as the parties who cast the votes illegally and improperly, they should be punished—

Mr. CRISP. But that is not the point. I mean for whom should the votes be counted that were cast, or whom were these 6 votes cast for?

Mr. LACEY. There is no evidence showing for whom they were cast; but the presumption is that they were cast for the man who was opposite politically to the man that they pretended to represent. That, I think, is clear.

Suppose, for instance, that John Henry Thomas undertook to personate John Thomas Brown at an election and wanted to cast the vote of Brown. He finds out the politics of Brown first; because, if he attempted to do, in advance, what Brown himself would do if he had his own good time to do it in, he would simply be doing the party he himself pretended to represent an injury and advancing the interests of Brown's party, and it is a good deal to assume that a Democratic voter would vote upon a Democratic name if he could find a Republican name to use.

But in regard to these tickets it is not shown for whom they were cast, and therefore we can only imagine or presume that they were voted for Mr. Compton, and the presumption is strong. There is no evidence, as I have said, directly in point, but it certainly makes the wrong greater to prevent the true man from casting his vote because of the fact that a thief comes in to steal his vote and undertakes to cast it for somebody else.

Mr. HAUGEN. Did he not have the absolute right to vote if he registered?

Mr. LACEY. He had an absolute right to cast his vote because he registered; but when he went to the polls he found that "somebody had been there while he was gone."

Mr. COMPTON. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question there?

Mr. CRISP. My friend knows very well—though I do not recollect as to this particular precinct—that in some of them there were at least four, five, or six George Washingtons, and in some cases as many as eighteen or twenty colored men of the same name.

Mr. COMPTON. Would I interrupt the gentleman—

Mr. DALZELL. Not in this case. There is no evidence of that in this case.

Mr. CRISP. In cases that we have examined there have been a number of persons of the same name.

Mr. DALZELL. But not in this case.

Mr. LACEY. I will first answer the question of the gentleman from Georgia and then yield to a question from the contestant. There was no George Washington nor Andrew Jackson in the case. There was William Butler, John H. Smith, William Brown, Charles H. Green, Henry Brown, and Thomas Williams. Were these six gentlemen entitled to vote? Their votes were excluded, and there is no pretension anywhere in this record that these men were not legal voters. There is no pretense that they had cast their votes before. There is nothing upon which to base the gratuitous statement here in the minority report that these men had already cast a vote. They could not cast a vote "by others." They had not had an opportunity to cast a vote for themselves. That is a constitutional right guaranteed to them as legal voters.

Suppose my friend from Georgia was not so well known. He goes up to the polls and finds that his vote has been anticipated, that somebody has been mistaken for him, as he was mistaken the other day for Mr. GREENHALGE. I believe there was a Democratic lawyer in the committee-room came up and complimented the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], supposing him to be Mr. GREENHALGE.

Mr. CRISP. I forgive him.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. GREENHALGE and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] went off immediately and formed a mutual admiration society. But suppose we have a mistake of that kind, would it be right that the gentleman from Georgia should thereby lose his vote, for them to say that some other Crisp had already voted under that name? Mr. CRISP would say: "I want to vote. I am a registered voter and have the right to vote."

Mr. CRISP might say, "You ought to know more of the history of the country than to have mistaken another man for me." But Mr. Butler is not so well known as the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], and if the judges of election allow some other man to vote in his name he should at least be permitted to vote upon proof of the fact that he was entitled to vote, and he ought to be counted for the contestant in this case.

Mr. COMPTON. Now, if the gentleman will allow me I will answer his proposition that there were equally as many or more Republican repeaters, and I will give cases similar to the other cases that he has mentioned. I ask him to look at page 469 of this record.

Dr. Louis A. Griffith, being called, said:

1st. My name is Louis A. Griffith; I am a physician and judge of orphan's court; and reside in Marlboro; and am thirty-five years old.

2nd Int. Do you know Robert Green, colored? Did you see him on the day of the last Congressional election? Did he vote or try to vote; and, if so, what ticket?

A. I know Robert Green. He was present at the last election. I saw him ask to be allowed to vote, and the judges stated his name had been voted. He had the ticket in his hand and while standing there unfolded it, and said: "This is my ticket, and I want to vote it." It was a Democratic ticket.

Mr. LACEY. They did not follow that up with evidence that this man had not already voted. The minority report has not claimed that vote, and there is no evidence that that could be established.

Mr. COMPTON. The record shows it.

Mr. LACEY. The record in this case did not show a single Republican repeater in this district. There is evidence there, it may be granted, tending to establish that fact if it had been followed up. But the judges in this case simply found that this man had voted before. This man did not go on the stand and say he had not voted, but these six men I have spoken of before the House did go upon the witness-stand and swear that they had not voted, and there was no evidence to the contrary.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that brings us to another question; that is, the claim of the majority report as to the rights of the voters to cast their votes when they have done their duty in seeing themselves properly registered in the first place. The minority report—and I will ask my friend to take it all back when he gets the floor—says that the law is wrong as laid down by the majority of the committee, that all that a voter has to do is to see that he is properly registered and tenders his vote, and after that, if he tenders it and it is refused, it shall be counted. The act of 1870 expressly so provides; but the gentleman who wrote the minority report has made the statement that that section of the act of 1870 was declared unconstitutional in the case of the United States vs. Reese, 92 United States Reports, page 214. Now, Mr. Speaker, that would have been a good point if there had been anything in it; but unfortunately for my friend, and unfortunately for the minority report, the act of 1870 has been repealed and re-enacted in the act of 1874, and re-enacted with the objectionable features left out of it, and re-enacted in a form to be absolutely and unquestionably constitutional.

My friend, if he had only looked a little further, if he had not simply shut his eyes and accepted the statement of the counsel before the committee as to the fact that the Supreme Court had passed on this question, would have discovered that section 2007 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 is constitutional. Part of the act 1870 being the unconstitutional feature as defined by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Reese case, had been left out altogether. After that the United States circuit court (Judges Hughes and Bond, of Virginia) has passed upon this exact question in the 16th Federal Reporter. My friend should by all means withdraw that statement, because he has made a slip of the pen or an inadvertency that is excusable, I think, under the circumstances of the case.

The minority report was hurriedly made; made, no doubt, without careful consideration, as is evident from the fact that it leaves out Brooks and these other names that I have called attention to that should have been counted, even under the express language of the minority report. Section 2007 Revised Statutes reads as follows:

SEC. 2007. Whenever under the authority of the constitution or laws of any State or the laws of any Territory, any act is required to be done by a citizen as a prerequisite to qualify or entitle him to vote, the offer of such citizen to perform the act required to be done shall, if it fail to be carried into execution by reason of the wrongful act or omission of the person or officer charged with the duty of receiving or permitting such performance or offer to perform, or acting thereon, be deemed and held as a performance in law of such act; and the person so offering and failing to vote, and being otherwise qualified, shall be entitled to vote in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had in fact performed such act.

That is copied from the Revised Statutes of 1878 and embodied in the majority report, and the minority report says that that provision was declared unconstitutional in 1874 by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the United States vs. Reese. I call attention to the case of the United States vs. Mumford, in 16 Federal Reporter. I will not take time to read much of it, but I will read a part which especially calls attention to the change in this law.

Mr. CRISP. That is not a decision of the Supreme Court.

Mr. LACEY. This is a decision of the circuit court of the United States. The opinion is by Justice Bond and by Justice Hughes of that court. I will read now an extract from the opinion of Judge Hughes, which will be found on page 229:

I fully concur in the opinion just delivered by Judge Bond. I will add something on the constitutional question that has been argued so elaborately at bar. The information in this case is founded upon section 5506 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

And I may here say, Mr. Speaker, that that section is another part of the act of 1870. In codifying the laws in 1874 the provision as to municipal votes, as to elections for State and county officers, was omitted, and this law, instead of having to stand now as it did at the time when the case of the United States vs. Reese was decided, upon the fifteenth amendment alone, stands upon other parts of the Constitution of the United States. I read further from this opinion:

I will remark that that section is not the same law as section 4 of the enforcement act of May 31, 1870. It is nearly the same in terms, but it contains no words connecting it with words in any other act, as section 4 did. It stands upon its own terms and language. It was not enacted in the same bill as section 4 of the act of 1870, or at the same time, or by the same Congress. It was enacted in 1874 and took effect as a law on the 1st day of December, 1874, two months after the case of the United States vs. Reese was argued before the Supreme Court of the United States and more than two years after the indictment was found which was passed upon in that case.

It became, Mr. Speaker, a part of the Revised Statutes of 1873, and those statutes did not take effect until 1874, and this particular law which gentlemen upon the other side now say is unconstitutional, basing that opinion upon the decision in the case of the United States vs. Reese, was not enacted in its present form to take effect until the 1st day of December, 1874.

Mr. CRISP. I will ask my friend if the "present form" of the law, as he calls it, is not exactly the same as it was in 1870.

Mr. LACEY. It is not.

Mr. CRISP. What is the distinction?

Mr. LACEY. The distinction is this: In the act of 1870 there is a previous provision connected with this section, placing the section under the fifteenth amendment and raising the questions of previous condition of servitude and of race and of color. That is all left out in the revision, and this law is limited and confined to Federal elections, to elections for Congress only.

Mr. DALZELL. Under Article IV of the Constitution.

Mr. LACEY. Under Article IV, section 1, of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. CRISP. The gentleman thinks this is authorized under the "time, place, and manner" clause.

Mr. LACEY. Yes, sir; this comes under the "time, place, and manner" provision. My friend [Mr. CRISP] may smile, but I have the advantage of having these two judges smiling upon my side of the question.

Mr. CRISP. And I suggest that I have the advantage of having a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on my side, while the opinions to which the gentleman refers are merely the opinions of circuit judges whose decisions have not always stood, as the gentleman knows, if he bears in mind who they are.

Mr. DALZELL. Does the gentleman refer to the Reese case?

Mr. CRISP. I refer to the Reese case and to the Yarborough case.

Mr. DALZELL. The Reese case is the one you rely on?

Mr. CRISP. Yes; the Reese case and the Yarborough case.

Mr. LACEY. I will ask my friend from Georgia [Mr. CRISP], when he takes the floor, to explain to the House how it is that the case of the United States vs. Reese, arising under the act of 1870, where a man was arrested for a violation of that law as it related to a municipal election, and where the Supreme Court of the United States said that that law was not apt legislation to enforce the fifteenth amendment, controls this question arising under the present statute when that portion of it has been stricken out and the whole section made to apply entirely to Federal elections, and to the time, place, and manner of those elections. That identical question is discussed in this opinion. I read further:

We are dealing here with an offense charged to have been committed in a Federal election, in violation of this section 5506; and the defense ask us to base our ruling, in this case of a Federal election, upon the ruling of the Supreme Court in a case arising in a town election under the act of 1870, in which that court not only carefully confines itself to the case before it, but protested by iteration that it was not considering any law in its relation to Federal elections, its opinion in Reese et al. was expressly confined to section 4 of the act of 1870, in its relations to State elections, and the court held that section not to be within the purview of the fifteenth amendment of the Constitution. But, even as to that section, the court did not, and took especial pains not to, decide that the section was beyond the purview of the first article of the Constitution.

The Supreme Court has never decided that section 4 of the act of 1870 was unauthorized by Article I. Much less has it ever decided that section 5506 of the Revised Statutes was unauthorized by Article I. This article and the fifteenth amendment are as follows; and it will be seen that the former refers only to Federal elections, while the latter refers to all elections, Federal, State, and municipal, but limits legislation under it to the prevention of discrimination between voters on account of race, color, and previous condition. The result is that Congress has general powers of legislation concerning Federal elections, but can legislate concerning State and municipal elections solely for the purpose of preventing discriminations on account of race.

And the case of The United States vs. Siebold, in 100 United States, qualifies and modifies the language in the case of The United States vs. Reese, and expressly holds that the fifteenth amendment was self-enacting so far as giving the right to vote is concerned.

Then, on page 232, Federal Reporter, the court proceeds to say:

Section 4 of the act of 1870 is now repealed. The Supreme Court never said that it was invalid under Article I of the Constitution, and it is now no longer on the statute-book. It is substituted by section 5506 as it stands in the Revised Statutes. This latter section applies only to offenses committed in relation to Federal elections. No one pretends, no one has ever pretended, that it relates to State or municipal elections; for it has never before now been under adjudication. It could not be made to refer to State or municipal elections except by authority of the fifteenth amendment, and it could not be brought within that authority except by interpolating in the section the words "on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

Judge Bond in his decision discusses the questions and sustains the law as it now stands upon the original section. He says:

The fourth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States provides "the times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof, but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations except as to the places of choosing Senators."

If Congress can provide for the manner of election, it can certainly provide that it shall be in an honest manner; that there shall be no repression of voters and an honest count of the ballots. There is little regarding an election that is not included in the terms "time, place, and manner of holding it." Since the Reese case was argued Congress has enacted, as we said before, this section 5506.

Now my friend here makes, it seems to me, for the first time, the proposition as a lawyer that, when a law has been held unconstitutional by reason of some particular provision rendering it so, that law is still to be held unconstitutional after the unconstitutional feature has been stricken out, after the objectionable part has been eliminated. The fair way for our friends on the other side is to concede that they did not trace this question to the bottom, to concede their error, and let the case stand on some other question than one where they are confronted by the statutes of the United States and by the decision of the highest court that has yet been called to pass upon the question since the statute has been amended.

Now, taking this law as the law of the land, we have these additional nineteen men going to the polls and offering to vote. We have the fact that they had registered; the fact that their names had been left off the list sent to the judges of the election where the elections were held; that the voters did everything they could do to have their votes counted; and this being the case, under this section of the statute, it is the duty of the House to count such votes.

The next question involved in this case, Mr. Speaker, is the question of intimidation in Anne Arundel County. I am gratified to be able to say in behalf of the contestee, whom I regard as a gentleman of the highest character and for whom I entertain the profoundest respect, that the record only shows this intimidation in one place. It shows that a number of men went out from Baltimore, men whom I believe my friend from New York [Mr. SPINOLA] calls "Plug Uglies." It appears that certain "Plug Uglies" went out from Baltimore to this particular precinct and interfered—

Mr. SPINOLA. The gentleman will permit me to make this remark, that the "Plug Uglies" were all Knownothings and Whigs and Republicans.

Mr. LACEY. Well, I was only borrowing a beautiful phrase which the gentleman threw at the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS] the other day; and I think a "plug-uglier" lot could not be picked out than these few men who went out to control the election at that precinct in Anne Arundel County.

It appears, Mr. Speaker, that one Tip Wells, who was soon afterward appointed to a position in the revenue service of the United States by the late lamented Mr. Cleveland, went out with a badge upon his person and, associated with sundry other persons of like evil-disposed nature, interfered with the election at this precinct.

Mr. COMPTON. That is not in the record.

Mr. LACEY. What is not in the record?

Mr. COMPTON. What you are saying: that Wells went out from Baltimore and had a badge on.

Mr. LACEY. The evidence shows that these men who presumed there to interfere with the election, and who intimidated the negro voters, had badges on and were claiming to be deputy United States marshals. They were strangers in that vicinity. The evidence shows that they struck old man Hall, an honorable old colored man who by honest industry has acquired property upon which he pays $300 annual taxes; they drove him out of the line, tore his ticket from him, and told him that "no nigger should vote that day unless he voted for Cleveland."

The evidence shows that Rod Kess, another colored man, was knocked out of the line, beaten, struck down, and not permitted to vote. Then there was another man who was attacked, a man named Sampson; there were three of them; and this attack was followed up by a statement made by Mr. Pumphrey, a Democratic deputy marshal who had the badge of authority upon his bosom. He went to these various negro voters and told them they must go home; they must not vote; if they voted he would not answer for the consequences, with other persuasive remarks of like character, by which he led them to believe that their only safety depended upon their withholding their ballots. There were 175 of these men who went there to vote and did not vote.

It is contended by the minority in their report, and was argued before the committee, that these men ought not to be counted for the reason they did not show a sufficient amount of bravery. The law is stated by the minority in this language:

The law is well settled the poll can not be rejected unless the violence was such a display of force that ought to intimidate men of ordinary firmness.

Grant that that is the law. What is ordinary firmness? Must not you take into consideration that the man is colored, and his past habits of life and training? It would not intimidate my friend from Texas [Mr. MOORE], who is noted for his courage in the past. What would not intimidate him would prevent many colored men from coming out in this district to the polls. Long servitude has made these men timid.

During the war these colored men, properly trained and led, performed deeds of valor which are immortal, and for which they are entitled to the highest honor. But, sir, when they are scattered, when they are disorganized, their two hundred years of servitude, two hundred years of slavery on the part of their ancestors, all these things have made them more easily intimidated than white men. Herodotus tells when the Scythians were absent in their wars about twenty-eight years on their return they found their slaves drawn up in line of battle to meet them. What did these slaveholders then do? They threw down their arms, cut switches, and their slaves were at once disarmed and returned to servitude.

So in this day, men in whom timidity has been bred, who fear the white race, who have been in slavery year after year for centuries, are more easily intimidated than white men. We have the fact here proved that they were intimidated. We have the fact that they were threatened. Three were knocked out of the line and three were assaulted. After that they left the line and did not take their places again. You have only heard of the three who were assaulted, and after you have made the correction which has been called to the attention of the House the votes involved in this precinct will only increase the majority of Mr. Mudd, the contestant.

But all these men kept out of the line. They abandoned the polls, they understood there was danger, and I will call the attention of the House further to some of the testimony on this question. As it will be a convenience to members in finding the testimony and as I will not be able to read the whole of it, I hope, by unanimous consent, I will be allowed to print a part of it with my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. LACEY. The testimony in reference to the intimidation of these colored men is as follows:

E. J. Hines, one of the judges of the election:

Where were you standing when you say you saw a colored man pulled as you have described?

A. At the window.

Q. Inside the window?

A. Inside, sir.

Q. How far away from the window was the man standing that was pulled away?

A. About 6 feet; it might have been more and it might have been less.

Q. Was he in line to vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, then, how many were ahead of him, between him and the window?

A. Well, there was, I suppose, maybe four or five.

Q. Colored people?

A. Yes, sir; and some white.

Q. They voted, didn't they, those that were ahead of him in the line?

A. Some of them did, very few, because it took time for the names to be run over, and they could not vote them fast.

Q. How many colored men did you see any one take hold of and pull away?

A. Two that I saw grabbed and slung off to one side of these fellows; first one and then another.

Q. You only saw two colored men pulled away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many persons pulled them away?

A. This one man.

Q. Now, one man took first one colored man and then a second colored man to pull him out of the line; is that it?

A. As I stood here he threw him off to the side, to this here deputy, and told him to take him off, and then grabbed another one and slung him off.

Q. The deputy didn't take these two men, did he?

A. No, sir; because they didn't have no right to take him away, I suppose; just wanted to raise this spree there.

Q. The only spree that was raised was by pulling two men out of the line and telling the man who they said was a deputy marshal to take them away?

A. And told them they could not vote there, and to go home.

Q. Told whom they could not vote?

A. These colored men.

Q. Told these two colored men?

A. No; the whole crowd, that they could not vote and to go away.

George A. T. Jubb:

Q. You say you have been in the habit of voting the Democratic ticket?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote for Barnes Compton at the last election?

A. No, sir.

Q. Whom did you vote for?

A. For Congressman; I scratched Compton off my ticket.

Q. Well, the county commissioners of Anne Arundel County last fall, at the time the judges of election were appointed, were Republicans, were they not?

A. I suppose not, sir; I have always voted the Democratic ticket up to last fall.

Q. How many colored people did you see taken away, as you have expressed it?

A. Well, I could not say exactly how many there were. There were quite a number at the window and quite a string behind them coming up.

Q. What did you see done yourself?

A. I saw the roughs pull them away from the window.

Q. How many colored men did you see pulled away?

A. I could not say how many there were they pulled out of the crowd, but they appeared to be determined to clear the window.

Q. How many roughs did you see there?

A. Seven or eight; I could not recognize them; they said they were roughs; I heard people say that.

Q. But you don't know that?

A. I do not know they are roughs; I know they are not residents of the county; not voters.

Q. And you are sure you saw seven or eight men that are not voters?

A. I am very positive in my mind.

Q. You can not tell how many colored people you saw taken hold of?

A. Oh, no; I couldn't tell, but there were several, and maybe more.

Q. Can you swear that there were more than two?

A. I am willing to swear there was more than two.

Q. Were there three?

A. I could not say the number, but there were more than two.

Q. Well, how many?

A. A hundred or more, probably; I can't tell.

Q. And they all went away only because these two or three men were pulled out of the line?

A. There might have been more than three; they were taking charge of the windows; the roughs were.

Q. How far from the window were these men that were taken away?

A. They were pressing them back; they would not allow them to come up and get their vote in.

Q. Were there any more people voting then?

A. No, sir; the voting had ceased.

Q. How far away from the window were the colored men that were pulled away?

A. The roughs appeared to be, when I looked up, near the window when the voting ceased, and I knew there was something going on; I looked up and the roughs had got possession between the colored people and the window.

A. Well, the darkies said as we passed, "There goes two white Republicans; now let's see if they vote." Well, we went down there and it was some time before we could get a ticket to vote; there wasn't any in the window, and none to be found around unless you got them from the darkies—Republican tickets. Mr. Goodin got several from a darky and gave me one and I went up and voted it. Before I got near to vote, when I was standing around there, this Roderick Kess he made a start to vote, and one of these roughs from Baltimore came over towards him and ran him about the length of this room and struck him; Kess got his head down this way [indicating] and the rough struck him right in the ear, ran him about the length of this room and struck him; that is about all I seen; I never seen a darky there to vote afterwards.

Q. Did you hear any white man tell the darkies not to vote?

A. I did.

Q. Who was it?

A. I heard Tip Wells tell several other Democrats; I was standing in a group and I heard Tip Wells tell several of those Democrats—and there was Ed. Pumphrey there, supposed to be a deputy sheriff, you know, and he told him to go out and tell the darkies that he was appointed deputy sheriff and there was fifty United States deputy marshals over here, and to tell these darkies that they had all better go home and not kick up any disturbance at all, because if any of them made any try to vote some of them would be hurt, and he did not want to see any trouble.

Q. You heard Tip Wells say that?

A. Yes, sir; and Ed. Pumphrey, too.

Q. You heard Ed. Pumphrey say that to the colored people?

A. I heard Tip Wells say that, and I heard twenty different darkies say—

Q. What are Tip Wells's politics?

A. Democratic.

Q. Do you know anything about his being appointed lately to an office?

A. He was appointed store-keeper in the internal-revenue office, I believe.
Q. That is within the last two or three weeks?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are Ed. Pumphrey's politics?
A. Democratic; but is little or nothing.

Owen Goodin:

Q. Did you go to the polling place on election day?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see any disturbance there?
A. Yes, sir; this man Rod. Kess was jerked away from the window when he went to hand his ticket in, down at the house, close to the road.
Q. Rod Kess is a colored man, I believe?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know the man who struck him there?
A. No, sir; I do not.
Q. Was he a stranger in the neighborhood, or a resident?
A. I never saw him before in my life, and I don't know who he was.
Q. You haven't been in the neighborhood long, I believe?
A. No, sir; about a year.
Q. Where were the colored people when you came to the polls, or were there any of them about?

A. They were about, away above; I asked one of them if he had any tickets; he said: "Yes, but they are no use, they won't let us vote."
Q. Then, this man Kess came up to vote while you were there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, what happened; they grabbed him, you say?
A. They grabbed him and jerked him away down to the other end of the house, near the edge of the road; he struck at him, but I do not know, could not tell, whether he hit him or not.

A. K. Young (white):

Q. Were you at the polling place of the first precinct of the third district on election day?
A. I was, sir.
Q. Did you see any disturbance there when you were there?
A. I didn't exactly see no disturbance; they were driv away from the polls, but I didn't see any licks struck.
Q. Who drove them away, and how did they drive them away?
A. These parties from Baltimore did it.
Q. Did you know any of them?
A. I can't say that I did.

Q. Was Wells among them, or do you know him?
A. He was amongst them; I know Tip Wells.
Q. How did they drive them away?
A. The first man that came on the grounds they took hold of him and shoved him back, and he said he could not vote there, and the balance they pushed them away and told them they couldn't vote there.

Q. These men that did this were strangers?
A. Strangers to me; yes, sir.
Q. You have been a resident of this precinct for some time?
A. Six or seven years.
Q. How did they come over, do you know?
A. I don't know; I think they come in wagons.
Q. Were they armed?
A. Some of them had revolvers.
Q. Were they exhibiting them?
A. I saw some of them; yes, sir.

Q. Had you any official capacity that day?
A. I was appointed a marshal, but had nothing to show for it; deputy sheriff I mean.

Q. Did you take any part in protecting these men?
A. No, sir.
Q. Why not?
A. I had no authority.
Q. Had you no commission?
A. No, sir; I had no commission or badge.
Q. How many of them were there?
A. I could not say exactly; I did not count them.
Q. Were they 2 or 20?
A. Now, I suppose may be 10 or 12; something along there.
Q. Did any colored people [vote] after the first pushing away from the polls?
A. I think there were two that voted the Democratic ticket.
Q. Were there any more that voted?
A. I did not see them.

Q. That is all the disturbance you say you saw?
A. That is all I seen; I didn't see ne'er a lick struck.
Q. Now, you say you saw some one have a revolver or revolvers.
A. I did, sir.
Q. Where were they when they had them; where did you see them?
A. There on the ground.
Q. You did not see them point any revolvers towards the colored man that they pushed away, you say?

A. I did not, sir.
Q. How many colored people were there when you saw these pushed away after the polls were opened?
A. I could not tell you, sir; a great many; I didn't count them.
Q. Did any of them go up to vote after you saw them pushed away?
A. Some of them did; yes, sir; but they didn't vote.
Q. Did these men, these strangers that were there, did they have any badges on?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you tell me what was on the badges, or did you see?
Q. United States marshal.
Q. What was the color of the badges?
A. Different colors; some blue and some red, as far as I remember.

Osmond S. Pumphrey:

Q. Did you see any disturbance there?
A. I was the second man that voted, and left immediately after.
Q. You didn't see anything there?
A. No, sir; I saw nothing; there was several men that I did not know; strangers in the neighborhood; I was the second man that voted, and then left.

Q. You left before there was any disturbance, if there was any?
A. All the disturbance was he stopped this colored man Hall, and told him he had no right to vote; Hall said he thought he had; he said, "No, go away," and Hall turned, then, and left the window, and the colored men did not attempt to vote any more as they would not be allowed to vote, and they all left as far as I know.

Q. Who was this man that told Mr. Hall this?
A. That I could never tell you, sir; I never saw him before.
Q. He was a stranger in the district?
A. Yes, sir; an entire stranger.

Q. Had he a badge on that you noticed?
A. Yes, sir; I think he had.
Q. Do you know what was on it?
A. I did not examine the badges.
Q. What are your politics?
A. I am a Democrat, sir; always was.

William H. Hall:

Q. What happened when you went up there?

A. I started away from home about quarter to 7 that morning and drove down there tolerably fast, and got down there about a quarter to 8 o'clock; I got up there about a quarter to 8; when I got up there I saw some white folks there, you know, and the polls had opened, and they commenced voting just before I got there; I was about the sixth person, I reckon, that got up to the window at about the time they commenced voting; I had my ticket in my hand, and folded my ticket up; at least I opened my ticket just that way [indicating], and held it in my hand; if I had a piece of paper to show you I could; this sketch will do; just this way [indicating]; I was walking up to the polls and was going to open my ballot and open it this way [indicating], and I was about the third person off the window, and I had my ticket in my hand ready to give it in; just at that very moment, just as I had my ticket in that position—I was about the third man from the window—there was some man come between; I stood right at Mr. Tip Wells's elbow, and the man came between me to crowd between me and Tip Wells, and tore the ticket in two; I held one part and he taken the other, and I asked a gentleman standing close there, Mr. Chairs, not further than that door [indicating], and I said, "Chairs, do you see this?" I said, "Mr. Chairs, see this," and nobody made any response; I carried my hand right around to the window and said, "Do you see this?" I said, and nobody made any response, and I said, "Don't you count out votes here to-day?" and a half dozen voices hollered out, "Not a damn one of you shall vote;" I said, "If we can't vote we will go home," and I said, "Now, men, don't make no fuss," and we fell back, and I got in my buggy and went home.

Q. Who was it, so far as you could tell, that hollered, "Not a damned one of you shall vote?"

A. Well, I could not recognize any of the voices at all but Tip Wells's.

Q. You heard Wells holler that out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are his politics?

A. A Democrat, I think, sir. I don't know what he votes, but I think he is a Democrat.

Q. Why was it, Mr. Hall, that you told the men to go home?
A. I apprehended danger. There was danger there from what I had heard before I got there. As I was going down the road I met a man by the name of Elias Brown when I was about a mile off the polling place, and he told me, "It ain't no use to go down there. Mr. So and So says you sha'n't vote, not a damn one of you." I said, "Is that so?" and he said, "Not a damn one of you shall vote," and he took me by the arm and shoved me up the road. He was a little cranky, anyhow, as I thought, and I said, "My son, we will go down and see what the trouble is, anyhow;" and when I got down there there was some men there, of course; so I hitched my horse, and I have told you what occurred.

Roderick Kess:

Q. How long have you lived in this district?
A. Well, sir, I have been living here all my life; I did live in the fifth; I was born in the third, and remained in the third until, I suppose, I was about thirteen or fourteen years old, and then I went into the fifth district and staid over there until I was about twenty-three years of age; then I went backwards and forwards, but I married in the third, and of course I remained there.

Q. You have been there all your life except a few years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go up to vote on election day?

A. Well, I did, sir; I tried it.

Q. Tell us what happened.

A. I went down there in the morning and intended to vote and marched up to the polls as I generally always do; of course, in going to the polls there was a young man, I could not tell who it was, I did not know him, but knew he was a stranger, and know that he did not belong there; he struck me in the face, and threw me off, and pushed me off, and told me to go away; told me I didn't belong there, and knocked my hat off, and I turned around and said, "Dr. Williams, I am in my county!" I said, "What kind of carrying on is this here?" He said, "You will have to go and see the deputy sheriff." I didn't know he was, or whether he was a deputy or not, but afterwards I seen who it was, and that was a young man in the district called Mr. Ed. Pumphrey; of course he was acting as deputy sheriff and had a blue badge on, and it was said that there was the deputy sheriff.

Q. Was that the last of it?
A. I saw it was no use to try to vote, so I left.

J. B. Hall:

Q. Mr. Hall, how long have you lived in the first precinct of the third election district?

A. Ever since I was about one year old.

Q. Were you at the polling place on election day?

A. I was, sir.

Q. Did you see any disturbance there?

A. Well, a man snatched a ticket out of my father's hand, and he said, "Gentlemen, do you see this?" And I looked and the ticket had been snatched out of his hand. I didn't see it, but, from what he told me, it was torn in his hand; and he called out to Mr. Chairs: "Mr. Chairs, do you see this?" I had my arm on the window with my ticket in my left hand, ready to call my name, and nobody answered, and I said, "Gentlemen, can't we vote here to-day?" and this Tip Wells hollered out, "No; not a damn one of you shall vote here to-day;" and then we fell back from the window.

William M. Hines:

Q. Did you see any strangers about the polls that day?

A. I did, sir.

Q. How many do you suppose there were?

A. About eight or ten, I think.

Q. Where did they come from, do you know?

A. I do not, sir.

Q. What did they come in, do you know that?

A. They came in two-horse vehicles.

Q. Strange vehicles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they have any arms, do you know?

A. I could not say; I saw no arms.

Q. How long did you stay at the polls, Mr. Hines?

A. From about the time I got there until after the polls were closed and the ballots were counted.

Q. Did any colored men come up to vote while you were there?

A. No, sir; one started to come up and they told him to go back.

Q. Who told him to go back?

A. The strange parties.

Elijah Henson:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why didn't you vote?

A. Well, when Mr. Hall went, I got my ticket from Mr. Hall; and I were coming up to the window for to vote, and some of them snatched him away, pulled him around, and tore his ticket in half as he had it in his hand; he said, "Ain't our tickets accepted?" and some one says "No;" I don't know who it was, but there was some one made the answer, "No; they was not accepted," and he said, "Well, it is best for us all to go home."

Q. Where were they when you saw them?

A. They were up there to the polls or right around them.

Q. Close to the polls?

A. Close, of course; yes, sir.

Q. Was it one of them or not that tore Mr. Hall's ticket out of his hands?

A. Yes, sir; that was one of the strange men; it was a stranger to me that tore Mr. Hall's ticket in his hand—that he had in his hand.

Elijah G. Howard:

Q. Did you go to vote last election?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get your vote in?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, when I went there I went, I guess, about 8 or 9 o'clock, when there was a good many of the men coming away, and I said, "Why didn't you vote?" and they said some of them were keeping them away, and when I got to the polls I didn't try to vote, and Mr. Ed. Pumphrey—I got word from Mr. Hall there. Mr. Hall said—the first thing I knew—it was just as well to go back home, that they were objecting to the votes. Mr. Ed. Pumphrey told us not to go to the window, and he was telling us that for our own good, and for us not to go to the window, as there would be great trouble, he said; and I didn't go to the window at all.

Q. Did you see any guns around there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?

A. In a wagon.

Q. Where was the wagon?

A. About the window.

Q. Was it a wagon from the neighborhood?

A. It was from Baltimore, I guess; I had not seen it before.

Q. Do you remember what horses were in it, or were there any in it?

A. I think it was gray horses in it, but some of the rest knew the horses better than I did; but I seen them in the wagon.

Q. What sort of guns were they; could you tell?

A. No, sir; I didn't stop long enough to look at them; I heard some of the rest of the men say there were guns in the wagon, and I walked off down the road; but I seen the guns in there and seen the locks and breeches.

Q. How many do you suppose there were there?

A. Five or six; some of the men said more, but I did not stop to see.

Q. How far was this wagon from the polling place?

A. It was not over 5 yards from the window, right at the corner of the house, most; it was right at the corner of the house, most.

Q. Were you afraid to vote there?

A. Yes, sir; I just got up there and nobody else would not go up and vote, and I wouldn't go up by myself; and if nobody voted, I wouldn't do it.

Noah Queen.

By the examiner:

Q. State your name, residence, occupation, and age.

A. Noah Queen; third district, Anne Arundel County; I am a carpenter; am forty-three years old, as near as I can come at it; I am not certain about that.

By Mr. ROSE:

How long have you lived in Anne Arundel County?

A. I moved in the third district of Anne Arundel County in 1869.

Q. Did you go up to vote on election day?

A. I did, sir.

Q. What happened?

A. I didn't vote; that's one thing I know didn't happen.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, sir, some of my friends objected to my going there, and said there had been some ahead of me that could not vote; that Mr. Hall was there with the men there and that he couldn't vote, when he went up to vote, and they objected to my going because I wanted to vote, and when I wanted to go and try they said Mr. Hall had been there to vote and several others wouldn't let them vote. I says, "Well, I am going to try to vote, anyhow; I don't care what Mr. Hall does." They said, "Don't you go, or somebody will get hurt." I said, "I don't care if I do; who is going to stop us?" Jerome Hall said, "Don't go." I said, "I'm going," with an oath to him, and I looked around suddenly, and a gentleman by the name of Ed. Pumphrey, he said he was deputized as a sheriff that day, and I said "Mr. Pumphrey," with an oath, "what is the result that we can't vote here to-day?" He said, "No, you can't vote, I don't think;" and he said, "If you go there and try to vote it will be the dearest day's work you ever did."

Q. What happened to you; why didn't you?

A. Well, when I got there they were all scattered about there, standing around there, and there was no colored persons at the polls voting, and I asked what was the matter; and they said the votes was objected to, and no colored man had voted there that day; and so I stood off and didn't try afterwards to go to the window, and along come Mr. Pumphrey.

Q. Which Mr. Pumphrey?

A. Ed. Pumphrey, and he talked with me, and he told me that we could vote, provided we would run the risk of our own lives. Well, I made the remark that I didn't feel disposed to run the risk of my own life, and I didn't feel I had done anything or done anybody any harm; so I staid there pretty well along in the evening, and then I went away to go home. I was in the neighborhood, and I was one of the last that left there. Nobody didn't bother me.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Chairs here say anything about it, about the colored people voting that day?

A. I didn't hear him say anything about the polls, only he was walking along talking.

Q. You did hear him say something?

A. Yes, sir; he went along talking about the case, and he said that it was made up with themselves, and that was all he said. He was not talking to me; he was talking to a friend, and I was alongside of the road as he went by.

George W. Howard.

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Why not; what happened?

A. Well, when I got down there it appears that they were objecting to letting us vote.

Q. Who told you that?

A. Mr. Ed. Pumphrey.

Q. What did he tell you?

A. He told me it would be best; he told me the best thing I could do was not to try to vote, and he said the best thing we could do would be to leave, because we would not be allowed to vote.

Q. What did he say would be the trouble? Did he say you would get into trouble; and, if so, what sort of trouble?

A. He said some of us would get hurt if we undertook to vote, and advised us to leave.

Q. Did he say there were any arms down there, or anything about there?

A. He said there was about thirty roughs from Baltimore down there; he told us that.

Q. Did you hear Tip Wells say anything?

A. Well, then we left from opposite the window and went and sat upon an old log alongside of an old barn there; and he were walking up the road and he said, "Within ten years from now there won't be a damn nigger in Anne Arundel County that can vote;" I heard him say that.

Q. Did you go to vote last election?

A. Yes, sir; I went there, but I didn't vote.

Q. Why didn't you vote, and what happened when you went there?

A. When I went up to the polls to vote I followed Mr. Hall, and Mr. Hall went around where the white gentlemen were, and I followed the house side up, and when I got up to the window, I didn't go quite to the window, I touched the window with my cane, and I heard some of them say, "Go back," and that we could not vote there. As I was a cripple I could not go back far, and they like to knock me down; and Mr. Hall started back and said we could not vote; and a gentleman there said, "You shan't vote; go away; and we don't want none of your jaw;" and then we came back.

Q. You say you were nearly knocked down; who nearly knocked you down?

A. Some four or five colored people ahead of me; when I started away from the window I could not go away fast enough.

Q. Were they running?

A. They fell back on me.

Q. Crowded back?

A. Yes, sir; they fell back from the window and like to knocked me down, as I could not get away fast enough, and I fell back, and Mr. Hall told us we had better go away, and all hands went away.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Ed. Pumphrey say anything?

A. He didn't say—the only thing he said was that it wasn't no use to go up there for they had too many guns, and that we could not vote that day.

Jacob H. Owens:

Q. Did you know Andrew Sampson?

A. I did.

Q. How long has he lived down there?

A. These eight or nine years or more.

Q. They pulled him from the window?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Tip Wells there that day?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Was he or not with those strangers?

A. These two young men that pulled Sampson away from the window, Tip Wells followed them, but he didn't attempt to put his hand on Sampson, but just followed behind them when they shoved him out.

Q. Did you see any guns there that day?

A. I did.

Q. Who had them?

A. There were three men standing behind the house loading their guns, but I don't know who they were.

Q. Were they strangers there?

A. They were; they loaded the guns and stood behind the house like that [indicating]—behind the house; then I saw two other gentlemen coming up with guns; one of them I knew, and the other one I didn't.

Q. And these men were loading the guns right at the polling place?

A. Right behind the polling place.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Ed. Pumphrey say anything that day?

A. I asked himself what was his position, and he said he was sheriff; and I asked him if he was a constable, and he said no, he was a deputy sheriff there to arrest any one that disobeyed the laws that day; "But," he said, "I am not worth a damn in this crowd of men that is here;" and he said, "I would advise you fellows all to go home, as you won't have any show of voting here to-day."

Q. Did you see Mr. Hall pulled from the window?

A. I did, sir.

Q. What occurred then?

A. The same two young men that pulled Sampson from the window pulled him away, too.

Q. Did you go up to vote last fall?

A. No, sir; I didn't; I didn't go there, sir.

Q. How near did you get to the polls?

A. Well, I got about half a mile off the polls.

Q. Why didn't you go any further?

A. Well, I heard there was a row kicked up and that it wasn't no use to go any further.

James Henry Baker:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I didn't vote.

Q. What stopped you from voting?

A. These men from Baltimore, or wherever they were from; when we went up to the polls to vote they said we shouldn't vote, and Mr. Hall then said we couldn't vote; I didn't go up to the window at all.

Q. They were strange men, were they?

A. Stranger men.

Q. Did they take hold of anybody?

A. I seen them carrying Mr. Hall back, but which it was had him I don't know.

Q. What did those men say?

A. They said we should not vote; I heard them say that, but who it was said it I do not know.

Q. White men said it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Strangers to you?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. COMPTON.

Q. You say you didn't want to get killed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you think you were going to be killed?

A. I heard they had guns.

Q. You saw nobody with guns, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see anybody with pistols?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see or hear anybody threaten to kill anybody?
 A. No, sir; but I heard them say they had guns, and that somebody might get killed.
 Q. Who said that?
 A. I don't know who; it was a stranger, but who it was I do not know, sir.
 By Mr. ROSE:
 Q. What did he say?
 A. He said some niggers would be killed that day, but who it was said it I don't know.
 Q. Did you go to the polls last election?
 A. I did, sir.
 Q. How near did you get?
 A. I got right up to the polls.
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why didn't you? Tell us all about it.
 A. The reason why I didn't vote, they said it wasn't no use; there had been a little riot, but I got there, and they said it was no use for any of them to try to vote; I met some of them coming back, and I didn't vote.
 Q. You went up to the window?
 A. No, sir; not to the window; I went up to the yard.
 Q. Did you see any strange men there?
 A. No, sir; not particular; there was a good many strange men I didn't know, but I don't know of any particular strange men.
 Q. Did you hear any white men say anything?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. And the other colored men told you that there had been a riot and you couldn't vote?
 A. Yes, sir; that is, I met some coming away, though I kept on up there.
 Q. Why didn't you try to vote?
 A. They said it was no use.
 Q. Told you you would not be allowed to vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did they tell you what had occurred there?
 A. Yes, sir; they did.
 Q. How near did you get to them?
 A. Up to the polls on the ground.
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. My vote was rejected.
 Q. Tell us all that happened?
 A. These men, you know, it was a lot of them, and there was a row before I got there, but I can't tell anything about it.
 Q. You say your vote was rejected; how was it rejected?
 A. All I know the folks was there before I was, and they said the vote was objected, and I didn't try to put mine in.

Stephen Asbury Brown:

Q. You didn't vote?
 A. No, sir; I did not.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, when I got there the folks told me that it was not worth while to go to the polls, because my life was in danger.
 Q. Who told you that?
 A. Mr. Ed. Pumphrey told me that. He come down and told me that. He said it wasn't worth while for me to go; I could go, but I was liable to get hurt; and under them circumstances I didn't go to vote.
 Q. And then, you say, Mr. Pumphrey told you—
 A. (Interposing.) Mr. Pumphrey said that there was no chance of voting. "But," he said, "you probably can vote if you persevere your way to the window; but you are liable to get hurt."

Josiah Cephas:

Q. The people you saw told you you could not vote; did you know them?
 A. I guess I knew some of them.
 Q. Who were the men who told you that?
 A. Ed. Pumphrey was one of them.
 Q. Who else; do you remember?
 A. I can't remember exactly; so many said you can't come there, and I was prohibited from going there.
 Q. But you remember Ned Pumphrey telling you that?
 A. Yes, sir; he said you can't go there and vote.

Q. And Mr. Pumphrey said you were objected to?
 A. He said, "You can't go there to vote," and I didn't go.

Henry Green:

Q. You didn't vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. I met the folks coming away from there, and they were kicking up a row and I thought I better not go, and Mr. Ed. Pumphrey came down in the crowd where we were sitting; he was some kind of a marshal, and he told us not to go to the polls, that we might get hurt.

Stanley Chester Green:

Q. What confusion did you see?
 A. I seen a gentleman taking Mr. Hall way from the window, and they said they rejected the votes there that day; the colored people couldn't vote.
 Q. Who were the men that said that?
 A. I don't know them.
 Q. Were they white men?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Had you ever seen them before?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. They were strangers, then, in the neighborhood?
 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you go closer?
 A. Well, I don't never go nowhere where there is an eruption made; I don't fight myself.
 Q. You are not a fighting man, then?
 A. No, sir; I am not a fighting man, and I was raised that way, and always kept clear of anything like that that I could.

Jacob Hall:

Q. Were you there when Andrew Sampson attempted to vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What happened to him?
 A. Two gentlemen pulled him out and struck at him, and said he was in the wrong district.

Aaron Johnson:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, I see the scrimmage there; they pulled a man away from the window and struck at him, and soon after that Mr. Hall, they snatched him from the window, and they had a scrimmage, and that was enough; I was becoming intimidated until I was afeared to go up. I heard Mr. Hall say they had objected to the votes.
 Q. And you went away?
 A. Yes, sir.

Stephen Johnson:

Q. Did you go up to vote last fall?
 A. I did.
 Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. I went up in the yard, sir.
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir; I did not.
 Q. Why not?
 A. I didn't see nobody else a voting, and they said the votes were refused, and so I didn't think, I didn't know as I was more manly than anybody else, so I went home.
 Q. What time of day was that?
 A. I guess it was 10 o'clock, sir, as close as I can come at it. It might have been later.
 Q. Who told you the votes were refused?
 A. Thomas Johnson.
 Q. He is a colored man, isn't he?
 A. Yes, sir.

John Wesley Jacobs:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because I understood when I got there they would not let the colored ones vote, and of course I didn't insist at all; the crowd was broke up when I got there, and they was not allowed to vote, and of course I didn't resist.
 Q. What time was it when you got there?
 A. As near as I can come at it, it was about 11 o'clock.
 Q. You were told the colored people were not allowed to vote?
 A. I was, sir.
 Q. Other colored people told you so?
 A. Yes, sir.

John W. Marsh:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir; I did not.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, they said the vote was objected, and they wouldn't let the colored fellows vote.

Benjamin Richards:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. I was objected to, my voting.
 Q. Who objected to your voting?
 A. I don't know the man's name; I don't know the names now, about the Neck much; but the men objected to our vote, and our head captain said he thought it would be best for us not to vote.
 Q. What time did you get there in the morning?
 A. I guess about 7 o'clock.
 Q. Did you see Andrew Sampson when he went up to vote?
 A. I did, sir.
 Q. What happened to him?
 A. Some man called him away, and said he couldn't vote in that district.
 Q. Did you see Hall go up to vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What happened to him?
 A. Some of them pulled him away; I can't say his name.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Hall there?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you see him go up to vote?
 A. I seen him go up to vote, but I don't know whether he voted or not; I seen him start up.
 Q. You left when you saw Andrew Sampson pulled away?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What did you leave for?
 A. Mr. Hall said it wasn't no use for us to vote, and said the vote was objected, and to go away, and before that I heard some one in the crowd say there wasn't a damn colored man that could vote that day, but I can't tell who it was.
 Q. Was it a white man?
 A. Yes, sir.

John Wesley Richards:

Q. Did you go up to vote last fall?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. How near the polls did you get?
 A. I don't know, sir; no nearer than 40 yards to the house; that is as close as I got.
 Q. Why didn't you go nearer?
 A. The reason I didn't go any nearer, because I met the gang, and they had been there and they couldn't vote; and it wasn't any use for me to go any nearer.

Howard Richards:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. About as close as from here across the street here [indicating].
 Q. Why didn't you go closer?
 A. Well, I met the other parties coming away from the polls, and they said the vote was rejected; was the reason I didn't go any further.
 Q. Did they tell you how it was rejected and who rejected it?
 A. They told me they had some roughs there from Baltimore, but didn't know who they were, and I didn't see them.

William Mason:

Q. What stopped you?
 A. They say they could not vote.
 Q. What time did you get there?
 A. Between 9 and 10 o'clock, sir.
 Q. They told you you could not vote?
 A. There was a good many of them said you couldn't, and I went on up further, and they said they couldn't vote, none of them; and that's what they said.

Q. And then you turned around and went home?
 A. I staid down there awhile; I didn't see nobody voting.
 Q. Why didn't you go up and try?
 A. I was like many others.
 Q. You hadn't enough sand in you?
 A. The sand was in my heels.

Alexander Davis:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because when I went there to vote they snatched one man off the polls and grabbed the tickets out of his hand; he had one-half of the ticket and the other man had the other half, and said he couldn't vote.
 Q. Who was the man?
 A. That said that?
 Q. No; that was snatched away?
 A. Hall, I think his name was; an old gentleman.
 Q. You saw them pull him away?
 A. Yes, sir; they snatched him off and grabbed the ticket, tore the ticket in half, and he held on to one half and the other man held on to the other part.
 Q. Did the white man say anything?
 A. Only said that he could not vote, and that is all they said.

Richard Edwards:

Q. Did you go up to vote I mean?
 A. No, sir; I started on the road, but I heard they were not voting and I turned around and came back home.
 Q. Who told you they were not voting?
 A. I met some men coming back, and they said they had been down there and did not think it worth while for me to go vote.
 Q. Did they tell you why they were not voting?
 A. They said they couldn't vote; that is all they told me.

Charles H. Brooks:

Q. How near did you get to them?
 A. I got about 3 yards from the window, sir.
 Q. Well, why didn't you vote?
 A. Because I started to the polls there and there was a kind of a scrimmage there and kicked up a rumpus and said nobody could vote and so I came away.

George A. Edwards:

Q. Did you go to vote last fall?
 A. I tried to went there, but I didn't go very far, so I turned back.
 Q. How far did you go?
 A. I got as far as Ben Howard's.
 Q. How far is that from the polls?
 A. A good ways.
 Q. How many miles?
 A. I will never tell you.
 Q. Why didn't you go on the rest of the way?
 A. No, sir; it was too sweet down there for me.
 Q. What do you mean by too sweet?
 A. I thought I had an engagement to go down there, but I didn't go; no, indeed.
 Q. You were afraid to go down there; was that it?
 A. Certainly; and there was a lot more afraid besides me.
 Q. What did people tell you that was going on?
 A. Right smart told me.
 Q. What did they tell you?
 A. They told me I had better turn back, and I turned back as I was coming down, and went home.

Charles Fletcher:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. Within about 5 yards of the window, as near as I can get at it.
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, there was a couple of gentlemen coming up to me at the time I was near the window, and they got me by the shoulders and shoved me back and said there was no niggers should vote there that day.
 Q. Who were these men?
 A. I don't know, sir. They were strangers to me, and I never seen them before as I know of.

Resin Prout:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. I got close enough to the polls to see the polls.
 Q. Why didn't you go closer?
 A. Because I met some fellows, and they told me I couldn't vote; some people coming down there.
 Q. Who told you?
 A. I heard people say there that you couldn't vote; you shouldn't vote. I don't know who they were.
 Q. Were they white men?
 A. Yes, sir; they was white men.
 Q. You didn't know them?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. You had never seen them before?
 A. Not as I know of, sir; I might have seen them, but I didn't know them.
 Q. They were strangers to you?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Well, where did you go?
 A. I didn't stay there any longer after they told me I couldn't vote. I never done anything in my life, and I didn't want no trouble.
 Q. You heard these men say they couldn't vote there?
 A. Yes, sir; they said, "None of you niggers can't vote here."

Jacob Asbury Richards:

Q. Well, go on; what occurred?
 A. I met the people. I went down there and Mr. Pumphrey told us that we better not vote. Mr. Pumphrey told them that they had better not vote there that day, because they might get hurt, or something or other; that a man had guns down there, and said that they were not going to let any of them vote; they had some few colored people voted down there that day. I never went to the polls; me and another fellow was together.

Thomas Stewart:

Q. Do you know Mr. Edward Pumphrey?
 A. Yes, sir; I do.
 Q. Did you hear him say anything there that day?
 A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say?

A. He told us that it was best for us to get away as quick as we could; that there was going to be trouble; of course I didn't see anything at all myself like that; but he told us that there might be trouble if we staid around there.

Q. What did he say was there?

A. He said there was a couple of loaded guns there for us.

Henry Spriggs:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. I understand that it was so said that they shouldn't none of the colored people vote.
 Q. What time did you get there?
 A. I got there between 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning, as near as I can get at it.

Q. Who told you this?

A. Several of the colored ones told me so, and I waited for that purpose for awhile. I thought after while I might get my ticket in, and there was a gentleman from town—a gentleman with a red badge on his breast—and he said he was there for to protect these polls, and I said to him "There is no protection here for a man," and he said "There is no use for you to go there and fight all these men for to try to get your ticket in, and if I had my own way about it, you should put that ticket in there, but I wouldn't advise you to go there and vote because you might get hurt;" and then I said, "I don't see any use putting a man here; you are here to protect these polls, and you can see that they are keeping us from voting; 'taint no use to put a man to protect them unless he can do it;" and then I walked up past the window and stood there. I didn't undertake to put my ticket in; I carried it home, and I have got it in my pocket now.

Jarrett Edward Stewart:

Q. You say you didn't vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, sir, they was saying that colored people shouldn't vote.
 Q. What time did you get there?
 A. About 8 o'clock.
 Q. About the time the polls were opened?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you see Andrew Sampson there that day?
 A. I seen him there, but I didn't see nothing.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Hall there that day?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you see him when he went up to vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did he vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because they took his ticket away from him.
 Q. Who were the men that took the ticket away from him?
 A. I didn't know the men that took his ticket away.
 Q. They were strangers?
 A. Yes, sir.

John Wesley Warren:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. I did not.
 Q. Well, why didn't you vote?
 A. Because I got up to the fire there where the majority of the men were standing and I heard them say that there had been a riot up there, and I was afraid to go up there by myself, knowing that I wasn't a better man than anybody else.

Alexander Bruce:

Q. Did you get near the polls; how near did you get to the polls?
 A. I was a half a mile off.
 Q. Why didn't you vote?
 A. Because the crowd was broke when I started, and they said I couldn't vote, and I didn't go down any further.

Richard Brady:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. I got about three yards from the window.
 Q. Within three yards of the window?
 A. About three yards; yes, sir.
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, sir, there was a little disturbance there, and I didn't try to vote afterwards.
 Q. What was the disturbance?
 A. Well, they said I shouldn't vote, and they shoved some of them away, and I guessed it was time to stop then; 'cause I didn't care about getting into any difficulties.
 Q. Who said you shouldn't vote?
 A. I didn't know the man.
 Q. Was he a white or a colored man?
 A. He was a white man, sir.

James Emery Cephas:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why didn't you vote?
 A. Well, the objection was, I was right near the polls and had my ticket in my hand, and I seen that Mr. Hall was objected—Mr. William Hall that was—they said he couldn't vote there, and I stopped awhile then, and I thought to myself it's better for old Cephas to get away from there, but I didn't see no danger or anything, gentlemen; that's just natural feelings, and Will Hall said he didn't think the votes would be anything if we did vote; I walked up the road a considerable ways for to get out of the way of this excitement, for I thought maybe we could all vote in peace and quiet after while, but then I seen that it was advisable for me to go away, for a wise man sees evil, and therefore he shuns it, and I thought I would get out of the way; I was an old man, you know, sir, and I thought I ought to get out of the way; I didn't see no threatnings and no guns or anything of that kind.
 Q. You say Mr. Hall said that you couldn't vote, and if you did vote your vote wouldn't amount to anything?
 A. After they taken Mr. Hall by the hand and said, "You can't vote here," and I was standing about that distance from here to you, and they said to him, "You can't vote here," I thought if Mr. Hall can't vote I can't vote there neither.

George Carter:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?
 A. Well, sir, a gentleman met me and told me that I couldn't vote there that day.
 Q. Who told you that?
 A. I didn't know the gentleman's name; I didn't know him.
 Q. Was he a white man?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. A white man told you?
 A. After some of the colored people told me, I said I'm going to see, and a white man met me about as far as from here outside and said, "Look here, old man, you can't vote here this day; no nigger can vote here this day, and it is the best plan for you to go home," and I never made any more talk, I just turned around and went home.

William Henry Crowner:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir; I didn't.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because these men that was down there said that none of us colored men shouldn't vote there to-day; one of them had an oath to it; no colored men shouldn't vote there to-day.
 Q. Who said that?
 A. Some men that was there; they was strangers to me; I didn't know them.
 Q. Were they white men?
 A. Yes, sir.

James H. Cook:

Q. Did you go to vote last fall?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. How near did you get to polls?
 A. I got within about 20 yards of the house.
 Q. Why didn't you go nearer?
 A. Well, sir, from what I learnt that we couldn't go any nearer.
 Q. Who told you you couldn't go any nearer?
 A. Well, I seen some of the boys that had been there before me, and I met some on the road, and they said their votes was rejected, and they couldn't get to the window; everybody seemed to be afraid to venture their lives there; afraid to go any further.
 Q. You went away with the rest?
 A. Yes, sir; I was afraid to venture up by myself; yes, sir.
 Q. Did you see any strange people there?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Were they white men or colored men?
 A. They was white men, sir.

Frank Cager:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because they was pulling and hauling as I went up to the polls and they all rushed back just as I was going up and I went back, too.
 Q. Who were they pulling and hauling, did you see?
 A. Mr. Hall.
 Q. Did you hear the men that were pulling and hauling Mr. Hall say anything?
 A. Yes, sir; I heard them say that he shouldn't vote there; that he didn't belong there.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Osmond Pumphrey there that day?
 A. Yes, sir; I saw him there.
 Q. Did you have any talk with him?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Edward Pumphrey there?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did he say anything?
 A. Yes, sir; he came past us and says—some of the fellows said something to him, and he says that all of you better go home; that he didn't think we could vote that day.

Thomas G. Cook:

Q. Why not?
 A. They told us our votes was objected and we couldn't vote; told me I couldn't vote.
 Q. Who told you you couldn't vote?
 A. Mr. Pumphrey; Mr. Ed. Pumphrey.
 Q. What did he say to you?
 A. I asked him how it was we couldn't vote, and he said we couldn't vote there to-day; he says: "You better not go there, you might get hurt."
 Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. I got about a half a mile from the polls; I met the—
 Q. Why didn't you go nearer to the polls?
 A. Well, sir, I met the boys coming back and they said that they would not let anybody vote, and so I came back.

Samuel Dorsey:

Q. How near to the polls did you get?
 A. I reckon I got within 30 yards of the place?
 Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because our votes was rejected.
 Q. What time of day did you get there?
 A. About 9 o'clock in the morning.
 Q. Who told you your votes were rejected?
 A. A man by the name of Banus Matthews. He was at the window at the present time; at the polls.
 Q. What did he tell you, Dorsey?
 A. He said our votes was rejected, and we couldn't vote.

Columbus Franklin:

Q. Did you see Rod Kees go up to vote?
 A. I did so.
 Q. Did he get his vote in?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Well, what happened?
 A. Well, some of them snatched him away from the window.
 Q. Who were the men that snatched him away from the window?
 A. I didn't know them, sir.
 Q. You never saw them before?
 A. No, sir; only Mr. Tip Wells.
 Q. Did you hear any of the white men say anything?
 A. Yes, sir; I heard Mr. Tip Wells say, "Not a damn nigger should vote."

Hezekiah Fisher:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. I did not, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, sir, there was several gentlemen there that appeared to be interested there, and they was pulling and hauling and raising a disturbance there, and of course that made the men stand back some time; and then I heard them say—I heard the fuss, and two or three said that they rejected to our voting.

Jacob Franklin:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, I understood they said you shouldn't vote, and I never went exactly right to the window, and then Mr. Pumphrey said, it was best to go home, and I took his advice; I staid around there for a little while, and then I went home.
 Q. You took his advice and went home?
 A. Yes, sir.

Thomas Fisher:

Q. Do you know whether he voted or not?
 A. No, sir; I do not, sir.
 Q. You heard that your vote was objected to; what did the men say?
 A. When we went up to the window to vote, Mr. Tipp Wells, and some other gentlemen, I don't know who they were, they said that there was no voting, and no person should vote there to-day unless they voted for Mr. Cleveland; and they couldn't vote our ticket. Some of them said our votes is objected to, and they said yes, they were, and that was the reason, unless they voted their ticket, and every person, and I and a great many others left the polls.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Edward Pumphrey that day?
 A. Yes, sir; I talked with him.
 Q. Did he say anything?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What did he say?
 A. I asked him what was the reason that we couldn't vote there, and he said that we better go home; he said our tickets, our votes, was objected, and he said it was not safe for us to stay there, because a crowd of ruffians had come from Baltimore, and it was best for us to get away from there as soon as we could, and that is all I had to say to him.

Lloyd Faulkner:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because I couldn't vote, sir.
 Q. Why?
 A. The men was there to keep us from voting, it appeared like, sir; standing there and shoving us away from there, and they took and pulled a man named Andy Sampson, and said he shouldn't vote there, and they snatched the tickets out of two or three men's hands and said that our votes was not rejected, and others came away from there, and I came away from there too.

Henry Franklin:

Q. Who said that?
 A. Well, sir, a man named Edward Pumphrey told me that I better not go to the polls, and better take his advice, else I would get hurt, and I thought rather than get hurt that I would not vote.
 Q. Did he meet you?
 A. He came to me.
 Q. He knew you?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. You were then going up to the polls?
 A. Yes, sir; I went up about ten yards from the polls and stopped, and I suppose he saw that I was getting near the polls and he told me.
 Q. Was it then that Mr. Pumphrey came to you?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. He came up to you and told you that if you didn't want to get hurt you had better get back and not vote?
 A. He told me I better take his advice than to get hurt.

Samuel Gaither:

Q. You were going to vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did they take hold of you?
 A. Yes, sir; they took hold of me and shoved me back; told me to stand back, I shouldn't vote.

William Howard:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Because they rejected to our votes.
 Q. Who rejected your votes?
 A. I didn't know, sir; I jest hearn it spoken in the crowd; I don't know who spoke it, that there was no niggers to vote there that day.
 Q. Was it white men that said that?
 A. Yes, sir; so I understood.

Benjamin Howard:

Q. Did you vote?
 A. No, sir.
 Q. Why not?
 A. Well, there were some gentlemen there, and I didn't vote; there was a crowd of people there, strangers, that hadn't usually been there, and we were a little kind of shy of them.
 Q. Did they say anything?
 A. Yes, sir; they talked amongst themselves and said the colored people shouldn't vote.
 Q. They said the colored people shouldn't vote?
 A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you see any scrimmage or any pulling and hauling?
 A. Yes, sir; I saw them pushing.
 Q. Who did you see them push?
 A. They shoved a fellow down by the name of Sampson.
 Q. You saw them shove him?
 A. Yes, sir.

Charles Edward Henson:

Q. Did you go to vote last fall?
 A. I started there, sir.
 Q. How near did you get to the polls?
 A. I got about half way there, sir.
 Q. Why didn't you go further?

A. Well, I intended to go further, gentlemen but I heard such a bad report, and I had a sick mother at home, so I turned around and went back.

John Wesley Hayes:

Q. But you didn't vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why didn't you vote?

A. Well, after I started up there, and there was so many around there, and after the disorder was started up, why I didn't care about venturing myself to vote.

Q. You saw the disorder; what do you mean by that; what did you see?

A. Well, sir, I seen one man go up there and they grabbed him and snatched him away from the polls.

Q. Who was that that you saw grabbed and snatched away from the polls?

A. Andy Sampson; I seen two young men grab him and snatch him away, and they said he couldn't vote, and Mr. Hall walked up and he wanted know whether his vote was objected to, and they said that it was, and then we all started away.

Q. Did you see anything more at all after all that?

A. No, sir; I never stayed there very long after that.

Q. Were you there when Rod Kess came up to vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him before he came up to vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him as he went up to vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Edward Pumphrey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say anything in your presence that day?

A. Yes, sir; I heard him say it was not worth while for us to stand around there, that there was a great deal of ruffians around there, that we were not going to vote, and if a row occurred that he would not be any use toward protecting us, and he was there for peace; that it would be best for us to go home.

Jesse Hogan:

Q. Did you vote?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. Why didn't you vote?

A. I seen them pull away Andrew Sampson from the polls, from the door, and Mr. Hall, they pulled him away, too, and he asked the question, "Was the ticket rejected?" and they said at the polls, "Yes," and I came away from there, and went right straight on home, sir.

James Hammond:

Q. How near did you get to the polling place?

A. I got right near, but they came up a furse while I was standing, and I couldn't vote; they said they was rejecting votes, and I came away.

Q. What sort of fuss was it they got up?

A. Well, sir, there was a man going around there pulling and hauling some of the boys standing around there.

Q. Who did they pull and haul?

A. I couldn't say what identical person it was, but it was a man that I didn't know; I didn't know him exactly; they took hold of him and pulled him, and got him away from where I was standing; I saw Mr. Hall come up and they taken hold of him, and they taken his ticket and tore it up.

Eli Jackson:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?

A. I got right up to the polls.

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I didn't vote.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, sir, at the time I was there; I got down there between 7 and 8 o'clock, and when the polls opened I was right on the spot, and at the time I was there keeping up to the polls, the rest of the crowd found out that the tickets was objected and walks off; when I found out that they couldn't vote, I came away with the crowd; just as the crowd come away I came away too.

Q. Whose votes were they that were rejected?

A. Mr. Hall's vote was one.

Q. What did they do to Mr. Hall; did you see them do anything?

A. No, sir; I didn't know any more than they took his ticket out of his hand and tore it up, gentlemen; I don't know any more.

Q. You don't know the man that did that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it a white man?

A. Yes, sir; it was a white gentleman.

Q. Did you see Andrew Sampson that day?

A. Yes, sir; he was the second; he was the first, the second was Mr. Hall.

Q. What did they do to Andrew Sampson?

A. I don't know what they did, any more than they told him "you can't vote here; you don't vote here in this district."

Q. What did they say to Mr. Hall?

A. Well, sir, nothing more than told him that he didn't vote in this district; just the same as Mr. Sampson.

Q. Did they halloo out anything to the rest of you?

A. No, sir; I didn't hear anything.

Q. Where did you go when you left the immediate vicinity of the polls?

A. I just went a little ways from the polls and stood around there for awhile.

Q. Do you know Mr. Edward Pumphrey?

A. Oh yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear him say anything that day?

A. At the time I was standing off from the polls he came by us and went up to the election house, but I don't know whether he went in or not, but when he came back to the road he stopped amongst the men and told us we better not stop there, and better go home; he said we better go home. He said that he was deputized by the sheriff to be a deputy sheriff around there that day, and he said there might be trouble, and we all better go home.

Q. He said there might be trouble, and you better go home?

A. Yes, sir; and we better go on home.

Nathan Lowndes:

Q. How near did you get to it?

A. Well, sir, I got about 300 or 400 yards off from it.

Q. Why didn't you go closer to the voting place?

A. Well, sir, I heard as I was going up that all the colored men's votes was rejected, and they was fighting, and I said I wouldn't go no further; it wasn't necessary to go any further.

Thomas Henry Matthews:

Q. Do you know Mr. Edward Pumphrey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear him say anything that day?

A. Well, sir, I seen Mr. Ed. Pumphrey, and he said to me and another man—a man by the name of Frank Williams or Frank Cager—"Both you men better go home, because it will keep you out of trouble. I was deputized yesterday to be deputy sheriff;" and he says, says he, "You men can't vote here to-day, and it will not be worth the time for you to stay here; there will be a hell of a time here to-day, and if I was you men I would go home, because you can't vote here to-day, you colored men;" then, after I heard him say that, I knew there was going to be trouble, and I didn't stay around there.

Richard McDonald:

Q. Who told you you couldn't vote; who stopped you?

A. I don't know who stopped me; but I know I couldn't vote.

Q. Was it some white man?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you see there?

A. Well, sir, I seen a crowd of ruffians; I don't know who they were, but they was ruffians, and I couldn't vote there.

Q. Did you see them trouble anybody?

A. Oh, yes, sir; they stopped them from voting.

Q. Who did they stop?

A. I don't know exactly who they stopped, but they stopped them from voting; they stopped some men.

Q. You saw them stop some men, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

John Parran:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Why didn't you?

A. I couldn't go up there, sir; I was afraid to go.

Q. Afraid to go where?

A. I was afraid to go up there. At the time I got up there I met them coming away from there, and they could not vote, and I stopped as close as I could to the polls, and I was afraid to go any closer.

Q. What did you see?

A. Well, sir, I seen something there that I couldn't stand, and that was guns; I never can stand guns.

Q. Where did you see the guns?

A. I seen them on the wagon, and a gentleman had them; I didn't know who he was, but he had the gun in his arm.

Q. You saw them in the wagon?

A. He was on the wagon; yes, sir.

Q. With a gun in his arm?

A. Yes, sir; and he was out of the wagon, too, walking up there.

John Jackson:

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

Q. State your name, age, residence, and occupation.

A. I don't know my age exactly, sir; I am about thirty-eight years old; I live in Marley Neck, in the third district, Anne Arundel County; I do general farm work.

Mr. ROSE:

Q. How long have you lived in Anne Arundel County?

A. Well, sir, I suppose about nine years; eight or nine years.

Q. Did you go up to vote last fall?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you get your vote in?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. ROSE. Then you are not the man; you have not been summoned?

Witness. Yes; I have, sir. I have my summons in my pocket. Here it is. [Produces summons.]

Mr. ROSE. Then it is a mistake. Mr. Stenographer, I wish to give notice that I decline to examine this witness any further, as it is manifestly a mistake.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

By Mr. STANLEY:

Q. You say you voted, Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time in the morning did you vote?

A. I suppose half past 9 or 9 o'clock.

Q. What time did you get there to the polls?

A. I suppose about 8 o'clock in the morning; betwixt 7 and 8 o'clock I got there.

Q. Did anybody else vote while you were there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see anybody stopped from voting while you were there?

A. I didn't see no one 'hibited from voting, only one man, a fellow I didn't know in that district, and he ketched Hall and pull him away from the ranks. He went up to the polls and pulled him away, and the feller asked him "What do you mean?" or something like that, and I did not understand anything more than that, and I turned my back on the box at the time and I walked away from the place. When this fellow ketched hold of him and pulled him away from the ranks I turned my back around and walked away.

Q. Did anybody stop your vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not afraid to vote, were you?

A. Well, no, sir; I did vote.

Q. Was there anything there to scare anybody from voting?

A. No, sir.

Mr. STANLEY. Well, I am glad to come across a man who did vote.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. ROSE:

Q. John, who did you vote for that day?

A. I voted for Mr. Cleveland, sir.

Q. I thought so: who gave you your ticket?

A. A gentleman that came out there gave me the ticket, and I had it in my hand at the time.

Charles Howard:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. Because I didn't vote in the time I was going up to the window; it seemed that several of them was going to kick up a disturbance, and our votes was objected to, and everybody else went away from the window, and I went away too.

Q. Why did you go away?

A. I didn't care to stay there; I thought perhaps if I stayed there I might get hurt, or something of that kind, so rather than do that I thought it was best to get away, and so I came away.

Joseph Miller:

Q. How near did you get to the polls?

A. I couldn't tell you exactly; I guess about a couple of hundred yards maybe.

Q. And you met some colored people, and they told you that it was no use to go up there?

A. They told me that they couldn't vote; it was no use for me to go up, and I took them at their word and went back; I went home.

Thomas Miller:

Q. Did you go to vote last fall?

A. I started down there, but I didn't get quite down there; I didn't get quite there; I heard it was not worth while for to go down there, so I came home.

Q. Why wasn't it worth while to go down there?

A. Well, I met some of my friends and they told me it was not worth while to go down; they said it was some men down there and they were rejecting us of our votes, and that I couldn't vote if I went down there.

William Brown:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, I got started to go up there and a parcel of them were coming back and they said that there was a riot going on up there, and I thought that I was an old man, but I was safe and sound and I thought I would go home and keep out of harm's way.

Henston R. Hall:

Q. How did you learn it?

A. Well, sir, there was two or three men about there, two or three young roughs that I didn't know; they were pulling and hauling one man from the window, and said they would arrest us, the very first thing that occurred; so I thought best for me to get away. I seen them pull one man, and the next man they pulled away was William Hall; they snatched his ticket out of his hand and tore it up, and shoved him off; and I don't think more than three or four men voted at the time, and so I was behind the congregation, and I seen that I couldn't vote, and I thought I wouldn't risk any further; I wouldn't take any further risk, so I thought I wouldn't go up any closer, and I came away.

Q. What risk was there, did you think?

A. It happened that there was some difficulty there; they snatched Andy Sampson away; they first took hold of Andy Sampson and they said they would arrest us, and I seen one of these men raise his hand and put it behind him, and started to draw a revolver; he didn't draw it out, but I seen it.

Q. You saw the pistol?

A. Yes, sir; I seen it, but whether he was going to use it or not I couldn't tell; only I seen it. There appeared to be some difficulty there, and I didn't want to get in it, and I got away; I thought it was better for me to go away.

Isaiah Spencer:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. They said they objected to the votes, and then they all came away and so I thought I ought to come away, too, because I was alone and I couldn't do anything by myself if I stayed there.

Elijah Brown:

Q. Did you vote?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, they said there had been a kind of confusion there, sir, and I was going up to vote, and I seen the crowd coming back; the crowd was kind of split up, and they said the votes was objected to, or something of the kind, and we couldn't vote.

Q. What kind of confusion did they state had been there?

A. They said something about—they said that there had been some kind of roughs or ruffians, or some men of that kind; that's what they said, and that they objected to our votes; I didn't see anybody myself; I didn't see no one.

Q. And you turned around and left when they told you what they did?

A. Yes, sir; I left. After they stated that we couldn't vote, then I left.

Garrison Spencer:

Q. Who told you that?

A. I heard some of the boys, I don't remember the names now, but it was the boys in the neighborhood, say that we couldn't vote there; and then I heard a man say that no nigger should vote here to-day.

Q. Was he a white man?

A. Yes, sir.

James A. Brown:

Q. Did you get your vote in?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not, James?

A. Well, they objected to us voting, I believe, sir.

Q. How near to the polls did you get?

A. I got right to the window, near about.

Q. What hour of the day was that?

A. That was about 10 o'clock in the morning, I think it was, sir.

Q. Did you come down from Baltimore that morning?

A. No, sir; I didn't come down in the morning, I came down from Baltimore the night before.

Q. Well, who told you that they objected to your voting?

A. I didn't know who they was that said so, sir.

Q. You don't know who said so?

A. I don't know who they was, sir.

Q. Were they white men?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any confusion while you were there?

A. Yes, sir; I seen one man; while I was there I seen them knock one man down.

Q. Did you know him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it?

A. It was Rod. Kess, sir.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. LACEY. I ask the gentleman from Ohio to give me five minutes more.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I will yield to the gentleman for five minutes longer.

Mr. LACEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I will simply call attention of the House to this fact. In Smalls against Elliott, my friend from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] made the report and reported inasmuch as some colored women appeared at the polls with clubs that not only should that fact be regarded as intimidation, but the entire poll should be thrown out, although the intimidation was not effective and the colored Democratic club cast their votes. They voted, and yet this Democratic House, because a number of colored women appeared at the polls, threw that vote out.

Mr. CRISP. That did not stand alone.

Mr. LACEY. Of course it did not stand alone. It stood with other things. But a few colored women appearing at the scene of election was held to be sufficient intimidation to throw out the poll, although the colored Democratic men voted. That certainly should be authority to throw out the poll when white men appear on the scene, armed with guns and pistols, and deprive colored men of their votes.

In the one case the intimidation was entirely ineffectual. The colored men voted. They were not afraid of their colored sisters. They knew their bark was worse than their bite and made it up with the colored ladies further on. But these parties, intimidating colored voters in this case, were white men, were strangers to the black men; they were men who were armed with pistols and guns and were making threats and assailing the colored men, and making such demonstrations as to prevent them from exercising the right of suffrage to which they were entitled.

Now, Mr. Speaker, one thing is clear, either these excluded votes should be counted or the precinct should be thrown out. But by throwing out the precinct less injury is inflicted upon the sitting member than by counting the intimidated voters' ballots. One hundred and seventy-five votes were lost to Mudd as effectually as though no election were held in that precinct at all. One hundred and thirty-six majority was returned for the sitting member in a strong Republican precinct, and it was the fruit of this intimidation which achieved that result. We say, therefore, that the precinct ought to be thrown out and not counted, which if done increases the contestant's majority to 154. The contestant is clearly elected and should have his seat.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. How much time has been consumed by the gentleman from Iowa?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan). The gentleman from Iowa has occupied one hour and four minutes.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. The gentleman from Texas controls the time on the other side.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire, before beginning the particulars of this discussion, as it may relate to the contest of Mudd vs. Compton, to call the attention of the House, and in that I shall be very brief, to some matters to which neither the attention of the House nor the country has been attracted and which neither can well afford to shut its eyes upon. At the outset of my remarks, permit me to state that I have not been at all well for some days past, and trust there will be order in the House during the time I shall occupy the floor, as my strength will not permit any great exercise.

It is a remarkable fact, Mr. Speaker, never before exhibited in the history of this country, I believe, that there are pending or have been pending seventeen election cases before this committee. In looking at these contests this phenomenal exhibit is made: The seventeen cases pending before the Committee on Elections are all Republicans against Democrats. In four other cases notice had been served of similar nature, but they were withdrawn, making an aggregate of twenty-one cases in all. We might ask very properly? What does this mean? If it means and points out that the Democratic party of this country is so corrupt that, as relates to elections, their conduct is of that character as to invite exclusively against them contests, indeed it would be alarming; for, Mr. Speaker, however much we may be in the habit of charging corruption upon the one political organization or the other, this danger is always present: That political party never existed in the country, never can exist, itself corrupt, without possibly, not in the same degree, but certainly in a very great degree, imposing corruption upon the other political party.

If we learn anything from history, that great pregnant fact is absolutely emphasized and established. There is some other reason for it, and it is not creditable to the majority of this House, and I do not aver you deserve it, but there sprang up all over the country immediately upon notice that a meager majority existed on the part of the Republicans in this body an unusually marked desire to contest seats on this floor, and I am informed that within the last few days one of the contestants who early abandoned his contest, after observing the course of this committee, together with the action of the House upon its reports, came at once and deliberately proposed, in the last few days, the commencement of his contest, hoping that he might receive such consideration and arrive at the same results as those who had preceded him.

Whenever we reach that point, Mr. Speaker, when the elections shall not exist in districts of the several States, but that Congress is looked to to re-enforce the political strength of any party and establish representation for the people on this floor, we will be confronted with a danger that our Republic has not so far met.

It may not be remiss, Mr. Speaker, to review for a moment the extreme jealousy of our forefathers as to the power they created and lodged in this Government. Careful as they were to establish this Government of co-ordinate powers, its executive, its legislative and judicial, the most remarkable fact existed—and from it we ought to derive information—that the very first Congress of the United States prepared and presented to the American people for their ratification eleven amendments, nine of which were restrictive upon the powers that they feared they had already granted or at least acknowledged, and enlarged and protected the right of the individual as well as of the States.

I say that was a remarkable fact. I will not stop to read the various amendments, but the States were not satisfied until they had reached and incorporated an express provision that the powers not expressly delegated by the Constitution to the United States nor inhibited by it to the States were reserved to the States or to the people. That is the language of the tenth amendment of the Constitution, and that was incorporated as one of its provisions. What does it mean? What is the import of the language? Why are we unwilling to look back to that date and learn from our forefathers the effect and intent of the language they incorporated and its meaning to the people of this country?

But it means this, what it means now and what it has always meant. Power is aggressive in its conceptions, always gathering to itself. They then understood that nowhere in the world was there a Congress with limited powers except in a monarchy. England recognized this principle long ago, and in her unwritten constitution declared Parliament supreme. This great contest is forever waging. No power has ever been lodged in any department of government but it has availed itself of all opportunities to increase its power by political accretion. The most dangerous, because it is the most inviting, is the power of Congress. Every Department would perish to-morrow if it did not clothe and feed them. I am not astonished, therefore, at the doctrine announced in this case.

I am not astonished, therefore, at the doctrine announced in this report; and with me it is not so much a question whether this contestant shall be seated or Mr. Compton remain as what are the limitations and what ought to be the limitations placed upon Congress in executing that trust reposed by the Constitution on it to judge of the election and qualifications of its members. If they are unlimited, as intimated by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] when, referring to the law of Maryland, he said: "Whatever might be that law, the precedents in Congress establish the right of Congress to judge of these elections," is there such a law? Is there such a precedent? Who made it? When was it made? When did this Congress—and I ask those gentlemen to refer me to the precedent where any member of Congress or any committee or any report has announced that the statute laws of the States do not control the elections absolutely; that the only duty of Congress is to undertake to discover the result of the election as understood and interpreted by the laws of the State.

I desire, therefore, to devote some moments to this question. The gentleman says that I clearly in haste overlooked the act of 1870 and the acts of 1874 and 1878. Why, Mr. Speaker, the majority quote the act of 1870, and I desire to read from their report. In giving their defense of permitting people to vote when, under the law of Maryland they can not, they use this language:

The class of cases about which we have been speaking, together with another class represented by a vote on each side in which the voter was improperly refused registration, are the very sort of cases to provide clearly for which the third section of the act of Congress of May 31, 1870, was enacted, which section read as follows:

"That whenever, by or under the authority of the constitution or laws of any State or the laws of any Territory, any act is, or shall be, required to be done by any citizen as a prerequisite to qualify or entitle him to vote, the offer of any such citizen to perform the act required to be done as aforesaid shall, if it fail to be carried into execution by reason of the wrongful act or omission of the person or officer charged with the duty of receiving or permitting such performance or offer to perform or acting thereon, be deemed and held as a performance in law of such act, and the person so offering and failing as aforesaid, and being otherwise qualified, shall be entitled to vote in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had performed such act."

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is not I who have changed my front. It is that majority who, not willing to stand on the act of 1870 that they cite, now fall back on the act of 1879 and say that act was unconstitutional and the act of 1878 is not. There has been no review of the act of 1874 or 1878 by our supreme court. But in that review that they gave of this act no room for doubt is left for construction as to what is the meaning and effect and unconstitutionality of this act. And the act of 1878 is exactly the language, the very language, quoted in the act of 1870. The court decided in the Reese case much more than has been referred to by the gentleman from Iowa. It is true in that case as in the cases he read, based upon the act of 1878—a criminal offense proceeding against by the Government—but it became necessary to look into these acts called the enabling acts of the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution. The whole court, while two did dissent on some propositions, confronted as a court this proposition and announced it in the opinion of 1874, and that is:

Congress has no power, never had, and none can be discovered with reference to the qualifications of the voter.

I will read a mere line from that opinion:

The statute contemplates a most important change in the election laws. Previous to its adoption the States, as a general rule, regulated in their own way all the details of all elections. They prescribed the qualifications of voters and the manner in which those offering to vote at an election should make known their qualifications to the officers in charge. This act interferes with this practice, and it prescribes rules not provided by the laws of the States. It substitutes, under certain circumstances, performance wrongfully prevented for performance itself. If the elector makes and presents his affidavit in the form and to the effect prescribed, the inspectors are to treat this as the equivalent of the specified requirement of the State law. This is a radical change in the practice, and the statute which creates it should be explicit in its terms. Nothing should be left to construction if it can be avoided.

Then referring to the act—

We are not able to reject a part which is unconstitutional and retain the remainder, because it is not possible to separate that which is unconstitutional, if there be any such, from that which is not. The proposed effect is not to be attained by striking out or disregarding words that are in the section, but by inserting those that are not now there. Each of the sections must stand as a whole or fall together. The language is plain. There is no room for construction, unless it be as to the effect of the constitution. The question, then, to be determined is, whether we can introduce words of limitation into a penal statute so as to make it specific, when, as expressed, it is general only.

The court say, and in that they are unanimous, that the acts of Congress undertaking to control the State in so far as the States undertake legislation based upon the color and previous condition of the voter—the act of Congress would stand.

It is remarkable in looking at the Constitution of the United States—and the court themselves in this decision say so, and properly—that the fourteenth amendment itself provided in its own womb for States to disfranchise anybody, whether for color or what not, as it might relate to voting, and it was not until the fifteenth amendment, which expressly provided that the States should not disfranchise any citizen on account of his color, that that power was inhibited in the States. Who charges now that the statute of Maryland in any way infringes the fifteenth amendment? Who charges that these unregistered voters were unregistered because they were black men? For such is not the fact. What power will any man assert for Congress to indicate to the State of Maryland who are its suffragans and who are its electors? The Constitution in its first line answers that question in providing for the organization of Congress. It says that the qualifications of the electors for members of Congress shall be such qualifications as those electors have for voting for the most popular branch of their State government.

There is the qualification of the elector; there is the citizen, the voter, the suffragan. Who in Maryland can vote for a member of the lower house of the Legislature? They, and they only, can vote for members of Congress. How do you ascertain how they vote for their Legislature? You go to their organic law and to their State acts. What says the law of Maryland? In this it is peculiar. I will read from the constitution of that State; and if a like provision exists in the constitution of any other State in the Union I am not aware of it. The peculiarity is that the constitution of Maryland not only provides for a registration of voters, but makes registration a necessary qualification of a voter, and inhibits anybody from voting or any judges of election from receiving the vote of any one who is not a registered voter:

The General Assembly shall provide by law for uniform registration of the names of all the voters of the State who possess the qualifications described in this article: which registration shall be conclusive evidence to the judges of election of the right of every person thus registered to vote at any election thereafter held in this State. But no person shall vote at any election, Federal or State, hereafter to be held in this State, or at any municipal election in the city of Baltimore, unless his name appears in the list of registered voters.

Then comes the act of the Legislature, which absolutely requires the judges of election to take an oath, first, that every man who is upon this registration list may vote and, second, that no man shall vote whose name is not upon the registration list. Now, therefore, in looking at this contest it is important that this House shall determine, not merely as it relates to Mr. Compton or to Mr. Mudd, but upon principle, so that it will stand for all time to come to regulate the political parties of this country, how they are to proceed in an election in that State. The language of the majority is remarkable. They absolutely say in their report that although the judges of election could not receive these unregistered votes Congress can. The reason they give is that you have reduced the power of these election judges to a minimum, and that you must extend this power sufficiently so that Congress can do what the judges of election in Maryland can not do. What law! What authority! What reasoning! Yet that is exactly what this majority report says, and must say, in order to reach the conclusion that it does reach.

These remarks are made now, Mr. Speaker, as the foundation, the touchstone, rather, to test the class of voters that I shall presently investigate. The majority, in their report, by a strange and wonderful arithmetic have absolutely figured out, on the face of the returns, Mr. Mudd elected by a plurality of 2. How do they do it? I ought not to give much attention to that matter, because I do not think it is a matter of any importance; but I wish to give the House the exact figures as they appear from these returns. The only mode the majority of the committee could possibly pursue to reach the conclusion that prima facie, on the returns, Mudd has a plurality of 2, is by confounding ballots with returns. Where it suits them they examine ballots; where it suits them they examine returns; and by confounding and adding the two they finally reach their conclusions, as I shall show.

The vote, as returned to the governor, for Compton was 16,000. Both parties concede that there should be added to that two precincts from Charles County, the fifth and the ninth, which were omitted, not sent forward. For Compton there were 191 votes in the fifth precinct and 89 in the ninth, making Compton's entire vote 16,280. Mudd's returned vote was 15,819. Add to that the votes from the fifth and the ninth precincts of Charles County, and you have for Mudd 16,251 votes. Deduct 1 vote counted through mistake in one of the returns, and you have 16,250 votes for Mudd. Deduct that from the 16,280 for Compton, and you have a plurality of 30 in favor of Compton on the face of the returns.

But the majority of the committee take the returns as subsequently modified in Calvert County, where they say there was an error of 23 votes, and subtracting that from the plurality of 30 leaves Compton a net majority of 7. Then they take individual votes for Mudd, not counted, but which both sides of the committee subsequently agree to count, and by that system of adding votes to returns they finally figure out a plurality of 2 in favor of Mudd. There was a recount had in some of the precincts in the city of Baltimore and in Baltimore County and at one place in Charles County, but I will not stop now to give the numbers. The majority admit the votes, but they engage in quite a discussion about it. They admit a change by which Mudd loses 20 votes.

Mr. DALZELL. A net loss of 19 for Mudd.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. Well, a net loss of 19 is admitted. Now, as to this recount, if you look at the reports, both of the majority and the minority, you will discover that nothing could be fairer or more conclusive. The change is to be accounted for by the fact that portions of the district in which Mr. STOCKBRIDGE was a candidate adjoined these precincts, and persons voting for STOCKBRIDGE innocently voted in the district in which Compton and Mudd were running, and the tickets not being scratched the attention of the judges of election was not called to it. The ticket was a plain, straight ticket, either Republican or Democratic. In that way Mudd got 19 or 20 more votes than he should have had, as the majority of the committee admit. Now, in completing the returns, these 19 votes should be deducted from Mr. Mudd, which the committee admit, and this would leave Compton elected by 22 votes upon the face of the returns.

Are they not returned? They are returned as much as these others. So that taking from the 23 votes these 20 there would be but 3 votes gained by Mudd; then subtracting from the 30 you would have, not a plurality of 2 for Mudd by any means, but you would have 22 plurality for Compton; and it is unavoidable.

I wish to look now for a moment at the Calvert County returns. There may be doubt about this matter; but what the House is to do if you proceed upon a legal principle ought not to be a question for a moment. These officers in that county were all Republicans; the entire county was under Republican administration. These judges of election made their returns in due form to the governor; three months afterward they testified that a certain poll-book, now before them, was the poll-book then before them; and by that poll it appeared that Mr. Mudd had 28 more votes than had been counted.

Now, under the law of Maryland, these poll-books are duplicate; there can not be less than two. Each clerk is required to have one. That requirement applies to every voting precinct in the State. The clerk has not certified these poll-books; and all that is presented to this House is what purports to be a copy of one of them. And when you examine that copy you find that it is not certified by any clerk, and this is required by the statute of Maryland. It fails to conform to the law in that the number of votes is expressed in figures only, when the statute of Maryland requires that it should be given in full in writing.

There is another circumstance that is rather remarkable. Referring to the record containing this exhibit I call your attention to the fact that there is no writing about it; but these numbers are all figures. Take the vote for Presidential electors; take the entire Republican vote; take the Democratic vote; and you will find that the Democratic electors received 174 votes—in figures; the Republican electors received 391 votes in figures. Take the vote for Congressman and you will find that the vote of Compton is 153 and that of Mudd 407. It will be seen that Mr. Mudd's vote was 47 greater than that received by any other Republican candidate at that particular polling-place.

I say that this poll-list comes to you under grave suspicion. It is not certified by any clerk. Its verification rests solely upon the memory of the judges of election who made three months before an official return; and they undertake to contradict the official returns by this unofficial, irregular, unlawful paper—if it is a poll-book at all. The law uniformly is that where any fact requires to be established by evidence in two parts, a portion only of that evidence is insufficient.

I will, however, pass from this branch of the case with this remark: If the House should conclude to accept this additional and new return of these judges, Compton is still elected by 22 plurality, so far as we have proceeded.

I now come to an investigation of these individual voters whose votes were rejected. It is charged by the other side that the minority have dealt so fairly with this class of voters that absolutely we have admitted voters who under our rules ought not to be admitted and have rejected voters who under our rules ought not to have been rejected. Two instances are cited—David R. Brooks and John Henry Thomas. Now, as to David R. Brooks, the discrepancy of the middle name is not what determines us in disallowing this vote. Let us see what Brooks himself says about this matter. My attention has only been called to it this morning; but I will refer you to what Mr. Brooks himself says, because I want to be accurate and just. I say he ought not to have voted, and upon fair and proper principle. I read from his evidence on page 267:

Int. 7. What were you doing in Washington and how long had you been there?

A. I had just been up there to work some little in the summer.

Int. 8. Did you go there with the intention of returning and living here in the county?

A. I did.

Int. 9. When you applied to be registered did the registration officer tell you that he would register you?

A. He told me he would put my name on the book, but not as a voter. The next question was, he asked me the post-office to send to get my transfer; he said he would send the next day; I told him my post-office was Eadsville, Kent County, Maryland.

Int. 10. Had you been voting in Kent County, Maryland?

A. Never in my life.

Int. 11. Then what did you want with a transfer?

A. He told me that I could not vote here except with a transfer.

That is the reason Mr. Brooks was not allowed to vote, not because the middle letter of his name was different from that in the registration list. Now turn to the case of John Henry Thomas. The minority of the committee in their report follow the law of Maryland, which requires that the given name, the first Christian name, at least—such is the language of the law—shall be given in full, as well as the surname. Now, when William Thomas undertook to vote, a name is found on the registration list as James Thomas. How could he have voted? Suppose he was not properly registered, does he not make the mistake himself? It is before the registration officer that the law requires the first name to be given, and it is this name that was upon the registration list as "James." Therefore, the minority of the committee hold that he could not vote.

Only in these two cases, and in the case of a man named Reed—in no other case—do we reject any voter where there was idem sonans, without reference to the spelling and without reference to middle names. Mr. Reed had registered, if at all, the fall before. The age he now gives differs by four years from that given at the time of the registration and the place of residence is entirely different as to the street. The judges of election held that he was not the man; that there was a want of identity; and they held correctly.

Now, when we come to look at the matter of those 37 other voters, what do we find? Without undertaking to make an examination as to each name, I will give a very brief statement on this question.

Take, for instance, as a mere sample of those who were not registered, John Vitz. There was a man who appeared as Burts, which is a distinct name. Then there was the name Aquila Fishbaugh, while the registered name is Aquila Fisher, a distinct name. The judges rejected him as not being registered. We found the greater proportion were Democratic rather than Republican.

As to those six names claimed by contestant as improperly rejected, the judges found persons by those names had voted; voted in the same name. What did the judges do? What ought they to have done? There was nothing to indicate they did not vote rightfully. The majority say, because these men wanted to vote, and vote the Republican ticket, although men had properly voted in these names, they hold they should also vote.

But suppose the other fellows voted the Republican ticket. There is some doubt of it. The majority did not think they did. There is no one who knows about it. What is the result? It is a defect in the law. Who is going to remedy it? Is this House to say because those six men have voted we shall now permit six other men to vote on the same names?

So the House will with care go through the list, and they ought to do it, and the majority can not seat Mr. Mudd without deducting from the list as they prepared it. It is not possible for the House otherwise to reach the conclusion that Mr. Compton was not elected.

What has the law of Maryland to do with this matter? If it stands in the way of the law of Congress, we are told, then let the law of Maryland get out of the way, as Congress is above that law and can better attend to it than the people of Maryland. That is the politics, that is the law we are to have in this House. To my mind it is fearful. To my mind the assertion of such power is little less than the destruction of the sovereignty of the State. To my mind the dearest thing is local government. The great love I have for my Government consists in the fact I am a unit in society; that my neighborhood, that my county, that my State can manage these things confided to them by the Constitution and the laws better than Congress can.

Sir, if I have to make my election between the people at home attending to their own business and the virtue and wisdom of Congress attending to it I will take the virtue and wisdom of the people at home.

Jefferson, in that manner peculiar to him, boldly avows his philosophy which shines out because of its simplicity. He said when Virginia looked to Washington to know when to sow and when to reap Virginia would be without bread.

It is true. It applies not only to its physical effects, but as it relates to local government in the State of Virginia.

Sir, there is something behind this more than this election. It is to tutor the people to prepare for Federal election laws. It is to prepare the people to set aside their own local management and submit to Congress. We are rapidly coming to it.

Mr. Speaker, without spending more time upon these particulars, I will look now briefly to the most important feature of this case, and that is the suppression of the vote of a precinct—an entire precinct—in Anne Arundel County, as recommended by the majority of committee. This Committee on Elections changes its policy and its opinions of law according to the particular emergency presented by the case they are called upon to consider and decide. The chameleon never took its coloring more perfectly from its object than does this committee from the object of its political purposes and the needs of its party on this floor.

In the Cate case they did not throw out a whole precinct for like purposes, but they counted, to meet an emergency, all those they said ought to be counted, because they told who they would have voted for if they had been permitted to vote at all, but did not permit Cate to have a single vote. In this case they say, "We just won't let anybody vote at all, neither the whites nor the blacks; but will throw out the whole precinct!"

I will read briefly on that point a clear and succinct statement of law, upon which I am willing to stand and by which I will abide. I read from McCrary on Elections. The House doubtless is familiar with the principle, and I ask your attention to the language:

§ 483. The question under what circumstances the entire poll of an election division may be rejected has been much discussed, and conflicting views have been expressed by the courts. The power to reject an entire poll is certainly a dangerous power, and though it belongs to whatever tribunal has jurisdiction to pass upon the merits of a contested-election case, it should be exercised only in an extreme case; that is to say, a case where it is impossible to ascertain with reasonable certainty the true vote.

1. Ex parte Murphy, 7 Cowan, 153.

2. The People ex rel., etc., vs. Vail, 20 Wend., 12.

3. Power to throw out the vote of an entire precinct should be exercised only under circumstances which demonstrate beyond reasonable doubt that there has been such disregard of law or such fraud that it is impossible to distinguish what votes were lawful and what were unlawful, or to arrive at any certain result whatever, or where the great body of voters have been prevented from exercising their rights by violence or intimidation. (Daily vs. Petroff, 10 Phila., 339; Re School Directors, 12 Id., 693.)

It must appear that the conduct of the election officers has been such as to destroy the integrity of their returns and to avoid the prima facie character which they ought to bear as evidence before they can be set aside and other proof demanded of the true state of the vote.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the report of the majority of the committee comes to you with a great flourish. You would think from reading that report that an advancing army—imaginary, it is true—but an army with banners and bayonets and guns, with all the display of obstructive force, was formed around the polls to deprive men of their right of suffrage. They tell you of guns and pistols and threats and violence at the polls, and when I say to you that not one word or tittle in this whole testimony, except such as I shall presently show and give the House in full, tends to establish this, you will find that I am not going beyond the fairest statement of fact derived from the fullest investigation of the evidence. But if they can in any of these Southern cases get "the nigger in the wood-pile," if they can turn loose this machinery and all these charges of intimidation, why that is the end of the contest—that settles the case.

Now, what are the facts? Two years before that time a white man had been brained at that poll. These negroes at 8 o'clock in the morning of the election fired a gun, assembled by the signal, formed in company, and marched to the polls, where there were but fifteen white men present. Was that intimidation? And yet that is a fact undisputed; it is in the record. They marched under a man, a colored man, named Hall—Captain Hall.

They call him captain, and the proof here shows that Captain Hall is a man of some wealth. He pays in taxes some two or three hundred dollars. Mr. Hall himself testifies. He says he had got up to the front of this crowd, had a ticket in his hand, and some one not a citizen there, a man, a stranger to him (who he was the record does not show), jerked the ticket out of his hand and pushed him aside, saying, "You don't vote here." He says the same man jerked another man out of the ranks, not striking him or knocking him down, but pushed him out of the ranks. That was all.

There are two witnesses who testify on this point. One hundred and sixty-one of these people were examined as witnesses, but not a man of all of them, except the two I have referred to, saw anything of the kind. They did not see any weapons; not a man of them heard a pistol or gun fired but one, and he was a man named Jubb—an apostate Democrat—and you all know something of them in this House. He says he heard a pistol fired. Fifty colored people testify that there was firing by them and by white people at a mark down at the mill, a hundred yards off. That is the firing they heard. That is the testimony. No gun was seen about the polls except such as I will explain presently. What were they?

The testimony shows that a hunting party of gentlemen with guns in their wagon, and with their dogs, stopped there; that it was a neighborhood fond of hunting, and that white and colored people were out hunting at that time. Here are the guns, here is the parade, here are the banners, and here is the army. That is all of it.

Numbers of these colored people have testified that, as it related to them, they never saw a particle of trouble. But their leader said they must vote. Captain Hill said they must not vote, and then they will throw out the returns. Captain Hill said "We will take them to the Government of the United States"—meaning Congress.

Here is the place and the power where this dirty linen can be washed as white as snow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I will occupy some time longer. Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. The gentleman controls the time himself.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. If you will examine the testimony you will find that Mr. Hines presided as judge of the election. Another, Mr. Jubb, who did not vote for Mr. Compton, and got on there as a Democrat, and Mr. Williams. These were the judges. Mr. Williams testifies it was a perfectly correct election. Mr. Hines, two days after this election, announced to an honorable a gentleman as exists that it was a perfectly fair and free election. It was not yet time for him to find otherwise.

This contest was not then known to be close. The margins of this House had not yet been figured out. He further testifies that he never presided at an election before as an excuse for not making arrests; and one of his neighbors gets up and testifies that he had served with him as judge of election twice; and that upon one occasion Mr. Hines had refused to sign the certificate because he did not think the election was fair. There was no trouble about it then, two days afterwards as he declared at Annapolis, as shown by a witness in this record, and I have not time to read all his testimony.

Now, when you examine the characters of Jubb, Hines, and Mr. Williams, one of the witnesses says, "As between Mr. Williams and Jubb and Hines when it comes to a conflict, I would believe Williams much quicker than I would believe either Jubb or Hines."

Mr. COMPTON. And that is their witness.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. And that is their witness. That is the character of evidence to begin with. Now, as I said before, these 161 people who have testified; and a very great number of them testified that so far as they were concerned nobody said a word to them. Nobody ordered them away. They never heard of any threats; some did, but many did not. But that it was on order of Hall—some called him Brother Hall and some called him Captain Hall—that the colored people would not vote; and the testimony I am discussing is the testimony of the contestant exclusively.

When you come to the testimony and the array of men that were there, they say, with the exception of some incident that occurred about half past 8 o'clock in the morning, that there never was any further trouble whatever, and it was a perfectly peaceable and quiet election, and that the negroes came there an hour after this—some in the afternoon—fourteen of them. They came there and could have voted, but they turned back, and when there they said they would not vote because this negro leader had instructed them not to vote, and one of them said: "Captain Hall said he would take them up to the United States and throw out this election," and by this he meant "the big Congress." I will add that for him, for that is what he meant.

You take, therefore, the great mass of testimony of citizens that live there, of the men who pay their taxes, who live there, of the honor and virtue of that district, and not a man of them but testifies that it was an orderly and peaceable election. There was a little drinking.

So that, Mr. Speaker, as ready as some are to accept charges against their neighbor, however ready they may be to accept such testimony as this, I think this House ought to call a halt. We have done enough; we have elected enough members of Congress. Let the people have a chance.

Sir, I turn from this record and face the American Congress and say to them, if you turn Mr. Compton out and put in Mr. Mudd, you will write upon the brow of Maryland, in lines that all men can see, a dishonor and outrage put upon that sister Commonwealth. Why do we want to do it? Is this not majority enough? Are we not moving in haste quite fast? What more do you ask of us? Look at the other end of this street. A few months ago there was a Treasury that stood as a pyramid inverted, top-heavy; wasting, wasting, until it is the profound judgment of the best men of this House on both sides that if Congress is not called upon to supply a deficiency we may feel ourselves as fortunate.

What does the country expect and what does it demand? Instead of a continuation of these election cases and of flirting and coquetting with these gentlemen who are contesting elections from the various districts we would better be giving attention to that which presses the people of the country. The taxes are becoming enormous. Relief is being demanded.

Why, I ask, is it necessary to build up these majorities to aid in this great matter of reform, as they call it in the country? Why, your Government is rich. By the system of public spoliation and public plunder you have built a Government unquestionably the richest in the world and the richest that ever existed. More taxes are taken from this people than are taken from its people by any government on the face of the earth—I mean the Federal, State, county, and municipal taxes—and the statistics show it—without standing armies, without a navy, without fortifications, profoundly at peace and in quiet. What does it mean?

We are asked to turn from these facts and look into this record to see whether or not 175 colored people were bulldozed and intimidated by three or four men in Anne Arundel County.

The highest testimony does not put the number above 5. None of the citizens had anything to do with it. There were some strangers there. And yet you gentlemen of the majority ask that this entire precinct shall be set aside! Mark you, there had been several Republican votes polled at that precinct that day. There were 32 polled altogether. A number of those negroes had already voted there without any trouble, yet you throw out the whole poll in order to seat a Republican and add one more to your majority. Now if this precinct is thrown out, I say absolutely that Mr. Compton should not hold the seat. This is the battle-ground. Here is the point of contention. These others are mere little videttes thrown out by the majority to divert the attention of the House from the main issue.

Before I conclude my remarks I must do the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. COOPER] the justice of saying that I am sure he was selected to draw this remarkable majority report on account of his great reputation as a good lawyer and a fair gentleman, and my honorable friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], with his pleasing address, was chosen to use the lancet. It is remarkable, Mr. Speaker, to see how courteously they are. They discuss a proposition and come to a conclusion in a most obliging manner. For instance, with reference to these 19 votes lost by Mudd on recount, they say that they are very doubtful about the legal precedent, but they will waive all the doubts in favor of the Democrats. Again, when they come down to a vote which was scratched, they say, "Well, we will let that in." Then they come to another one claimed by Mr. Compton and they say, "We will let that in, too." They make so many concessions all the way through their report!

Mr. Speaker, Maryland is not here to ask favors. Maryland is here to demand justice. If Compton is not here by virtue of the authority of the law of Maryland, let the law of Maryland put him out and put her Representative in his place. I am reminded, by the course of the majority, of the story in Aesop about the wolf and the lamb. The wolf complained that the lamb was muddying the stream. The lamb suggested that that could not possibly be true, because he had drank from the stream below the point where the wolf was. "Well," says the wolf, "I will just devour you, anyhow." The fact is these concessions and this gracious manner of disposing of these side issues have been adopted to prepare the minds of the House for the great issue which is presented when they ask you to throw out 175 votes or more in Anne Arundel County. That is the real issue in this case. If Congress is willing to establish this precedent, if that is the sense of Congress, then I have naught to say.

The gentleman from Iowa speaks of a single vote which we claimed should be thrown out, and says that we asked to have it thrown out because the name of the candidate appeared twice on the ticket. He says the voter was so anxious to vote for Mr. Mudd that he put his name on the ticket twice, and that for that reason we asked to have it thrown out. Sir, that is not the position of any man who has any sense. If there is any man in the minority of this committee who takes that view, it certainly does not appear in the report. What we say is that that vote can not be counted under the law of Maryland, because the name of the office is obliterated.

Under the law of Maryland the office to be voted for must appear on the ticket, and I think the same requirement is found in the statutes of most of the States. My friend asks if an act of Maryland which is merely declaratory is to control Congress? Declaratory! Why, sir, I presume that you can find no precedent for the position taken by the majority of the committee. I know of none. My information is very limited in relation to contested-election cases as well as to other matters, but I know of no such precedent, while I know of many to the contrary. Indeed, I think the decisions are uniform that wherever the name of the office is obliterated the ballot, as it relates to that office, is to be rejected.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have already occupied the attention of the House longer than my allotted time, and I feel that I must apologize for having pursued this investigation to such length. In conclusion, let me say that I think we have about reached a point when the reflecting men of this House should themselves look into these contested-election cases, and not let the vacant seats of our Republican friends decide these contests.

Mr. DALZELL rose.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield thirty minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, a decent respect for the evidence in this case and even a qualified regard for the rules of law applicable thereto can result only in sustaining the case of the contestant. There is not a single doubtful question of fact that may not be solved in favor of the contestee, not a single debatable question of law that may not be adjudicated in his favor, and still he can reap from this record nothing but defeat. There are not involved in this case any grave questions of constitutional law or questions affecting the rights of States, nor questions of any kind but questions of figures; and I am prepared to yield all doubtful things to the contestee and yet to demonstrate to any gentleman who will impartially follow me, as a simple arithmetical proposition, that by no possibility can the contestee be counted into this contested seat.

In this Fifth Congressional district of Maryland there are eight election precincts. The returns to the governor, upon which the certificate was issued, gave to the contestee 16,000 votes, and one "for Compton," making 16,001 for the contestee, and gave to the contestant 15,820. As a consequence, according to those returns, the contestee appears to have been elected by a plurality of 181 votes. It is conceded, however, upon both sides that the governor's count is incorrect. With respect to four counties, to wit, Charles County, Calvert County, St. Mary's County, and Prince George's County, the contestant disputes the governor's figures; and with respect to certain districts in the city of Baltimore and one in the county of Charles the contestee disputes those figures. So that we start with the concession upon both sides that the governor's figures are wrong, and we are charged here now with the ascertainment of what the proper figures are.

Now, as to some matters materially bearing upon those figures both parties are agreed; as, for example, it is conceded that in Charles County, at two election precincts out of the nine no returns were made to the governor for the reason that the ballots were locked up in a ballot-box, were not accessible to the election judges, and consequently the returns to the governor upon which he based his certificate did not include these two election precincts. Both sides agree that the returns subsequently ascertained shall be counted, and both sides agree as to what they are, and this is the starting point from which I now ask you to follow me.

We must add for these omitted precincts 280 votes to the vote of the contestee and 432 votes to the vote of the contestant. Commencing thus with the contestee's plurality and making the addition about which we are agreed, the vote will then stand, 181 + 280, or 461, for contestee and 432 votes for contestant.

In another district of Charles County it appeared from the certificate of the return judges and upon the face of that certificate that one ticket had the name of Sydney E. Mudd twice and that this vote was not included in the return. I say (and I do not stop to discuss the question, because in a subsequent portion of my remarks I throw this out) that under the recognized rules of law, both in text-books and in the reports of this House, that vote should be counted; and the vote would then be 433 for the contestant, 461 for the contestee.

In Calvert County the governor's count was, for contestant, 1,138 votes; for contestee, 899 votes. Subsequently it appeared that this count of the governor's did not correspond with the original precinct returns. Under the laws of Maryland the three election judges who conduct an election at a precinct make their returns and deliver them into the custody of the president judge. Upon a subsequent day the president judges of all the election districts in a county meet and cast up the returns; that is to say, they do a simple sum in addition; they add together the various returns of the various precincts. The aggregate constitutes the county return, and that is sent to the governor.

Now, I need hardly say to any lawyer, or indeed to any layman, that the primary evidence in a case of that kind must be the precinct returns. They are the returns from which the certificate to the governor is made, and if the figures of the governor's certificate differ from the aggregate of the precinct returns it is not only law, but it is the commonest kind of common sense that the certificate of the governor shall be corrected by the original precinct returns. And to talk about counting ballots and to refer to ballots as the best evidence in any given case in this connection is simply to confound the listener with something that has here no application.

This is not a question of an error in the counting of ballots; it is not a question of an error in the process of an election; it is simply a question as to whether the clerical act of the clerk of the court in adding together the precinct returns has resulted in a mathematical truth.

Can we, then, correct the returns of the governor by these precinct returns? That depends on whether they are accessible and whether they are in the condition they were in when the original return was made. We have in this record the certified transcript of the clerk of the circuit court of the various precincts of this county, giving the exact figures. We have the testimony of the deputy clerk who added them up, that the result sent to the governor, when it differed from the result on the poll-books, as it did, was incorrect. We have the testimony of the clerk himself that immediately after the certificate had been sent to the governor he discovered the defect and wrote to the governor, asking if the election returns could not be corrected. The governor replied that they could not.

But outside of all that, independent of all that, we have the evidence of the editor of a Democratic newspaper, who says that he voted for Mr. Compton, that he copied the returns from the clerk's office on the night of election day, when they had just been made, and published them in his newspaper, and that the returns so published are the returns as we now claim them and have now proven them to be.

The result of this correction—and upon what ground the correction can be denied I am at a loss to understand—the result of this correction is to add 28 votes to the contestant and to leave the contestee's figures as before. We have, then, for the contestant 461 votes and for the contestee 433 votes plus 28, or 461 votes also; in other words, they are exactly even.

In St. Mary's County there were two votes cast, one for S. E. Mudd and one for Mudd. Neither of them, as will be observed, is in the correct name—Sydney E. Mudd—and it is conceded by the minority of the committee, following well recognized rules of law, that these votes are to be counted. I need not, therefore, stop to make any argument upon that subject. Compton's vote, then, is 461 and Mudd's vote 463, or a plurality of two votes for the contestant upon the face of the returns as corrected.

The governor's count, upon which he based his certificate, included one vote for "Compton." There is no such vote to be found in the precinct returns. No person knows where that vote came from or how the governor got it. True, a clerk puts in evidence his certificate that upon a certain tally-sheet such a vote appears; but I need not argue that a clerk's certificate, not of the record, but of something in a public record, is the very commonest kind of hearsay testimony, and that the precinct returns and the returns of the governor of the Commonwealth can not be corrected or verified by any such evidence. Taking that vote, now, as improperly given to contestee, we deduct one from his vote and we have Compton 460 votes and Mudd 463.

Now it is admitted—and when I say admitted I mean it not denied—that there were 6 qualified registered voters in this election district who tendered their votes at the polls and whose votes were refused because the election officers said that somebody had already voted on their names. I ask my friends on the other side—I appeal to them as lawyers—do you stand upon the proposition that I may be disfranchised if the election officers mistakenly or fraudulently allow another man to vote in my name?

If these men were qualified voters, and the proof is they were; if these men were registered voters, and the proof is they were; if the names of these men as registered were on the poll-books, and the proof is they were, in the name, not of law or of equity, but of common sense and common honesty, tell me upon what principle either the election officers or a committee of this House, or this House itself, shall strip those six American citizens of the right guaranteed to them by the Constitution and the laws?

If, then, you add these 6 votes, you have 469 for the contestant and 460 for the contestee.

Now, the contestant contended that there were 40 qualified voters whose names did not appear, through fraud or negligence or for any reason you may see fit to assign, on the poll-books; that they tendered their votes; that those votes were refused, and that they are now entitled to be counted.

I beg you to mark that the minority of the committee concede that of these 40 voters 19 are entitled to be counted, and I demand to know upon what basis you admit 19 and exclude 21? Because I affirm, and I affirm it after careful personal examination of this record, that with the exception of 2 voters—Gamble and Brooks—the testimony of the 21 is precisely of the same character and to the same effect as is the testimony in respect to the 19 you have admitted.

But I go a step further and say if this were not so it is a proven fact that these men registered; that they did everything under the sun that they could do to qualify themselves to vote at their respective election precincts on that day. And such being the case, the act of Congress, which is but an enactment of the common law on the subject, says that their attempt to do what the law required them to do, even though unsuccessful, puts them in the same situation as if they had been successful. And without stopping to discuss it, let me only restate the legal proposition, to which I invite the attention of our friends on the other side for an answer, with respect to the claim that the case of Reese against The United States (in 90 United States Reports) has declared the act of May 31, 1870, unconstitutional.

The act of May 31, 1870, was passed under the provisions of the fifteenth amendment of the Constitution. The fifteenth amendment of the Constitution relates only so far as voters are concerned to color, race, and previous condition of servitude. The question involved in Reese against The United States was a question arising out of a municipal election and the Supreme Court of the United States held that it was not competent for Congress under the provisions of the fifteenth amendment to make regulations with respect to municipal elections on any subject except that which related to race, color, or previous condition of servitude. And thereupon Congress re-passed the act of 1870 under the provisions of Article IV, section 1, of the Constitution, which gives to this House authority to legislate with respect to Federal elections as to times, places, and manner of holding the same. And, as my friend who preceded me in opening this case showed, so high an authority as the circuit court of the eastern district of Virginia has held that there is nothing in the case of Reese that contravenes the right of Congress to legislate with respect to Federal elections, as it has done, by a substantial re-enactment in 1874 of the act of 1870, confirming the provisions of the act to Federal elections.

I say, then, count the 19 votes conceded by the other side and you have Compton 460 votes and Mudd 488, or a majority of 28. And if now, pursuant to what seems to me the true law on the subject, you add the additional 19 votes (for I exclude 2, those of Gamble and Brooks), you then have for contestant 507 votes, and for the contestee 460, or a majority of 47.

There were four voters, Thomas Bell, Samuel H. Booth, Gustavus Elzear Cooper, and William Chapman Weems, whose votes were refused because their names could not be found on the voters' list. As to 3 of these the minority concede they should be counted. But, as I said in respect to the votes I have just left, the testimony relating to the rejected vote now in question is precisely of the same character, to the same effect and purpose, as that relating to the 3 admitted votes, and the whole 4 then should be added, so that you have 511 for the contestant and 460 for the contestee.

The proof is clear that there was counted for the contestee in Calvert County a torn and scratched vote, and I take this away, and the figures are 459 for the contestee and 511 for the contestant, or a majority for the contestant of 52 votes.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as I stated at the outset, this is a case in which every doubtful question of fact may be resolved in favor of the contestee. Every vote claimed by him and many of those not allowed him by the minority of the committee as illegally rejected votes may be given to him, and still by no process of calculation can you arrive at a majority for him. Suppose now that, the contestant having a majority, as I have shown, of 52, we should give to the contestee the 19 votes that accrued to him from what I claim to be the illegal recount in the Baltimore precincts; suppose that we give to him the torn and scratched vote that ought to have been thrown out; suppose that we give to him the vote that was not returned, but was counted by the governor; suppose we take from the contestant the vote where his name appears twice on the ticket; and suppose that we give to the contestee first the ten votes allowed him by the minority of the committee, and then on top of that the 13 votes he claims and that the minority of the committee refuse to give him, in all 45 votes; the net result of all of these concessions so made—and what other concessions may be demanded I have yet to hear—puts up a vote of 466 for contestant and 459 for the contestee, or a clear majority in any event of 7 votes in his favor. And so, beyond possible question, the contestant was elected.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if personal associations are to weigh in this case, if regard for the character of the gentleman who has so long occupied a seat on the other side of the House is to have any weight, if the desire of his friends, their personal affection for him, is to guide their consciences in the decision of this case, then I concede that he may have some claim to a seat on this floor. But if the decisive reason for coming to a conclusion in this case is to be a regard for the rights and the voice of the voters of the Fifth Congressional district of the State of Maryland, there is no justifiable mental process, there is no known arithmetical rule, there is no legal method by which the contestant can be refused his place on this floor.

OKLAHOMA.

Mr. STRUBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Ohio to yield to me for a moment to make a request of the House.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. How long does the gentleman want?

Mr. STRUBLE. Only a moment.

I want to ask, Mr. Speaker, that the Senate bill No. 985, on the Speaker's table, be laid before the House; and I move that the House insist on its amendments disagreed to by the Senate and agree to the committee of conference asked on the said bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman refers to what is commonly known as the Oklahoma bill?

Mr. STRUBLE. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. That has been presented to the House, the Senate disagreeing to the House amendments and asking a committee of conference.

Mr. STRUBLE. I move to insist on the amendments and agree to the conference.

The SPEAKER. This can only be done by unanimous consent at this time.

Mr. STRUBLE. I ask unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the House insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate?

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees on the part of the House: Mr. STRUBLE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. SPRINGER.

CONTENDED ELECTION—MUDD VS. COMPTON.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. I now yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON] thirty minutes of the time allotted to this side in the debate.

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. Speaker, referring to the language of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] who first addressed this House in behalf of the contestant, that the report of the minority in this case was hurriedly and loosely drawn, I am reminded that if such be true—and it is unimportant whether it is or not—the report of the majority of this committee was not hurriedly drawn, but was carefully drawn, skillfully drawn, and erroneously drawn—I will not say carefully-erroneously. If the majority of this committee, headed as it is by a gentleman who deserves the distinction which has been accorded to him, could have had in view the language of the lamented Judge Black when, addressing the Supreme Court of the United States, he said to that court that the highest “prerogative of a lawyer was to advise the court in any argument which he might make to the court”—if he had in view that suggestion of the great jurist, he has skillfully failed to measure up to that suggestion, but has departed from that great requisite and duty of a lawyer in presenting this case to this court, in that, instead of advising the House, he has mystified and misled the House in his report. This House as now constituted, with reference to the inquiry before it, is a court, and the highest court which can pronounce upon such questions as are now presented.

When with uplifted hand this House and the learned gentleman who is chairman of that committee in common with us all—when every member present took upon himself the solemn obligation that he would support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, that he would bear true allegiance to the same, and that he would well and faithfully discharge the obligations of the high office upon which he was about to enter, he took upon himself in the latter clause of this obligation the further obligation—one with which he is now confronted, no less solemn and important because implied rather than expressed—that under such circumstances as now surround us he would well and truly try the issues joined between the House of Representatives and the contestee, and a true verdict render according to the evidence, so help him God.

As jurors is the character of the duties which we are now entering upon, Mr. Speaker. It is not legislation in which we are now engaged, but higher and greater duties engage us. Upward and outward and beyond a question of legislation is our prerogative now, the highest prerogative which sworn members of this House can exercise, and these our functions and prerogatives are judicial, not legislative. We are judges of the law and triers of the facts. The principles of law which should control us are fixed and immutable; the facts in such cases are as varied as the cases may be out of which the facts arise. The law is fixed; it is our duty to ascertain whether the facts measure up to the law, not that the law shall descend to measure the facts.

So much for these prefatory but important observations, Mr. Speaker. I pass now to another view of the case.

When this contestant, Mr. Mudd, came to this House it was with a gratified majority of 3; which he felt was all the votes which the broadest latitude of his claim could furnish him, and on which he felt he was entitled to ask to be seated in this House; and yet it is said by this committee: “Sir, you have not begun to count; you do not understand and appreciate the full measure of what you are entitled to. Three majority doesn’t begin to measure it.” And from Mr. Mudd’s majority of 3 to commence with, this committee has jumped to 154, as they report.

I can not, however, successfully—other gentlemen might—in the short time permitted me, discuss many of the features important in this case, and I must as rapidly as possible proceed. I can not with patience or with any degree of complacency consider the matter of the wholesale outrage upon the contestee and the dignity and honor of my State, with reference to fraud and violence in Anne Arundel County, sufficient, as this committee claims, to warrant the throwing out of the precinct referred to.

The 28 votes in Calvert claimed as due Mudd and the 50 votes elsewhere not counted in Maryland, because not before the judges of election, determine this case in my judgment. Give to contestant, if you please the 3 votes claimed by him as voted for S. N. Mudd, S. E. Mudd, and — Mudd; he is not entitled to them on any principle of sound reasoning in law, but give them to him; but do not give him the 28 votes in the second precinct of the first election district of Calvert County, nor the 50 votes elsewhere referred to. He is not entitled to any of these under the law of Maryland, and it is under the law of Maryland your judgment is to be directed and governed in this investigation. These 28 votes in Calvert County and these 50 rejected votes would not elect contestant, if counted for him. This House of course, under the Constitution, is the sole judge of the election and qualifications of its members, but the individuals who on the day of election, in the several districts of a State, do the voting, must be qualified to so vote under the constitution and laws of the particular State where they reside or rather are citizens.

Maryland has a registry law and has had for years, which registration of voters under the constitution of Maryland is presented as a prerequisite, with other qualifications, for voting. Our laws in my State provide that every male citizen of the age of twenty-one years, etc., not white male citizens, as before the fifteenth amendment, shall vote, etc., but not unless his name appears on the list of voters; which means, of course, on the list of voters which the judges are required to have on the day of election. The registrar is required by law to register the exact name of any person qualifying before him. He requires the applicant to be thus precise; but as registered by name he must vote by name. Here is where this difficulty has arisen in this case with reference to these rejected 50 votes. But there is no “difficulty” really about it. Those rejected votes were those of individuals who were not on the registry list even, many of them, and those who were registered offered to vote under some other name than appeared on the poll-book, etc.

But it is of the 28 votes in Calvert County I wish now to speak; but preliminary to which let us inquire how did this contestee get here anyhow? By what right is he here? Why, by the only right recognized in Maryland, and that is by this right [holding up the certificate of the governor]. Here is the certificate of Elihu E. Jackson, the governor of Maryland:

THE STATE OF MARYLAND, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

I, Elihu E. Jackson, governor of Maryland, do hereby certify that it appears from the official returns, now on file in this department, of an election held in this State on Tuesday, the 6th day of November instant, for six Representatives from the State of Maryland in the Fifty-first Congress of the United States, that the honorable Barnes Compton was regularly and duly elected, in accordance with the laws of this State, a Representative from the Fifth Congressional district of the State of Maryland in the Fifty-first Congress of the United States.

Given under my hand and the great seal of Maryland, at the city of Annapolis, on the 23rd day of November, A. D. 1888.

[SEAL.]
By the governor:

ELIHU E. JACKSON,

E. W. LE COMPTE, Secretary of State.

This is a certificate made, not by a fraudulent governor, as you have insisted in the case of West Virginia, two of whose legally elected Representatives you made to walk the plank because the title of their governor’s seat was uncertain, but it is a certificate from the governor of Maryland, who holds his title by the same tenure as governors of Maryland have who have been elected ever since the Democrats could vote in Maryland, by twenty to forty thousand majority; and that is the certificate of the governor of that State. Upon what warrant and authority is this certificate issued by the governor of Maryland?

The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has suggested that the figures that went into the hands of the governor are not the correct figures; that the governor’s figures are not correct. The governor’s figures, Mr. Speaker, are not wrong so far as pertains to this case. As considered for the present purpose they only required correction in the case of those two precincts in Charles County which had been inadvertently sealed up in the ballot box, and were not before him. The correction of the official returns to the extent of embracing these Charles County returns has been conceded, and there is now no controversy upon that point. The governor of the State of Maryland, from the returns as made to him as required by the laws of Maryland, has issued his certificate to the contestee. Upon what authority and under what sanction does he issue such certificate as to Calvert County? Mark well, gentlemen, in this connection:

We, the subscribers and judges at the close of an election held on the 6th day of November, 1888, in the election districts of Calvert County, distinguished by numbers 1, 2, and 3, for the purpose of choosing a Representative for the Fifth district of this State to serve in the Congress of the United States, have this day assembled at the usual places of sitting, the circuit court of said county, with the books of the polls, which are indorsed and certified agreeably to law, and having cast up the whole number of votes given in the said district, according to the respective certificates made out by the judges on the day of the election, do return that Barnes Compton had 996 votes and that Sydney E. Mudd had 1,138 votes.

Given under our hands this 8th day of November, 1888.

J. G. MARSH,

Return Judge, First Precinct, First District,

JAMES BROOME,

Return Judge, Second Precinct, First District,

T. W. SPARKLIN,

Return Judge, Second District,

H. F. LANE,

Return Judge, Third District,

Return Judges of Calvert County.

Thus we have, Mr. Speaker, the deliberate, careful, and presumably accurate “casting up” by the return judges of Calvert County of the full vote in the county, which they ascertain to be 1,138 votes for Mudd. Here is where the alleged “mistake” occurs. It is at this point the controversy is made. This action of these judges doing just what the law required of them is the basis of Governor Jackson’s certificate to Barnes Compton. The governor made no “mistake,” the secretary of state made no “mistake” in his certifying, and the sworn officers of the law, the judges of the election, two days after the election going over again and carefully reviewing what each one of these very same judges in their respective precincts had on the night of the election passed upon, certify that they made no “mistake.” They certify that they had the “poll-books” for the whole county before them, “on which are indorsed the several certificates agreeably to law, and having cast up the whole number of votes given in the said districts according to the respective certificates made out by the judges on the day of election,” do return, etc.

69. The said judges so assembled shall cast up the whole vote of all the districts or precincts, and shall make out two plain, fair, and distinct statements and certificates of the number of votes which shall have been given for each candidate, for each of the officers voted for at said election, one of which certificates shall be delivered to the clerk of the court to which they are directed to make their returns, and the other, except in elections for governor and State’s attorneys, shall be transmitted by mail to the governor.

Can anything be stronger than this? Could the governor make any “mistake” in issuing his certificate to Barnes Compton on such an "official return" as that? Here are the returns from the three districts in Calvert County—for there were only three—one district being divided into two precincts, thus requiring that there should be a very short column and a very simple combination of figures to aggregate 1,138. The first district, Calvert County, as shown by the precinct returns, as insisted upon by the contestant, shows the following:

First precinct, first district.....	144
Second precinct, first district.....	407
Second district.....	330
Third district.....	285
	1,166

This is the combination giving the result Mudd relied upon; but, unfortunately for him, nobody ever saw it until after the official returns had long been made and when the judges of the election in each precinct, attested by the two clerks in each precinct, had certified to another combination of figures in these several districts, giving another result, 1,138, as the vote of the county.

We discover that this combination, leading to this result of 1,138, corresponds exactly with the other statement, save in one precinct, the second precinct of the first district:

First precinct, first district, 144, as before.
Second precinct, first district, 379.
Second district, 330, as before.
Third district, 285, as before.

Making just what the judges on election night, and return judges two days afterwards, found to be 1,138.

And now for the startling circumstantial evidence in this case! A difference of 28 votes is claimed to exist between the "official returns" and the contestant's demand. Twenty-eight is the difference between "1,138 official" and 1,166 claimed. Whence comes it?

Upon this certificate, Mr. Speaker, hinges absolutely, or hangs rather, the question in issue before this House as between Barnes Compton and the House of Representatives. The poll-books have been relegated, in the face of this certificate, to the rear; they are nothing and of no effect. Now, this certificate is the cream of the poll-books, if I may so express it, and is the muniment of the title by which the holder of the governor's certificate is entitled to his place on this floor. These 28 votes in Calvert County and the 54 rejected votes elsewhere are the only two points which I will have time to discuss. I shall not read from the record except to quote a few of the inconsistencies in the report of the committee.

What your committee calls the face of the returns, as presented by the contestant, are not the "returns" at all in this case, but are simply a tabulated statement prepared by the contestant, including 28 votes he claims to have received in Calvert County, as against the official return made to the governor from that county, in which he is excluded from these 28 votes.

Mr. Speaker, fraud, intimidation, and violence at elections within her borders have been charged by this committee upon that great sovereign State of Maryland. Look well to it, gentlemen, that you take the beam out of your eye in order that you may see clearly to take the mote out of your brother's eye. The fraud which you have charged lies not at our door, but at yours. I proclaim that the record in this case discloses no "mistake" in Calvert County, but a bold, glaring, naked fraud upon the ballot-box, and the return from that county a fraud, a forgery of the returns in the second precinct, perpetrated by this contestant's adherents in that county, and I will proceed to demonstrate it.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has referred to the primary evidence as established by the precinct returns. I thank him for that word "primary" evidence. As a lawyer he has appealed to this House. I repeat his invocation and the appeal which he has made. Does he not know, does not the distinguished chairman of this committee know that evidence and proof are not synonymous? Evidence is not proof. And does he not know that the best evidence is always required; that the first rules of evidence require the best evidence of which a case is in its nature susceptible to be offered? This rule was adopted for the prevention of fraud. For when it is apparent that better evidence is withheld, it is fair to presume a sinister motive in not presenting it.

Meet that suggestion. Meet the legal proposition, my learned friend from Ohio, in the light of what I shall now suggest. Eight or nine different men have scrutinized and passed upon the certificate which I hold in my hand giving 1,138, and not 1,166, as belonging to the contestant in this case. I make the specific charge against you of a forgery of the returns from the second precinct of the first district of Calvert County, a forgery perpetrated after the returns had been made to the governor, made after the return judges had made their return, and so certified. Who made it, when and where, it is not necessary to inquire. It was certainly not made by us. There was no reason for us to do it. Can you say as much?

Why have we three judges of election rather than two; why two clerks instead of one? The reason is obvious. Because, in the stringent and carefully guarded election laws of Maryland, a majority of the judges must determine questions before them, and, more important still, the number of votes cast; two clerks rather than one, in order that both of the tally-sheets may be in accord. What says the law of Maryland right here? Mark well, gentlemen of the committee:

64. When the poll shall be closed the box wherein the ballots are deposited shall immediately thereafter be opened by the judges of election; and the said judges, in the presence of one selected representative of each and every political party whose candidates are voted for at such election, to be designated in writing by said candidates, shall publicly take out the said ballots and read distinctly and aloud the name or names written or printed thereon respectively; and the clerks of said election shall carefully enter and keep an account of the same on the books of the polls, so that the number of votes for each candidate tallied thereon may be readily cast up and known; when all the ballots have been canvassed the poll clerks shall compare their tallies together and ascertain the total number of votes received by each candidate, and when they agree upon the numbers one of them shall announce, in a loud voice, to the judges and those present, the number of votes received by each candidate. In the several counties the sheriff, or such person as the judges shall name in the absence of the sheriff, or one of his deputies, and in Baltimore City the board of police-commissioners, shall have power, and it shall be their duty, to preserve order during the counting of the votes and see that the duly accredited representative of each party shall be admitted into the polling-rooms to witness the count.

Can anything be more carefully guarded? In a loud voice the clerks are to announce the result to the judges. In a loud voice, therefore, did Messrs. W. S. Peterson and I. S. Thomas announce to the judges and all those assembled that on the 6th of November in the second precinct of the first district of Calvert County, Sydney E. Mudd had received 379 votes. Here is where we get the evidence of the 379. If this is not so, where are these gentlemen to contradict it?

Nine men have sworn that they carefully added up the figures. I say "sworn," because they are sworn officers and act under their oath. Nine men have sworn that the combination of 379, the only figures possible, with 144, 330, and 285, foot up 1,138, and not 1,166! Nine men have sworn to these facts; and yet when you talk of primary evidence the only primary evidence which has been offered to rebut, not this presumption, but this startling fact, is the evidence of one man that what the other eight have said is not the truth and the "primary" evidence of the precinct returns. Why, Mr. Speaker, the precinct returns are out of the case; they are not primary, but secondary. Return judges' certificate is the primary evidence now. Meet that proposition if you can. I defy you gentlemen on the otherside to show me in the record where there is one scintilla of evidence to show the contrary of what these nine men have sworn to.

Mr. ROWELL. Would it interrupt the gentleman to answer a question?

Mr. GIBSON. No, sir.

Mr. ROWELL. Suppose you had the column of figures before you, with the footing, and you ran up the figures yourself and found that there was in the result a mistake of 28?

Mr. GIBSON. I will answer the gentleman's question. He has come to a point that I wanted to bring him to. I will not call him a galled jade wincing when his withers are wrung, but I will show in this very column which he speaks of that if you take 28 votes from 407 in the first election district of Calvert County, the only precinct where a forgery was possible, you get 379, which is one element in the combination of figures which nine men added up and which gave 1,138 as the total vote for Mr. Mudd. Where did you get the 407? Tell us, Mr. Contestant. Show this House, in your own behalf, familiar as you are with all the surroundings of this case, how you came to get 407, when nine men have said that you got but 379 votes there.

The laws of Maryland require that the return of the judges of election shall not be written in figures, but shall be written in words at length. If the number is 379, you are not to put the figures out in that column as you have done there, but you are to write "three hundred and seventy-nine." Twenty-six characters are required to write "three hundred and seventy-nine" in that way, when it takes only three characters to put down the figures 379; easier to alter two figures only and substitute two than to alter twenty-six letters and substitute twenty-six others, don't you see?

Mr. McCOMAS. Will my colleague permit an interruption?

Mr. GIBSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. McCOMAS. If my colleague will take to-night the total of all the returns signed by all of the judges in every precinct and every district of that county and add them up and if he does not find that they foot up 1,166, I will yield to-morrow in my time for him to make the correction.

Mr. GIBSON. Why, of course they will.

Mr. McCOMAS. Of course they will!

Mr. GIBSON. But do you not understand that the precinct judges are thus certifying each for his own precinct, and not for any other?

Mr. McCOMAS. Then Mudd had the votes.

Mr. GIBSON. I will answer my friend. Of course "407" in the third precinct of Calvert County added to the other combinations of figures will make 1,166, but the judges, return judges, could not have had 407 before them, for they added up 1,138. Ah, my friend [addressing Mr. Houk], he laughs best who laughs last. The gentleman from Tennessee finds material, it seems, in this case, as in the Arkansas case, where he characterized the unseating of Mr. Cate as "turning the horse out to grass," for "incredulous glee."

This is not a case for laughing. This is not a case in which members of the House of Representatives, under the solemn sanctity of their oath which links them to the foot-stool of their Creator, are to regard their duties as gleeful. When we are talking, not about legislating, but about exercising the highest prerogative which belongs to us assembled men from sixty-five millions of the American people—this is no place and no occasion to talk about "turning a horse out to grass" when you are referring to a member of Congress being denied his seat. Ah, no; it is not a case of "turning a horse out to grass!" It is not a laughing matter. As jurors, as judges of the law and the facts, you should have honor, dignity, justice, and fair dealing as the rule and the guide of your faith and your action!

Mr. HOUK. Will the gentleman permit me a word?

Mr. GIBSON, of Maryland. Yes, sir; I will.

Mr. HOUK. I am a good-natured individual, and I wish to ask the gentleman's pardon if a smile frightened him, as his remarks seem to indicate. My smile had no reference to the gentleman. However much he may have so regarded it, I assure him I was not laughing at him.

Mr. GIBSON. Very well.

Mr. Speaker, the "407" which my colleague [Mr. McCOMAS] refers to, with the other combinations of figures, does add up 1,166. The combinations of figures are 144, 407, 330, and 285. That is what Mr. Mudd calls the "returns." He interpolates 407 as a part of these "returns," and then the figures foot up 1,166; but the judges of election the night of the 6th of November found the figures in the second precinct of Calvert County to be, not "407," but 379, and they swore that that was correct, and eight men besides have sworn to the same array of figures. That array of figures can not be obtained in any other way than by taking 28 from "407," which leaves exactly 379.

Listen, gentlemen on the other side; listen, my colleague from Maryland, who inspired this suggestion. Clerks W. S. Peterson and John S. Thomas, on election night in that precinct where the election was held, swear that the figures were 379. Broome, Ross, and Ludwick, the judges of the election on that night of the election, swear that those figures were 379. And two days after that when the great telegraphic arteries of the State were pulsating throughout the length and breadth of Maryland with the news of the election, when dismay was carried to the hearts of some Democrats and when gratulation and pride were borne to the gratified appreciation of others, we find that in Calvert County, with full opportunity to canvass these returns, two days after that, four other men, J. T. Marsh, James Broome, T. W. Sparklin, and H. F. Lane, the return judges of the election, swore that in the second precinct of the first district of Calvert County those figures were 379, because no other figures could they have had before them to make 1,138.

Mr. ROWELL. Will the gentleman tell me where that is in the record?

Mr. GIBSON. Yes, I will make this matter so plain that he who runs may read.

Mr. McCOMAS. Give the page.

Mr. GIBSON. If I have only the time, every word I say I will verify.

Mr. ROWELL. I wish you would.

Mr. GIBSON. I will do it, every word of it, if you will only give me time.

Mr. McCOMAS. At page 747 you will find the return of the judges you have just named.

Mr. GIBSON. Yes, I have it.

Here is every precinct of Calvert County. Calvert County, precinct No. 1, signed by the judges of the election, and certified to subsequently by the return judges, "correct." The return in the first district of Calvert County was "correct." Those judges have complied with the law; they have written out the returns in words at length.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

We, the undersigned, duly appointed by the county commissioners of said county, in due form of law, judges of election, in this first precinct, district No. 1, do hereby certify and return that we did attend, on the 6th day of November, 1888, at precinct No. 1, the place appointed by law for holding the election within said district, and did then and there appoint M. M. Davis and Thomas P. Evans clerks of the election, who severally qualified as directed by law.

We further certify that we did then and there, before a justice of the peace of said county (or before each other), qualify as judges of election as by law directed, and did then and there, at the hour of 8 o'clock in the morning, open the polls for an election for President and Vice-President, one person to represent the Fifth Congressional district in the Fifty-first Congress of the United States, and one road commissioner for the first district for Calvert County; that we continued the polls open until 6 o'clock in the evening of the same day, when they were closed, the ballot-box opened, and the ballots publicly counted, when it appeared that Clinton B. Fisk, President for the United States, and John A. Brooks, for the Vice-President of the United States, each of the said electors had forty-one (41) votes, and William H. Hillen, for Congress for the Fifth Congressional district of Maryland, had forty-seven (47); Grover Cleveland, for President, Allen G. Thurman, for Vice-President of the United States, and their electors, had each ninety-four (94) votes; Barnes Compton, for Congress, had ninety (90) votes; and A. T. Leathering, for road commissioner, had one hundred and six (106) votes; Benjamin Harrison, for President, Levi P. Morton, for Vice-President, and their electors, had each one hundred and forty-seven (147) votes; Sidney E. Mudd, for Congress, had one hundred and forty-four (144) votes; and William T. Lusby, for road commissioner, had one hundred and sixty (160) votes; Thomas W. McCready, for road commissioner, had five (5) votes.

Given under our hands at the place of said election this 6th day of November 1888.

J. T. MARSH, Judge.
J. G. IRELAND, Judge.
JOHN J. SAUNDERS, Judge.

Attested by—
M. M. DAVIS, Clerk.
THOS. P. EVANS, Clerk.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy taken from the certificate and statement made out by the judges of election on the books of the polls of the 1st precinct of 1st district of said county, which book of the polls is now deposited among the records of the office of the clerk of the circuit court of Calvert County.

In testimony whereof I hereto set my hand and affix the seal of the circuit court for Calvert County this 7th of February, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL.]

JOHN SEDWICK, Clerk.

Here is the second district of Calvert County, where the same thing is the case. District No. 2—here it is; it is correct. The returns of the judges of the election have been written out as the law requires in words at length.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy, taken from the certificate and statement made out by the judges of election on the book of the polls of the second precinct, first district of said county, which book of the polls is now deposited among the records of the office of the clerk of the circuit court for Calvert County.

In testimony whereof I hereto set my hand and affix the seal of the circuit court of Calvert County this 7th day of February, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL.]

JOHN SEDWICK, Clerk.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

We, the undersigned, duly appointed by the county commissioners of said county, in due form of law, judges of election in this —, district No. 2, do hereby certify and return that we did attend on the 6th day of November, 1888, at Prince Frederick, the place appointed by law for holding the election within said district, and did then and there appoint R. A. Buckmaster and Thomas H. Harrison clerks of said election, who severally qualified as directed by law.

We further certify that we did then and there, before a justice of the peace of said county (before each other), qualify as judges of election as by law directed, and did then and there, at the hour of 8 o'clock in the morning, open the polls for an election for electors for President and Vice-President of the United States; a Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional district, and a road commissioner for the second election district of Calvert County; that we continued the polls open until 6 o'clock in the evening of the same day, when they were closed, the ballot-box opened, and the ballots publicly counted, when it appeared that James Hodges had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Henry Page had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that William Scott Roberts had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that James G. Berret had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Willoughby N. Smith had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Isaac Gorman Moale had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Robert C. Combs had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Hattersly W. Talbott had three hundred and thirty-nine votes for Presidential elector; that Francis S. Hill had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that John B. Bond had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that James W. Waddell had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that Samuel Roop had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that William Coath had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that Joseph M. Cushing had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that Thos. Parran, Jr., had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that Daniel Chisholm had three hundred and forty-five votes for Presidential elector; that Eugene Levering had no votes for Presidential elector; that Charles W. Jefferson had no votes for Presidential elector; that Esaw L. D. Insley had no votes for Presidential elector; that Richard M. J. Harker had no votes for Presidential elector; that Frank V. Rhodes had no votes for Presidential elector; that De Witt C. Ingle had no votes for Presidential elector; that Francis B. Sappington had no votes for Presidential elector; that Barnes Compton had three hundred and forty-one votes for Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional district; that Sydney E. Mudd had three hundred and thirty votes for Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional district; that William H. Hellen had four votes for Representative in Congress from the Fifth Congressional district; that John W. Shemwell had three hundred and forty-eight votes for road commissioner for the second election district of Calvert County; that Benjamin Rawlins had three hundred and twenty-five votes for road commissioner for the second election district of Calvert County.

Given under our hands at the place of said election, this 6th day of November, 1888.

Q. W. SPARKLIN, Return Judge.
ED. H. WELAND, Judge.
E. S. HUMPHREYS, Judge.

Attested by—

R. A. BUCKMASTER, Clerk.
THOS. H. HARRISON, Clerk.

Here is district No. 3 of Calvert County. The returns have been written out as the law requires, in words at length:

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy taken from the certificate and statement made out by the judges of election on the book of the polls of the second district of said county, which book of the polls is now deposited among the records of the office of the clerk of circuit court for Calvert County.

In testimony whereof I hereto set my hand and affix the seal of the circuit court for Calvert County this 7 day of February, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL.]

JOHN SEDWICK, Clerk.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

We, the undersigned, duly appointed by the county commissioners of said county, in due form of law, judges of election in this —, district No. 3, do hereby certify and return that we did attend on the sixth day of November, eighteen hundred and eight-eight, at Lower Marlborough, the place appointed by law for holding the election within said district, and did then and there appoint Benja. A. Sunderland and Joseph R. Griffin clerks of the election, who severally qualified as directed by law.

We further certify that we did then and there, before a justice of the peace of said county (or before each other), qualify as judges of election as by law directed, and did then and there, at the hour of 8 o'clock in the morning, open the polls for an election for President and Vice-President of the United States, for Representative in the Fifty-first Congress of United States, and for road commissioner in the third election district of said county; that we continued the polls open until 6 o'clock in the evening of the same day, when they were closed, the ballot-box opened, and the ballots publicly counted, when it appeared that Grover Cleveland and Allen G. Thurman, among the following electors, James Hodges, Henry Page, William Roberts, James G. Herbert, Willoughby N. Smith, Isaac G. Moale, Robert C. Combs, and Hattersly W. Talbott, had three hundred and twenty-six votes for their respective offices, Barnes Compton had three hundred and eleven votes for Representative in the aforesaid Congress, and Isaac S. Watson had three hundred and seventeen votes for road commissioner in the aforesaid district. Benjamin Harrison, Levi P. Morton, and the following-named electors, Francis S. Hill, John R. Bond, James W. Waddell, Samuel Roop, William Couth, Joseph M. Cushing, Thomas Parran, jr., and Daniel Christolm, had two hundred and eighty for their respective offices, except Thomas Parran, jr., who had two hundred and seventy-nine votes. Sydney E. Mudd had two hundred and eighty-five votes for Representative in the aforesaid Congress, and Richard S. Ward had two hundred and ninety votes for road commissioner in the third district of said county.

Given under our hands at the place of said election this sixth day of November, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight.

HENRY F. LANE.
J. F. IRELAND.
P. H. JONES.

Attested by—
JOSEPH R. GRIFFIN, Clerk.
B. A. SUNDERLAND.

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, act.:

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy taken from the certificate and statement made out by the judges of election on the books of the polls of the third district of said county, which book of the polls is now deposited among the records of the office of the clerk of circuit court for Calvert County.

In testimony whereof I hereto set my hand and affix the seal of the circuit court for Calvert County, this 7 day of February, A. D. 1889.

[SEAL.] JOHN SEDWICK, Clerk.

And here is district number 2, first precinct, of Calvert County, the only precinct and the only district in Calvert County where the law has not been complied with, where the result has not been written out in words at length; but the figures have been put down, and instead of writing 379, or 407, as the case may be, three characters have been employed to represent what the law says it shall take twenty-six to represent, and not attested by the clerks, as in each of the other districts:

STATE OF MARYLAND, Calvert County, to wit:

We, the undersigned, duly appointed by the county commissioners of Calvert County judges of election for the second precinct of the first election district of said county, do hereby certify and return that we did meet at St. Leonard's, the usual place of holding elections, and after qualifying by taking the following oath as prescribed by law:

Judges' oath.

"We and each of us do swear that we will permit all persons to vote who shall offer to vote at the election now to be held for Calvert County whose names shall be found on the registry list of qualified voters furnished to us according to law as qualified voters under the constitution and laws of the State, and that we will not permit any person to vote at the same election whose name shall not appear on said registry of qualified voters, and we will in all things execute the office of judges of election according to the best of our knowledge, without favor or partiality, so help us God;" and after appointing W. S. Peterson and J. S. Thomas as clerks, who were duly qualified by taking the following oath: "We do swear that we will well and faithfully, without favor or affection or partiality, execute the office of clerks of election now to be held, according to the best of our knowledge, so help us God," did then and there proceed to open the polls, and continued them open from 8 o'clock a. m. until 6 o'clock p. m. of the same day, when the polls were closed, ballot-box opened, and ballots publicly counted, when it appeared that—

Grover Cleveland, for President of the United States, had received 174.
Allen G. Thurman had received 174.

For electors for President and Vice-President:

James Hodges, 174.
Henry Page, 174.
William Scott Roberts, 174.
James G. Berrett, 174.
Willoughby M. Smith, 174.
Isaac Gorham Mould, 174.
Robert C. Combs, 174.
Hathersby W. Talbot, 174.

For Congress:

Barnes Compton, 153.
For road commissioner:
A. S. Leathering, 151.

For President:

Benjamin Harrison, 391.

For Vice-President:

Levi P. Morton, 391.

For electors:

Francis S. Hill, 391.
John R. Bond, 391.
James W. Waddell, 391.
Samuel Roop, 391.
William Couth, 391.
James M. Cushing, 391.
Thomas Parran, jr., 391.
Daniel Christolm, 391.

For Congress:

Sidney E. Mudd, 407.

For road commissioner:

William T. Lusby, 393.

For President:

Clinton B. Fisk, 2.

For Vice-President:

John A. Brooks, 2.

Electors at large:

Eugene Lovering, 2.
Charles W. Jefferson, 2.
Esom S. D. Insley, 2.
Pheneas F. Ball, 2.
Richard M. J. Harper, 2.
Frank V. Rhodes, 2.
DeWitt C. Ingle, 2.
Francis B. Sappington, 2.

For Congress:

W. N. Hillen, 2.

For Congress:

Benjamin J. Bowen, 2.

For road commissioner:

Thomas W. McCready, 7.

As witness thereof we have hereunto set our hands and affix our seals this 6th day of November, 1888.

JAMES BROOME, R. J. [SEAL]
JAS. T. ROSS, [SEAL]
J. A. LUDWICK, JR. [SEAL]

Mr. ROWELL. Is that what you call the record of what you were saying about the 379 votes?

Mr. GIBSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. On what page of the record does it appear that those judges on the night of the election swore that there were 379, instead of 407?

Mr. GIBSON. There are certain things which, with all due respect to my learned friend from Ohio, it is not necessary to prove by evidence, because the law takes notice of them. It is not necessary in a court of justice to prove by a witness that the sun shines, that the grass is green, that water runs. It is not necessary to prove things which have happened according to the ordinary course of nature; it is not necessary to prove the course of time. The law takes judicial notice of these things, and the law takes judicial notice of the fact, while not expressed in the record as I have put it, that it is only by the combination of the figures 379, and not 407, that nine men are enabled to swear to the governor of a State that the return is 1,138, and not 1,166.

Mr. ROWELL. Will the gentleman permit me a question?

Mr. GIBSON. I will.

Mr. ROWELL. Then I understand that what you mean when you speak of this matter being in the record is that taking the returns as they went to the governor and footing up all the precinct returns, and deducting 28, it would prove that in one precinct they announced 28 less than appeared on the returns.

Mr. GIBSON. I do not say that. I have not taken the 28 votes from the 1,166, making 1,138, but I have taken the 28 votes from 407 votes in the second precinct of the first district, the only precinct in Calvert County where a fraud was possible, and it makes 379.

Mr. LACEY. Is it not true that there is not one word of evidence anywhere to indicate that the return you speak of has been altered in any way? Is it not true that no testimony was taken to show that those figures have been altered?

Mr. GIBSON. Why should there have been testimony taken on that point when all the muniments of our title on which we relied were what the law contemplates? Why should we seek to prove a negative? Nine men have testified to our title. Every man of them, except three in Calvert County, has sworn on the night of the election that those figures were correct, and two days afterward they have sworn it, and you have brought but one man here to testify to the contrary.

Now, I want to make good my word with reference to the remarkable report of the gentleman from Ohio, to which I have referred. Mr. Mudd, he says, called the return judges of every precinct in the county and proved by them that the returns on file in the clerk's office were the very returns which they made, and were in no way altered. Is that the fact as disclosed by the record, gentlemen of the committee? On the contrary, it is apparent from this record that but one of these return judges has certified where you say four have certified, and that one return judge is Broome, in the second precinct of the first election district, when he says that the figures are correct because he sees them before him, without reference to what the figures were when he certified to them three months before, while the return judges in the other three districts only certify that the return in their districts is correct, making no certificates as to the returns in the district known as precinct No. 1.

There is the answer to that proposition. I now come to the further one in regard to what the gentleman from Ohio has said in his report with reference to the clerk of the court. He "proves by the clerk of the court," he says. Proves what? That immediately upon seeing it stated in the newspapers that the return of the governor gave the contestant only 1,138 votes he wrote to the governor stating that a mistake had been made and asking permission to correct it. Is that so? What newspaper? Where published?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. GIBSON. I ask but a few moments more.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. I yield ten minutes additional to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. GIBSON. I am very much obliged to the gentleman, though I do not know that I can get through in that time. Are you gentlemen of the House, sworn to do even-handed justice between the contestant and the contestee, going to permit the Committee on Elections to be the keeper of your consciences? If you do, require of that committee the strictest accountability in presenting the facts as they exist.

This committee has conceded as part of the proof before that committee that the clerk of the county court of Calvert has certified that he saw it stated in the newspaper, proving by the clerk that the returns gave the contestant 1,116 votes. He stated he wrote to the governor that a mistake had been made and asked leave to correct it. The clerk of the court did no such thing, and it is not a part of the record. The clerk of the court, John Sedwick, asserts that his attention was called not immediately after the election, as the chairman of the committee would have you believe, but was called, as he says, last fall, after the election, after the official returns had gone to Governor Jackson. Weeks had elapsed, and the return had been made to the governor. He then wrote the governor and asked whether there was any way to correct it, and the governor told him it could not be corrected. So much for this.

Therefore no reliance can be placed on the suggestions of the clerk of the court. What business had the clerk to do with the returns? That is the province of the judges. It is not for the House or the committee to pass upon what the judges did on the night of the election, but generally to inquire whether the return judges in making up the returns of the whole county had correctly certified the figures to the governor so as to enable him to certify to this House one of these gentlemen had been elected.

I repeat, although I do not reiterate, that nine men have made this statement, nine men computed these figures, nine men certified to them, and that certificate is the basis of the judgment you are to pronounce in this connection.

The learned chairman said the contestee might have offered some testimony to show it, but he did not do it. Was it the province of the contestee? Why has not the contestant taken the best evidence in his power to show that the return of 1,166 was correct. Where are these clerks, Thomas and Peterson, who on the night of the election, on the 6th of November, 1898, compared their tally-sheets, which were bound to agree, who certified, Thomas with Peterson and Peterson with Thomas, that but 379 votes had been polled in that precinct? They certified to it. They swore to it; not being content to certify to it, they swore it was correct. They are not dead nor beyond the reach of the contestant. Why did you not call the other two judges, Ross and Ludwick? Why did you not recount these ballots?

The law of Maryland which is the rule and guide of your course of conduct in this case provides that not only the judges, but the clerks of elections as soon as the last man has deposited his ballot in the glass ballot-box provided by the State, not the spurious tin box with a double shoot, but a glass box through which the sun-light shines—the law of Maryland provides when it is discovered the last voter, in the time prescribed by law, has deposited his ballot, then the clerks are sworn under the law to call out in a loud voice the result of the election. Thomas and Peterson compared their tally-lists and found that Mudd had received 379 votes. They called out that fact in a loud voice. The three judges, Broome, Ludwick, and Ross, swore to those 379 votes as well as the four return judges.

These gentlemen were all Republicans and had no purpose or desire to falsify the returns. It was after that this Democratic newspaper—three months after this event, on that night it was stated that Mudd received 1,166 votes instead of 1,138. He says on the night of the election he went to the precinct to get returns for his paper and published them the next day. If that was his only object and he obtained what he went for, where is the newspaper with these returns in it, the published programme of the facts upon which this committee relies and asks this House to say 407 rather than 379 was the vote for the contestant at that precinct; why was not that fact produced?

I pass from this view of the case and now come to another feature. We had relied upon this decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. The Committee on Elections, not content with hoisting the black flag upon which are inscribed the death's-head and cross-bones of their colors, and boldly pirating from the vote of Calvert County 28 votes to give the contestant, which he himself did not claim he was entitled to as a part of the return—I say, not content with that, they fly to another position which is to be impregnable, in that 54 votes are to be accorded to them in votes improperly rejected because improperly registered.

Preposterous, Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman representing that committee, absolutely preposterous. Six voters of the 64 have already voted in the county in which they claimed the right to vote, and yet you demand on the judgment of this House that these 6 votes are to be counted over again for the contestant, when the truth is that they have already voted once for the contestant, and you add to these 6 votes more cast by some persons voting in other names than their own. Take the 46 votes in the other column, and those show that under the law of Maryland, which is to be your chart and guide and to control your judgment and consciences in this investigation—the law of Maryland has prescribed that no man shall be entitled to his vote unless his name appears on the poll-book on the day of election.

Will you now in bold strides take away the grandest prerogative which belongs to a sovereign State of this Union, and say that it shall no more exercise the right to regulate the qualifications of its own electors? I challenge the gentleman, the chairman of the Committee on Elections, to show this House in any Federal statute or by the decision of the highest court of the land, or, for that matter, by the decision of any court of Christendom, that votes which have never gone into the ballot-box can ever be counted for anybody. It is absurd to claim it. Here is the Hamlet of the play. The fraud you have charged has recoiled upon you.

In conclusion, I will say in regard to what was said by my learned friend on the other side about my colleague—I have a word to add in that connection. This is not a West Virginia case.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan). The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. GIBSON. I ask the indulgence of the House for five minutes longer.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time is under the control of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McCOMAS. I ask unanimous consent that five minutes additional be added to each side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. GIBSON. I am very much obliged to my colleague. I would not waste the time of the House or take any longer time than I have occupied, but, Mr. Speaker, in view of my absence of familiarity with making speeches on this floor I trust I may be permitted to trespass a moment, as I rarely trouble the House.

In conclusion, I can not forbear to institute a comparison between the circumstantia, the surroundings, the standing around, so to speak, of this case.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] has argued that "personal considerations" should not weigh in this case. And if not, why not?

After the selection of the Representative, this House might sit in judgment upon his fitness to become a member of it. If he came to its doors with a fraudulent claim and the fraud could be clearly shown, then the House might and ought always to reject him as unfit to enter. But inasmuch as the solemn act of the State, by its highest official, is by such a proceeding to be declared hasty and ill-considered or fraudulent, out and out, and inasmuch as the declared choice of the district is to be reversed, it behooves this House, for its own honor, dignity, and self-respect, and for the sake of the reputation that will come of it, to take heed that such proceeding on its part shall be well sustained by unquestionable facts and in conformity with the rules of honor and justice.

It was never meant by the makers of the Constitution that this House should sit in judgment upon the elections held in any part of this country. It was no part of this purpose, when the right to exclude improper characters was given this House, to grant an inquisitorial power to nose about the several precincts and by taking advantage of technicalities and casual omissions, or by worse means, to make and unmake Representatives and secure majorities at their will. If such is to be the practice of parties in the majority freedom is a farce and the pretense of self-government a delusion and a snare.

No, sir; the right of the district to have the Representative of its choice seated is a precious right. Whoever assails it threatens the destruction of the whole fabric of government; whoever disobeys it will bring down upon himself and us the temple of liberty, and the hopes of its lovers will perish with it.

All are equally interested in the protection of this right. The same wrong may at any time threaten the constituency of any member within the sound of my voice, and it behooves all to take solemn heed that the habit of contesting elections when the sitting member is not of the dominant party does not grow and become the—

* * * Little rift within the lute
That by and by will make the music mute
And ever widening slowly silence all.

Sir, republican institutions have already once been sorely tried, but they have not been hardly hurt. The body corporate has lost no limb; it stands up straight and beautiful and strong, its bosom still heaving slightly with the effort of the struggle, but healthy, hearty, and giving promise for an endless life of peace and use and happiness. So may it ever be.

But if meddling by the General Government with the affairs of the separate States be carried so far as to violate the bounds set by the makers of the Constitution, if under any form of law or cover or pretense the free will of the people be thwarted here, mistrust will take the place of confidence in our form of government, dependence will be less upon right than might, the scenes of the last days of the Roman Empire will be re-enacted, and chaos will ensue.

Mr. Speaker, I have said this nation has had one trial already and passed through it without loss of power or prestige. There is another coming worse than the first, whose mutterings are faint, far off, yet distinctly audible to him who knows how to listen. Meet it we must. There is and can be no escape, but if at the time the struggle comes all wise and good men have reason to know that the Government is administered as it was meant to be, that the Stoic philosophy is the rule of administrative conduct, if nowhere those in power make use of that power for partisan rather than for national purposes, that broad earnest views prevail, then all will be well, at least in the end.

But, Mr. Speaker, if the contrary is the case, if everywhere, or at least if in high places, expediency takes the place of justice; if "to can" is better than "to ought," then they who understand the rule of might, and who have not been taught the restraints of right, will rise and work their will.

How important, therefore, in this connection, are these very "personal considerations" the gentleman from Pennsylvania ignores.

You know well, Mr. Speaker, the character of the man whose seat is contested here. You have already seen "the mettle of his pasture," but knowing him as you do, as well as you do, not a tithe of such knowledge is possessed as belongs to me, who have known him for many years. I have known him, sir, in all the relations of life, public and private, social and political, as a legislator, as a senator of our honored State of Maryland, as president of that senate, for twelve years the treasurer of that State, dispensing the revenues of that State. Going from the high offices he held, declining a renomination for a fourth term, he retired to receive at the hands of his people the deserved plaudit of "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." You know how he has been rewarded with still higher honors in the councils of the nation as your peer upon this floor.

You have known his actions upon this floor, his incomings and outgoings. Not a pulsation of his heart in his intercourse with you on this floor but what has been responsive to the honor and glory of his whole country. Not for his own district, not for his own State alone, but for the welfare of the whole country has he fearlessly sought such legislation as would result in the blessings of good government which should fall like the dew of heaven as well upon the poor man as upon the rich man. You know full well not only that, but you know the State from which he comes. Maryland is not Arkansas. None of the conditions surround my State that you have charged so causelessly, for purposes of your own, as existing within the borders of Arkansas, as proud and glorious a State as any in the American Union and undeserving of the conditions of blood and murder and the rape of the ballot-box you have put upon her.

I heard the gentleman from Iowa, General HENDERSON, say the other day, in reference to election cases, that, whenever he found black-handed fraud and red-handed murder in connection with contested-election cases, that wherever he found anything of that character or any such surroundings, he would vote to unseat any man claiming to hold a seat under any such circumstances; but Maryland occupies no such position. Law and order reign supreme within our borders. She was a State honored in the Union when the States represented by many of the gentlemen on this floor were yet unborn. Maryland has watched with pride the stars in our political firmament march on to glory and greatness, and has herself guided the "course of empire westward on its way."

Maryland rocked the cradle of your Constitution, she nurtured it in its growth and she defended and upheld it when assailed. When the wild storm of war surged around us, a war in which "the very names of affection and kindred were but new incentives to hatred and rage," Maryland stood true to her post, like the pilot at the helm with the storm shrieking in his ear, and sent fifty thousand of the best and bravest of her sons to fight for the flag and for the Union. Maryland has never been bought. Maryland has never been scared; never did she—

* crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning.

But, gentlemen, whether you will heed or whether you will forbear, the clouds are in the heavens for you just the same. Let me tell you that it needs no "second Daniel come to judgment" to interpret the handwriting on the wall. Let me tell you that in your next loud shout of triumph with which you will hail your effected purpose, in the wrong done my colleague and my State, there will come to you in that shout an undertone of warning which will proclaim that the vengeance of an outraged people, though it cometh slowly cometh surely, and will be as inexorable as the grave. Let me tell you that if you persist in such a course the setting sun on the election day in next November will hide in ignominious shadow your discomfited myrmidons of wrongdoing, misrule, and injustice. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I will inquire of the gentleman from Texas if he can not occupy some of his time now.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. The balance of the time, so far as this side is concerned, will be given to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Compton]. We are entitled to one hour, and it is the opinion of members of the committee that time should be given to Mr. Compton to address the House, and I trust he may be allowed that privilege.

Mr. CRISP. I would suggest to the gentlemen on the other side to use all their time but an hour, and leave one hour to be used to-morrow.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I do not accept that as an agreement, but we will substantially do that. If the House has gotten down out of the clouds, I will now yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENHALGE].

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announced agreement to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 140) to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases from one State to another, and for the punishment of certain offenses.

It also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment House bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 417) for the erection of a public building at Houlton, Me.;

A bill (H. R. 3592) granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield; and
A bill (H. R. 5751) to increase the pension of Isaac Endaly.

It also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 856) to amend section 1 and section 9 of an act entitled "An act to authorize the Denison and Washita Valley Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1889.

It also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 188) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Dover, in the State of New Hampshire;

A bill (S. 189) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Nashua, in the State of New Hampshire;

A bill (S. 314) for the relief of Mary B. Le Roy;

A bill (S. 640) granting a pension to Annie D. Rundlett;

A bill (S. 916) granting a pension to Mary E. Harney;

A bill (S. 1029) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Spokane Falls, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 1030) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Tacoma, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 1031) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Seattle, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 1075) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Walla Walla, in the State of Washington;

A bill (S. 1136) for the relief of William De Ford, trustee for C. D. De Ford & Co.;

A bill (S. 1319) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Deadwood, in the State of South Dakota;

A bill (S. 1354) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Sioux Falls, in the State of South Dakota;

A bill (S. 1453) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Saginaw, in the State of Michigan;

A bill (S. 2692) to establish certain ports of delivery in Alaska Territory;

A bill (S. 3060) to carry out the provisions of section 15 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington to form constitutions and State governments and to be admitted into the Union," approved February 22, 1889; and

A bill (S. 3089) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to survey and mark the seventh standard parallel between the States of North and South Dakota.

ELECTION CONTEST—MUDD VS. COMPTON.

Mr. GREENHALGE. Mr. Speaker, I was very glad to see that the House was inclined to grant indulgence to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON] who has just taken his seat; and I should be willing even to go further and to ask that five minutes be allowed from each side to enable that gentleman to recover his customary and constitutional equanimity after the attack of hysterics under which he has evidently labored and which has aroused the anxious solicitude of both sides of the House. [Laughter.] Nothing pleases me more, Mr. Speaker, than to witness the fervor manifested by gentlemen upon the other side towards the Constitution; and I do not suppose that, in the ecstasy of their feelings, it makes much difference what constitution it is towards which their devotion or their expression of devotion is directed [laughter]; whether the constitution of man, the "Constitutions of Clarendon," the constitution of Maryland, or the Constitution of the United States of America. When I hear their expressions of devotion to the latter instrument, a problem occurs to my mind as to how in the world it was possible for that instrument to subsist for a number of years without the active support of some of the gentlemen upon the other side. [Laughter upon the Republican side.]

Somebody told me, I think some newspaper correspondent—I speak it with fear and trembling, and hope I shall not receive a shot from anybody—that devotion to the Constitution was carried so far that during the vicissitudes of some great battle of the late rebellion, when one gentleman upon the other side was ordered to advance upon the Federal troops, he argued the question against his commander, and proved, at least to his own satisfaction, that the movement would be "unconstitutional." [Renewed laughter.] In my opinion that gallant leader was correct. [Laughter.]

I do not know what views are entertained upon these subjects at the present time by gentlemen upon the other side, but nothing gives me greater pleasure than to hear the eulogies passed upon that immortal instrument—the Constitution of the United States—by my friends on the other side. I am very glad when I see my calm and judicial friend from Texas [Mr. MOORE] rising and imploring that the Constitution shall be saved. Now, I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that there is not the least danger to the Constitution at the present time, certainly not from the Committee on Elections, so long as the gentleman from Texas remains as a member of that body, and I hope it will be manifest to this House and to the public opinion of the country when the record of the Committee on Elections is made up at the close of its work that not merely have the Constitution and the laws been safe in their hands, but that the rights of the humblest citizen and the sacred rights of a meritorious man elected to his seat in this House, as well as those of the people who elected him, have been preserved sacredly and intact.

I am glad to see, Mr. Speaker, that when we eliminate the question from this case upon which we agree—when we eliminate from this case the questions of the 3 votes cast for "S. N. Mudd," "S. E. Mudd," and "Mudd" upon the one side and "Compton" upon the other; when we apply to them the elementary rules of the law applicable to contested-election cases, and allow them to each party respectively, I think it will be clear from the questions which remain that the facts and the policy and the principles upon the one side and upon the other as between the majority and minority of the committee are separated by a line of demarkation as vivid and clear as a line of fire, which shows precisely the difference between the mental constitution, the policy, and principle of the majority, and the mental constitution, and policy, and principle of the minority.

Now, there are only two great questions left in this case for discussion aside from the questions of individual votes, which I have not time to take up and which the elaborate analyses of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LARCKY] have made entirely clear to the House, so that any discussion by me would be simply superfluous.

I say we have simply a question of the 28 votes in Calvert County and a question of conduct of the election in that third district of Anne Arundel County to which reference has been made. I say, Mr. Speaker, that here in the matter of inquiry into the question of allowing 28 votes the difference in the mental constitution—as I put it—on the one side and on the other of this House becomes apparent. I say that we, sitting here as a high court, as an august tribunal, as the grandest tribunal in some respects, I think, upon the earth, we have the right to ascertain, not merely what are the rules of procedure, not merely what are the directory laws and mandatory laws and technical regulations upon this point and upon the other, but the real facts, the true essence of the case; what are the true, real, and genuine rights of all parties. If we find that, by some error, a mistake is made in the returns sent to the governor in the first instance; if we show by the testimony of the judges of election that there was such a mistake; if we show by adding up the columns of figures that the true result is what we claim it to be, that there were not merely 1,138 votes cast for the contestant in that case, but 1,166, then I say that we have every confidence in appealing to this House to say that, no matter what the technical rule may be, no matter what the forms of the law were, strictly speaking, if the facts, upon the sworn testimony, upon the certificate of the judges, are as we claim they are, I say that this House is bound as a highest court in the land upon questions of this character, as the court of last resort, to give these 28 votes to the contestant.

I have here the testimony of half a dozen witnesses. I will leave out most of them because they may be objected to as Republicans. I refer to the testimony of Augustus Wilson (page 272), of John Sedwick (page 273), of James Broome (page 274), of T. W. Sparklin (page 275). These witnesses, I say, may be objected to on the ground that they are Republicans, so I will take the testimony of Charles S. Parran (page 273), who testifies that the returns as corrected are 1,166 votes for Mudd, for Compton 866; that these are the correct returns according to the papers and documents in the office of the constituted authorities of elections in Calvert County. His testimony ought to be accepted even by my friend the gentleman from Maryland, the final questions to the witness Parran being:

- Q. What are your politics?
A. I am a Democrat.
Q. Did you vote for Mr. Compton?
A. I did.

We have the returns from the different election districts in that county, and they carry out, figure by figure, the theory presented in this able and elaborate report drawn by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. COOPER] on behalf of the majority of the committee. I therefore say that there is no question that this House, disdaining these minor forms, throwing aside technicalities which no man ought to stand upon in seeking a place upon this floor—a seat in this House—will decide that these 28 votes belong to the contestant as matter of right and justice.

Now we come to the only other question which is allotted to me for discussion, and that comprehends the occurrences in the third precinct of Anne Arundel County, and I congratulate the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MOORE] upon the beautiful picture which he has drawn of affairs in that election district of that county. I have always supposed that my friend from Texas [Mr. MOORE] had a strain of poetry in his composition; I think most men have; but I think it comes out vividly in this minority report, even through the harsh, chilly, and apparently uncongenial element of cold figures and tabulated statements. My friend's observations upon the occurrences in this district I commend to the attention of the House and to members upon both sides. He puts his propositions in numerical order. He says:

1. That the only guns on the ground that day were some guns which had been brought there by persons, some colored and some white, who were on their way gunning.

He does not say "gunning" for what, whether for squirrels or "coons." [Laughter.] He adds:

That the only pistol-shots fired were by some young men, nowhere near the polls, who were shooting at a mark.

2. That, instead of it being true that there were any such acts of violence as were calculated to intimidate persons of ordinary firmness, the true state of the case is just this: 1. Not long after the polls were opened (they were opened at 8 a. m.) and after some few white men had voted, a body of colored men, numbering about one hundred men, who has assembled at a place called the "Mill Pond," about 100 yards from the polls, marched in a body to the polling place, and after some fifteen of them had voted, two of their number, Hall and Andrew Sampson, who were in the line, were by some young man standing there pushed or shoved out of the line, and told they had no right to vote there, and thereupon Hall, whom the evidence shows had taken an active part in distributing tickets among the colored voters, and was looked up to as a leader among them, after addressing certain remarks to those around, ordered, according to a large number of the witnesses, and advised, according to others, the whole line of negroes away from the polls, which order or advice was at once obeyed, and in consequence of this order or advice, which was subsequently given to others already at the polling places or on their way thereto, nearly every one, if not every one, of the 175 colored people referred to in contestant's allegation abstained from voting.

3. That according to some of the witnesses it was the same young man who pushed or threw out of line both Hall and Sampson; but at all events, according to the evidence of a number of the contestant's own witnesses, the whole number of the class of persons described by some of the witnesses as "strangers," and by others "roughs," and who are alleged to have caused the intimidation of the 175 negro voters, was but three.

4. That according to the contestant's own proof there were from 50 to 100 colored voters in line when the two men, Hall and Sampson, were shoved or pushed out of line: and this number was further increased shortly after, as most did not leave the grounds till after 12 o'clock, and there were 161 on the grounds during that time.

5. That according to the overwhelming mass of evidence, as given by the contestant's own witnesses, no blows were struck at any time, no fire-arms used or shown, no threats of personal violence made, not even the hunting guns had then been brought to the grounds when the trouble with Hall and Sampson took place.

6. According to the contestant's own evidence none of the 175 votes were ever tendered to the judges; on the contrary, the voters admit that they refused to tender their votes.

That is the picture of sylvan peace, of order and quietness and beauty, which my friend from Texas draws. It is a "peace that passes understanding"—especially the understanding of this House. They say of Warsaw that "Peace reigns in Warsaw," and then we find that in that unhappy city they have "made a solitude and called it peace," and I think when you turn to some of the evidence in this record you will find that it was a peace of similar character which prevailed in this third election district of Anne Arundel County.

I cite the testimony of Arthur C. Whittemore; of James Ellison, a witness for the contestee, and of John Ellison, another Democrat (pages 60 and 61, and 370 and 371 of the record), to show that there were guns in the wagon there, at this polling place, and the testimony of A. K. Young and a number of other witnesses that several of these gentlemanly visitors from Baltimore, to whom reference has been made, carried revolvers. That appears on page 63 of the record. There was no violation of the peace, my friend from Texas says; nobody was hit, no actual violence was used. I say that, from the testimony on pages 59 and 62 and 63 of the record, the contrary appears. I refer to the testimony of A. K. Young and of Mr. Jubb, to whom objection is made because he is a Democrat who was not in favor of Mr. Compton.

Well, though he was not in favor of Mr. Compton, he voted for Cleveland, and I trust that is a redeeming circumstance in the eyes of my friends on the other side. I cite that testimony to show that one man was struck. His name was Roderick Kess. He was struck close behind the ear. This occurrence appears upon page 62 of the record. The whole crowd of these 175 men, admitted to be in line ready to vote, was pushed back, as appears on page 59, in the testimony, page 64, of Osmond S. Pumphrey, a Democrat; and one William H. Hall, page 65 of the record of testimony, was forbidden to vote. He was a colored man of intelligence, of high character, of property, whose influence upon this line of 175 men was strong, and who, after he had been threatened and shamefully assaulted, and after two men, and three men, and four men had been pushed out of the line, and the whole crowd of colored voters had been pushed back, said to them: "Boys, if we can not vote peaceably let us have no disturbance. We had better go home. This wrong will be righted some time."

Our constitutional friends on the other side argue that although "Tip" Wells, "Hatch" Williams, and their illustrious friends were there with guns and revolvers, although actual violence had been used and worse had been threatened, these facts were not sufficient to justify men of "ordinary firmness" in leaving the polls, and that the order of William Hall—his "advice"—was simply a device to enable the colored men to come to this House and obtain a larger allowance of votes than they could actually have polled!

There was no safety for Mr. Hall and his friends unless they retired at that time.

We claim, Mr. Speaker, that there were badges worn by some of this gang from Baltimore, making them out to be deputy marshals; and the testimony of D. H. Williams, on pages 366 and 367 of the record, will give you some idea of what Mr. "Hatch" Williams was in these affairs. He has already been referred to as a leader in these election operations. We have a list of several of the gentlemen from Baltimore who are referred to in various places, both by Democrats and Republicans, as the "roughs from Baltimore," and their euphonious names are as follows: Bill Chairs, Frank Chairs, Tip Wells (who was the leader), Tong Wales, George Cromwell (a name which has a sound of terror to some people), and Ed. Pumphrey. These were the leaders of the gang.

Mr. COMPTON. Will the gentlemen allow me a moment, for I know he does not want to do injustice—

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I yield the gentleman from Massachusetts five minutes more.

Mr. GREENHALGE. What is the question of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. COMPTON. The gentleman from Massachusetts has read seven names of persons whom he describes as the choice spirits, "Plug Uglies," or what else he may choose to denominate them, from Baltimore City, as the men who were guilty of the intimidation here charged. I want to say to the gentleman—I am sure he does not mean to do injustice or to state anything that is not true—that six of those seven men, in my opinion—and I am satisfied I am right about this matter—are registered voters in the third precinct of the first election district of Anne Arundel County; and one of the seven—Tip Wells—upon whose name the gentleman lays special stress, as do the committee, has voted in that district for twenty years.

Mr. GREENHALGE. It make a very slight difference—

Mr. COMPTON. But you said they were the choice spirits from Baltimore.

Mr. GREENHALGE. The number of roughs from Baltimore was much more than eight. I only name some of the gentlemen who were acting as leaders of the choice spirits from Baltimore. I do not say that they themselves came from that city. I am not sure about that. "Tip" Wells probably did, although he had formerly been a resident of this district in Anne Arundel County. He came down to this precinct to earn promotion or reward in the public service, and very shortly afterward was made a deputy collector of internal revenue under the last administration; and I think his duty took him to the city of Baltimore.

Now, as to "Hatch" Williams, I do not know whether he was indigenous to the soil of Anne Arundel County or to the city of Baltimore. I do not think either place, like the seven cities that contended for the honor of having given birth to Homer, would make much of a contest about Mr. "Tip" Wells or Mr. "Hatch" Williams.

Now, "Hatch" Williams says in reply to a question:

Q. You have a nickname—"Hatch" Williams?

A. My name is Doran Hatch Williams.

Q. But they call you "Hatch," don't they?

A. Yes, sir; my familiar friends do; yes, sir.

Q. Were you appointed a deputy sheriff that day?

A. No, sir.

Q. It has been testified that you had a badge on?

A. Yes, sir; let me explain that to you.

Q. What were you doing with a badge on?

A. I will tell you all about that badge business. There was a badge sent there for a man and I put it on for fun; I just wanted to see how I would look with a badge on; it didn't remain on my coat but only a minute; the man's name that the badge was sent for was Hiram Sappington; I don't know whether he was appointed by any one to be deputy sheriff or not; I heard he was, and I heard the badge was sent there for him. I suppose Mr. Crane knew what he was doing. Just hold on a minute, just wait a minute, Mr. Rose; I have made a mistake. He was appointed deputy sheriff and received the badge and I took it away from him; he didn't give it to me; I took it away from him just through a joke and I pinned it on my coat and went around there with it on for a few moments and then I went to him and I said, "Hiram, here is your badge." I was not appointed and had no right with it.

Q. Did Mr. Pumphrey have a badge on?

A. He did.

Q. Did you see him interfere with anybody?

A. Not the least bit in the world. I have been voting there for twenty years, and I never saw a more peaceable election in my life. It was the quietest and calmest election I ever saw or witnessed, and I think our friend over there [indicating Mr. Rose], if he will get his man Hall to attend to the niggers, we will continue to have peaceable elections.

Recross-examination:

Q. That is to say, if the negroes don't vote down there you will have peaceable elections; is that what I understand you?

A. I don't say anything about that, but I just say Mister Hall was objected to, as you term him; I call him Bill Hall; I don't honor him enough to call him Mister Hall; I don't call no niggers "Mister." He was the marshal of these niggers and marshaled them right up in a body, I suppose seventy-five or eighty head of them, and when he was objected to he just turned calmly around to his little company and said, "Boys, do you see that? Our votes are objected to; go away." Now, if I had been the marshal of the white men, as he was the marshal of the niggers, I would have said, "Boys"—that is, if my vote had been objected to—I would have said, "Boys, my vote is objected to; try your hand," and let them take the same chances that I took.

Q. Is Mr. Hall a property owner down there?

A. Of course he is.

Q. He is considerable of a tax-payer, isn't he?

A. I suppose he is, from the property he owns.

Q. Have you any reason, Mr. Williams, to say that he is not a gentleman worthy of honor?

A. I don't say anything about that, but I just say I owned half of this country I would not mister him; and, furthermore, my judgment in this case is, simply because Bill Hall is considerable of a tax-payer I don't see what right he has down there any more than any nigger that don't pay any taxes.

Q. (Mr. STANLEY.) In other words, you don't consider him any better because he happens to own a little land?

A. Not a bit, sir; he is a nigger; I consider him a nigger, and I don't consider him better than any of the rest of them.

Now, Isay, Mr. Speaker, whether "Hatch" Williams was born in Baltimore or in Anne Arundel County I can not say; I leave those localities to struggle for that honor as they please.

I say that the 175 votes in line were a tender which in law would be adjudged good even in the mere matter of a transaction relating to personal property, as in the case of a tender of greenbacks or legal currency in the payment of a debt. Those men stood there ready to put their votes into that ballot-box. They were registered; they had done all the law required of them, and they were thrown back by force, by violence; they were subjected to strong intimidation with guns and revolvers in the hands of such men as "Tip" Wells and "Hatch" Williams and their friends. These men bring to my mind the Baltimore roughs of a former day.

I say this case, this evidence, brings to my recollection the time when men from Massachusetts walked through the streets of this same city of Baltimore almost twenty-nine years ago. That grand event is clothed with greater importance now. The blood shed then in the streets of Baltimore should be as the blood of redemption of that city and of Maryland and the whole country as much to-day as it was in that day, nearly twenty-nine years ago, when the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment rushed from their homes to save Baltimore and Washington and the Republic. [Applause.] I feel bound to stand here to do what I can to complete the work begun by men from my own State, from my own county, from my own city of Lowell. [Renewed applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CRISP. I should like to know how the time stands between the two sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, in the chair). The time has been extended by unanimous consent. There remains on this side an hour and ten minutes, and on that side an hour and five minutes.

Mr. CRISP. The contestee prefers not to speak until the morning. Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. If the motion to adjourn is made I will not antagonize it.

Mr. CRISP. I move the House adjourn.

WORLD'S FAIR.

Mr. CANDLER. I ask by unanimous consent that the bill and report on the world's fair be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The bill and report are as follows:

Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts, from the Select Committee on World's Fair, reported the following bill as a substitute for H. R. 6883:

A bill (H. R. 8233) to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois.

Whereas it is fit and appropriate that the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America be commemorated by an exhibition of the resources of the United States of America, their development, and of the progress of civilization in the New World; and

Whereas such an exhibition should be of a national and international character, so that not only the people of our Union and this continent, but those of all nations as well, can participate, and should therefore have the sanction of the Congress of the United States: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and products of the soil, mine, and sea shall be inaugurated in the year 1892, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That a commission, to consist of two commissioners from each State and Territory of the United States and from the District of Columbia and eight commissioners at large, is hereby constituted, to be designated as the World's Columbian Commission.

SEC. 3. That said commissioners, two from each State and Territory, shall be appointed within thirty days from the passage of this act by the President of the United States, on the nomination of the governors of the States and Territories, respectively, and by the President eight commissioners at large and two from the District of Columbia; and in the same manner and within the same time there shall be appointed two alternate commissioners from each State and Territory of the United States and the District of Columbia and eight alternate commissioners at large, who shall assume and perform the duties of such commissioner or commissioners as may be unable to attend the meetings of the said commission; and in such nominations and appointments each of the two leading political parties shall be equally represented. Vacancies in the commission nominated by the governors of the several States and Territories, respectively, and also vacancies in the commission at large and from the District of Columbia, may be filled in the same manner and under the same conditions as provided herein for their original appointment.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of State of the United States shall, immediately after the passage of this act, notify the governors of the several States and Territories, respectively, thereof and request such nominations to be made. The commissioners so appointed shall be called together by the Secretary of State of the United States in the city of Chicago, by notice to the commissioners, as soon as convenient after the appointment of said commissioners, and within thirty days thereafter. The said commissioners, at said first meeting, shall organize by the election of such officers and the appointment of such committees as they may deem expedient, and for this purpose the commissioners present at said meeting shall constitute a quorum.

SEC. 5. That said commission be empowered in its discretion to accept for the purposes of the World's Columbian Exposition such site as may be selected and offered and such plans and specifications of buildings to be erected for such purpose at the expense of and tendered by the corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, known as "The World's Exposition of 1892." Provided, That said site so tendered and the buildings proposed to be erected thereon shall be deemed by said commission adequate to the purposes of said exposition: And provided, That said commission shall be satisfied that the said corporation has an actual bona fide and valid subscription to its capital stock of at least $5,000,000, of which not less than $300,000 shall have been paid in, and that the further sum of $5,000,000, making in all $10,000,000, will be provided by said corporation in ample time for its useful use during the prosecution of the work for the complete preparation for said exposition.

SEC. 6. That the said commission shall allot space for exhibitors, prepare a classification of exhibits, determine the plan and scope of the exposition, and shall appoint all judges and examiners for the exposition, award all premiums, if any, and generally have charge of all intercourse with the exhibitors and the representatives of foreign nations.

SEC. 7. That after the plans for said exposition shall be prepared by said corporation and approved by said commission, the rules and regulations of said corporation governing rates for entrance and admission fees, or otherwise affecting the rights, privilege, or interests of the exhibitors or of the public, shall be fixed or established by said corporation, subject, however, to such modification, if any, as may be imposed by a majority of said commissioners.

SEC. 8. That the said commission shall provide for the dedication of the buildings of the World's Columbian Exposition in said city of Chicago on the 30th day of April, 1892, the one hundred and third anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as first President of the United States, with appropriate ceremonies, and that the said exposition shall close on the 20th day of October, 1892.

SEC. 9. That whenever the President of the United States shall be notified by the commission that provision has been made for grounds and buildings for the uses herein provided for and there has also been filed with him by the said corporation, known as "The World's Exposition of 1892," satisfactory proof that a sum not less than $10,000,000, to be used and expended for the purposes of the exposition herein authorized, has in fact been raised or provided for by subscription or other legally binding means, he shall be authorized, through the Department of State, to make proclamation of the same, setting forth the time at which the exposition will open and close, and the place at which it will be held; and he shall communicate to the diplomatic representatives of foreign nations copies of the same, together with such regulations as may be adopted by the commission, for publication in their respective countries, and he shall, in behalf of the Government and people, invite foreign nations to take part in the said exposition and appoint representatives thereto.

SEC. 10. That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at said exposition, upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty, shall be admitted free of payment of duty, customs fees, or charges under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during the exhibition to sell for delivery at the close of the exposition any goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition in the exposition buildings or on its grounds, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue and for the collection of the import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: Provided, That all such articles when sold or withdrawn for consumption in the United States shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of importation, and all penalties prescribed by law shall be applied and enforced against such articles and against the persons who may be guilty of any illegal sale or withdrawal.

SEC. 11. That the sum of $20,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the remainder of the present fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury for purposes connected with the admission of foreign goods to said exhibition.

SEC. 12. That it shall be the duty of the commission to make report, from time to time, to the President of the United States of the progress of the work, and, in a final report, present a full exhibit of the results of the exposition.

SEC. 13. That the commission hereby authorized shall exist no longer than until the 1st day of January, 1893.

SEC. 14. That the United States shall not in any manner, nor under any circumstances, be liable for any of the acts, doings, proceedings, or representations of the said corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, its officers, agents, servants, or employees, or any of them, or for the service, salaries, labor, or wages of said officers, agents, servants, or employees, or any of them, or for any subscriptions to the capital stock, or for any certificates of stock, bonds, mortgages, or obligations of any kind issued by said corporation, or for any debts, liabilities, or expenses of any kind whatever attending such corporation or accruing by reason of the same.

SEC. 15. That there shall be exhibited at said exposition by the Government of the United States, from its Executive Departments, the Smithsonian Institution, the United States Fish Commission, and the National Museum, such articles and materials as illustrate the function and administrative faculty of the Government in time of peace and its resources as a war power, tending to demonstrate the nature of our institutions and their adaptation to the wants of the people; and to secure a complete and harmonious arrangement of such a Government exhibit a board shall be created to be charged with the selection, preparation, arrangement, safe-keeping, and exhibition of such articles and materials as the heads of the several departments and the directors of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum may respectively decide shall be embraced in said Government exhibit. The President may also designate additional articles for exhibition. Such board shall be composed of one person to be named by the head of each Executive Department and one by the directors of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, such selections to be approved by the President of the United States. The President shall name the chairman of said board, and the board itself shall select such other officers as it may deem necessary.

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to place on exhibition, upon such grounds as shall be allotted for the purpose, one of the life-saving stations authorized to be constructed on the coast of the United States by existing law, and to cause the same to be fully equipped with all apparatus, furniture, and appliances now in use in all life-saving stations in the United States, said building and apparatus to be removed at the close of the exhibition and re-erected at the place now authorized by law.

SEC. 16. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause a suitable building or buildings to be erected on the site selected for the World's Columbian Exposition for the Government exhibits, as provided in this act, and he is hereby authorized and directed to contract therefor, in the same manner and under the same regulations as for other public buildings of the United States; but the contracts for said building or buildings shall not exceed the sum of $400,000, and for the remainder of the fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, there is hereby appropriated for said building or buildings, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000.

SEC. 17. That for the purpose of paying the expenses of transportation, care, and custody of exhibits by the Government, and the maintenance of the building or buildings hereinbefore provided for, and the safe return of articles belonging to the said Government exhibit, and for the expenses of the commission created by this act, and other contingent expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon itemized accounts and vouchers, there is hereby appropriated for the remainder of this fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $200,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, That the United States shall not be liable, on account of the erection of buildings, expenses of the commission or any of its officers or employees, or on account of any expenses incident to or growing out of said exposition for a sum exceeding in the aggregate $1,500,000.

SEC. 18. That the commissioners and alternate commissioners appointed under this act shall not be entitled to any compensation for their services out of the Treasury of the United States, except their actual expenses for transportation and the sum of $5 per day for subsistence for each day they are necessarily absent from their homes on the business of said commission. The officers of said commission shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by said commission, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, which shall be paid out of the sums appropriated by Congress in aid of such exposition.

SEC. 19. That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to create any liability of the United States, direct or indirect, for any debt or obligation incurred, nor for any claim for aid or pecuniary assistance from Congress or the Treasury of the United States in support or liquidation of any debt or obligations created by said commission in excess of appropriations made by Congress therefor.

SEC. 20. That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to override or interfere with the laws of any State, and all contracts made in any State for the purposes of the exhibition shall be subject to the laws thereof.

SEC. 21. That no member of said commission, whether an officer or otherwise, shall be personally liable for any debt or obligation which may be created or incurred by the said commission.

Mr. CANNON, of Massachusetts, from the Select Committee on the World's Fair, submitted the following report (to accompany H. R. 6383):

The Select Committee on the World's Fair, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6383) to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, and sea, in the city of — in the year 1892, having had the same under consideration, have instructed me to report back a substitute therefor, entitled, "A bill to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois," with a recommendation that the original bill lie upon the table and that the substitute therefor do pass.

The bill H. R. 6383 was intended to comprehend all that was required to successfully organize a world's fair in either one of the three cities of New York, Chicago, or St. Louis, but to which such amendments were to be made as the city selected might require.

By the vote of the House the city of Chicago was selected as the place for holding the fair of 1892, and under the instructions given by the action of the House the committee has inserted the name of the city of Chicago in the bill, and has consulted with the representatives of that city for the purpose of perfecting and improving it, making, after careful consideration, such amendments as it deemed necessary and of importance.

The bill submitted differs in some essential features from bill H. R. 6383. In the second section the representation of the Territories and the District of Columbia has been increased from one to two commissioners from each, and provision is also made for the appointment of eight commissioners at large. A name is also given the commission, the designation applied being "The World's Columbian Commission."

The third section dispenses with the United States corporation which it was proposed to create by the Congress of the United States. It is also stipulated that the commissioners to be appointed from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia, together with the eight commissioners to be appointed at large, shall be selected equally from the two leading political parties.

In the fourth section there is no essential change, excepting as to the question of quorum for the first meeting, it being limited to the number present thereat. Provision is here made for the notification of the governors of the passage of the bill.

In the fifth section the commission, in place of acting as a corporation under the United States law, as in the previous bill, is authorized to accept for the World's Columbian Exposition the site, plans, and specifications of the buildings to be erected and tendered by the corporation created under the laws of the State of Illinois known as the "World's Exposition of 1892." The committee, in presenting this section, recognize the objections which have been made against a United States corporation and have altered themselves of one created under the laws of the State of Illinois.

This suggestion was made by the representatives of the city of Chicago; it is in accord with the action taken in the formation of their corporation; it is simple and practicable, and relieves the Government from any obligation or connection with it. It insures that everything connected with the site and erection of the buildings shall be conducted by a corporation with ample means, which will deliver it, for the uses of the exposition, without any obligations on the part of the United States Government, implied or otherwise, beyond that which the Government appropriates for its own commission and for its own exhibit. And the commission, acting independently of the corporation, and without power to incur any obligations, is instructed by this act to accept the buildings only when they shall be deemed by said commission to be adequate to the purposes for which they are intended.

In the original which was submitted to the House the eleventh section stated that not less than the sum of $5,000,000 should be subscribed and pledged, and not less than 10 per cent. thereof should be actually paid in cash, before the commission should do any corporate act other than those necessary to its organization. The bill now reported is still more conservative, protecting the Government's interests, so far as its connection with it is concerned, and insuring the financial success of the fair beyond a reasonable contingency by providing that the commission shall not only be satisfied that the actual bona fide subscription to the capital stock of at least $5,000,000 has been made, of which not less than $500,000 has been paid in, but also declares that the further sum of $5,000,000, making $10,000,000 in all, shall be provided by the corporation in ample time or as needed for the successful prosecution of the work.

The committee has given careful consideration to the statements of the representatives of the finance committee of the city of Chicago as to the subscriptions to the stock of $5,000,000, and believes the subscriptions to be bona fide, that they are made in good faith, and that they will be paid. Some of the statements made by the chairman of that committee are appended to this report. The committee also accept the statements and representations made by the citizens of the city of Chicago, through their committee, as to their ability to raise an additional five millions, and are of the opinion that they are made in good faith, and will not be repudiated.

While it is the judgment of the committee that the city of Chicago will meet the obligations and promises of their representatives, it would call attention to the fact that the judgment of this committee is not taken alone, but that the commission, on the spot in Chicago, will have a more favorable opportunity to satisfy themselves in regard to the site, the plans of the buildings, and the certainty of the $10,000,000 than it would be possible for a committee of this House to do without taking more time and entering into the details of the exposition more fully than would be wise and practicable during a session of Congress.

The representatives of the city of Chicago, who have appeared before your committee were ready to meet every requirement indicated by the bill previously considered or in the discussion while the location of the site was pending, and your committee desires to recognize the fact that it is due to the city of Chicago that it should be assured by the action of this House that the fair is to be held in the city of Chicago, without further delay, as the business arrangements connected with the provisions of this act can be better adjusted when they are assured of the action of Congress. The committee claim that the Government of the United States does not assume any risk, but is asked to enact such legislation as to demonstrate that it is in sympathy with and desires to encourage the patriotic efforts of the citizens of Chicago in this great national and international exposition that will mark this important epoch in the history of the world and commemorate the life and services of Christopher Columbus in a manner worthy the continent which he discovered.

Section 6 does not appear in the bill previously reported. It defines the duties of the commission and gives them the necessary power to allot space for the exhibitors, classify exhibits, determine the plan and scope of the exposition, appoint judges and examiners, award premiums, and to have general charge of all intercourse with the exhibitors and representatives of foreign nations.

Section 7 authorizes the corporation of "The World's Exposition of 1892" to make any modification in the plans, subject to the approval of a majority of the commissioners; to make rules governing the rates for entrance and admission fees, or otherwise affecting the rights, privileges, or interests of the exhibitors or the public.

Section 8
brian Expo holding th of the com opening an cession.

Section 9
President have lect mation in Section 10

June 30, 18
is estimated the expend

Section 11
and approp
for the fisca

Section 12
Government commission

Secretary of year and fo the Governm sum of $1.5

Section 13
ers while n
sion and fo
Secretary of

In submit mittee, of C committee o of Illinois h be a world's anniversary

the city of C

In Septem perienced g of studying year, in ord exposition

that of Paris intelligently the cost, the commence t

than could l
The comm offer a larg of a nat vale citizen

ment or cit financial pla the most su minister of

and the gov
the stipul
Chicago giv aid of the N

The comm
all purposes
00 to provi
plans and it of Chicago, detailed stat

France to in as showing may be mad

In addition and the city

many of the and South A modious bu

About fifty sidently exp
exposition.

of Mexico $
The commu
munications apartments

exposition,
to exhibit th only that m vale the test

sources of th possibilities

The bill of amounting t

as more tha time, and li
States to the

Under some of iron and of the build different De jections in the World's ent is the m be impossib

The contin nations in t since the fir mittee with them in the lating the p

The under spectfully d that the follo have been a Resolved,

citizens of C

to this comm committee n

Section 8 provides for the dedication of the buildings of the World's Columbian Exposition on the 30th day of April, 1892. Upon the question of time for holding the exposition there was a difference of opinion among the members of the committee, and each member reserved the right to vote for such time for opening and closing the exposition as might be deemed best after further discussion.

Section 9 provides that, in addition to the approval of the commission, the President of the United States shall receive satisfactory evidence that $10,000,000 have been raised or provided for to successfully carry on this fair before proclamation is made and invitations extended to foreign nations.

Section 11 appropriates $20,000 to be expended during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, in the place of $100,000 which was named in the original bill, as it is estimated that that amount is all that will be required during that period for the expense of admission of foreign goods for exhibition.

Section 16 limits the cost of the Government buildings to the sum of $400,000 and appropriates $100,000 of that amount for the remainder of this fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891.

Section 17 appropriates $200,000 for the purpose of paying the expenses of the Government exhibit, maintenance of its buildings, and for the expenses of the commission and other contingent expenses, all subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, for the remainder of this fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and limits the expenditure of the Government hereafter for all purposes connected with the exposition to the sum of $1,500,000.

Section 18 provides for the payment of the actual expenses of the commissioners while necessarily absent from their homes on the business of the commission and for the compensation of the officers of the commission, subject to the Secretary of the Treasury.

In submitting the letter of Lyman J. Gage, esq., chairman of the finance committee, of Chicago, which will be published in the appendix to this report, this committee would call attention to the fact that the city of Chicago and the State of Illinois have, for an extended period, indicated their desire that there should be a world's fair held in the United States to commemorate the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, and that the city of Chicago should be selected as the site.

In September, 1889, they organized a committee and selected a number of experienced gentlemen, together with an engineer, to visit Paris for the purpose of studying the plans and operation of the Paris Universal Exposition of that year, in order to be thoroughly prepared to inaugurate, without delay, a national exposition by availing themselves of the experience of those connected with that of Paris. The investigations there made enable the city of Chicago to more intelligently comprehend the magnitude of the undertaking, and to estimate the cost, the scope, and the requirements for the successful conduct of it, and to commence their active preparation for the site and the buildings more promptly than could have been possible excepting for their enterprise and forethought.

The committee would call attention to the fact that the citizens of Chicago offer a larger and more generous contribution to this nation for the inauguration of a national and international exposition than was ever proffered by private citizens before, and larger than any ever offered by any foreign government or city in the great international exhibitions previously held. In the financial plan of the great Paris exposition, which is now claimed to have been the most successful in the world, an agreement was made between the French minister of commerce, the prefect of the Seine, representing the city of Paris, and the governor-general of the Crédit Foncier in behalf of the guaranty association, stipulating that the contributions should aggregate $8,600,000. The city of Chicago guarantees to satisfy the commission that it will provide, without the aid of the National Government, the sum of $10,000,000.

The committee would also call attention to the fact that the estimated cost, for all purposes, for the Paris exposition was $8,000,000, with a reserve fund of $600,000 to provide for contingencies and for possible modifications in the original plans, and it believes that the $10,000,000, with the site to be provided by the city of Chicago, is ample for all purposes for a fair in this country. Appended is a detailed statement from the report of Mr. Jeffrey, one of the gentlemen sent to France to investigate and obtain information concerning the Paris exposition, as showing the cost and receipts of that exposition, from which calculations may be made and estimates based for the exposition at Chicago.

In addition to the buildings erected by the Government of the United States and the city of Chicago for the exposition, we may reasonably anticipate that many of the States of the Union, the Dominion of Canada, Mexico, the Central and South American Republics, and the Governments of Europe will erect commodious buildings for their exhibits.

About fifty countries were represented at the Paris exposition, and we may confidently expect an increased interest and larger representation in the Columbian exposition. The Argentine Republic appropriated $1,000,000 and the Republic of Mexico $1,200,000 for the buildings and exhibits of their respective countries.

The committee would call attention to the interesting and important communications and estimates, appended hereto, received from the different Departments and bureaus of the Government, indicating their great interest in the exposition, and that it is most important that they should have an opportunity to exhibit the valuable collections of the Government of the United States, not only that millions of people may enjoy the privilege, but because it will cultivate the taste, increase their knowledge, and inform them as to the great resources of the nation, and impress them with its wonderful progress and the possibilities of the future.

The bill offered as a substitute for the bill H. R. 6883 makes an appropriation amounting to only $330,000 until the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, as more than this amount, in their judgment, will not be required up to that time, and limits the expenditures to be made by the Government of the United States to the amount originally suggested in the former bill, namely, $1,500,000. Under some of the plans considered, that the buildings should be constructed of iron and glass, a large percentage of the cost will be reimbursed by the sale of the buildings at the close of the exhibition, and the plan presented by the different Departments will enable the Government to add to its permanent collections in Washington the interesting and valuable exhibit made by them at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, it also being stated that the present is the most favorable time to secure some important additions that it may be impossible to obtain at a later period.

The continued interest manifested by the people of the country and foreign nations in this celebration and the more careful consideration of the subject since the first report of this committee have more deeply impressed the committee with the grandeur and importance of the undertaking and confirmed them in the opinion that it will prove to be of great national advantage, stimulating the patriotism and promoting the material prosperity of the people.

VIEWS OF THE MINORITY.

The undersigned members of the Select Committee on the World's Fair respectfully dissent from the foregoing report and its conclusions. We believe that the following resolution, which we voted in favor of in committee, should have been adopted:

"Resolved, That when a guaranty fund of $10,000,000 shall be secured by the citizens of Chicago, the sufficiency and legality of which shall be satisfactory to this committee, we report the pending bill with such amendments as the committee may agree upon."

J. J. BELDEN,
WM. H. HATCH,
R. P. FLOWER.

APPENDIX I.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10, 1890.

Hon. J. W. Candler,

Chairman of the World's Fair Committee, House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: Before returning to Chicago it may be advisable to put into written form the substance of the pledges made by me on behalf of a special committee appointed to wait upon your honorable committee in the matter of Chicago's interest in the proposed world's fair.

You kindly gave us audience on the evening of March 6. On that occasion speaking for our committee, I explained that the "World's Exposition of 1892" is a corporation authorized by the laws of Illinois; that its capital stock is $5,000,000, and that its object is to provide means for and promote a world's fair or exposition in the city of Chicago in celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus; that commissioners appointed according to law had opened books of subscription, and that $5,000,000 in bona fide subscriptions had been made. In fact, that $250,000 in subscriptions more than could be received had been tendered.

I further stated that the subscribers to this stock and the people of Chicago understood fully that their Representatives in Congress had declared that Chicago stood ready to provide $10,000,000 for the purpose of the proposed exposition if Congress should select Chicago as the place for such exposition.

I stated that with my associates, Messrs. Edwin Walker, Thomas B. Bryan, W. J. Onahan, and Otto Young, we represented the executive committee by whom we were appointed to confer with you. The executive committee is a large body embracing prominent men, subscribers to the stock, and has for its chairman Hon. D. C. Cregier, the mayor of Chicago.

I pledged to your committee that in addition to the $5,000,000 stock the further sum of $5,000,000 would be duly provided by the citizens of Chicago, and explained that our board of directors would increase the capital stock of the company to at least $7,000,000. I declared that in the light of what had been done it was entirely reasonable to believe that one million of the two millions of stock could be readily placed; that if it should then appear inexpedient to make further effort in that direction that $1,000,000 in bonds secured by a pledge of the corporation's assets and not receipts could be readily sold at par.

This I asked you to believe and act upon as a reasonable proposition, such a one as business men act upon in even the largest and most important affairs, and as to its entire feasibility the business judgment of my associates and myself stands pledged.

I have now the great satisfaction of knowing that pledges made by your committee have been fully indorsed by many representative citizens of our city.

The following is a copy of a telegram received on the day succeeding our interview:

"CHICAGO, March 7, 1890.

"LYMAN J. GAGE,

"Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

"We wish you continued success in Washington; we will stand by you and the committee in every way. Chicago will now, as in the past, prove equal to every emergency. You can count on our hearty support.

"S. W. Allerton, capitalist; John B. Drake, proprietor Grand Pacific Hotel; G. B. Shaw, president Merchant Loan and Trust Company; C. L. Hutchinson, president Corn Exchange National Bank; John C. Black, president Continental National Bank; J. W. Ellsworth; W. B. Hale, president Hale Elevator Company; Potter Palmer, proprietor Palmer House; R. T. Crane, president Crane Brothers Manufacturing Company; E. G. Keith, president Metropolitan National Bank; H. F. Eames, president Commercial National Bank; A. L. Patterson, Chicago Globe; W. J. Huiskamp; Chicago Times; J. J. P. O'Dell, president Union National Bank; Victor F. Lawson, Chicago News; E. St. John, vice-president Rock Island Railroad Company; Samuel M. Nickerson, president First National Bank; William T. Baker, president Chicago Board of Trade; William Penn Nixon, Chicago Inter-Ocean; John N. Clark, collector of customs; N. B. Ream, capitalist; O. W. Potter, president Illinois Steel Company; James W. Scott, Chicago Herald; H. H. Kohlsatt, capitalist; E. S. Pike, capitalist; C. R. Crane, Joseph Medill, Chicago Tribune; George Schneider, president National Bank of Illinois; Geo. R. Davis, county treasurer; A. F. Seeberger, wholesale hardware; Stuyvesant Fish, president Illinois Central Railroad Company; J. W. Doane, president Merchants' Loan and Trust Company; The Hibbard, Spencer & Bartlett Company."

It is proper to explain that a fairly full report of my statements and pledges were immediately wired by press correspondents and were published in the Chicago papers the morning of March 7. It is in the light of these facts and the information thus conveyed to the signers thereof that the telegram in question is to be construed as an indorsement of our proposition.

Inquired of as to our ability to provide for the exposition by May 1, 1892, our committee was a unit in declaring that we should meet the conditions of any bill which Congress should adopt on this point. We declared that our buildings could be built in a shorter period than would be required by the Government, should it construct a building of its own, or by the several States or by other nations in the preparation of their own special exhibits.

With this I beg to hand you a copy of the subscription list to the stock of the "World's Exposition of 1892," duly certified by Otto Young, chairman of the Chicago sub-finance committee, showing an aggregate of 2,556 names, and a total subscription of $4,361,000. To this would be added, if its voluminous character did not forbid, the names of about 27,000 other subscribers, aggregating in their subscriptions $860,670, or a total in all of $5,221,670.

LYMAN J. GAGE,

Chairman of Finance and of Special Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11, 1890.

APPENDIX II.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10, 1890.

DEAR SIR: At your request I have compiled a list of subscribers to the capital stock of the "World's Exposition of 1892," and have given you the individual names of such as have subscribed the sum of $200 and over.

These amount to (see Exhibits A and B) $4,361,000
In addition to the above we have subscriptions of less than $200 each to the amount of $860,670

Total amount subscribed 5,221,670

For all the above subscriptions the signatures are in the rooms of the sub-finance committee. I know of many other subscriptions which have not been reported to me officially, and therefore can not be taken into consideration in this report.

Respectfully submitted,

OTTO YOUNG,

Chairman Sub-Finance Committee, World's Exposition of 1892.

Approved and submitted,

L. J. GAGE,

L. J. GAGE, Chairman Finance Committee, Chairman Finance Committee the World's Exposition of 1892.

APPENDIX 1.

UNITED STATES SENATE, Washington, D. C., March 19, 1890.

DEAR SIR: I have examined the list of the subscriptions to the world's fair fund for Chicago, and desire to say to you that they are bona fide and will be paid.

Yours, very truly,
Hon. J. W. Candler,
Chairman World's Fair Committee.

C. B. FARWELL.

APPENDIX 2.

PARIS EXPOSITION.

[From Mr. Jeffery's report to the Chicago committee.]
Legislation and official decrees.

November 8, 1884.—President Grévy issued a decree for a universal exposition to be held in 1889. This remained in abeyance by the Government until 1885.

July 6, 1885.—Act was passed by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies authorizing the exposition.

July 23, 1886.—President Grévy issued decree regulating the organization of the departments of the exposition.

August 25, 1886.—President Grévy issued decree making the exposition grounds a customs warehouse; articles for exhibition to be shipped direct to the grounds without custom-house examination.

August 26, 1886.—Decree issued fixing May 5 and October 31, 1889, as the opening and closing of the exposition.

January 6, 1888.—The minister of public works issued decree of general regulations affecting shipments to the exposition.

Early in 1887 foreign nations were invited to participate in the exposition.

Construction of buildings, etc.

1886.—Invitations were extended to the French engineers and architects to submit competitive designs for general arrangement of buildings and grounds. Eighteen days only were allowed in which to prepare them. One hundred and seven designs were submitted.

August 2, 1886.—The engineering and architectural bureaux were organized and put to work.

Time occupied in preparing ground, laying the foundations, and constructing the buildings complete as follows: Machinery hall, fifteen months; central transept and grand dome, seven and one-half months.

Miscellaneous industries buildings, seven months; liberal arts palace, twenty months; fine arts palace, twenty months; total area of inclosed grounds, 238 acres; total area under roof, 7,530 acres.

Buildings all complete in November, 1888.

Cost exclusive of salaries of architects and draughtsmen of the three main structures, as follows:

Machinery hall.....	$1,426,208.90
Miscellaneous industries buildings.....	1,027,295.97
Palaces of the fine and liberal arts.....	1,504,209.61

Total..... 3,957,714.48

The Eiffel tower was built as a private enterprise.

Financial.

March 29, 1886.—Agreement made between representatives of the Government of France, the city of Paris, and the Guaranty Association for Contributions, as follows:

By the national Government.....	$3,400,000
By the city of Paris.....	1,600,000
By the Guaranty Association.....	3,000,000

Total..... 8,000,000

This on the assumption that total expenses would not exceed $8,000,000.

The Guaranty Association was composed of persons who within a specified time should subscribe to one or more shares of its capital stock. Par value of shares $300, first payment $10. No subscription received for less than $200. Stockholders to share in the profits, if any, and be responsible only for amount of subscription.

March 29, 1886.—The foregoing agreement was modified by agreement (ratified by the Chambers) between the commissioner-general and the governor of the Crédit Foncier of France, the latter representing the trust companies, banking houses, and members of the Guaranty Association, providing that the Crédit Foncier should issue 1,200,000 bonds of $5 each, with twenty-five coupon admission tickets attached.

The bonds to mature in 1964 without interest, and to participate in eighty-one lottery drawings, prizes of which were from $5 each to one of $100,000.

Within a few hours the whole loan was taken and $5,000,000 became available at once.

Conferring [conformably?] to the agreement, this sum was disposed of as follows:

To refund to the Guaranty Association.....	$3,800,000
For supplementary expenses of the exposition.....	700,000
For payment of lottery prizes.....	800,000
For redemption of bonds in 1964.....	900,000

Total..... 6,000,000

This increased the available cash resources of the exposition to $9,300,000, and procured the sale at once of 30,000,000 admission tickets before the opening of the exposition.

Resources.

By national Government.....	$3,400,000
By city of Paris.....	1,600,000
From sale of bonds.....	4,300,000
From sale of concessions.....	400,000
From national exhibits.....	1,119,000
For two buildings and exhibits by city of Paris.....	177,440

Total from all sources..... 11,069,562

Estimated profit in national treasury to be divided between the nation and the city of Paris, $1,600,000 to $1,930,000.

Miscellaneous.

Total admissions (estimated).....	28,000,000
Greatest admissions in one day.....	387,877
Smallest admissions in one day.....	36,322
Number of exhibits.....	36,000
Number of exhibit awards or prizes.....	34,800

About fifty countries were represented officially or semi-officially. The Argentine Republic had 32,292 square feet of space, had a special building, and appropriated $1,000,000.

The Government of Mexico had 23,239 square feet of space, a special building, and appropriated $1,200,000.

The United States had 113,000 square feet of space, no building, and appropriated $250,000.

Estimated increase of receipts by railroads during the year, $12,000,000.

APPENDIX 3.

STATE DEPARTMENT, March 18, 1890.

Respectfully referred to Hon. J. W. Candler. His attention is especially asked to the details of Mr. Curtis's communication.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith a brief sketch of a plan for a historical collection to be exhibited at the proposed Columbian Exposition of 1892, and to respectfully request that you would forward the same to Hon. J. W. Candler, chairman of the special committee of the House of Representatives in charge of that subject.

As it is intended to commemorate the discovery of America and the noble purpose of such exhibitions is the education of the people, this fair should be distinctly American and display, so far as possible, objects of interest associated with the discovery and the results of his achievements.

It is proposed, through the good offices of the Department of State, to secure from Europe and South America a historical collection which shall be one of the chief features of the exposition and afterward be placed in the National Museum at Washington for the permanent benefit of the public. This collection is to illustrate the epoch of the discovery and the condition of the continent at the time Columbus first placed his foot upon American soil; and the plan is to secure:

1. A model of the house in which Columbus was born, with a collection of portraits of himself, his family, and as many as possible of the men who were associated with him and his discoveries, both his patrons and companions.

2. An illustration of the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, with life-sized figures properly costumed, portraits, and fac-similes of state papers relating to the first voyage and subsequent events in the life of the great discoverer.

3. A perfect reproduction of the caravel in which Columbus sailed, manned by Genoese sailors in the costume of the time, to be moored in or near the grounds of the exposition, the caravel to be equipped as nearly as possible as it was during the voyage, with originals or fac-similes of the compasses and other nautical instruments used by navigators at that age, together with the actual charts used by Columbus, if those can be obtained, and, if not, accurate reproductions.

4. A model in relief of the West India Islands and the north coast of South America, showing the routes of several voyages made by Columbus and the other early discoverers, with historical illustrations, models, relics, etc., of Amerigo Vesputi, Alonso de Ojeda, Nuñez de Balboa, and others.

5. Life-sized models of the natives of America at the time of the discovery, with a collection of objects showing their costumes, habits, customs, and manner of life.

6. The last days of Columbus, illustrated with models, portraits, a collection of the original of his papers, his last will and testament, his death and burial, and a model of his coffin and tomb.

7. The epoch of the Conquest, illustrated by models of the palace of Montezuma and his temples, with other objects, either original or accurate reproductions, showing the condition of the semi-civilized portions of the continent, their social, religious, and political organization; costumed figures of the Conquistadors, their armors, weapons, etc.

8. A similar illustration of the civilization of the Incas of Peru, with models of their palaces and temples, costumed figures, implements of household and military service, showing the social, religious, and political life, with costumed figures of Pizarro and his men.

9. Collections showing the development of the resources of the southern continent for four hundred years, and giving by object lessons the history of the Central and South American republics and their progress in civilization.

10. The epoch of the Revolution, illustrated by portraits, historical papers, and other objects, tracing the history of the struggle that resulted in the separation of the American colonies from the crown of Spain.

There are very large collections in Spain, Mexico, Peru, Chili, Colombia, and other countries, a great portion of which could easily be obtained, either in the original or accurate reproductions, at a moderate cost, and the whole arranged in chronological order would make a display of historic interest whose value can scarcely be overestimated. Many of these relics are held by the several governments in libraries and museums, and some in private collections. No attempt has ever been made to bring them together, but every American nation would appreciate the value of the collection and enter with enthusiasm into the effort to secure a complete and accurate display illustrative of the history of America. The papers of Columbus alone, if nothing else, should be collected for the National Museum of the United States. The originals of many and fac-similes of the remainder can easily be secured, and in Peru and Mexico priceless relics of prehistoric civilization can now be obtained which a few years hence will be beyond the reach of collectors.

This historical collection should be supplemented by a display showing the present condition of society and civilization in the other American republics: the manner of life and customs of the people, their style of living, their methods of agriculture and progress in the mechanical arts and the sciences, their distinctive national costumes, etc., to be illustrated by accurate types, from the ranchero of Mexico to the gaucho of the Argentine Republic. This would of itself be a most valuable and interesting collection, as each republic has its peculiarities and the native races furnish material of the most picturesque character, of which none but those who have traveled in Spanish America and Brazil have the slightest idea.

Thanking you for the kind invitation to submit my plans, I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM E. CURTIS.

Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

APPENDIX 4.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, Washington, D. C., March 13, 1890.

SIR: In reply to your communication of the 26th ultimo, requesting to be furnished with estimates of amounts required under House bill 6583 for the purpose of erecting buildings for the Government exhibits and the placing of such exhibits therein at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1892, and for their care and safe return, I have the honor to transmit herewith such estimates as have already been received from the various Departments and bureaus of the Government, as follows:

Department of State.....	$30,000
Department of Justice.....	3,000
Commissioner of Fisheries.....	150,000
Life-Saving Service, including cost of life-saving station.....	15,000
Coast Survey.....	12,500
Bureau of Engraving and Printing.....	3,000
Smithsonian Institution.....	565,000

Respectfully, yours,

W. WINDOM, Secretary.

Hon. JOHN W. Candler,
Chairman World's Fair Committee, House of Representatives.

APPENDIX 5.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, D. C., March 7, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your request of the 1st instant for an estimate of the cost, including all expenses of preparation, transportation, etc., in connection therewith, of such an exhibit as should be made by the Department of Justice at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1892, and the amount of floor and wall space required for such an exhibit, and to say in reply thereto that a proper exhibit can be made for $3,000, and that, subject to such modification as might be necessary on account of the shape of the space assigned to this Department or the construction of the building, this Department should have not less than 900 feet of floor space and 1,500 feet of wall space.

Very respectfully,

W. H. H. MILLER, Attorney-General.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 6.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., March 13, 1890.

SIR: In connection with your reference of the letter of Hon. JOHN W. CANDLER, chairman of the World's Fair Committee of the House of Representatives, and in which reference you request me to furnish an estimate of the cost of placing, caring for, and returning such an exhibit as should be made by the Department of Agriculture at the forthcoming World's Fair, I have the honor to suggest that the sum of $250,000 be estimated for the purposes of this Department, including cost of collecting, preparing, caring for, and returning said exhibit. The estimated space required by the several divisions of the Department for the proposed exhibit is 25,700 square feet of floor space. In addition to this I would estimate an outdoor space of some 3,000 square feet for the use of the horticultural and botanical divisions.

In this connection I will add that, while it is desirable that this Department shall co-operate with the other Executive Departments, as contemplated by the framers of the bill in the general plans of the exposition, it will, without doubt, be admitted by those who consider the magnitude of the contemplated agricultural display and its diversified character that a special building should be devoted to at least a portion of it, the grounds surrounding which may be utilized for the horticultural and botanical "outdoor" purposes. It is in view of the probability of such a conclusion and it is with a due appreciation of the magnitude of the undertaking that the above estimates for money and space are submitted.

Very respectfully,

J. M. RUSK, Secretary.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 7.

[S. P. Langley, secretary; G. Brown Goode, assistant secretary, in charge of United States National Museum.]

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
UNITED STATES NATIONAL MUSEUM,
Washington, March 12, 1890.

SIR: I have before me the letter of Hon. J. W. CANDLER, chairman of the World's Fair Committee of the House of Representatives, dated February 26, with your indorsement of March 1, requesting me to furnish an estimate of the cost of placing, caring for, and return of such an exhibit as should in my judgment be made by the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1892.

I wish to preface what I have to say with the remark that the estimates for space and cost have been carefully made by experts who have participated in all of the great expositions of the past sixteen years. The Smithsonian museum is the one bureau of the Government whose special function is that of exhibition, and its officers are prepared to say with great exactness what can be done with any specified sum. The estimates have not been made with a view to possible reduction, but represent the minimum sum with which a display suitable for the place and occasion can be prepared within the time of opening.

I wish also to call attention to the fact that in the fourteen years which have elapsed since the Philadelphia exhibition the standards of exhibition work have completely changed, and the display of the Government Departments at Philadelphia, which was admirable for the time and thoroughly satisfactory to all visitors, would fall far below the expectations of the present.

As a more specific illustration of my meaning, I will cite the Fisheries Exposition in 1890, which excited so much admiration abroad as to form a kind of epoch in the history of such undertakings. I am assured by the gentleman in charge of that display, and to whom its exceptional success was mainly due, that in the London exhibition of 1883, after a lapse of only three years, the standard of what was expected to be reached had been so raised that had the United States repeated the display (which was so unrivaled in Berlin) it would not have stood higher than tenth among the competing national exhibits on that occasion.

The standard of excellence has recently been still further advanced by the Paris exposition of 1889, for which the resources of the French Government and the ingenuity and talent of the people were severely taxed during a five-years period of preparation.

Past experience seems, therefore, inapplicable to present circumstances, and I can only say that in view of the limited time and the great expectations which are entertained in connection with the Chicago exhibition the expense must necessarily be greater than on similar occasions in the past.

In 1876 there was practically no National Museum, and the display made at that time by the Smithsonian Institution, covering about 25,000 square feet of floor space, was of a kind which most of the visitors had never seen. In 1892, when the national collections in Washington cover about 125,000 square feet, and are sufficiently extensive to require the immediate addition of at least 105,000 additional square feet, it would seem that the area required in a great international exhibition should be at least three times as much as in 1876, and that the cost of preparation would be proportionately greater in relation to the floor space occupied.

That this must necessarily be so is indicated by our experience at the Cincinnati exhibition, where the proportionate cost was $6.25 per foot, while at Philadelphia it was approximately $3.75.

Keeping these things in mind, and also the undoubted fact that the time for preparation will be, at most, inadequately brief, I feel that I must name a sum out of proportion to previous expenditures in earlier and smaller Government expositions. The insuring of a successful exhibit on the part of the Smithsonian Institution has not been considered in making our estimates so much as the desire for a reasonable guaranty against failure.

I note with much satisfaction that the resolution of the House committee does not by its wording indicate a disposition to prevent the acquisition of new specimens by purchase and otherwise. In 1876 a large amount of material was obtained which after exhibition in Philadelphia was returned to Washington, becoming the permanent property of the people and the nucleus of the great collections now in the Museum building, and the same usage prevailed at the New Orleans exposition in 1885.

In 1888, however, on the occasion of the Cincinnati exposition, the rulings of the Treasury were quite at variance with those on previous occasions, and it was decided by the special auditor in charge of the accounts that no new objects could be obtained except such as might be necessary to "complete series" already in the Museum. This ruling was far from being in the interest of economy, and its enforcement interfered sadly with the success of our participation in the Cincinnati exhibition.

If the Smithsonian Institution should be instructed to participate in the exhibition at Chicago, it will undoubtedly be necessary to obtain large quantities of new material, which must be either purchased, collected in the field, or in the case of the models and other similar preparations, which are most effective on such occasions, made in the workshops of the Museum.

The exhibition of such new material will be more essential on this occasion than hitherto for two principal reasons:

1. That at a time when the Capital will be an especial object of interest for foreign visitors it will be undesirable to denude its walls of any large number of the objects now on exhibition.

2. That many of the most attractive objects have already been shown at expositions in Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Louisville, and elsewhere, and the public visiting the Chicago exhibition would not be satisfied to look at them again.

In planning for the proposed exhibition, those departments would be selected in which it would seem possible, within the brief time available, to make the most imposing and instructive displays, and in which it is believed that results can be produced which would not be discreditably even in comparison with the Paris exposition. I will mention some of the directions in which satisfactory results may undoubtedly be secured.

1. The Smithsonian Institution should exhibit its own history, condition, and functions, and the general results of its operations during its forty-six years of existence, including its publications, explorations, and researches, twenty-five year period of meteorological observations, etc. It may also, with propriety undertake to set forth the history of American science and exploration from the time of the discovery of the Continent to the present day, and the activities of the numerous scientific institutions and societies of the United States, the progress of scientific exploration by the Government of the United States, and by individuals and foreign governments in all parts of the American Continent, together with a collection of portraits of representative scientific men of the world, so far as they have been associated with the development of scientific thought in America.

2. The National Museum, as on previous occasions, would undertake to illustrate the natural resources of the United States and their utilization, so far as this subject was not undertaken by other departments.

In this connection especial attention should be given to the animal resources of the continent. It would be desirable to show large groups, mounted by the best methods of modern taxidermy, of the various quadrupeds of America which are fast approaching extermination: buffalo, elk, moose, musk ox, caribou, mountain goat, mountain sheep, the five species of deer and beaver, the walrus, the fur seal, the sea elephant, and others equally interesting and equally liable to extinction, though not so large, indeed, every species of American animal, bird, reptile, or invertebrates which is of sufficient importance to man, at least so far as they are of sufficient interest to mankind to have been designated by popular names.

In this connection may be represented also all methods of hunting employed in America, especially by uncivilized man. Supplementing the whole, a display of the various products of the animal kingdom used by man in his arts and industries. This is a subject which has not yet been adequately worked out in this country, but to which the Bethnal Green Museum in London, one of the most interesting places of public instruction in the world, is very largely devoted.

The industrial resources derived from the vegetable and mineral kingdoms may also with propriety be shown, except so far as these subjects may be taken up respectively by the Department of Agriculture and the Geological Survey.

In connection with the anthropological departments of the Museum, an attempt should be made to show the physical and other characteristics of the principal races of man, and the early stages of the history of civilization as shown by the evolution of certain selected primitive arts and industries. Here might properly be presented a considerable number of models of habitations and of costumed figures. Nothing was so popular and effective in the recent Paris exposition as displays of this character, and the resources of the National Museum workshops for doing work of this kind are probably better than are to be found elsewhere in America. In the case of certain selected arts and industries, it might be well to show quite a large group of specimens and to show their development from their beginning to the most advanced stages of the present time.

Among those best suited for this treatment would be the history of transportation by land and water. A floor-space of 5,000 feet might well be occupied by this subject, which forms so important a part of the history of civilization. Every mode of transportation known to man may be shown by originals, drawings, and models. A large amount of material in this direction is already in our possession, and much more is easily accessible. The economical industries, including an exhibition of the chemical elements and all their principal combinations; the methods of manufacture of all substances produced by the applications of chemistry and their utilization in the arts and industries. The history of music and musical instruments. The history and methods of printing and book-making. The history of the development of instruments of precision. The history and methods of photography and the graphic arts; the fine arts and the application of the arts of design to industrial arts and manufacture.

3. As a special subject, the archaeology of America, to constitute the exhibit of the Bureau of Ethnology. This will include illustrations of the mounds and ruins of the ancient Pueblos, the cliff ruins of the cave lodgers of the Pueblo regions, the shell mounds of the Pacific, and also the archaeology of the Atlantic Slope and the culture of the Alaskan Indians; all these subjects to be shown by means of models, photographs, drawings, and maps, and collections of the objects of art characteristic of each of these types of civilization, together with a representation of the work and methods of the bureau by means of its publications.

A portion of the material for such an exhibit has already been collected and is now in possession of the bureau or of the National Museum, but a portion to illustrate special features is still to be gathered.

For the proper exhibition of the material, it is estimated that 15,000 square feet of floor surface will be required and 5,000 square feet of wall and window space. The estimate for floor surface includes all necessary allowance for aisles and passages.

To make such supplementary collections as are necessary, to make maps, charts, models, photographs, and transparencies, to transport the material and install it in Chicago, including cost of cases and expense of mounting and labeling specimens, to prepare a catalogue, to care for the exhibit while in Chicago, and finally to transport it to the National Museum at Washington, it is estimated that $160,000 will be required.

I have prepared a detailed estimate of the exhibits under each of these heads, as to space and cost. These are at your disposition, but are not given here. From these estimates the following more general ones have been derived:

The amount of space required will not be less than 80,000 square feet, which would be equivalent to 60,000 square feet exclusive of the space reserved for main passage aisles through the building. This is in addition to the 15,000 feet for the Bureau of Ethnology, and is less than three times what was assigned to the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum at the Philadelphia and New Orleans exhibitions. At the fishery exhibition in 1883 nearly half this amount of space was occupied by the display of the American fisheries alone, and the success of the installation on this occasion was largely due to the fact that the exhibits were not unduly crowded together.

The total amount of money required for the Smithsonian and the Museum exhibits, but exclusive of the special display of the Bureau of Ethnology, I estimate at $425,000, and in making this estimate I have taken into consideration the probable cost of each department of the work, and have arrived at the total by adding these amounts together. I do not know that a detailed statement is desired, but one can be supplied as soon as it is called for.

These estimates are based not only on the experience of the Museum at Philadelphia, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, and other American fairs, but also at the fishery exhibitions in Berlin and London, which, though not nominally connected with the Smithsonian Institution, were practically so, the Commissioner of Fisheries being at that time the Secretary of this Institution and the officer in immediate charge of its present assistant secretary, while very many of the workers were temporarily transferred from the Museum staff.

As I have already indicated, the cost of the earlier exhibitions was $3.50 to $5 per foot of floor space, but there are two important considerations which forbid us to expect that equally satisfactory results can now be accomplished at a proportionate cost. The first of these is the very obvious one of an enhanced scale of general prices in all directions, especially in that of labor. The second, that most of these exhibitions had been looked for long in advance and prepared with deliberate economy; while in the present case, if preparation could be begun to-morrow, the time would still be too short, and it will consequently be impossible to avoid such partial waste as always accompanies hurried action.

In conclusion, I desire to say that participation in such exhibitions is one of the greatest obstacles to the development of the National Museum, and inflicts immediate injury to its collections far greater than the mere damage of transportation to and fro. It is to be hoped, then, that Congress in estimating the cost will keep in mind the importance of replacing the collections in Washington in as favorable condition as if the interruption to the work had not occurred. On such occasions the mere absence of a large number of the responsible employees and the necessary temporary suspension of most of the ordinary activities of the museum would be nearly as grave an injury as the closing of its doors during the whole period.

For this there is no compensation, except in the increase in the collections which may result, and this is by no means an unmixed benefit since many of the objects added to the collection at such a time, however effective they may be in a temporary exhibition, seem crude and incongruous in a permanent museum.

Such considerations as these may, it seems to me, be kept prominently in mind in making an estimate of the amount required for such a participation in a great exhibition as may leave the permanent progress of the National Museum unimpaired.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

S. P. LANGLEY, Secretary.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 8.

UNITED STATES COMMISSION OF FISH AND FISHERIES,
Washington, D. C., March 11, 1890.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I have the honor to transmit herewith an estimate of the cost of preparing, placing, caring for, and returning such an exhibit of the fisheries and fishery resources of the United States as should, in my judgment, be made at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1892.

Such an exhibit should not only be an exposition of our fishery resources and of the present conditions, methods, and results of the fisheries, but should also show the origin, progress, present conditions, methods, and results of the inquiry in regard to food-fishes and the fishing-grounds, an inquiry which has been most fruitful in results, economical as well as scientific, and which has served as a model, a stimulus, and an inspiration to other nations seeking the best means for the utilization of the resources of their waters.

The exhibit should show also the beginning and progress, as well as the present conditions, of the commercial fisheries, the development of methods, apparatus, vessels, and boats to meet the exigencies arising from time to time.

It should show the origin and development of public fish-culture in the United States and the present conditions, methods, and results of the work of the United States Fish Commission.

The exhibit in its essential features would illustrate an industrial and economic evolution probably as distinctively characteristic of the genius of our people as is the evolution of our social and political institutions.

An adequate exhibit, worthy of the occasion and of this great nation, would require the expenditure of not less than $150,000 and would require for effective display a floor space of 40,000 square feet, distributed as follows:

	Square feet.
Objects of the fisheries.....	6,000
The fishing grounds, the vessels, apparatus, methods and results of the inquiry in regard to food-fishes.....	5,000
History, development, methods, apparatus, vessels, production, and statistics of the fisheries.....	20,000
Fish-culture, propagation, distribution, methods, apparatus, vessels, hatcheries, and statistics.....	5,000
Aquaria; salt and fresh water.....	4,000
Total.....	40,000

I regret that I have been delayed in furnishing the information asked for, but before making even approximate estimates I have found it necessary to consider the scope and arrangement of such an exhibit as would be required, and this has taken some time and labor.

Very respectfully,

M. McDONALD, Commissioner.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 9.

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY OFFICE,
Washington, March 4, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of a letter of February 26, addressed to you by Hon. JOHN W. CANDLEY, M. C., chairman of the World's Fair Committee, House of Representatives, requesting you to transmit estimates to cover expenses from all branches of the Government which may take part in the exhibition at Chicago in 1892, and referred to this office with your indorsement of March 1 instant, requesting an estimate of the cost of placing, caring for, and return, and also an estimate of floor space required by such an exhibit as it may be deemed advisable to make on the part of the Coast and Geodetic Survey at that exhibition.

In conformity with your request, I beg to state that it is estimated that the amount of $12,500 will be required to cover the cost of preparing, transporting, and caring for an adequate exhibit of the instruments, apparatus, publications, etc., of the Coast and Geodetic Survey at the Chicago exposition, and that such exhibit will require a floor space of 100 by 50 feet, or 5,000 square feet.

Very respectfully,

J. C. MENDENHALL, Superintendent.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 10.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING, March 8, 1890.

SIR: I am in receipt of a copy of a letter of Hon. JOHN W. CANDLEY, chairman World's Fair Committee, House of Representatives, referred by you to me under date of the 1st instant, with the request that the Department be furnished with an estimate of the cost of placing, caring for, and return of such an exhibit as should be made by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1892, and also an estimate of the floor and wall space required for said exhibit.

In reply I have the honor to state that in my judgment this bureau should make as complete and beautiful an exhibit of the engravings and securities executed by it as possible, and to do this will require the sum of $3,000. This amount will include the cost of preparing, placing, caring for, forwarding, and return of the exhibit. The exhibit which it is proposed to prepare will not need any wall space, but a floor space of 18 by 40 feet will be required.

Respectfully, yours,

WM. M. MEREDITH, Chief of Bureau.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

APPENDIX 11.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT
UNITED STATES LIFE-SAVING SERVICE,
Washington, D. C., March 11, 1890.

SIR: In reply to your request of the 1st instant for an estimate of the cost of placing, caring for, and returning such an exhibit of the Life-Saving Service at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1892 as in my judgment should be made, I have the honor to state that, according to the best estimate I can make, $18,500 will be required for the purpose. This amount includes the sum of $6,000 for the erection of a life-saving station building after the plans and specifications of one of our most approved stations and $5,000 for pay of a keeper and crew, both of which items are necessary to make a satisfactory exhibit. I have omitted an estimate of floor and wall space, as the building would afford all that is necessary.

Respectfully, yours,

S. J. KIMBALL, General Superintendent.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

WOMAN'S NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Mr. KERR, of Pennsylvania. I ask, by unanimous consent, that a letter which I have received from the president of the Woman's National Indian Association be printed in the RECORD, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The letter is as follows:

249 NORTH EIGHTEENTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, March 13, 1890.

DEAR SIR: Will you kindly permit me to say a word from my position as president of the Woman's National Indian Association, regarding the proposed removal of the Utes? I beg for the aid which I know you can bring to bear against that, as it seems to me, unjust and unwise measure. The worded argument pleads for the Utes' own good that they be removed to a mountain desert, where their home will not be coveted, where they will be at peace, and where they will have game for food, and thus be under no necessity of plowing. This is precisely what the friends of humanity do not want for any people, since it means simply continued barbarism, ignorance, helplessness, the utter absence of all progress, and thus a menace to their white neighbors wherever they are. In their present home there is enough good farming land on which to settle them all, leaving some surplus to be sold to white men, and Government competes faithfully carried out will lift them into civilization and citizenship, as has been done with other tribes.

So at least it seems to us women, who have for ten years done all we can for thus solving the Indian problem by civilizing and rendering self-supporting Indian savages.

May we not look to you, as a member from our State, as our ally and champion for this, as it seems to us, righteous object?

Believe me, yours most respectfully,

Mrs. AMELIA S. QUINTERS.

Hon. JAMES KERR.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE—URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced the passage of a bill (H. R. 7496) "to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890," with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill and amendments be ordered to be printed, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. KENNEDY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill (S. 1332) granting to the city of Colorado Springs, in the State of Colorado, certain lands therein described, for water reservoirs; when the Speaker signed the same.

And then, on motion of Mr. CRISP (at 4 o'clock and 24 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred, as follows:

ZUNI INDIAN AGENCY, NEW MEXICO.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting estimates of appropriations from the Secretary of the Interior for support of Indians and mittee o

Letter from the Carlisle,

Letter from the reservat

COMM

Letter from the priation
propriet

Letter
House o nel, the thereof, Committ

Letter much of floods or is reason the Chic
the resol
and Har

Letter a copy o against REPORT

Letter
road Co ceipts an ember on accou
31st day
Committ

Letter
a copy o estimate with acc

SALAI

Letter
the Sec clerks in to the C

GOVERN
Letter
resoluti Governm of the P Committ

Letter of the ex ending J required ations.

MEMOR

Under tions we
By Mr
the State to the Co
Also, n relative mittee o
Also, r questing in the St
Also, n
tive to th
Rivers an dians and pay of agent at the Zuni agency, New Mexico—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

INDIAN SCHOOL, CARLISLE, PA.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Interior for buildings for the Indian school, Carlisle, Pa.—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

SURVEYING SIOUX RESERVATIONS.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Interior for expenses of surveying the Sioux reservations—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

COMMISSION TO NEGOTIATE WITH UTE OF SOUTHERN COLORADO.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Interior to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the Southern Ute Commission—to the Committee on Appropriations.

WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT TUNNEL.

Letter from the Secretary of War, replying to the resolution of the House of the 10th instant, relative to the Washington Aqueduct tunnel, the liabilities of certain contractors engaged in the construction thereof, and the action of the Department in relation thereto—to the Committee on Appropriations.

FLOODS IN THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting in response to so much of the resolution of the House of the 15th instant in regard to floods on the Mississippi as requests the Secretary to report "if there is reason to apprehend unusual danger to human life," a report from the Chief Signal Officer, and in regard to other matters contained in the resolution promising further report—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

OLIVER W. THURMAN VS. UNITED STATES.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of the court in the case of Oliver W. Thurman against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims.

REPORT OF TREASURER WASHINGTON AND GEORGETOWN RAILWAY.

Letter from the president of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company, transmitting the treasurer's annual report of the receipts and disbursements of said company for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1889; also, a statement in detail of the expenditures made on account of the construction of the Seventh street cable road to the 31st day of December, 1889, and balance sheet January 1, 1890—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

REPAIRS UPON GOVERNMENT BUILDING AT SITKA.

Letter from the Attorney-General of the United States, transmitting a copy of a letter from the United States marshal for Alaska, making estimate of the cost of repairs upon the Government building at Sitka, with accompanying papers—to the Committee on Appropriations.

SALARIES OF CLERKS ADJUSTING ACCOUNTS OF SOLDIERS' HOME.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Second Comptroller recommending an increase in the salaries of clerks in his office engaged in adjusting accounts of the Soldiers' Home—to the Committee on Appropriations.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF SECURITIES OF PACIFIC RAILROADS.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a reply to the resolution of the House of the 15th instant inquiring whether the Government is the owner of any of the first-mortgage securities of any of the Pacific railroads that were aided by the Government, etc.—to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

EXPENSES OF THE COLLECTION OF REVENUE.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate of the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, showing the number of employes and the salaries required for each collection district—to the Committee on Appropriations.

MEMORIALS AND RESOLUTIONS OF STATE LEGISLATURES.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following memorials and resolutions were delivered to the Speaker and referred as follows:

By Mr. WILSON, of Washington: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to light-house on San Juan Passage—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to a light-house and fog-signal at Clallam Head—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, requesting that the surviving soldiers of the Indian war be granted lands in the State of Washington—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to the improvement of the Columbia River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to the improvement of the Upper Columbia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to an appropriation for public surveys—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relative to the improvement of the Cowlitz River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following resolution was delivered to the Speaker and referred as follows:

By Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts:

Resolved, That Tuesday, March 25, immediately after the approval of the Journal, be set apart for the consideration in the House of the bill (H. R. 8393) "to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois;" and that, unless previously ordered by the House, the previous question shall be deemed ordered on the engrossment, third reading, and final passage of the bill at 4 o'clock p.m. of that day; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. SPRINGER:

Resolved, That Wednesday, March 25 next, after sixty minutes of the morning hour shall have passed, the House will take up and consider in the House the several bills providing for the admission of Wyoming, Idaho, New Mexico, and Arizona as States into the Union in the order named, and that this order shall continue from day to day thereafter until all such bills shall have consideration and final action. This order, however, shall not interfere with revenue or appropriation bills, but when entered upon it shall not be interfered with by other business until all of such bills are finally disposed of by the House, and at least one day shall be allowed for the consideration of each bill;

to the Committee on Rules.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, the following reports were filed, and, with accompanying bills, ordered to be printed, and referred as follows:

Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 6599) for the relief of George Turner;

A bill (H. R. 2373) for the relief of Eva Moore, Henry Carlton, and Maud Carlton, children of General James H. Carlton;

A bill (H. R. 6019) for the relief of Luther M. Blockman;

A bill (S. 150) for the relief of William Clift; and

A bill (S. 292) for the relief of C. M. Shaffer.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee, also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 6018) for the relief of Thomas B. McElwee—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. SIMONDS, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the bill (S. 181) for the relief of the estate of Thomas Niles, deceased—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 7472) for the relief of Robert Travila, for the loss of carbine in late war; and

A bill (S. 862) for the relief of John W. Gummo.

Mr. THOMAS also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union:

A bill (S. 288) to refund to the State of West Virginia the money paid to officers of the One hundred and thirty-third Regiment West Virginia Militia for services rendered during the rebellion; and

A bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of War to issue ordnance and ordnance stores to the State of Washington in payment for ordnance and ordnance stores borrowed by the State of Oregon of said State whilst a Territory, during the Nez Percé Indian war of 1877 and 1878, and for other purposes.

Mr. THOMAS also, from the Committee on War Claims, reported, as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 7242) for the relief of William D. Matthews, a bill (H. R. 8392) for the relief of William D. Matthews; which substitute was read twice, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts, from the Select Committee on the World's Fair, reported, as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 6883) to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of — in the year 1893, a bill (H. R. 8393) to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois; which substitute was read twice, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 5729) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Oconee River, in the State of Georgia—to the House Calendar.

Mr. OSBORNE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 5323) to authorize the President to restore Tenedor Ten Eyck to his former rank in the Army, and to place him on the retired-list of Army officers—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 2150) for the relief of W. B. Morrow—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURTON, from the Committee on War Claims, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 2238) for the relief of Robert Woodbridge—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LIND, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 7164) to amend and continue in force "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Forest City, S. Dak., by the Forest City and Watertown Railway Company," approved August 6, 1888—to the House Calendar.

Mr. ROBERTSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 2322) to amend and correct the military record of Frank M. Vowels and readjust his accounts for pay—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. OSBORNE, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported with amendment the joint resolution (H. Res. 55) directing the names of sharpshooters and Military Service Institution medalists shall be inscribed in the Army Register, and authorizing the wearing of their decorations by such medalists—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURTON, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the bill (S. 237) for the relief of Maj. William M. Maynadier, a paymaster in the United States Army—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 7990) to amend Rules and Articles of War 79 and 90, and to improve the administration of justice in the Army—to the House Calendar.

Mr. QUACKENBUSH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (S. 1306) for the erection of a public building at Hudson, N. Y.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and a joint resolution of the following titles were delivered to the Speaker, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CUTCHEON: A bill (H. R. 8394) to amend chapter 67, volume 23, of the Statutes at Large of the United States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RAY: A bill (H. R. 8395) for the improvement of the Youghiogney River between McKeesport and Connellsville, Pa.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8396) to fix the compensation of the supervising special agent of the Treasury Department—to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department.

By Mr. VANDEVER: A bill (H. R. 8397) to authorize an investigation of insect and other pests and diseases that assail fruits and vines, to ascertain remedies, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. DAVIDSON: A bill (H. R. 8398) to provide an American register for the wrecking and towing steamer Scythian, of Pensacola, Fla.—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 8399) to increase the efficiency of the Army and militia—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BURTON: A bill (H. R. 8400) to provide for the lighting of St. Mary's River—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HOUK: A joint resolution (H. Res. 129) to arbitrate and settle the questions at issue between the District of Columbia and Samuel Strong—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were delivered to the Clerk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOUTELLE (by request of Mr. REED, of Maine): A bill (H. R. 8401) to relieve James E. Traffen from the charge of desertion—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8402) for the relief of William Millican—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS M. BROWNE: A bill (H. R. 8403) granting a pension to Elvira Macy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTTERWORTH: A bill (H. R. 8404) for the relief of Barbara Berger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8405) to relieve George Easton from the charge of desertion—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8406) for the relief of Peter Eichels—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8407) to compensate Enoch Jacobs for services rendered to the Department of State—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8408) granting a pension to Eleanor Junkin Francis, child of Capt. John Junkin—to the Committee on Pensions. Also, a bill (H. R. 8409) granting a pension to Andrew Kummer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8410) granting a pension to Jacob Wittenback—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CARUTH: A bill (H. R. 8411) to pension Margaret Figg—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CATCHINGS: A bill (H. R. 8412) for the relief of Alfred Smith—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: A bill (H. R. 8413) authorizing the President to appoint and retire Edward W. Serrell with the rank and grade of colonel—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELLIS: A bill (H. R. 8414) for the relief of Margaret J. Bailey—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FITHIAN: A bill (H. R. 8415) placing Joseph B. Berry on the pension-rolls as a second lieutenant—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 8416) granting a pension to Ellen Breen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8417) granting a pension to Peter Devlin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8418) granting a pension to Huldah A. Dow—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8419) granting a pension to Hannah English—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8420) granting a pension to Thomas Fagan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8421) granting a pension to William H. Terry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8422) granting a pension to Rudolph Morand—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8423) granting a pension to Ernst Mueller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8424) granting a pension to Patrick O'Keefe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8425) granting a pension to John Schebler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8426) granting a pension to George R. Wells—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8427) granting a pension to John W. Wells—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8428) granting a pension to Joseph H. Welty—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAWS (by request): A bill (H. R. 8429) to increase the pension of William P. Squire—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 8430) granting an increase of pension to Julia H. Totten, widow of James Totten, late a brigadier-general United States Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILES: A bill (H. R. 8431) granting a pension to Sarah Ann Noe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAY: A bill (H. R. 8432) granting a pension to Mary Henderson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 8433) granting a pension to Ebenezer Beebe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHIVELY: A bill (H. R. 8434) granting a pension to Charity A. Carey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8435) for the relief of the heirs of Dr. John H. Long—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8436) granting a pension to James M. Wallace—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STONE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8437) for the relief of J. B. Groom—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STRUBLE: A bill (H. R. 8438) granting a pension to Esther Walker, formerly Esther Dayton, a nurse in the late war—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WHITING: A bill (H. R. 8439) for the relief of the minor children of the late Charles R. Clements—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8440) granting a pension to Mrs. Henrietta M. Gregg—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8441) for the relief of John B. Hinks—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8442) granting a pension to Joseph Wilt, of Yale, Mich.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8443) for the relief of Jesse C. Myers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8444) granting muster and pay and allowance of captain of cavalry to Michael Sheehy from June 13, 1864, to March 25, 1866—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8445) granting a pension to Solomon Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. YODER: A bill (H. R. 8446) to increase the pension of Edward Healy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE: A joint resolution (H. Res. 130) authorizing George H. Scidmore, vice-consul-general of the United States at Kanagawa, Japan, to accept and wear a medal conferred upon him by the Emperor of Japan—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the following change of reference was made:

A bill (H. R. 4782) for the relief of the legal representatives of Samuel Noble—Committee on the Judiciary discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were delivered to the Clerk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BLISS: Petition of C. C. Ellsworth and 237 others, citizens of Greenville, Mich., praying passage of the per diem pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Caroline Schmelyer, for pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROSIUS (by request): Petition of Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, relating to the employment of citizens of the United States in the erection of public buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CALDWELL: Petition of Subordinate Union No. 1, Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, for the passage of laws securing to citizens of the United States the right to labor on public works in preference to aliens—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CLARK, of Wisconsin: Petition of the officers of the Appleton Turnverein and of 900 citizens of the city of Appleton, Wis., protesting against any material change in immigration and naturalization laws—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CONGER: Concurrent resolution of the Iowa Legislature for the passage of a pure-lard bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, protest of 150 citizens of the Seventh Congressional district of Iowa, members of Des Moines Turner Society, against any material change in our present national immigration laws—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DORSEY: Memorial from Congregational churches in Nebraska, for appointment of additional chaplains in United States Army—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Society of Friends, of Sheldon County, against increased appropriations for the Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. FORNEY: Petitions of William Ballenger, administrator; John S. Miller, Martha M. Wood, and Abraham W. Weaver, of Alabama, praying for the reference of their respective claims to the Court of Claims under the provisions of the Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HARE: Memorial of the Chickasaws, relating to lands of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HAYES: Joint resolution of the Legislature of Iowa, praying for the repeal of the limitations contained in pension act of 1879—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, joint resolution of same body, for immediate construction of Hennepin Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. JOSEPH: Petition from citizens of Farmington, N. Mex., praying for the restoration of silver to its constitutional place as a money metal—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. KINSEY: Petitions of 55 citizens of the State of Missouri, against any material change or alteration of present naturalization laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LANE: Petition of B. F. Kirk and others, for free coinage of silver and other relief—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition of Willy Garline and others, for same relief—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. LAWS: Seven petitions, containing 392 names, of citizens of Nebraska, against any material alteration of existing immigration and naturalization laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, memorial of Nebraska Congregational Church Association, protesting against doing away with army chaplains and asking appointment of one for each army post—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McCORD: A remonstrance of Frank Steiskul and 55 others, citizens of Kewaunee, Wis., against any material change in the naturalization and immigration laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, remonstrance of Messrs. Schofield & Co., of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., against increasing the duty on tin-plate—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, remonstrance of Levi Martin, J. R. Sharp, and Webb & Stansbury, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., for same purpose—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MASON: Petition of 200 citizens of Illinois, asking for a Sunday-rest law—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. OUTHWAITE: Petition of Union No. 21 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America against alien labor on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. PAYNE: Petition of Sons of Veterans, Port Byron, N. Y., for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Wayne County, New York, for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PETERS: Petition of citizens of Liberal, Kans., for an appropriation for improving grades of sorghum cane—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PICKLER: Petition of Black Hills (South Dakota) Woman's Christian Temperance Union, asking that the large expenditure of Naval Committee, recommending large appropriations for Navy and so-called coast defenses, be not allowed—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RAY: Petition of 600 citizens of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, for the improvement of the Youghiogheny River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ROCKWELL: Petition of Bricklayers' Union, North Adams, Mass., for employment of native-born Americans only upon public works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of M. W. Gibbs, of Arkansas, against taxing cotton-seed oil—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHIVELY: Resolutions of London Post, No. 290, Grand Army of the Republic, of Knox County, Indiana, and of Hon. George W. Beamon and 300 others, citizens of Stark County, Indiana, asking for the early passage of the service and arrears pension bills—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of O. B. Rockwell and 60 others, citizens of Stark County, Indiana, praying for the passage of the service and arrears pension bills—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Isaac Bascom and 50 others, citizens of same place, for same measures—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of Charity A. Carey, of Michigan City, Ind., asking the passage of a special pension bill for her relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STAHLNECKER: Petition of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation for the establishment of a telegraph service as part of the United States postal service—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions from Hartly Post, No. 451, Grand Army of the Republic, Iowa, urging the passage of the service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions from Rock Forest Alliance, No. 1188, of Patterson, Clay County, Iowa, urging the passage of House bill 5353 to prohibit option gambling, futures, etc.—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions from Smithland (Iowa) Alliance, for same purpose—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SWENEY: Petition of H. H. Hassler and 7 others, letter-carriers at Findlay, Ohio, for the passage of House bill 3863—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. THOMPSON: Petition of 594 soldiers and citizens of Gervais, Scioto County, Ohio, for passage of per diem pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of T. Lewis Post, No. 560, Grand Army of the Republic, of Ohio, for same relief—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALLACE, of Massachusetts: Petition of Subordinate Union, No. 2, of Holyoke, Mass., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, protesting against the employment of aliens on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, March 20, 1890.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting an estimate of appropriation for incorporation in the District of Columbia appropriation bill for the pavement of Florida avenue between Tenth and Eleventh streets, northwest, with sheet asphalt; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of March 11, 1890, correspondence between Lieutenant-General P. H. Sheridan and Brig. Gen. George Crook in regard to the Apache Indians, between March 26 and April 5, 1886, inclusive; which, with accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HAWLEY subsequently said: Certain papers from the War Department relative to the Apache Indians were by mistake referred to the Military Committee. I ask that they be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made, in the absence of objection.

COURT OF CLAIMS REPORT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed by that court in the spoliation claim of the brig Experience; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial and protest of the chief and delegates of the Cherokee Nation, remonstrating against the passage of the Oklahoma bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PLATT subsequently said: Before I came into the Senate this morning I understand that there was a memorial presented from the Cherokee Nation, or perhaps from Chief Mayes in their behalf—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was a memorial of the chief and delegates of the Cherokee Nation.

Mr. PLATT. Relating to their land and what is proposed to be done in the creating of the Territory of Oklahoma. The memorial was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. As that matter is now before a conference, I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Territories.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made, if there be no objection.

Mr. PLATT. I supposed that the memorial had been ordered to be printed, but I find that it has not been. I move that an order be made that it be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VOORHEES presented a petition of Subordinate Lodge No. 5 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., praying for legislation whereby none but citizens of the United States shall be employed in the construction of public works; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a memorial of the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of what is known as the Edmunds inspection bill for hog products intended for export.

I also present the memorial of the Pork-Packers' Association of St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the passage of this bill, for the following reasons:

We think the bill unnecessary and in some of its features decidedly injurious to the business of stock-raising and curing of hog products, more injurious even than the German and French prohibition.

It is virtually a public acknowledgment that our product is not good or put up properly, which is not a fact, and is calculated to cast a shadow of doubt over one of the most important productions of the United States.

It says, "No meat should pass inspection that is not sixty days in salt or pickle," making it totally unfit for the English trade, and would cut us off and close the most valuable market we now have.

It forces the packers and exporters to have all their meats intended for export inspected on the Atlantic coast, making the great packing points of the West pay tribute in place of shipping by through bill of lading direct to European points, causing delay, injury to the property, vexation, and expense.

We think it unwise for the United States at this particular time to pass any law on this subject. We are now having the best export demand for hog products that we have had for three years, and any legislation at this moment would be a serious check and possibly a fatal mistake.

The time may arrive when our Government can make reciprocal commercial treaties with European governments that will open the ports of Europe to our hog products and bring about an exchange of the products of the world on a fair basis. When that time comes it may be necessary to make such general regulations for inspection, etc., as may suit all.

The following resolution was also adopted, to wit:

That the chairman of this meeting appoint a committee of five to consult and act in harmony on the above subject with committees that may be appointed by other bodies in the West.

I move that the memorials be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The memorials will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, if there be no objection.

Mr. MORGAN. It is due to the Committee on Foreign Relations to state that yesterday they heard a very extended argument and presentation of the facts and propositions from what purported to be a representative selection from all of the packers and a number of the exporters of the United States, and I think that that subject will have due consideration by the committee.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to make a correction. From the statements made of these petitions, some of which have been sent to me, it is evident that they contain a misrepresentation of the bill, representing it to be exactly the reverse of what it is. The bill provides that meats which have been salted for sixty days need not be re-inspected; and the only modification which is proposed by the gentlemen interested in the trade from all parts of the United States, after a week's notice, in order to enable them to come here—the only change they wish to make is in a single section of the bill, and that change is that the section be so limited that the requisition for an inspection shall only apply to a country that objects to our meat on account of its not being inspected before exportation. All they wanted and the only change they proposed—I say this in defense of the committee—was to confine the application of the first section to countries which require, as a matter of law and custom, an inspection at the place of exportation.

Mr. COCKRELL. As I understand, this protest is against the passage of any law upon this subject, and I understand that the presentations before the committee yesterday were also against the propriety of any law, but that if a law was enacted it ought to be restricted to those countries that require an inspection before exportation.

Mr. SHERMAN. They have no objection to the law at all. They say they inspect themselves. What I wish to correct is that the petitioners, no doubt honestly, have been misled by the statements in the public prints, which have entirely misrepresented the bill. The provisions of it are exactly the opposite to what they state and what has been stated in petitions sent to me. The bill relieves of inspection in all cases where the meat has been salted sixty days before exportation, and these petitions say just the reverse, that it requires that all meats shall be inspected.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think so. I should like to ask the Senator if the hearing before the Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday will be printed, so that we may have it.

Mr. SHERMAN. The testimony of all the gentlemen who were before the committee will be printed, probably to-day or to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The memorials will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. McPHERSON. I present a petition of Subordinate Lodge No. 17, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, at Trenton, N. J., praying that the laws be so amended as to provide that none but citizens of the United States be employed on all Government work, whether let by contract or otherwise. I also present a like petition from another subordinate union, No. 9, of that place; also, a like petition of Subordinate Union No. 12, of Passaic, N. J.; also, one from Subordinate Union No. 20, of Atlantic City, N. J., of like import.

I move that these petitions be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COKE presented a petition of citizens of Texas, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 5, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., praying for the passage of such laws as will secure to citizens the right to labor on Government works in preference to aliens; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. BLODGETT. I present a petition of Subordinate Union No. 17, of Trenton, N. J., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, praying for the enactment of laws that will secure to citizens of the United States the right to labor on Government work in preference to aliens. I also present two other petitions from subordinate unions of the same association located in Orange and Passaic, N. J., making the same request. I move that these petitions be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VEST. I present a memorial of the Carpenters' Council of St. Louis, Mo., remonstrating against the ratification of the treaty with Russia, if such a treaty is now pending, of which I say nothing. I move that the memorial be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PAYNE presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 21 of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union, of Columbus, Ohio; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 24 of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union, of Findlay, Ohio; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 12 of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union of East Liverpool, Ohio, praying for legislation to exclude aliens from employment on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CULLOM presented a memorial of the North American Turnbund of Danville, Ill., remonstrating against the passage of any measure designed to change materially the present laws on immigration and naturalization; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 15, of Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Masons' International Union of America; a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 18, of Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Masons' International Union of America; a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 7, of Akron, Ohio, of the Masons' International Union of America; a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 12, of East Liverpool, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America; a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 21, of Columbus, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, and a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 24, of Findlay, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, remonstrating against the employment of aliens on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of Dan Brown Post, No. 380, Department of Ohio, Grand Army of the Republic, remonstrating against the passage of the dependent-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Mahoning County, Ohio, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALLEN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF WASHINGTON,
Office of the Secretary of State.

I, Allen Weir, secretary of state of the State of Washington and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the attached instrument of writing, i. e., senate joint memorial No. 16, relative to light-house and fog-signal at Clallam Head, with the original now on file in my office, and that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said State, at Olympia, this 17th day of February, A. D. 1890.

ALLEN WEIR, Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial No. 16.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Washington, would respectfully urge upon your honorable body the necessity of an appropriation from the national Treasury, for the purpose of erecting a light-house and fog-signal at Clallam Head, a promontory on the shore of Fuca Strait, about 30 miles eastward, and inland from Tatoosh light-house, at the entrance of said Fuca Strait.

In support of the urgent proposition herein contained, your memorialists would respectfully cite the following facts:

First. On entering Fuca Strait ships and tow-steamers soon lose sight of the Tatoosh light, and, if the wind happens to be unfavorable, soon pass out of hearing of the fog-signal on Tatoosh Island. The next lights to be sighted or fog-signals to be heard are those at Port Angeles, on the American shore, and Race Rocks, on the British shore, a distance of 60 miles or more. In stormy or foggy weather or on dark nights, it is often perilous to attempt the "run" between these given points as at present without any aid to navigation.

Second. A light-house and fog-signal at Clallam Head would not only be seen and heard by vessels passing either out of or into said Strait of Fuca, but would be a guide to a reasonably safe harbor of refuge in almost all kinds of stormy weather. Clallam Bay, formed by the shore-line curving inland from Clallam Head, is frequently sought by storm-bound vessels in cases where daylight serves to reveal its location.

Third. The dangers to shipping herein recited are dangers that affect all the shipping of Puget Sound in its communication with the outer world, and its magnitude, in some respects being second only to that of New York, renders the subject one of national importance.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Passed the senate January 10, 1890.

CHAS. E. LAUGHTON,
President of the Senate.

Passed the house January 13, 1890.

J. W. FEIGHAN,
Speaker of the House.

Mr. ALLEN presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Port Townsend, Wash., praying that that city may be designated as a place for holding the United States district court in the State of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented two petitions of citizens of Sehome and Whatcom, Wash., praying for the passage of an act making Sehome a suburb of entry; which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CASEY presented a petition of 31 citizens of North Dakota, praying that Congress will appropriate money for the development of irrigation in that State; which was referred to the Select Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

Mr. PADDOCK. I present nine memorials signed by over 300 members of the Farmers' Alliance of Nebraska, remonstrating against the passage of the Union Pacific funding bill, demanding that the Attorney-General shall take steps to enforce laws violated by the company, and stating that the extension of time for payment of the debt of the company is in the nature of an additional subsidy and ought not to be granted.

As the bill is on the Calendar, I move that the memorial lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. EVARTS presented a petition of 55 citizens of Rome, N. Y., praying for the passage of the Blair educational bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Collins Monthly Meeting of Friends, numbering 79 persons, of Erie County, New York, remonstrating against increased expenditures in the Navy and so-called coast defenses, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 23 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Elmira, N. Y.; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 43 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Binghamton, N. Y.; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 6 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Albany, N. Y.; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 37 (1,050 members) of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of New York City, N. Y.; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 9 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a petition of Subordinate Union No. 1 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for such an amendment of the laws as will require the employment of citizens of the United States only on all Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I present petitions from sundry citizens of Vermont, praying for legislation requiring transatlantic vessels to furnish cold-storage accommodations for American products that require it. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I present a petition signed by 105 citizens of Lane County, Oregon, in which they represent that, in their judgment, the demonetization of silver, by which the money standard of the country was changed from gold and silver to gold alone, was an act uncalled for by the people, and one which has worked great wrong to the producing and industrial interests of the country by restricting the money supply and increasing the value of gold, thus forcing down, they say, prices of all commodities to the detriment of the great body of the people, and they pray Congress for the restoration of silver to its constitutional place as a money metal, with the same rights of coinage and legal tender as are now accorded to gold and as existed from the foundation of the Government down to 1873, and they say if this is done "they will ever pray."

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I present a memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Port Townsend, in the State of Washington, praying Congress for such legislation as will cause the United States district court for the district of Washington to be held in the city of Port Townsend. I think a bill on this subject has passed, and I therefore move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES presented a petition of citizens of Salem, county of Essex, Massachusetts, praying that labor performed on public works shall be done by American citizens, and not by aliens; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PASCO presented a petition of the veteran soldiers of Chatfield Post, No. 11, Department of Florida, Grand Army of the Republic, now holding their meetings in one of the casemates of Fort Marion, praying for a grant of the lot of ground in the city of St. Augustine on which the old building known as the "King's Forge" stands, so that they may have a permanent location upon which they may erect a building wherein to hold the meetings of the post; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of ex-soldiers of the Union Army and members of Abraham Lincoln Post, No. 4, Department of Colorado and Wyoming, Grand Army of the Republic, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the county commissioners of Montrose County, Colorado, praying that an appropriation be made for a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. STEWART presented 32 petitions, signed by 1,100 members of the Farmers' Alliance and citizens of Nebraska, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition adopted at a mass convention of citizens of Sumner County, held at Wood's Opera-House, in Wellington, Kans., praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition adopted at a regular meeting of the Low, Wallace Post, No. 50, Department of Nebraska, Grand Army of the Republic, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the Pioneer Farmers' Alliance, No. 14, of Patterson, Kans., praying for the passage of what is known as the Vance bill, to establish agricultural depositories for the storage of grain and other produce; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Badger Creek, Lyon County, Kansas, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Prairie View Farmers' Alliance, No. 590, of Glasgow, Kans., praying that an appropriation be made for a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Saline County Farmers' and Industrial Union of Kansas, praying for certain financial and other legislation; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of old soldiers of Gray County, Kansas, praying for the repeal of the limitation in the arrears-of-pension act, and that the service and disability pension bills be passed; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Monthly Meeting of Friends, held at Emporia, Lyon County, Kansas, remonstrating against appropriations for the Navy and coast defenses; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the stockmen's convention, held at Sedalia, Mo., praying for certain legislation to prevent the spread of Texas or splenic fever among cattle; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 25 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Salem, Mass., and a petition of Subordinate Union No. 13 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Lowell, Mass., praying for an amendment of the law so as to secure to citizens of the United States the right to labor on Government works in preference to aliens; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HOAR. I also present a petition of sundry dealers in canned lobster, doing business in Boston, Mass., being, as I am informed, some forty or fifty very important firms, and engaged in the importation of fish and other products, praying that no legislation may be had to affect the tariff on these articles. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WILSON, of Maryland, presented a petition of John Kane, president, and William B. Nolan, secretary, for and in behalf of Subordinate Union No. 3, of Baltimore, Md., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, praying for the employment of citizens of the United States in preference to aliens on Government works; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. MCPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 954) authorizing the construction of a public building at Burlington, Iowa, with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 749) for the erection of a public building at York, Pa., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2960) to authorize the building of a bridge at Pine Bluff, Ark., across the Arkansas River, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2965) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, reported adversely thereon.

Mr. HARRIS. Let that bill go upon the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed upon the Calendar with the adverse report.

Mr. VEST, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2303) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved April 24, 1888, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. DOLPH, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 629) making an appropriation for the establishment of a life-saving station and providing for a life-saving crew at Port Orford, in the State of Oregon, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 467) to establish additional life-saving stations, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. DOLPH. As a substitute for the bills just reported adversely, I report from the same committee a bill which I ask may be placed on the Calendar.

The bill (S. 3190) to establish additional life-saving stations was read twice by its title.

Mr. DOLPH. By direction of the same committee, I report back adversely the bill (S. 927) making an appropriation for the removal of the hull of the wrecked Silvia de Gras from the channel of the Columbia River, opposite Upper Astoria, Oregon. I report this bill adversely because the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War have reported that there is a section in the river and harbor appropriation bill of 1880 authorizing that to be done and making an appropriation for it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely, unless objection be made.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3080) providing for the construction of a military store-house and offices for Army purposes at the Omaha Military Depot, Nebraska, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1406) making appropriation for extending and repairing the military quarters at Fort Abraham Lincoln, North Dakota, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred resolutions of the Legislative Assembly of North Dakota, praying for the maintenance of Fort Abraham Lincoln as a military post, asked to be discharged from their further consideration; which was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1762) to change the boundaries of the Uncompahgre reservation, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7754) granting right of way to Little Falls, Mille Lacs and Lake Superior Railroad across Mille Lacs Indian reservation, reported it with amendments.

Mr. FRYE, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3064) to establish a fog-signal at or near the Cuckolds Island, at the entrance to Booth Bay Harbor, otherwise known as Townsend Harbor, Maine, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 119) requesting the Secretary of War to cause a further report to be made as to the practicability and approximate cost of tunneling the Detroit River at or near Detroit, Mich., reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3131) for the registry or enrollment of the barges Herdis and Agostinoc, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 460) making an appropriation for the purchase of a site and the construction of a first-order light-house at the mouth of the Coquille River, on the Pacific Ocean, reported it with amendments.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2844) providing for the erection of range-lights and steam fog-whistle on Plum Island in Lake Michigan, reported it without amendment.

Mr. TELLER, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1395) to amend sections 2275 and 2276 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3040) to establish a public park to be called and known as the Royal Arch Park, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2845) to establish a public park at Pagosa Springs, in the State of Colorado, reported it with amendments.

Mr. HAWLEY. The bill (S. 2941) granting the buildings and four sections of land at Fort Sisseton to the State of South Dakota for the use of the militia of the State was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. That property has been abandoned as a military post and the lands have been turned over to the Interior Department. I therefore ask that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the bill, and that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made in the absence of objection.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1171) to incorporate the East Washington Street Railway Company, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1846) restoring the timber-culture right of Armor H. Worthington, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2580) to vacate the location of the right of way made by the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company through the southeast quarter of section 33, township 12, range 3 west, in the Indian Territory, reported adversely thereon.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent that that bill may go to the Calendar notwithstanding the adverse report.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go to the Calendar with the adverse report.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1528) for the removal of the charge of desertion standing against Alfred Shell, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report accompanied by a bill (S. 3191) for the relief of Albert Shell; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. PLUMB, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report, accompanied by a bill (S. 3192) for the relief of John R. Blankenship; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 139) for the erection of a public building in the city of San José, State of California, reported it without amendment.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL.

Mr. PLUMB. The Committee on Public Lands instruct me to request that the bill (S. 2907) to grant the Mesilla Valley Irrigation and Land Company the right of way for an irrigating ditch across the Fort Selden military reservation, in New Mexico, be recommitted to the Committee on Public Lands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made.

CHIEF-JUSTICE FULLER'S ADDRESS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back favorably a House concurrent resolution and ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and concurred in, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 25,000 copies of the address of Chief-Justice Fuller, delivered December 11, 1886, on the occasion of the commemoration of the inauguration of George Washington, the first President of the United States, of which 16,000 copies shall be for the use of the House, 8,000 for the use of the Senate, and 1,000 for the use of the Chief-Justice.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am also directed by the Committee on Printing to report back adversely the concurrent resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL] December 16, 1889, and ask that it be indefinitely postponed, the object having been reached by the last resolution, which was adopted.

The following resolution, submitted by Mr. CALL December 16, 1889, was postponed indefinitely:

Resolved, That 10,000 copies of the address of the Chief-Justice of the United States on the centennial of the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States be printed, of which 3,000 shall be for the Senate and 7,000 for the House of Representatives.

MELBOURNE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION REPORTS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution submitted by myself January 6, 1890, in relation to the Melbourne International Exhibition reports, to report the same back favorably and ask for its present consideration. I will say that this is a resolution authorizing the printing of the reports of the United States commissioners to the Melbourne Industrial Exhibition of 1883. They have been printed under the order of the Senate, and I have here a communication from the Secretary of State in which he calls attention to the important subject-matter involved, and ask that extra copies be printed for distribution, including some for the State Department. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to have the reports of the United States commissioners to the centennial international exhibition at Melbourne, 1883, or such of them as may be accepted by him for publication, printed and bound at the Congressional Printing Office, and that, in addition to the usual number, there shall be 600 extra copies for the use of the Senate, 1,200 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,200 for the use of the Department of State.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. VOORHEES introduced a bill (S. 3193) to amend the record of William H. Hamlet; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3194) granting a pension to Joseph H. Scopmire; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3195) granting increase of pension to Henry Reiter; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 3196) granting an increase of pension to Michael McGarvey; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL. In connection with that bill I present the petition of Michael McGarvey, and also the affidavits of Nicholas Mathias, S. D. Barlow, jr., J. T. Gifford, Thomas J. Scott, William C. Evans, Benjamin Lea, Thomas Bass, sr., and T. J. Scott, and ask that they all be received, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They will be so referred.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 3197) granting a pension to Virginia A. Owen, widow of John Owen, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL. In connection with that bill I present the petition of M. W. Thompson, Henry Ratliff, J. R. Gladden, and 8 other neighbors, and the affidavits of John C. Culley, Aug. Crumbaugh, Alonzo Gitting, and W. P. Pollock, and ask that they be received and referred to the Committee on Pensions with the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The papers will be so referred.

Mr. STEWART introduced a bill (S. 3198) to provide for the disposal of the abandoned military reservations in Wyoming Territory; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3199) to authorize entry of the public lands by incorporated towns for cemetery and park purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3200) to authorize the purchase of certain public lands by the city of Buffalo, Wyo., and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. SHERMAN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3201) for the relief of the estate of John H. Piatt, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McMILLAN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3202) extending the criminal jurisdiction of the circuit and district courts to the Great Lakes and their connecting waters; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MOODY introduced a bill (S. 3203) to fix the rank and pay of veterinary surgeons, United States Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 3204) granting a pension to Frank B. Weed; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3205) for the relief of Harrison Flora; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. STEWART introduced a bill (S. 3206) for the relief of the estate of James T. Sanford, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. VEST, by request, introduced a bill (S. 3207) granting a pension to Jesse G. King; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 3208) to amend section 4787 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

GOVERNMENT LOANS ON REAL ESTATE.

Mr. STANFORD. On the 10th of this month I introduced a resolution, Miscellaneous Document 104, which was laid on the table by request. I now desire that that resolution shall be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Finance if there be no objection. The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HORATIO PHILLIPS VAN CLEVE.

Mr. WASHBURN. If there be no further morning business, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 826) for the relief of Horatio Phillips Van Cleve.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. HARRIS. Let the bill be read for information, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment of the Committee on Military Affairs, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

That the laws regulating appointments in the Army be, and they are hereby suspended, and suspended only for the purposes of this act; and the President is hereby authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint Horatio Phillips Van Cleve, late a major-general of volunteers in the Army of the United States, a second lieutenant, and thereupon to place him, the said Horatio Phillips Van Cleve, upon the retired-list of the Army, with the rank and grade of second lieutenant, without regard and in addition to the number now authorized by law of said retired-list: Provided, That from and after such nomination and appointment no pension shall be paid to the said Horatio Phillips Van Cleve, but this proviso shall be no bar to any claim for pension that the widow or children or heirs of the said Horatio Phillips Van Cleve may have after his decease.

Mr. HARRIS. Is the bill reported by the Committee on Military Affairs?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been reported by the Committee on Military Affairs with the amendment which has been read. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AID TO COMMON SCHOOLS.

Mr. INGALLS. Understanding that the Senator from Tennessee who is entitled to the floor [Mr. BATE] is ready to proceed, I move that the Senate at this time proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 185) to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MOODY], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] is entitled to the floor.

[Mr. BATE withholds his remarks for revision. See Appendix.]

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER). The Chair will lay before the Senate and have read the order made at a former day's session.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unanimous order then made will be read.

The Secretary read as follows from the proceedings of Wednesday, March 12, 1890, as published in the RECORD of March 13:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will restate the proposition. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that on Thursday of next week, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, all debate shall cease upon the bill and the amendments pending, except such remarks as the Senator from New Hampshire shall desire to make himself, not to exceed one hour, and that, at the conclusion of his speech, the vote shall be taken upon the pending amendments, and all amendments that may be thereafter offered to be subject to debate under the five-minute rule. Is that the proposition?

Mr. BLAIR. That is the way I mean to be understood.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BLAIR. It is the understanding that it applies to one week from to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thursday of next week.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the unanimous order adopted at that session of the Senate the Chair will recognize the Senator from New Hampshire as now entitled to the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. I request the Senator from New Hampshire and the Chair to allow me to ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to modify that order in this respect: My colleague [Mr. BATE] has consumed ten or more minutes of the time under that order which belonged to the Senator from New Hampshire. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from New Hampshire shall have the full hour, notwithstanding the consent heretofore agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Tennessee to make the request?

Mr. BLAIR. Does the Senator desire to repeat it or consider that he has made it?

Mr. HARRIS. I have made the request of the Senator from New Hampshire to yield to me for the purpose of making it.

Mr. BLAIR. I appreciate very highly the courtesy of the Senator, and, if I desired to speak, would be glad to avail myself of such unanimous consent for the extension of the time by the Senate, if the Senate should see fit to give it, but I do not propose to take the time of the Senate, and I shall not have occasion to ask for any extension of the order made by unanimous consent some days ago.

Mr. President, I do not desire to occupy and I shall not take the time of the Senate in any further talk upon this bill. I have done what I could to place the facts before the country and to submit this cause to the Senate, and I leave it there.

I will simply say, in reference to the remarks of the Senator who has just concluded [Mr. BATE], to which I have not been able, owing to the nature of other exactions upon my time, to listen any further than to perceive that he made a strong, eloquent, and able defense of his State against any intimations or any assertions and facts which may have been produced in this debate bearing upon the condition of education there, that I find, comparing his State with the State of Michigan, which is in population almost the same or was so by the last census, that Tennessee has a population of 1,542,359 and Michigan has a population of 1,636,937, and that during the year 1887-'88, in the two States, as shown by the same table and taking into consideration the same conditions, the expenditure in the State of Tennessee was $1,023,893 and in the State of Michigan the expenditure was $4,730,665, a proportion of a little less than between four and five dollars in the State of Michigan to an expenditure of one dollar in the State of Tennessee. I do not wish to say—

Mr. BATE. Will the Senator allow me a word in that connection?

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator excuse me a moment?

Mr. BATE. Will the Senator state in that connection how much public land Michigan had? How many million acres did she have out of which to gain that fund?

Mr. BLAIR. I am not dealing with the question who is to blame, but simply the fact as to the actual expenditure for education in the two States, for that is the only fact that to my mind, so far as expenditure is concerned, is at all pertinent to the merits of this bill. And it is no question between grown folks at all, but it is a question whether the children of the country are receiving the necessary education in the various States and Territories where they may reside. That is the only question that there is in this bill. All the matter that I have placed before the Senate, and that others have placed before the Senate, to my mind, in the last resort has application simply to that one issue, whether this generation in all portions of the country is doing its duty to the coming generation?

Mr. President, I have no desire to say anything further. I have no desire to talk when there is no necessity for it. I simply desire now that this question between the children of this country and the country itself may be decided upon its merits. I ask for a vote on the bill and the amendments.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am a little surprised by that request. I happen to know, and we all know, that Senators expected the debate would not close until 3 o'clock; that the Senator from New Hampshire was to have an hour, from 2 to 3 o'clock, and there are Senators who, on that account, are not here.

Mr. BLAIR. I can go on until 3 o'clock if it is necessary.

Mr. HAWLEY. Of course, I did not intimate that. I thought in the mean time we could take up some other bill.

Mr. BLAIR. I prefer to go on.

Mr. HAWLEY. Very well.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, the Book which is the written source of our sacred religion and accepted as of unquestioned verity in all its declarations informs us that "God made of one blood all the nations of the earth." And, although this proposition does not imply that in personal, family, and general social intercourse there may not and must not be both antipathies and affinities, yet it does imply that in natural powers there is so much of likeness, not to say equality, among all races of men that with the fair equalization of the conditions of action—equality before the law and equality in fact between individuals and communities in the practical administration of the law—all men are capable of high development and progress in all directions and in all things in which any are thus capable; that the soul is a unit, and that it always embraces in its sum the same parts, however differently developed and combined in the persons of individuals; that, however it may vary in degree, whatever in kind may be predicated of one race or person may be predicated or hoped for in another individual or race.

What the colored race has accomplished within twenty-five years last past is simply wonderful, and, in my belief, no race of men which ever inhabited the planet could have done more under the same circumstances. As a Northern man and a member of a race more numerous, and one dominant, but now co-ordinate with them before the law, I cheerfully accord to the colored people of our country this high tribute to their industry, capacity, and achievement. And I may also, with justice, here and now say for the seven millions of colored American citizens, that during the last quarter of a century they have abundantly demonstrated the wisdom of that Divine Power which ordained their freedom as the most precious fruit of the terrible struggle in which the North and the South expiated a common crime in fraternal blood.

But while I would do full justice to the patience, devotion, and enterprise of our colored fellow-citizens, as exhibited in the past and as prophesied for the future, I should neglect a great opportunity if I were to fail to present a few suggestions, which are not offered by me as one claiming to be their peculiar friend, to the exclusion of others, whether of their own race or of their white fellow-citizens, among whom, as now, by the decrees of a fortunate fate they must continue to live.

Our best friends should be those with whom our interests are immediately identified, and, although emigration may sometimes be a relief from evil, yet in a free country, where the resources of nature abound on every hand, as they do everywhere in our wonderful Southern land, unexhausted and even untouched, the best place for a man is that where he was born. If he suffers under adverse conditions he will do better to seek, and, if need be, demand by proper means their amelioration, rather than venture the loss of all by expatriation or removal to new and strange parts even of the same country. Too often it is, "distance lends enchantment to the view," and to transfer vast populations from one part of the country to another is almost impossible. It never should be necessary; and, if in any case it may seem to be so, yet in the end more immediate and substantial relief will generally be found in a patient but manly and determined effort to better one's condition where he already is.

The hard, naked truth is that this is a world of toil, and that whatever we get we must pay for in solid work.

The real difference between slavery and freedom is this: Slavery is work without pay; freedom is work with pay. Wherever we go we shall find this to be inexorably true. In our present free condition under the law, to receive a man's work and not to pay him is to rob him; to pay him less than a fair price is to rob him proportionately. When a man is paid only in part for his toil he is a slave to just the degree that he is unpaid. Before slavery was abolished by law the slave was paid the necessities of life for his labor, and the employer or the master fixed the amount himself, controlled, however, by the unavoidable cost of keeping the laborer in good condition as a producing power. The right to fix or rather to agree with the employer upon the price of his labor, or to work for one's self as the alternative, is the substantial advantage which the freeman possesses over the slave.

Now, a moment's thought will show us that in order to exercise this right so that it will be of any value to the freeman he must possess two things:

1. He must have knowledge of the value of his work, in order to fix a fair price upon it.
2. He must be able to get work elsewhere when it is refused by the employer, and to do this without fail he must own land.

The first qualification, then, of a freeman is knowledge, intelligence, for knowledge is power. The second qualification is the ownership of land and skill to earn a living upon it. If I could fix these two thoughts in the minds of my countrymen forever, I should be their greatest benefactor.

Get education! And get land! Get the best possible of both, and always remember that a little of the best is worth more than much of an inferior quality. But at all events get some, and get as much as you can of education and of land; and if you can not get the best of either, then endeavor to make that which you do get still better by your own exertions, for often, as the old North Carolina song has it—

It is more in the man than it is in the land.

There can never be any real liberty and permanent happiness in this world unless the masses of the people have intelligence and land. With these two great possessions the people are independent and are their own kings. Whoever possesses the knowledge will come to possess the land of any country, and thus it is that in the last analysis knowledge itself is liberty, because knowledge is power.

I have been trying to specify land as the great "property qualification and immunity of freemen," and so bring home to the mind as clearly as possible the two indispensable objects for which we must labor if we would become and continue free, which are, knowledge and land. These we must have or be slaves. These possessions we must transmit to our children or they will become a race of slaves. Knowledge and land the masses of the people in our nation must have, or they will become the bondmen of superior classes at home or of more powerful nations abroad. The attainment of these should be the great earthly object of us all.

Not only should the attainment of knowledge and land be the great earthly object, but without them there is no development of individual spiritual power, no true liberty of the soul in the realm of eternal things, none of that higher and sublimer freedom wherewith the Great Author of our religious faith shall make us "free indeed."

I conceive the whole problem of the future of our country and of mankind to depend upon the question whether the masses of the people shall have knowledge and land—not necessarily every individual, but the great majority—so that their favorable condition may determine favorably the condition of all; for where, under the operation of equal laws, the majority are prosperous and happy, there will be the minority also. Therefore it is that I dwell upon the thought, knowledge and land!

But what is knowledge? What is land? Both these terms are used in a very comprehensive sense, the former as embracing all that we come to know or which may be known, whether from books, from science and liberal culture, or without them; the latter term, land, embraces air and water as well as the soil, so far, at least, as they may become property and the means of production by individual appropriation and ownership.

But I desire to speak within the limits of the practical, and endeavor to suggest what to me seem to be the great tangible objects to which the efforts of those who daily toil for existence and for liberty should be directed, regardless of color or race; for color is of the skin merely, and not of the soul, and we are all one, the human race.

Therefore, when I speak of education to-day I refer to that common knowledge in books and in affairs which is necessary in order that its possessor shall make headway, or at least hold his own in the competitions of life with those by whom he is surrounded and with the positive resistances of nature herself. Whether the great law of human development be the survival of the fittest—a doctrine to which I am unwilling to subscribe if its true construction be that the strong, by reason of their strength, have the right or are placed under the necessity of growing stronger and of surviving longer at the expense of the lessening strength and earlier decay of the weak—still this is certainly true, that survival and progress depend upon the possession of a certain inherent and also an acquired force on the part of those who advance at all. And that education or knowledge of which I now speak is what individuals and communities must possess in order to hold their own and get on against and in connection with their own surroundings, their neighbors and friends, or their several environments, to speak more exactly as I mean.

The college and higher institutions of learning are indispensable to every civilized people, because they already have them; and they alone can give those higher forms and orders of knowledge which society must have and constantly apply or retrograde. But the cultivation and pursuit thereof is of itself an occupation and is impracticable to the masses of men. They, however, must possess a certain degree of knowledge and training of both head and hand in order to exist in a state of society where these advantages are generally possessed; and all progress is conditioned upon an increase of this common culture of the common people, such as is acquired in the common school and in the mastery of some common occupation, whereby work can be directed to the production of useful things. There are no higher ends than the performance of the common duties and the attainment of the common objects of life.

The whole purpose of human existence seems to be to transmit that life which God has given in and through succeeding and constantly improving generations. Human life is not merely a struggle to exist, but to climb; not merely to hold, but to acquire; to develop the grand and noble, the pure and the godlike, not in one nor in a few, but in all; and the proper discharge of the common duties of existence has these lofty purposes directly in view. Therefore it is that the post of honor is the private station; therefore it is that the occupations of every-day life are not inferior in dignity, as they are superior in importance, to those of a more select and exacting character. The farmer and the school-master can exist without the mathematician and the king, while the humblest soul may find its way even more surely to the high places of the eternal heavens than the philosopher or the sage. The essential dignity and elevation of human nature are manifest in common life. To be fitted for it, then, every individual must possess the education and training to which I have referred.

A free people must also know more than simply how to live. They must govern themselves in order to become or continue free. They must possess and exercise the attributes of kings. What the king does for the whole people, a free people must do for themselves. If intelligence and wisdom are necessary in the king, even so must the people possess the same or fail in the performance of the functions of self-government. No people can govern themselves unless they know how to do it. If they attempt self-government without knowledge of the principles upon which society is founded and in ignorance of the great issues controlling their own interests and destiny, which from time to time they are called upon to decide, the result must be either anarchy, which is the destruction of society, or a despotism in which liberty and progress are crushed under the foot of some all-conquering czar.

The ballot, which is self-government, is but a knife in the hand of the ignorant man wherewith he may destroy society, however innocent or even praiseworthy his intentions. What then? Shall he be deprived of this great defense of freemen? Nay, verily! But rather educate him and qualify him for its exercise. And let whoever possesses this great right, this weapon wherewith other rights of person and of property are to be preserved, see to it that he wields it under the direction of knowledge and virtue, which alone will enable him to defend and bless rather than to curse and destroy.

But of what avail to educate the head and the hand without there be the opportunity to apply that knowledge in the work of life? Men must have not only the power to work intelligently and skillfully, but the opportunity also. If the granting of that opportunity to work depends upon the will of another, then of what advantage are knowledge and skill? Plainly, the trained and intelligent worker is none the better off, for the amount of his wages will be dictated by the man who can condemn him to idleness and want unless he accepts that pay which the employer may see fit to give. He is still a slave. But if he have land he can work for himself. Now, then, we see that land and liberty are the same.

Hear this, O ye farmers of the South, of the North, of the West, of the whole earth! Land and liberty are the same!

Whoever has land is free, for he can root himself in his own heritage, and, combining his toil with light and heat and all fructifying influences, he can win from the bosom of the common mother of us all a generous support for himself and for the dear ones who depend upon him for life. When refused employment in every other occupation or offered but the scanty wage of oppression and avarice, the owner of his own land is free indeed. And being thus sure of a final resource from want, whoever seeks employment in any other trade or occupation, if so be he possesses the intelligence which common-school education will give, can demand and will receive all that his labor is reasonably worth. But without this ultimate resource in the land itself, no man, no community, is free. All over the world and through all human history the people are poor unless they own the land. Only as they own land are they free. The land is the source of all production, and whoever controls it controls all those who produce, all those who toil, in every avocation among men.

I do not mean that every individual must own land in order to be reasonably sure of work and of fair pay, but I do mean that only thus can he be absolutely sure of a resource when other employments suspend and other avocations fail; and always a majority of the people must be rooted, as it were, in the soil. No other occupation yields the necessities of life direct. These come primarily from the land, and their annual reproduction is indispensable to the life and therefore to the freedom and happiness of man. All other occupations may be crowded, but not so the intelligent cultivation of the land. And it is only where the mass of men pursue the primary work of tillers of the soil that artisans and operatives and mechanics find a remunerative demand for their skill.

So, viewed in whatever way you please, it comes down to this plain truth at last, that only the owner and cultivator of the soil is sure of a livelihood. He alone is sure forever to be free.

He does not require much. In our broad and blessed country there are homes for all who will build them, there are fertile farms for all who will till them. A little land, worked with intelligence and thrift, will suffice for the support of a family; and a few years of industry and economy will enable any man to pay for the acres which will make him independent, and therefore really free.

We are told by those who have studied the subject that a community educated thoroughly in the common branches of knowledge will, by reason of that superior intelligence, produce at least twice as much by its labor as the same community could produce without education. An educated man will, therefore, as a rule, get at least double the wages which he could otherwise earn. This is generally true, and the first condition of all improvement is education.

But I hardly need dwell upon this primary and acknowledged truth. The important practical questions for every one are these: How shall I obtain education? How shall I obtain land?

Each one is chiefly the maker of his own fortunes. Education and the acquirement of property—that is, liberty—must be our own work.

All that the nation, the State, or parents and friends can do is to provide the opportunity. That is done when we have the school, the workshop, and the land. We must ourselves do all the rest. No community has done justice to itself until every child and every inhabitant has been provided with the opportunity for education in the common branches of knowledge, to acquire some useful occupation, and with the work itself; which, as we have already seen, when it can be had nowhere else, may always be found in land.

It is of no use to bid a child be educated and yet provide no school or to work when he has no trade and no training for the farm. In selecting a home or a country wherein to live, every sensible person will then, if possible, find schools and land. If they are scarce and can not be supplied where he is, then he must seek his fortunes elsewhere or get but little good out of this life. As wealth increases and new industries spring up, employment may be found outside of the land, but, all the same, these occupations will fail as the culture of the soil disappears; so that ever the great demand is for education and for land.

If I were to select any part of this world as the natural home of a great people, I should choose the Southern States.

In ten years' time the Southern States of this nation could be made the paradise of the workingman. And here in this great arena, whether it be for better or for worse, swarming and increasing millions of the sons of toil must continue for all time to dwell and to have their homes. What shall their future be?

The relations of the Government, both State and national, to the great problems of the future condition of our people I do not propose at any length to discuss. A great work and solemn responsibility attach to them both. But we are dealing chiefly with ourselves, with our own powers and duties to-day.

Our great work is the personal practice of the virtues of industry, economy, temperance, and justice in our daily lives. Only the industrious man can earn money; only the economical man will save it; only the temperate man can preserve his own time and his own powers of body and of mind, and only the just and honest man will have the respect of the community wherein he dwells or even long avoid the meshes of the law. No man who does not possess these simple but all-important virtues will often acquire education, land or other forms of property, or true freedom for himself or his child.

The cultivation of these virtues is our own work; no one can perform it for us. Without this is done by ourselves, all help from the wealth or services of others, all aid from the nation or from the State, is of no avail. With the practice of honesty, industry, temperance, and economy on the part of the individual, all other things from the nation and from the State will soon be added thereto. And whoever, by the practice of these virtues, can save the smallest surplus from the proceeds of his daily toil beyond his daily need, let him invest it in his head or in land. And if so be he have others dependent upon himself, let him even suffer all things, that he may give to them likewise education and land, that they in their turn may confer these great benefits upon the generations to come.

It is not possible for one part of a community to be segregated from the remainder and to live alone. Of every race and color, we are to stand or fall together, and nothing in the end is for the good of one which is not for the general good. No class or individual can live at the expense of others without ultimate injury to all, and I should consider any man a common enemy who would advocate a measure or a policy which could foster discontent or alienation among the people in any part of our country. No portion of our great land is more in need of honest, industrious, skillful, and contented labor than the great region known as the Southern States, and nowhere is there a more hopeful or inviting field for intelligent and thrifty workers in every vocation than here. True that conditions here, as everywhere else, may be greatly improved; and especially important everywhere in the South is the more rapid development of the common school. Without this, progress will never come, wealth will never accumulate, and free government will not long survive. But the schools will come.

The nation should help. So industrial training will come. All forms of diversified industry, every trade, manufacture, and vocation known to civilization and every production possible to a varied climate and fertile soil will spring up and dwell there forever. The future is full of promise, and to the colored man and his children who will get education and get land there will be ample compensation during all the long ages to come for the wrong and suffering to which the past may have subjected his race.

Nor should it ever be forgotten that the colored man of to-day is civilized and free, the equal of every other man in American citizenship and before American law, because of the wise decrees of the Great Author of all that has been and is and is to be, which ordained his forcible emigration from a still savage continent and his education during two hundred and fifty years of bondage up through ever-increasing degrees of civilization until the final hour when God saw that he was qualified for the full measure of liberty. White and colored, North and South, we have lived and suffered and atoned together, and who shall say that it is not well?

It is impossible to disconnect in any way the fate of men who live in the same community and under the same laws by distinctions no more substantial than color and race. Education produces the same effect upon all; ignorance always oppresses and enslaves. Honest, intelligent toil will thrive, and it matters not who says nay. Social distinctions and prejudices may last forever. Probably they will always exist. Properly regulated and restrained within their true sphere, as they are the manifestations of instinct and innate tendencies, no doubt they are indispensable to the happiness of society. But these distinctions in social relations can not change the rights or add to or take from the dignity of any citizen before the law.

Could I address them personally I should pray our colored friends to remember that it is an evil thing to cultivate the sentiment that they are in any way a distinct people; that they have any less or greater claim to consideration because of their race or of their past; that there is any hope of better conditions of life for them through direct or indirect influences than for other American citizens among whom they live. And, on the other hand, it is a high crime in the eye of the law of the nation and of the States if by reason of their race or previous condition their advantages in the practical administration of the law be the less.

But let them remember whenever, if ever, they are sorely tried, that the saints have come up through great tribulation; and, if their journey to the promised land has been through a wilderness, that they are now where the milk and honey begin to flow and the fruit trees of their earthly paradise are blossoming all around.

Yes, colored men, stick to your homes in the "sunny South." Labor will yet conquer all things. Labor will give you land; labor will give you schools. Land and schools will redress every grievance; will bring you wealth and all the comforts and luxuries of life; will banish all inequalities and hardships from which you suffer in the practical administrations of the law, and will protect you in the exercise of the suffrage by demonstrating to those who surround you your full capacity intelligently and safely to share in the great responsibility of self-government and in control of the property and lives of your fellow-men.

Education and the skill which results from it will increase the rewards of your toil. Now, the labor of the North is better paid than yours, because it is more intelligent and more skilled. Thousands of industries there abound, demanding the disciplined thought and the well-trained hand, while you have as yet comparatively few. But your good time is coming. Everywhere capital is seeking investment in your forests, your mines, your plantations and farms, and your waterfalls, and in the natural centers of affairs. Diversified industries, by which a people produce most things which they themselves consume, and thus cease to depend upon other nations and other climes, are coming to you. Demand for labor of every kind will spring up on every hand. Your wages will increase, and with economy will come the power to purchase all the manifold comforts and finally all the reasonable refinements and luxuries of life.

Producing everything, increasing wealth will enable you to buy and to consume. Farms will multiply and farmers grow rich. Houses will be erected which will greatly surpass the old in all the conditions of health, convenience, and protection from the elements. Domestic animals will improve, and chattels in ten thousand forms will multiply on every hand. Labor-saving tools and machinery will come to relieve you from the severity of your toil. Schools will give discipline and culture to your sons and your daughters alike. Newspapers, those great educators of the people, will everywhere abound. Every intellectual and moral power will be quickened and every want of the body and of the soul supplied from the abundant harvests of the stimulated productive forces of new-born industrial life.

In this regeneration, this new industrial creation, the colored man will bear a most important part. But it is not his field alone. The whole people own this great land, and work, honest, intelligent, productive toil, is the universal God-given privilege. Its rewards and blessings and honors belong to all.

Schools and land! Intelligence and the skill and opportunity to work for fair pay are the right of every son and daughter of man; and throughout this land of ours, if nowhere else on earth, that right shall be the possession of all.

More and more the prejudices and limitations of other days are passing away. Patriotism embraces the whole country, and rejoices in the good of every class and condition in our national life. Adversity and war have taught us at least mutual respect, and sectional hate is giving place to the love of a citizenship which has continental proportions and which, let us hope, will be as enduring as time.

American history must forever record that the earliest martyr to American liberty was the gigantic Attucks, who fell under the British bullet on Massachusetts soil. Jackson summoned free negroes to the defense of New Orleans. At the head of a regiment of the sons of New Hampshire, I myself was in that charge upon the bloody walls of Port Hudson, when Southern valor destroyed the gallant columns of the North, and among the dying and the dead along the whole seven miles of slaughter none were nearer to the foe than the colored soldiers who there first fell in the uniform of their country.

Regiments of colored soldiers are now conceded to be among the best troops in the regular and permanent Army of the United States. In peace and in war the colored man has well discharged all the high duties of the American citizen and soldier. By his good conduct he has erased the color line; and, while all agree that it may remain in society relations, those who would restore it in civil affairs do fight against the stars in their courses and the irreversible decrees of God. The highest statesmanship and patriotism throughout the country recognize this great fact, and both North and South, accepting the situation, rejoice together in the removal of a fell institution which was established and fostered by the capital of both, and the pangs of whose extinction almost destroyed our national life.

I believe fully in the perpetuity of our institutions and of our Federal Union. I could not entertain this high confidence if I doubted the broad and national patriotism of any section of the country or of any class of our people. If Jefferson were alive he would no longer tremble for his country when he remembered that God is just, for he would see that God is now determined that the last vestiges of slavery shall be destroyed. There is now no great institution warring among our members, threatening destruction to the body politic or the subversion of free principles and free government. The Declaration of Independence is no longer an American theory only, but is an American fact. True there is terrible pain in the great redemption process, but it is being wrought out in the nation and in every State. The forces of human nature have free play everywhere, and are fast transmuting free thought into free action, which will soon disintegrate and destroy whatever remains over of the laws and customs of the past which conflict with the general improvement and happiness of all.

There is much cause for gratitude to the Supreme Ruler that He has ordained that human life, which flows on age after age in the race, shall be so brief in generations and individuals. Were we to live on century after century like Methuselah, the progress of the world would be like the journeyings of the sloth, and hope would falter because of the Bourbonism of both North and South manifest in petrified but still breathing men. But, fortunately, those who do not change for the better soon die, and the new blood of youth and souls fresh from the Divinity and free from the shackles of custom, prejudice, and tradition spring forth upon the forever shifting arena of human action to work out their manifest destiny in the full light of liberty and under laws which stimulate the ambition, ennoble the aspirations, purify the purposes, protect the rights, and defend the lives and fortunes of all. Educate the people universally, and the violence of savagery, which sometimes breaks out like the sudden spring of a wild beast, will disappear forever.

It does not yet appear what this already supreme nation shall be; but we do know that we are the advance guard of mankind. Whatever of hope there may be for the fifteen hundred millions of the race will fail if our sixty millions shall desert the banner of humanity and destroy our free and holy institutions by faithlessness to the principles of universal liberty or the demands of personal duty in private life. We do know that we have the greatest opportunity before us ever yet given to any people in the annals of time. We know, too, that as is our opportunity so is our responsibility. We know that upon our own generation in this present time God has placed the burdens of a great emergency, of a peculiar trust. In the presence of the mighty problems which confront us and the solemn responsibilities which press now upon men of action everywhere in our great land, the prejudice of parties and the clamor of hunters for place should cease. Let us approach our future as one people, full of a patriotism as large as the whole country, yet regardless of the fortunes of the humblest child, caring equally and fully for all sections, and beholding in all one great unity, in which every citizen is an equal and a king.

So shall it be that the memories of the first Revolution shall revive in all their tenderness and glory, and our last estate shall be better than the first.

There is one particular aspect of this proposition to give equalization and universality of common-school education to the people of the whole country which I think well might be practically dwelt upon, and during the few moments which still remain to me I will advert once more to this. I refer now to the great importance of this measure as an educational measure, operative chiefly at the South, to the conditions and civilization of the North. We all understand how it was that we were two nations until the civil war.

Conditions as different prevailed in the South, as compared with those of the North, as prevail at the present time between our own civilization in the North and the average civilization in Europe or in any other foreign countries.

Labor had its rights in the North; labor was intelligent and therefore it was free, and because it was free it was intelligent, and therefore possessed the power of combination, and it was able to exact in the market its proportion of the amount received for the productions of which labor was the creator.

But for that intelligence the labor of the North would have been as cheap labor in all this vast period of time as at the South; but intelligence and education made that difference. The war came and swept away the merely nominal slavery, but did not change the condition of vast masses of men. They were the same after the war that they were before the war, but if there be nothing done to change the condition in which childhood finds itself in the environment of the coming generation they will remain for the future the same as they were in the past. Nothing can change the condition of the great mass of the people of the South but intelligence, the power which comes of knowledge and of general education. That gives the force which leads to combination; and in that is the true secret of higher wages and better compensation to the ordinary artisan, to the ordinary toiler in the common walks of life. That alone can put the masses of the Southern people upon the same plane of civilization, developing the same wants, developing the same amount of wages, and when a man labors for wages and the same price or share in the product of his commodity, when he is a farmer or producer in any other sense than that of a mere laborer with his hands, that done, the ordinary production of the South will stand upon the same plane of cost as the ordinary production of the North, and it will, therefore, be unable to seek the Northern market and take from Northern citizens the market which they deserve by reason of their own toil, and in the possession of which home market alone is there any guaranty that the condition of the laborer at the North, the common capital of the mass of the citizenship, capital and labor combined, shall continue as at present.

As I before expressed it, nothing can constitute a tariff for the protection of the civilization of the North as against the cheap production of the South, which is coming with the introduction of numerous and diversified industries there as at the North, but producing among the masses of the people of the South homogeneous intellectual conditions with those of the people of the North. When that is done, the result, the article produced, will be distributed among the masses of the people at the South rather than that the price, the result, will pass into the pocket of the capitalist alone. When their wants, the result of increasing education, demand the necessary wages wherewith to purchase that which will supply those wants, so that they may consume like the masses of the people of the North, then the South will produce double what she now does with the same numerical working population, because with intelligence her power to produce will increase correspondingly; and the increase of the cost of the articles produced at the South together with the means of purchasing and of consuming them on the spot will confine to the South the wealth which she produces; and in due time the labor of her people will have brought about homogeneous conditions and like civilization abounding throughout the whole country, and thus we shall be able to perpetuate the conditions of the North in the South and throughout the whole country and for all time.

In my brief remarks in the earlier part of this brief address, I directed my thoughts principally to the colored population of the country. I believe that in their education lies the solution of the race problem. It is treated as the master problem with which we have to contend at the present time. Doubtless it is so; at all events, it is one of the great problems, but I have never looked upon the condition of the negro as the only cause of solicitude on the part of American patriotism. The white people of this country comprise its great mass of the population, and they must constitute the nation now and hereafter. Upon their condition must depend the future of the United States, and upon the future of the United States the future of the world. I think it has been demonstrated in the progress of this debate that the white population of this country is in need of increased facilities of education; that there is as large a mass of white children at the South who require education and increased facilities for education as of the colored race. There is probably a much larger mass, and the object of this bill is as much to carry relief to them as to the colored children.

Mr. President, this bill recognizes no color line. It distributes by virtue of its provisions the larger portion of the amount appropriated at the South, because there is the illiteracy and there is the poverty, and therein is the greater need; just as we pour the appropriations of the river and harbor bill into those regions where are the rivers and harbors, and improve them there; and if they were all located on a single coast it would have the advantage of the whole. But when the money is in a State it is combined with the fund of the State itself, at least three times as much as that which the nation gives; and the whole by the express provisions of the bill is to be distributed for the education of the children of school age, irrespective of race or color or of previous condition in life.

So if this bill becomes a law and there be a necessity, so far as its provisions go that necessity will be supplied, but it will give the white child the black child's chance; it will give the black child the white child's chance. It will recognize no color line, but will go in one vast, munificent, and beneficent stream to all the citizenship and the childhood of the country irrespective of any distinctions of race or color or previous condition in life.

Mr. President, I have occupied my time; I have done my duty, and I submit this bill with the amendments to the action of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT (at 3 o'clock p. m.). The question is on the amendments proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MOODY], the first of which will be stated.

Mr. HARRIS. Have the committee amendments been acted upon as in Committee of the Whole?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They have been acted upon.

Mr. HARRIS. I did not remember as to the fact.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The first amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 7, after the word "authorized," it is proposed to insert the words "and required;" so as to read:

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized and required to receive and consider, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not exactly understand that amendment. Who offered it?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MOODY].

Mr. GEORGE. Let it be again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be again stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 7, after the word "authorized," it is proposed to insert the words "and required."

Mr. GEORGE. Now let the whole sentence in which it occurs be read.

The SECRETARY. So as to read:

But in determining the number of illiterates therein, and also in the States of South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, and Washington, the Secretary of the Interior—

Mr. GEORGE. That is enough. I understand it now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BLAIR. I hope the amendments submitted by the Senator from South Dakota will be adopted. They seem to be perfectly just. The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 14, line 11, after the word "section," it is proposed to insert:

Including the illiterates of the Indian population resident therein.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment submitted by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed at the end of section 14 to add the following words:

And in any subsequent apportionment in said States and Territories, and in any of said Territories after they shall be admitted as States, the illiterate Indians living therein shall be included in the basis of such apportionment.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I rise to the support of this amendment. I believe under the understanding I am entitled to five minutes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator is entitled to five minutes.

Mr. BERRY. I think, according to the understanding, that applies only to amendments offered afterwards. This amendment was offered before.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the understanding reached on a previous day bearing upon the question.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I hope this will not come out of my five minutes, Mr. President.

The Chief Clerk read as follows from the RECORD of the 13th instant:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will restate the proposition. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that on Thursday of next week, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, all debate shall cease upon the bill and the amendments pending, except such remarks as the Senator from New Hampshire shall desire to make himself, not to exceed one hour, and that, at the conclusion of his speech, the vote shall be taken upon the pending amendments, and all amendments that may be thereafter offered to be subject to debate under the five-minute rule. Is that the proposition?

Mr. BLAIR. That is the way I mean to be understood.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BLAIR. It is the understanding that it applies to one week from to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thursday of next week.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont will proceed.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Do I understand that my friend from Arkansas thinks I am not entitled to speak to the pending amendment?

Mr. BERRY. I understood the unanimous consent that was given to be that at 3 o'clock to-day the vote should be taken without debate upon the amendments then pending, and that all amendments thereafter offered should be subject to debate under the five-minute rule in the order reached.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I will not violate the understanding if that is the way the Senator understands it. When we get through with the pending amendment I think I can move one that will enable me to say what I desire.

Mr. GEORGE. My understanding is—and I will state it to know if I am correct—that all the amendments proposed by the committee to the bill have been adopted as in Committee of the Whole. Is that the fact or not?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. All the amendments of the committee have been agreed to, the Chair is informed.

Mr. GEORGE. In Committee of the Whole?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In Committee of the Whole. The Chair desires to call the attention of Senators to the understanding reached at a previous session, wherein it is stated by the Chair that "the vote shall be taken upon the pending amendments, and all amendments that may be thereafter offered to be subject to debate under the five-minute rule."

Mr. BERRY. The understanding was that all amendments offered after 3 o'clock to-day are to be subject to debate under the five-minute rule, and all debate must cease upon the bill and amendments then pending at 3 o'clock. Thereafter such amendments as might be offered should be subject to debate under the five-minute rule.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments which have just been reported, which were offered by the Senator from South Dakota, were offered since that time.

Mr. BERRY. I understood that they were offered yesterday and, therefore, before 3 o'clock to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They were offered since the understanding was reached.

Mr. BERRY. But before 3 o'clock to-day?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the Senator from Vermont is entitled to the floor under the five-minute rule.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, in support of the amendment, which is in the line of the objects of the bill, as everybody will agree, I have to say, in the first place, that the argument which doubters, secret opponents, etc., have made against the constitutionality of this bill is denied by the plain letter of the Constitution, which in respect of the taxing power declares that Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, excises, etc., in order to promote the general welfare. In addition to that, Congress is given certain specific powers to do things that they might do without a dollar of money, if they could get a volunteer to the Army or whatever; and add that the constant practice of Congress and of every Department of the Government for a hundred years, beginning with the First Congress, has demonstrated that that is the way the men who made the Constitution and who have administered it since understood it. One of the very first acts passed, I believe, in the very first Congress, was to give a certain amount of money to refugees from somewhere (I can not take the time in five minutes to say where), and so on down to this day, going latterly to seeds for the farmers of Texas, Congress has appropriated money out of the Treasury to pay for such objects.

Mr. SHERMAN. The latter bill was vetoed?

Mr. EDMUNDS. It was vetoed, but I take it that does not change the judgment of Congress or the nature of the Constitution.

So, in my opinion, with great respect to everybody, the profession that is put up here that there is any moral even, not to say legal, obstacle in a constitutional way of Congress appropriating public funds to promote the general welfare by beginning at the fundamental point of general welfare everywhere, in every country and in every place since history began, is entirely baseless. There is no nation the prosperity of whose people and whose happiness and safety are not measured exactly by the amount of education that the body of that people have.

Now we come to the expediency of the measure. It has been objected that these States, Vermont and Mississippi, South Carolina and New Hampshire, and so on, will steal this money, will squander it, and that the light of life and liberty will not go to the people because the officers of the States will steal the money.

That is a short and brief way of putting it. I do not believe so at all. If it were possible, there is the safeguard which this bill contains everywhere in all its provisions of the oversight of the United States and that the stoppage of any further appropriation is to come if the money is not properly accounted for.

What do we do it for then? I do it in respect of the morning stars of the Northwest that have just come into the Union, in order that they may in the quickest way be aided, augmented in their exertion to make their people intelligent in those simple ranges of intelligence that make citizens capable of defending themselves and of electing wise rulers. I do it for the Southern States, for the aristocracy that now governs them, in order that the friction between ignorance and the intelligence of the aristocracy may be diminished, and that when the poor white and colored man come to know a little more they will see that the landowner and the man of education, the man of property, is their friend and that it is better to intrust him with the administration of local affairs than it is to put it into the hands of any ignorant candidate whatever.

To my brother Republicans I say by just the measure that you increase the intelligence where there is friction, South or North, of the common people, by that measure you enable them to defend their rights in a just and honorable and constitutional way.

I believe my five minutes are up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's five minutes have expired. Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I had marked a passage in the speech of the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS] to comment upon, but had made up my mind that I would not refer to it, and I should not do so except for the speech of the Senator from Vermont. The Senator from New York said:

This bill, as the Senator from Connecticut would have us think, for the first time undertakes to distribute the wealth of this country (for I have got by the question of distinction between money and land and wealth and duty) in aid of strengthening a system of education in the States.

I had but five minutes before said with great respect and with permission of the Senator:

I believe nobody has ever denied that the National Government might properly dedicate public lands to education, especially when it founded new States, and that it might give the proceeds of taxes in general or of the sales of public lands to certain great national purposes.

That is as reported here. It should be "educational purposes."

But we are discussing something else here to-day. We are discussing the first measure—

This is what I said was the first measure—that ever was in Congress that followed this dedication to the close details of State administration and attempted to control minor State officers.

The Senator from New York then called attention to what is known, to the great honor of the senior Senator from Vermont, as the Morrill act, that which established agricultural colleges. There is no analogy or very slight analogy between the two measures. The Morrill act did not attempt to enter into the established system of common schools at all. It established an entirely distinct institution in each State, an agricultural college, and dedicated to that certain public lands, and then said that afterwards it should be continued in accordance with the legislation of the State. There was no inspection whatever provided for. In this bill here before me the governor of the State is to certify to nine distinct points before his State can receive any money.

In the form of specifications in section 11 there are sixteen points upon which there shall be every year a statement to the Interior Department. There is a board of inspection appointed, because it is declared that it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to promptly investigate all complaints lodged with him of any misappropriation or discrimination, etc., and in case it be ruled against the governor, upon an investigation, the money shall not be given. It is expressly provided that all complaints shall be investigated.

Now, I call attention to that point especially. All over the country, unless in the South it is different from what it ever has been or different from any other part of the world, there will arise constant complaints of partiality and maladministration. It is the duty of an inferior officer of the Government under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, it is the duty of the Commissioner of Education to go down or send down into every one of the States and inquire as to whether the governor has truly certified to the Commissioner as to whether the subordinate officers of the State have honestly executed the law. Compare this with the Morrill act, that gave the money forever to the States, dedicated it, and said it must be kept a separate and distinct fund forever, to be expended and honestly governed according to the laws of the Legislature, and put only the indispensable condition into it for the safe conduct of the money. It did not provide for inspection.

The odious feature of this proposed law, and that which in spirit is altogether unconstitutional, is that it sends your Federal subordinates, your men who do not rise to the dignity of whisky gaugers, to investigate the conduct of governors, and I say every subordinate officer would give rise to ten octavo volumes of complaints of unfairness and bad judgment relating to the governor, that the people have been false to their trust and can not have the money for the next year.

Now, I do not say that there is any one point in this bill which upon being carried to the Supreme Court would be ruled as unconstitutional, but there are things beyond the reach of the Supreme Court that are plainly against the spirit of the Constitution and things nominally within the discretion of Congress where the Supreme Court is jealous about crossing the line.

I prophesy, if this bill passes, not eight years and $77,000,000, but fifty years and a hundred million dollars. Unless the bill shall become so odious that we shall come here early and ask for an extra session to repeal it, I prophesy volume upon volume of incessant complaints that will redouble and quadruple those which followed reconstruction.

The bill is full of that. It is a measure that will breed future controversy everywhere. It is against the spirit of our Government, against our traditions, against our State rights.

I do not want those inspectors. Keep out of my State your secretary of the board of education here. The governor and the people, the town committees, all the school boards, are capable of educating our children, but, whether we are or not, we mean to make the experiment, because we have been a hundred years at it. Keep your hands off and let us do these things. It is better for us—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's five minutes have expired.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish simply to say to the Senator that he helped put those features into the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MOODY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move to strike out the word "seven" where the bill says "seventy-seven million dollars," and I do that for the sake of putting an item into the debate which I intended to put in day before yesterday, and I am sorry that I omitted it. It is a mere statement of figures.

Mr. BLAIR. Ought there not be action upon the pending amendment first?

Mr. HAWLEY. It has been agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment has been agreed to.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am not going to prolong this debate.

Mr. BLAIR. Let me understand distinctly. Was the amendment moved by the Senator from South Dakota adopted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been adopted.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move a pro forma amendment in order that I may put in the estimate of the probable expenditures and appropriations for the next fiscal year. I have it from the best accessible authorities about this building, and having sent it out for a revision I now present it. This is it:

Estimated revenues $450,400,000. That includes post-office revenues. Per contra, probable appropriations, exclusive of deficiencies, $323,000,000; permanent appropriations, including sinking fund, $101,600,000; probable deficiency—a guess, but a guess from the best judges of what it will be—$31,000,000. That makes on the other side $455,600,000. But add proposed appropriations reported to the Senate and not included in probable deficiency, return of direct tax, $17,500,000, which we have passed and sent to the other House; Blair bill, $7,000,000; French spoliation claims, which the courts have adjudged that we owe, and we owe as truly as we owe our board bills, $1,742,000.

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator—

Mr. HAWLEY. No, I will not stop in reading a column of figures when I have only five minutes.

Naval ships, $7,000,000; increased pensions, $35,000,000, as the committee has told you here. This aggregate makes $68,242,000, and added to $455,600,000 it makes proposed appropriations $523,842,000. The estimated revenues being $450,400,000, there is in view a probable deficit, if that be anything like truth, of $73,442,000.

Now, that will appear in the RECORD and you can study upon it. You have got to repeal some things and defeat some things and reorganize some things, and stop your reformation of the tariff and stop your reduction if you pass the bill now before you.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Mr. President, I rise to speak to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Connecticut, simply to say that according to my view of these understandings that we have about voting I am not at liberty in moving formal amendments to speak to the general subject, and therefore I make no reply to my honorable friend from Connecticut.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will not be misrepresented by the Senator. With his permission I will state that I moved what I may call a financial amendment, pertaining to the millions to be expended, and the money to be expended next year; and I did not say a word about anything except finances.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I have nothing to say, Mr. President.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish to state—

Mr. HAWLEY. I withdraw my amendment. The Senator can move any other he chooses.

Mr. BLAIR. This is a matter—

Mr. EDMUNDS (to Mr. BLAIR). Let it go, and do not violate the understanding. Let it go.

Mr. BLAIR. I am not violating any understanding. I have not spoken on the pending amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment has been withdrawn.

Mr. BLAIR. It could not be withdrawn when I was speaking upon it. The Senator can not jump up after I got the floor and withdraw it.

Mr. HAWLEY. Then I will let it stand.

Mr. PLUMB. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I should like to ask what was the understanding as to the proceedings to-day upon this bill, and if it embraces the opportunity to indefinitely debate amendments. If it does, then of course there would have to be some order taken about voting, because there might be a good many amendments offered and a good deal of debate.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, it is not probable, it is not possible, that during this session of Congress there can be any appropriation under this bill, because it is provided that the assent of the States through their Legislatures shall be first obtained. It will consequently be impossible that the bill shall go into operation or that there should be any appropriation under it during the present session of Congress.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there be no further amendment proposed the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. My amendment is withdrawn? That is the understanding?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is withdrawn.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is, Shall the bill be ordered to be engrossed and read the third time?

Mr. INGALLS. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. PLUMB. I wish to offer an amendment. I move to strike out all of section 2 down to and including the word "census," in line 11, and to insert what I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 2, it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the word "census," in line 11, as follows:

That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories, and in the District of Columbia, in that proportion which the whole number of persons in each who, being of the age of ten years and over, can not write bears to the whole number of such persons in the United States, except as provided in the fifteenth section; such computation shall be made according to the census of 1890, until the illiteracy returns of the census of 1890 shall be received, and then upon the basis of that census.

And to insert in lieu thereof:

That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia in proportion to their population respectively between the ages of ten and twenty-one years, according to the census of 1890: Provided, That all of said money remaining undistributed at the date of the publication of the returns of population according to the census of 1890 shall be divided as aforesaid in proportion to the population between the ages of ten and twenty-one years according to said census.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PLATT. Will the Senator from Kansas explain just what his amendment proposes?

Mr. PLUMB. The difference between my amendment and the distribution provided for by the bill is this: Under the bill it is to be distributed to the States upon the basis of illiteracy. Under my amendment it is to be distributed to the States upon the basis of population between the ages of ten and twenty-one years. In other words, the people who pay their money would get their aliquot proportion of it back.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. Upon that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HAMPTON (when Mr. BUTLER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. BUTLER], who is absent, asked me to pair with him; but by an arrangement with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] the pair has been transferred, so as to authorize the Senator from West Virginia and myself to vote.

Mr. FAULKNER. My pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] has been transferred to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE]. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. PADDOCK (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS], who was unexpectedly called away from the city. If he were present, he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM], but I transfer that pair to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CASEY]. I vote "yea."

Mr. WASHBURN (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GIBSON], who I understand would vote "yea." If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. BECK. I am paired upon the bill and all the amendments, as I understand, with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN]. I would vote "nay" against the bill in every form, if I were allowed.

Mr. PASCO. My colleague [Mr. CALL] is paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The vote on the question of engrossment—

Mr. BLAIR (after having voted in the affirmative). I desire to change my vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 37; as follows:

YEAS—31.
Allen,	Dolph,	McMillan,	Pugh,
Allison,	Edmunds,	Manderson,	Squire,
Barbour,	Evarts,	Mitchell,	Stanford,
Chandler,	George,	Moody,	Stewart,
Colquitt,	Hampton,	Morrill,	Stockbridge,
Cullom,	Hearst,	Pasco,	Teller,
Daniel,	Higgins,	Pettigrew,	Wilson of Iowa.
Dawes,	Hoar,	Platt,
NAYS—37.
Aldrich,	Farwell,	Jones of Arkansas,	Spooner,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Jones of Nevada,	Turpie,
Berry,	Frye,	Kenna,	Vest,
Blackburn,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Voorhees,
Blair,	Gray,	Payne,	Walthall,
Blodgett,	Hale,	Pierce,	Wilson of Md.
Cockrell,	Harris,	Plumb,	Wolcott.
Coke,	Hawley,	Reagan,
Davis,	Hiscock,	Sawyer,
Dixon,	Ingalls,	Sherman,
ABSENT—14.
Beck,	Cameron,	McPherson,	Vance,
Brown,	Casey,	Padlock,	Washburn.
Butler,	Eustis,	Quay,
Call,	Gibson,	Ransom,

Mr. EDMUNDS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. BLAIR. I desire under the rule to enter a motion to reconsider the vote just taken, which I now do.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The Senator is entitled to do that within two days. I insist on my motion.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and fifteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BURLINGTON, IOWA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 954) authorizing the construction of a public building at Burlington, Iowa, and it was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

J. F. BAILEY & CO.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that a bill reported adversely this morning by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WILSON], being Senate bill 2931, be placed upon the Calendar. I understand that the Senator from Maryland has no objection to this, as he reported the bill from the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois requests unanimous consent that the action of the Senate by which the bill (S. 2931) granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims, notwithstanding any statutory bar, of the claims of J. F. Bailey & Co. and others, reported adversely from the Committee on Claims, was indefinitely postponed, may be reconsidered, and that the bill be placed on the Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 749) for the erection of a public building at York, Pa., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, March 21, 1890, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 20th day of March, 1890.

SECRETARY OF LEGATION.

Francis MacNutt, of the District of Columbia, to be secretary of the legation of the United States at Constantinople, vice Pendleton King, recalled.

UNITED STATES CONSUL.

James F. Ellis, of Wisconsin, to be consul of the United States at Brockville, Canada, vice John O. Bridges, recalled.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONIES.

Edmond W. Eakin, of Blunt, S. Dak., to be receiver of public monies at Pierre, S. Dak. (a newly established office). A nomination was sent to the Senate February 12, 1890, in which the name of said Eakin was erroneously stated as Edwin.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

Harlan P. Wolcott, of Garfield, Kans., to be register of the land office at Larned, Kans., vice Henry W. Scott, to be removed.

Reuben N. Kratz, of Mitchell, S. Dak., to be register of the land office at Mitchell, S. Dak., vice Myron H. Rowley, to be removed.

POSTMASTERS.

James B. Miles, to be postmaster at Helena, in the county of Phillips and State of Arkansas, in the place of Henry P. Grant, whose commission expired March 3, 1890.

John W. Archibald, to be postmaster at Prescott, in the county of Yavapai and Territory of Arizona, in the place of Adoniram J. Head, resigned.

J. Knox Corbett, to be postmaster at Tucson, in the county of Pima and Territory of Arizona, in the place of Calvin A. Elliott, removed.

Frederick G. Diefenbach, to be postmaster at Blue Island, in the county of Cook and State of Illinois; the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after April 1, 1890.

Joseph H. Weeks, to be postmaster at Upper Alton, in the county of Madison and State of Illinois; the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after April 1, 1890.

George Woodruff, to be postmaster at Farmington, in the county of Fulton and State of Illinois, in the place of William Marshall, removed.

William C. Adams, to be postmaster at Petersburg, in the county of Pike and State of Indiana; the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after April 1, 1890.

William H. Breeding, to be postmaster at Edinburgh, in the county of Johnson and State of Indiana, in the place of Edwin K. Hosford, resigned; Mr. Breeding having been nominated and confirmed as William Breeding.

Mark L. De Motte, to be postmaster at Valparaiso, in the county of Porter and State of Indiana, in the place of Engelbert Zimmerman, whose commission expires April 6, 1890.

Jonas Myers, to be postmaster at Rochester, in the county of Fulton and State of Indiana, in the place of Andrew T. Bitters, whose commission expired March 12, 1890.

William P. Moulton, to be postmaster at Stuart, in the county of Guthrie and State of Iowa, in the place of Charles H. Berner, resigned.

John Lovejoy, to be postmaster at Rockland, in the county of Knox and State of Maine, in the place of William P. Hurley, whose commission expired February 10, 1890.

Michael Keating, to be postmaster at Centreville, in the county of Queen Anne's and State of Maryland, in the place of Daniel C. Hopper, whose commission expired January 13, 1890.

Charles W. L. Hayward, to be postmaster at East Weymouth, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts, in the place of Zechariah T. Bicknell, whose commission expires March 29, 1890.

Samuel A. Whitehead, to be postmaster at Eaton Rapids, in the county of Eaton and State of Michigan, in the place of John H. Hamlin, whose commission expired February 8, 1890.

William Cochran, jr., to be postmaster at Milan, in the county of Sullivan and State of Missouri, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after April 1, 1890.

Mark L. Doughty, to be postmaster at Farmington, in the county of St. Francois and State of Missouri; the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after April 1, 1890.

Samuel L. Andrews, to be postmaster at Crete, in the county of Saline and State of Nebraska, in the place of Theodore A. C. Baker, whose commission expires April 6, 1890.

James B. Hartwell, to be postmaster at Hastings, in the county of Adams and State of Nebraska, in the place of Griffith J. Evans, whose commission expires April 14, 1890.

Frank E. Helvey, to be postmaster at Nebraska City, in the county of Otoe and State of Nebraska, in the place of Donald MacCuaig, removed.

Henry C. Hammond, to be postmaster at Brockport, in the county of Monroe and State of New York, in the place of John C. Collins, whose commission expired March 18, 1890.

John A. Place, to be postmaster at Oswego, in the county of Oswego and State of New York, in the place of John A. Barry, whose commission expires April 6, 1890.

Jacob Weltner, to be postmaster at Santa Fé, in the county of Santa Fé and Territory of New Mexico, in the place of Adolph Seligman, whose commission expires April 6, 1890.

Hallam G. Williamson, to be postmaster at Albuquerque, in the county of Bernalillo and Territory of New Mexico, in the place of William A. Walker, whose commission expired January 13, 1890.

Milton B. De Shong, to be postmaster at Ashland, in the county of Ashland and State of Ohio, in the place of Robert W. Cowan, whose commission expired March 1, 1890.

John C. Reid, to be postmaster at Cuyahoga Falls, in the county of Summit and State of Ohio, in the place of Thomas J. Francisco, whose commission expired March 12, 1890.

Maggie L. Carson, to be postmaster at Aiken, in the county of Aiken and State of South Carolina, in the place of James E. Crosland, whose commission expired February 10, 1890.

Joshua E. Wilson, to be postmaster at Florence, in the county of Florence and State of South Carolina, in the place of Edward H. Lucas, whose commission expired March 9, 1890.

Newman C. Nash, to be postmaster at Canton, in the county of Lincoln and State of South Dakota, in the place of John B. Bertrand, jr., removed.

William C. Baquet, to be postmaster at Gonzales, in the county of Gonzales and State of Texas, in the place of Wiley V. Collins, whose commission expires April 6, 1890.

George W. Cotter, to be postmaster at Alvarado, in the county of Johnson and State of Texas, in the place of William B. Norman, removed.

Justin M. Moody, to be postmaster at Waterbury, in the county of Washington and State of Vermont, in the place of George W. Morse, whose commission expired March 9, 1890, and who has resigned.

George S. Smith, to be postmaster at Marion, in the county of Smyth and State of Virginia, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after October 1, 1888. Richard J. Haller was appointed and commissioned by the President, but his term expired by limitation of the law.

Noyce B. Smith, to be postmaster at Kilbourn City, in the county of Columbia and State of Wisconsin, in the place of Thomas B. Coon, removed.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Commander Frederick Rodgers, to be a captain in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Capt. George B. White, deceased.

Lieut. Commander Charles M. Thomas, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Commander F. Rodgers, promoted.

Lieut. Robert E. Carmody, to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. Commander C. M. Thomas, promoted.

Lieut. Henry C. Gearing, junior grade, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. Robert E. Carmody, promoted.

Ensign George H. Stafford, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. H. C. Gearing, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

Ensign George R. Clark, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, from the 16th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. H. C. Wakenshaw, junior grade, deceased.

Commodore Andrew E. K. Benham, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Rear-Admiral James E. Jouett, retired.

Capt. Joseph Fyffe, to be a commodore in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Commodore A. E. K. Benham, promoted.

Commander John F. McGlensey, to be a captain in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Capt. Joseph Fyffe, promoted.

Lieut. Commander Albert S. Snow, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Commander J. F. McGlensey, promoted.

Lieut. Eugene D. F. Heald, to be a lieutenant-commander in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. Commander A. S. Snow, promoted.

Lieut. Templin M. Potts, junior grade, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. E. D. F. Heald, promoted.

Ensign Allen G. Rogers, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, from the 28th of February, 1890, vice Lieut. T. M. Potts, junior grade, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

Lieut. William H. Allen, junior grade, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 5th of March, 1890, vice Lieut. M. F. Wright, deceased.

Ensign William P. White, to be a lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy, from the 5th of March, 1890, vice Lieut. W. H. Allen, junior grade, promoted (subject to the examinations required by law).

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 20, 1890.

UNITED STATES CONSULS.

Samuel B. Zeigler, of Iowa, to be consul of the United States at Aix-la-Chapelle.

James R. Danforth, of Pennsylvania, to be consul of the United States at Verviers and Liege.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL OF LOUISIANA.

Charles B. Wilson, of New Orleans, La., to be surveyor-general of Louisiana.

DISTRICT JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Joseph W. Davis, of the District of Columbia, to be justice of the peace for the District of Columbia (to be assigned to the city of Georgetown).

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Alexander Ramsey Nininger, of Alabama, to be marshal of the United States for the northern district of Alabama.

SUPERVISING INSPECTOR OF STEAM-VESSELS.

Frank Burnett, of Missouri, to be supervising inspector of steam-vessels for the fourth district.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Joseph H. Hughes, of Cheney, Wash., to be receiver of public moneys at Spokane Falls, Wash.

ATTORNEY FOR NEW MEXICO.

Eugene A. Fiske, of New Mexico, to be attorney of the United States for the Territory of New Mexico.

REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICE.

Reuben N. Kratz, to be register of the land office at Mitchell, S. Dak. Winfield S. Cobean, of Fort Stanton, N. Mex., to be register of the land office at Roswell, N. Mex.

NAVAL OFFICER OF CUSTOMS.

John F. Patty, of Louisiana, to be naval officer of customs in the district of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana.

PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

Fifth Regiment of Artillery.

Additional Second Lieut. William Lassiter, of the Fourth Artillery, to be second lieutenant, February 10, 1890.

POSTMASTERS.

Asias Willison, to be postmaster at Creston, in the county of Union and State of Iowa.

Lewis P. Summers, to be postmaster at Abingdon, in the county of Washington and State of Virginia.

John A. Reynolds, to be postmaster at Rochester, in the county of Monroe and State of New York.

John Pittenger, to be postmaster at Washington, in the county of Warren and State of New Jersey.

Miss Ovie Smedley, to be postmaster at Harrodsburgh, in the county of Mercer and State of Kentucky.

William H. Overby, to be postmaster at Henderson, in the county of Henderson and State of Kentucky.

Charles S. Moss, to be postmaster at Franklin, in the county of Williamson and State of Tennessee.

John E. Catlett, to be postmaster at Hannibal, in the county of Marion and State of Missouri.

George G. Briggs, to be postmaster at Grand Rapids, in the county of Kent and State of Michigan.

Elias S. Bedford, to be postmaster at Huntsville, in the county of Randolph and State of Missouri.

John H. Hutchinson, to be postmaster at Taylor, in the county of Williamson and State of Texas.

W. Walker Russell, to be postmaster at Anderson Court-House, in the county of Anderson and State of South Carolina.

Joseph Harris, jr., to be postmaster at Sturgeon Bay, in the county of Door and State of Wisconsin.

Thomas Reed, to be postmaster at Fairmont, in the county of Marion and State of West Virginia.

James A. Davis, to be postmaster at Morgantown, in the county of Monongalia and State of West Virginia.

Richard E. Griffith, to be postmaster at Winchester, in the county of Frederick and State of Virginia.

Eugene W. Davies, to be postmaster at Athens, in the county of Bradford and State of Pennsylvania.

Andrew N. Brice, to be postmaster at Sunbury, in the county of Northumberland and State of Pennsylvania.

Henry H. Williams, to be postmaster at Urbana, in the county of Champaign and State of Ohio.

Jeremiah Kerr, to be postmaster at Greenfield, in the county of Highland and State of Ohio.

Daniel H. Hensley, to be postmaster at Hamilton, in the county of Butler and State of Ohio.

Alfred H. Breese, to be postmaster at Mount Gilead, in the county of Morrow and State of Ohio.

John Waller, to be postmaster at Monticello, in the county of Sullivan and State of New York.

George G. Roe, to be postmaster at Clyde, in the county of Wayne and State of New York.

Gottlieb Schmidt, to be postmaster at New Ulm, in the county of Brown and State of Minnesota.

Clark Conkling, to be postmaster at Lyons, in the county of Rice and State of Kansas.

Solomon R. Washer, to be postmaster at Atchison, in the county of Atchison and State of Kansas.

Frederick W. Childs, to be postmaster at Brattleborough, in the county of Windham and State of Vermont.

Charles T. Drake, to be postmaster at Stoughton, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts.

Charles W. Seyde, to be postmaster at Miles City, in the county of Custer and State of Montana.

Thomas Kelley, to be postmaster at San José, in the county of Santa Clara and State of California.

John G. Joy, to be postmaster at Salinas, in the county of Monterey and State of California.

John Calder, to be postmaster at Willow, in the county of Colusa and State of California.

John Sherman Cady, to be postmaster at Sonora, in the county of Tuolumne and State of California.

Thomas J. Whiteman, to be postmaster at Carrollton, in the county of Carroll and State of Missouri.

Martin K. Barkley, to be postmaster at Nevada, in the county of Vernon and State of Missouri.

Charles H. Talmadge, to be postmaster at West Union, in the county of Fayette and State of Iowa.

Edward B. Cousins, to be postmaster at Audubon, in the county of Audubon and State of Iowa.

William H. Ward, to be postmaster at Salem, in the county of Washington and State of Indiana.

Henry C. Webb, to be postmaster at Bedford, in the county of Taylor and State of Iowa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 20, 1890.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. GEORGE ELLIOTT, of Washington, D. C.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will cause the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday to be read.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Speaker, there is evidently no quorum present, and I ask a call of the roll.

The SPEAKER (having counted the House) announced the presence of 75 members.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move a call of the House.

Mr. ATKINSON, of Pennsylvania. On that I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 53, noes 8.

So a call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll, when the following members failed to answer to their names:

Abbott,	Carlisle,	Geissenhainer,	Peel,
Alderson,	Carlton,	Gibson,	Phelan,
Allen, Mich.	Carter,	Gifford,	Randall, Pa.
Allen, Miss.	Caswell,	Goodnight,	Reyburn,
Anderson, Kans.	Catchings,	Grimes,	Seney,
Andrew,	Cheatham,	Grosvenor,	Simonds,
Arnold,	Clancy,	Grout,	Skinner,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Clarke, Ala.	Hall,	Smith, Ill.
Baker,	Clark, Wis.	Harner,	Smith, W. Va.
Banks,	Clunie,	Hayes,	Smyser,
Barnes,	Cobb,	Hemphill,	Spooner,
Bayne,	Cogswell,	Herbert,	Stahlsacker,
Belknap,	Compton,	Hopkins,	Stephenson,
Bergen,	Connell,	Kelley,	Stewart, Ga.
Biggs,	Cooper, Ind.	Kilgore,	Stockbridge,
Bingham,	Cothran,	Knapp,	Stockdale,
Blanchard,	Covert,	Lacey,	Struble,
Bliss,	Cowles,	Lanham,	Sweeney,
Blount,	Craig,	Lansing,	Tarsney,
Boatner,	Crain,	Lehlbach,	Taylor, Joseph D.
Boutelle,	Crisp,	Lewis,	Tillman,
Bowden,	Culbertson, Tex.	Mansur,	Turner, Kans.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Cutcheon,	McAdoo,	Turnpin,
Brewer,	Dargan,	McCarthy,	Walker, Mass.
Brown,	De Haven,	McClammy,	Wallace, N. Y.
Brown, J. B.	De Lano,	McClellan,	Washington,
Browne, T. M.	Dingley,	McCord,	Watson,
Browne, Va.	Dockery,	McKenna,	Wheeler, Mich.
Buckalew,	Dorsey,	McRae,	Whitthorne,
Bullock,	Dunphy,	Milliken,	Wickham,
Bunn,	Ellis,	Morey,	Wilber,
Burrows,	Enloe,	Niedringhaus,	Wiley,
Burton,	Ewart,	Norton,	Wilkinson,
Caldwell,	Farquhar,	Nute,	Williams, Ohio
Campbell,	Featherston,	O'Neil, Mass.	Wilson, Ky.
Candler, Ga.	Fowler,	Owen, Ind.	Wilson, Mo.
Cannon,	Frank,	Payson,

During the roll-call the following members appeared and were noted as present in accordance with the provision of the rules:

ABBOTT, ALDERSON, ALLEN of Michigan, ANDREW, BAKER, BANKS, BAYNE, BELKNAP, BERGEN, BLANCHARD, BOUTELLE, BOWDEN, BRECKINRIDGE of Arkansas, BREWER, JASON B. BROWN, BURROWS, BURTON, CALDWELL, CARLISLE, CARTER, CHEATHAM, COBB, COGSWELL, COOPER of Indiana, COVERT, CUTCHERON, DINGLEY, DOCKERY, DORSEY, ELLIS, GROSVENOR, HERBERT, LACEY, LANHAM, LEHLBACH, MCKENNA, JOSEPH D. TAYLOR, WALLACE of New York, and WILLIAMS of Ohio.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

Mr. KELLEY. I shall object, Mr. Speaker, unless I can ascertain whether my name has been recorded as present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can make the motion.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I desire to inquire whether the proceedings, having been dispensed with, will be made a matter of record?

The SPEAKER. They will be necessarily a matter of record, but the gentleman, if present during the call, can cause his name to be entered by the Clerk, under the rule.

Mr. MILLIKEN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to know if my name is recorded as present.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the Journal of the proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. McMILLIN. My colleague [Mr. ENLOE] is detained from the House on account of sickness in his family.

The SPEAKER. Such announcements are not in order, the proceedings having been dispensed with under the rule.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REPRINT OF A BILL.

On motion of Mr. BUTTERWORTH, by unanimous consent, 300 additional copies of the bill (H. R. 3353) for the prevention of a trust on stock cattle, beef cattle on foot, and the shipping and sale of dressed beef, except on certain conditions, were ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BURLINGTON, IOWA.

Mr. GEAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 302) and consider the same, with an amendment reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the amendment proposed by the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, and other Government offices, in the city of Burlington and State of Iowa, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000, which said sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses; Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Iowa shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to explain to the House that the Senate bill No. 954 on the Speaker's table, as it actually passed, is the same as the amendment which has been read to the House bill.

Mr. GEAR. I ask the adoption of the Senate bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think the report should be read.

The report (by Mr. KERR, of Iowa) was read, as follows:

[To accompany bill S. 954.]

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have had under consideration the bill (S. 954) authorizing the construction of a public building at Burlington. They find it to be identical with House bill 302.

Your committee recommend that House bill 302 do lie on the table and that Senate bill 954 do pass.

[House Report No. 417, Fifty-first Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 302) for a public building at Burlington, Iowa, report as follows, and recommend the passage of the bill:

Burlington is a city of 30,000 population, situated on the west bank of the Mississippi River, its local business covering a large district in Illinois on the east and Iowa on the west. It is an important railroad center.

During the year 1889, 267,335 cars of freight entered and departed from Burlington, being a daily average of 733 cars. During the year 1889 there was received for distribution at Burlington 283,000 tons of merchandise, and of this there was shipped to the interior 262,000 tons. Over 100 passenger cars arrive at and depart daily from Burlington. The railroad lines running into the city are the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, the Chicago, Burlington and Kansas City, the Burlington and Northwestern, the Burlington and Western, the Burlington and Cedar Rapids and Northern, the Burlington and Keithsburg, and the Burlington and Quincy.

The manufacturing interests of this city employ over 3,000 hands, and the sales by wholesale houses and manufacturers for 1889 were over $20,000,000. The gross receipts of the post-office for the year ending June 30, 1889, were $41,830.05; expenses, $23,765.62; net revenue, $18,064.43; percentage of net earnings to expenses, 57 per cent; salary paid to postmaster, $5,000; clerk mail, $1,315.717; money-order business, $324,008.94; registered mail, pieces handled, 4,230; special delivery, 1,361; number of employees, 11 regular carriers and 3 subcarriers, and 10 office clerks. One hundred and eight postal clerks are employed on lines centering in Burlington, 60 of whom are paid at this city, not including 35 employed on Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad postal service.

The city being the headquarters of the chief clerk for the territory covering the south half of Iowa and parts of Illinois and Missouri, the office of the collector of internal revenue for the fourth Iowa district is located in Burlington. Two deputies, three clerks, and one gauger are employed. The receipts from internal revenue are $75,900. One surveyor and one deputy surveyor of the customs office are located at Burlington. Fifty-three boats are registered at the port.

The present post-office facilities are inadequate to the business, being one floor 36 by 87 and one storage-room in basement 25 by 49. The internal-revenue office, including vault, is now confined to a space 20 by 53, with storage-room 20 by 60. The customs office has now a room only 20 by 29. In view of the inadequate facilities for transacting the Government business at Burlington, and the importance thereof, your committee are of the opinion that a public building should be erected at that city, and they recommend its passage.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I ask the gentleman in charge of this bill whether the appropriation is embodied in the bill?

Mr. GEAR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. I move to strike out the appropriation.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I will accept the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The first question is, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the Senate bill by striking out, in lines 13 to 16, the words—

Which said sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. GEAR moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, the bill (H. R. 302) will be laid upon the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT YORK, PA.

Mr. MAISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask permission to call up for immediate consideration the bill (H. R. 749) for the erection of a public building at York, Pa.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise procure a suitable site, which shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings, and cause to be erected thereon, at York, in the State of Pennsylvania, a substantial and commodious public building, with fire-proof vaults, for the use of the post-office and internal-revenue and other Government offices there located, the plans and estimates for said building having first been prepared, examined, and approved as required in section 3734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and based upon calculations and specifications that will insure the completion of the building and the purchase of the ground at a cost not to exceed the sum of $150,000; Provided, That no money to be appropriated for said building shall be used until a valid title to the site selected shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Pennsylvania shall have ceded to the United States jurisdiction over the same for all purposes, during the time the United States retains the ownership thereof, except for the enforcement of the criminal laws of the State and the service of civil process therein.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the report be read first.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks for the reading of the report, subject to objection.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 749) for the erection of a public building at York, Pa., having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

The city of York contains 21,000 inhabitants, and adjoining towns, separated only by the city lines, contain about 4,000 more. It is the center of one of the finest and richest agricultural sections of the Union. In the city are seven national banks, two large car-shops, an immense agricultural implement manufactory, and numerous minor manufactories. There are seventy cigar manufactories in the city and eight hundred in the county, the product of which in 1887 was over 200,000,000 cigars. York is the point where the Northern Central Railroad is crossed by the Frederick Division of the Pennsylvania Central. An independent road is also in operation between York and Baltimore by way of the famous slate quarries, in the southern part of the county.

The amount of internal revenue collected at York from 1883 to 1889 is as follows, namely:

1883	$429,626.70
1884	441,393.54
1885	452,857.22
1886	555,170.18
1887	614,851.44
1888	628,996.69
1889	682,625.18

The place in which this vast business is transacted is a second-story back room, wholly inadequate for the purpose. There is no vault for the safe-keeping of books, papers, stamps, and other public property.

The accommodations of the post-office are equally unsatisfactory. The office is the dining-room and kitchen of an old dwelling-house, and is entered at an angle of the public square of the city. The office is separated from a store on the one side and rear yards on the other by thin board partitions with cracks that may be seen through. It is an entirely unsafe depository for the public property necessarily accumulated there, and for the valuable correspondence of the people.

The gross receipts of the post-office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, were $25,327.73; total expenses, $12,875.56; net revenue to the Government, $12,452.17; gross receipts for the year 1888, $26,533.26; total expenses, $13,377.10; net revenue to the Government, $13,156.16; gross receipts for the year 1889, $28,851.21; total expenses, $13,449.87; net revenue to the Government, $15,401.34.

In the public square of York, in history commonly called Yorktown, in a building known as the State House, at the Continental Congress during the gloomy years of 1777-'78. It was there that the articles of confederation were completed and adopted by Congress. There the Conway cabal exploded; there La Fayette came to support the commander-in-chief, and there the board of war guided the Revolutionary struggle under the presidency of John Adams and the secretaryship of Thomas Paine. These important historic events can be appropriately commemorated upon a public building at that city.

Your committee, in consideration of the foregoing facts, recommend the passage of the accompanying substitute for bill H. R. 743, with the following amendment:

Strike out the words "one hundred and fifty," in line 16, and insert instead the word "eighty."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MAISH moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARYLAND CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE—MUDD VS. COMPTON.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I understand there is an hour and five minutes remaining on that side and an hour and ten minutes upon this. Am I correct, sir?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that that is the fact?

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. We will hear from the gentlemen on the other side.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COMPTON] has the floor for an hour.

Mr. COMPTON. Have I the privilege of controlling that time, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has that privilege.

Mr. COMPTON. Have I the privilege to control the time? Suppose, for instance, I do not use the whole hour, will I have the right to give the privilege to another gentleman to speak?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that is the custom. The Chair understands that there is an hour and five minutes on the right and an hour and ten minutes on the left.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I hope we will have order at the beginning, at any rate.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. COMPTON. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask the attention of this House while I, in a plain, unvarnished way, present for its consideration, as best I can, the facts in this case as developed by the testimony. I shall endeavor, Mr. Speaker, in treating the case to work absolutely within the record, so far, sir, as what I may have to say shall affect the facts in this case. It may be, sir, that I shall ask for some latitude of debate in treating one feature of the case, but only one.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say to you, and to this House, in the outset that I have but one appeal to make. "Hear me for my cause, and be silent, that you may hear; believe me for mine honor, and have respect to mine honor that you may believe; censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses that you may the better judge."

Before I proceed, Mr. Speaker, to a discussion of the facts and figures and testimony in the case, I desire to briefly allude to the addresses made on yesterday by three distinguished gentlemen upon the other side. My acquaintance, sir, has been very limited with the distinguished gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] who opened this debate, but that acquaintance has made a most favorable impression on me. I recognize in him, sir, an accomplished lawyer and gentleman in his manner and in his treatment of his fellows, and I believe a fair and honorable man. But, sir, in justice to myself and to this case I am bound to say that in one statement which that gentleman presented to this House he wandered as far from the truth as he could well have gone—unintentionally, I know.

He stated, sir, that Ed. Pumphreys was a Democratic deputy marshal. The testimony in this case shows that Ed. Pumphreys was a Republican deputy sheriff. Only so much to show, sir, the gentleman, no matter how carefully and critically he may have read the testimony and no matter how fair and honorable was his purpose, he has made a mistake. It is true, sir, that Mr. Pumphreys claimed to be a Democrat, but on the election day, in the first precinct of the third election district of Anne Arundel County, he bore the commission of a deputy sheriff from the Republican sheriff; and, as I shall undertake to show when I come to that branch of the case, he was one of those who sought to give to the Congress of the United States and the Republican committee of this House an opportunity, of which they have availed themselves, to throw out the election in that district.

And now, sir, in reference to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], in whom I recognize an accomplished man, a trained orator, and a high-toned, chivalrous gentleman, I want to say that hardly does it become a man occupying the exalted position which he occupies, in the closing remarks of his speech to this House, to call to the attention of his brethren upon that side of the Chamber the fact that I had so borne myself during my service as to win the respect and confidence and good will of many of them, and that that should not be allowed in a controversy like this, where the truth alone is sought to be established, to weigh with fair-minded men in my favor.

Now, Mr. Speaker, with reference to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENHALGE]. I heard that speech, and I regret that I did not hear it. I believe from what I have heard of that gentleman that he will live to see the day when he will regret that he made it. Mr. Speaker, the speech of the gentleman is the third one I have heard him make in this House, filled with wit and humor and anecdote. It brought to my mind an anecdote. I heard a story once of a guest at a country inn. When he heard the bell ring, and seeing a servant pass, he called out: "Jim, what bell is that? Is that the first bell?" "No, boss; dat is not de first bell." "Is that the second bell, Jim?" "No, boss; dat is not de second bell." "Well, Jim, if it is not the first bell and if it is not the second bell, what bell is it?" "Well, boss, dat is de second ringing of de first bell." [Laughter.] I have heard three ringings of the first bell from the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, it might and may be allowable for one to overdo a thing; and it may be, as it was said when he and I were boys, allowable to play to the pit, and here to the gallery; but never, sir, in my poor judgment, is any man ever justified in seeking to arouse the passions of a war long gone past, and which has been forgotten, by appeals to those prejudices and those passions which the memory of that war might inflame.

I have nothing to say, sir, in reply to the gentleman with reference to the provisions of the constitution of Maryland which he so lightly derided. I have nothing to say in defense or justification of the unfortunate occurrence twenty-nine years ago, in the streets of Baltimore, to which that gentleman saw fit to allude. But, Mr. Speaker, I appeal to the old State from which he hails. Has Massachusetts—probably the grandest of all the old Commonwealths, save and except the mother of States across the Potomac—has she at last lowered the standard of her ideas of right and her ideas of what is great and worthy in the estimation of men? What think you, sir, would the shades of Story and of Choate and of Webster say, could they move among the living, and express their opinions of the standard which that gentleman [Mr. GREENHALGE] has sought to set up for the glorious old Commonwealth? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Sir, she has commanded, and deservedly commanded and received at the hands of the free American people from the day of her colonial birth to the present time, the meed of praise for having furnished some of the noblest specimens of mortality who have ever graced American history. And to-day, sir, her own John Sullivan wears the belt as the chief representative of the manly art in the physical world. [Laughter.] And has it come to this, that Massachusetts has lowered her standard so far as to seek upon this floor to grasp and gain the belt for the fun-making statesman of this House? for, if she has, sir, she has failed. Call him back and send another, for he is a failure. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GREENHALGE. I will ask the gentleman if Mr. Sullivan is not a member of the Democratic party.

Mr. COMPTON. I do not know and I do not care. [Laughter.] That has just about as much to do with this controversy as has the suggestion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENHALGE] yesterday with reference to the riot in Baltimore, and the suggestion that a man ought not to be believed because he would not "mister" a negro.

So much, Mr. Speaker, for what has been said by gentlemen who have spoken upon the other side. Now, sir, I come to the consideration of the facts in this case. Let me say, sir—and if I have lived to this time of life and am not able to establish among those who know me credit for my declaration I had better leave it unsaid—let me say with reference to this seat that if I did not believe, in the court of my conscience and in my judgment and best conviction, that I was elected to it, I would resign it and leave this House without a contest.

And now, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I must ask you to pardon me if I read from the record. But first let me say, and gentlemen will recognize the truth of what I say, that I have discovered, very much to my regret and, I am sorry to add, to the discredit of this House, that, as a rule, when an election contest is being considered by the House, a question of the highest privilege, then and there more seats are vacant in this Hall than upon any other occasion. Let me say another thing. As it strikes me, in the discussion of these cases, gentlemen who have addressed the House have assumed that their fellow-members upon the floor were as familiar with the incidents and facts in the case as they were themselves, and have therefore made assumptions and proceeded to statements of the testimony and to conclusions which the vast majority of the House did not apprehend because they had not studied the case. Now, if you will allow me and bear with me while I do it, I will endeavor to lay the foundation for the statements which I shall make before I proceed to make such statements or demonstrations.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is this case? We claim, and the other side must concede it, that upon the official returns as made to the governor of Maryland, even granting that the votes locked up in two boxes in Charles County are to be counted and added to the result and admitting that it is proper that the votes for "Sidney E." and "S. N." and "Mudd" should be credited to my opponent, and the vote "For Comp-tion" to me, they must concede to me, I say, on the face of the returns, a clear and undisputed plurality.

Gentlemen may do as they please, and say what they please, and turn and twist this subject as they please until they come to the investigation and production of other evidence, but upon the face of the official returns I am elected to this House and they can not but know it.

Mr. Speaker, what is the first question which arises in this case? It is a question as to the admissibility of the claim that 28 votes not returned in the official return from Calvert County to the governor shall be credited to the contestant in this case.

Now, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, what does the record say upon that subject? I know I shall probably weary you, but it is your duty to listen and it is my duty to myself and my case to make the statement. Two days after the election in Calvert County the return judges of that county, every individual man of them a Republican, appointed by a Republican board of county commissioners, no friends of mine politically, assembled, as required by law, at the county town of Calvert County, Prince Frederick, and there and then summarized, under their supervision, by the hands of another man, the returns. (I will come back to that presently and show how this testimony has been misrepresented, because this individual who they claim made up this return swears that he never saw the book.) They made up their official return, as I have said, two days after the election and returned it to the governor, showing 1,138 votes for Mr. Mudd.

Now, sir, upon that return we stand and are entitled to stand until the contestant demonstrates that it is defective. Can this proposition be denied by any man who has capacity enough to add a column of four figures?

Now, as to the testimony that is to break down this return—for it will not do, Mr. Speaker, before an audience like this to undertake to break down the official return by newspaper squibs and newspaper almanacs, and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] knows it. On the 6th or the 26th day of February, I do not remember exactly which, but about three months after the election, Mr. Mudd repaired to Calvert County court-house to summon witnesses to show and demonstrate that he had been improperly cut out of 28 votes.

Now, how does he proceed to destroy those official returns? First he calls the return judge of elections in each district, the man who had made the return and sworn to it; and holding one book of the poll, remember (or, observe, gentlemen, there are two books of the poll in every election district in Maryland)—holding one book of the poll he calls the attention of the judge to the figures therein and asks him if those were the figures therein when he made the return two days after the election. His reply is, "Yes." What is that, gentlemen, but an attempt to break down a certificate under oath by the mere memory of the man, which, as you and I know, is as fallible as any attribute of humanity? He does not even ask him what the figures were; he does not produce the other book of the poll; but he relies upon one book of the poll and the memory of the man, without asking him to note the figures.

But, Mr. Speaker, falsus in uno falsus in omnibus, and fraud vitiates everything. The law of the State of Maryland is mandatory and must be complied with, or the defect is incurable. In one of the precincts in which he undertakes to show the return on one of the poll-books, you will find, as was so elaborately shown yesterday by my colleague [Mr. GIBSON], that, instead of obeying the law of the State of Maryland and writing out those returns in letters, not in figures, the return is made in figures alone, and not certified by the clerks of election. What was the purpose and the object of the law of Maryland when it said that the returns shall be made in words, and not in figures? To avoid the very possibility of what seems to appear upon the face of this very case, the altering of the figures and the changing of the returns. Yet, upon such flimsy testimony as this, the contestant comes here and asks this House of Representatives to pronounce here and now that those Republican judges, when, two nights after the election, they made this return and swore to it, deliberately perjured themselves.

But, Mr. Speaker, gentlemen on the other side ask me why we did not verify the thing. There was no obligation upon us to do so. We stood upon the certificate, and it was their business to destroy it. We could not be called upon to prove a negative.

Now, I have shown you how they attempted to break down this sworn certificate; let me show you how they might have broken it down had it been possible to do so. In the first place, the very fact that they called for only one book of the polls throws suspicion upon the whole case, suspicion which they can not get rid of.

But, Mr. Speaker, what does the law of Maryland provide? It provides that as soon as the election shall be over the judges and the clerks of election shall make a tabulated return of all the votes cast and they shall deposit one of those returns in the ballot-box; that they shall give to the Democratic watcher and the Republican watcher a copy of those returns, and that the ballot-box shall be delivered to the return judge, with the key in the pocket of the minority judge, a plaster having been placed over the key-hole of the box. This ballot-box and these returns were in the hands of the friends of the contestant, the Republican clerk of Calvert County. Why did not the contestant by a judicial order open that box and show the returns therein in order to prove his claim? Why did he not call upon his Republican watcher or the Democratic watcher to come to the front and present the return made on the night of the election? But, best of all, with that ballot-box and those votes in charge of his own political friends, why did he not recount the ballots?

Sir, we stand, as I believe, upon absolutely unassailable and impregnable ground, and the contestant has failed to move us from our position. He had the means and opportunity, ample and abundant, had he seen fit to avail himself of it. But he did not do so, and there is but one conclusion and one fair presumption, and that is that he could not have done it.

Gentlemen on the other side talk about the testimony delivered by a Democratic editor of a Democratic paper in the county of Calvert and town of Prince Frederick. My friend said something about "God save the mark" and "Deliver me from such Democrats."

I do not undertake, and will not—because I have no justification and it would be wrong in me to do so—to question the veracity of Mr. Parman; but I do not believe in his Democracy, though he voted for me, he says. As I have always understood, he runs the independent paper, whereas the Journal is the Democratic paper. And some of you gentlemen on the other side know whether there is any difference between "Independent" and "Mugwump;" some of us on this side think the difference is between tweedledum and tweedledee.

But, Mr. Speaker, as to the testimony of other gentlemen in this case upon which the contestant relies so firmly for the destruction of this certificate, pardon me while I briefly allude to some of it.

Now, gentlemen, you will find that in the brief of the contestant and in the report of the committee special stress is laid upon what they claim as a fact, that Mr. Augustus Sollers Wilson, the Democratic deputy clerk, footed up the returns for the Republican judges two nights after the election. Now, I ask the attention of my friends on the other side to the testimony of Mr. Wilson, on page 272:

Augustus Sollers Wilson, a witness of lawful age, produced on behalf of the plaintiff, being first by me duly sworn, deposes and says:

Q. 1. Mr. Wilson, it has been stated here that you made the addition for the return judges of the vote for the several districts of this county and made up the returns for the county as a whole therefrom to be forwarded to Annapolis; is or is not that the case?

A. I did.

Q. 2. Will you state how it happened that the returns thus sent by you to Annapolis gave me 28 votes less than the returns filed by the several return judges in the clerk's office of this county?

A. I can't tell how it happened.

Q. 3. Do you know whether or not it did happen?

A. No; I can not say I do know exactly; I never saw the returns after they left here for Annapolis.

Q. 4. Do you know what figures you sent to Annapolis?

A. No; I don't remember.

Q. 5. Do you know what number I am entitled to from the returns from the various districts filed in the clerk's office?

A. I do not know.

Q. 6. Have you ever made an examination of the returns from the various districts?

A. I have made an examination.

Q. 7. Do you know therefrom what is my correct plurality over Mr. Compton in this county?

A. No; I can not say exactly.

This is the witness upon whom more especially than upon any other the committee rely, because they claim he footed up the returns two nights after the election.

Cross-examination by attorney for contestee:

Q. 1. Did you enter in making such returns such figures as were given you by return judges of election?

Now listen, if you please, my friends.

A. I did.

Q. 2. Did not you enter upon the certificate which the law requires the clerk to forward to the secretary of state only such figures and facts as you were directed by the return judges to forward and enter thereon?

A. I did.

Now, mark!

I put only those they told me; I did not see the books at all.

Gentlemen, I pause for a reply, and I hope you will find it; for, unless you do, on that testimony your case is gone in the estimation of any fair-minded man living on God's habitable globe.

But this is not all. I do not propose and would not for any consideration knowingly do any man any injustice; and I will read his testimony to the end:

Q. 1. Did you send on to Annapolis any certificate purporting to be the clerk of the court's certificate to the returns from this county?

A. I do not think I did the clerk's certificate; I sent on the returns of the judges of this county.

Q. 2. Mr. Wilson, didn't you tell me down-stairs to-day, in the presence of Mr. Dowell or Mr. Dowell standing near, that the returns sent on by you to Annapolis were a mistake and that those in the clerk's office were correct?

(Objection entered to the question.)

A. I did say so, and they are not correct unless they correspond with the books in the clerk's office—which he had sworn three minutes before he had never seen. It will not do for my friend from Pennsylvania to shake his head, for that is the record.

Mr. DALZELL. If my friend will allow me, He simply testified—and he should be fair enough to state it—that at the time of making the returns he did not have the book and had not seen the book, but he took those returns as read off to him by the judge. There is nothing in the testimony to warrant the inference he had not seen the book since that time. The testimony proves and confirms the accuracy of the returns on the books.

Mr. COMPTON. Let us see.

Int. 3. Do you mean to say, then, that the books in the clerk's office, as they are to-day, are the correct returns for this county?

A. I certainly do think they are correct, sir.

Does he swear to it?

I think they are correct.

Here is a witness whom you claim to have made an unequivocal asseveration as to the truth of the returns, and he tells you he thinks so.

And listen to this:

Recross-examination:

Q. 1. In answer to interrogatory No. 3 you stated that the books now in the clerk's office contained the correct returns. Do you know this of your own knowledge or did you mean to state that the books of to-day contain the same entries as they did on the day they were returned by the judges of election?

A. To the best of my knowledge they contained the same entries.

Mr. GREENHALGE. What else could he say?

Mr. COMPTON. What else could he say! If he had knowledge he could have sworn to it.

Mr. GREENHALGE. He does, to the best of his knowledge.

Mr. COMPTON. Now listen to the clerk who had these returns in his actual physical possession, in his hands and under his eyes, all the time. This is the testimony by which these gentlemen seek to break down certificates signed under oath by four judges of election:

Q. 5. Do the returns now in your office contain the same figures as to my vote and that of Mr. Compton that they did when filed by the return judges in your office?

A. I feel sure they do.

Did he not know? What is he talking about feeling sure? I feel very sure the sun is shining, but I am not out of doors and can not swear to it. He was in possession of positive knowledge, and could have sworn to it; but he says, "I feel sure" of it. It is an evasive answer. It was his duty to know.

I can not go fully into the subject, as I would like to. There is much that might be said on this point, but I will only take the salient points and make as best I can a statement to bring them to your attention.

Now, I deny that any testimony sufficient in the estimation of any man who knows how to weigh testimony, although he be as I am, no lawyer, has been adduced to invalidate or destroy the original certificate made by the Republican judges in this case.

Gentlemen, the feature in this case is that of the recount, and the attorney, the astute, suspicious attorney upon the other side, who personally, I know, plays under the mask of a civil-service reformer and is an uncompromising and a most violently prejudiced Republican, sought in vain to throw suspicion upon it. I say it within the hearing of my colleague, his representative, and I do not believe he will question the loyalty, the true, uncompromising Republicanism of Mr. Rose.

Mr. GREENHALGE. Is not the chief reason for your attack upon Mr. Bonaparte the fact that he is not here?

Mr. COMPTON. I have not made an attack upon Mr. Bonaparte. What has come over the spirit of the genius of the gentleman from Massachusetts? [Laughter.]

What does the gentleman mean? He seems to be astray on every point. I have not mentioned Mr. Bonaparte's name. He was only counsel to appear before the committee for the purpose of making a little speech. Mr. Rose was the counsel in the case. Has not the gentleman read the record?

Mr. GREENHALGE. Then I will put the same question in regard to Mr. Rose. Is not the chief reason that you make an attack upon him because of the fact that he is absent?

Mr. COMPTON. Is it an attack on a man to say that he is a pronounced Republican? [Applause on the Democratic side.] I do not say that I do not respect the man who is a pronounced Republican.

Mr. GREENHALGE. Then it is the first declaration of fact you have made during the discussion of the case. [Derisive laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. COMPTON. Well, the House can take your word for it. I am content.

Now, as I have said, the next feature is the recount, and I was about to say that Mr. Rose, who prepared the brief of the contestant, and I repeat it now, that Mr. Rose masks in the guise of a civil-service reformer when he is a Republican. (I do not quarrel with him for his Republicanism, but I quarrel with him for his civil servicism. [Laughter.] Can the gentleman distinguish?) Mr. Rose drew the brief of the contestant in the case, and lay special stress upon certain queries which he injects there, and the gentlemen representing the majority of the committee have followed to a certain extent his illustrations example as to why the recount was made in certain precincts and not made in others.

Now, I will tell you. First, because an honest Republican clerk of election in the gentleman's—the contestant's—own county said on the day after the election that in the ninth district of Charles County a vote had been counted for contestant to which he was not entitled. Was I not justified in recounting that box? I recounted the box in the first precinct of the first district of Baltimore County, because a Republican friend who was in the room on the night of the election with a Democratic friend by his side said to me that as the count progressed that night "we counted a vote for the Prohibition candidate for Mudd, by mistake, and it was tallied, but agreed when the count was concluded that it should be corrected." In the hurry, however, and confusion of the count the correction was forgotten and was not made. Was I not justified in recounting that box?

I was told by a Democratic friend that a gentleman in the sixth precinct of the fifteenth ward had given him the word of a man whose word he never questioned that he and others had cast their votes for Harrison and the Republican electors and for me for Congress, and, more than that, I was put upon my guard with reference to those who counted the votes in that and in the other precincts. Was that not justification and reason sufficient for recounting those districts? And in every single case but one, Mr. Speaker, in every single instance but one the result was verified by the recount.

And now, gentlemen of the committee, I ask your attention; I appeal to your candor; I appeal to your sense of right and justice. In a precinct in the sixteenth ward there were two poll-books of return. There they are in the record. One of them showed 223 votes for Mr. Mudd and the other showed 222 votes for him. Now, as candid men, tell me, if you please, when the recount confirmed the 222 votes, why you persist in counting 223 for Mr. Mudd.

Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time I have remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has thirteen minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. LACEY. Before the gentleman from Maryland proceeds, let me say that the committee simply followed the recount as it appeared, and allowed whatever it might have.

Mr. DALZELL. The committee allowed the whole recount.

Mr. COMPTON. But your mistake is in counting the other column—223 votes—for Mr. Mudd.

Mr. DALZELL. We allowed the recount.

Mr. COMPTON. Oh, that is all plain, my friend. He knows that if he gives me 1 vote on the recount and still gives to my opponent the 223 votes that it is an act of injustice to me, and that the vote which he does allow me does no good.

Mr. LACEY. If it was so, it was a mere clerical mistake.

Mr. DALZELL. In the summing up of the case that I made before the House on yesterday I gave the gentleman the benefit of every single solitary vote claimed by the minority of the committee and by his counsel before the committee in connection with the recounts.

Mr. COMPTON. That was the basis of the recount, and, though they endeavored, they sought in vain to break it down, both counsel for contestant and the Committee on Elections, and justice has forced them to confess that the recount is absolutely unassailable and impregnable, and they did it, I am sorry to say, reluctantly.

Now, then, there is no dispute about the 19 votes given to me by the recount. The next condition of things to which I would ask your attention is as to a number of votes claimed to have been improperly registered on both sides of this controversy and a number allowed by that side—or the committee on that side—and the number denied to him by the committee, as well as the number claimed by the contestee and refused by the committee. Now, this is a question of law, and, as I have already said and as I presume is well known to the House and my fellow-members on this floor, I am no lawyer.

The SPEAKER. The Chair begs to interrupt the gentleman from Maryland to say that in the estimate of time remaining to the gentleman the Chair did not include the five minutes beyond the hour allowed by unanimous consent.

Mr. COMPTON. Then how much time have I now remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman now has fifteen minutes.

Mr. COMPTON. I must hasten on. This, I say, is a question of law, a question of Maryland constitutional law, which the great successor of Webster deals with slightly and of which he thinks so little. But the constitution of the State of Maryland, which is the organic law of the State and can not be abrogated or broken down at will, thank God, so long as there presides in the center of this Capitol an honest, fearless Federal Chief Judiciary, even by the sophisms of the distinguished lawyer from Massachusetts—the constitution of the State of Maryland makes registration a qualification for a voter—not only a qualification, but a prerequisite—and provides that the Legislature of the State shall pass a registration law in conformity with the provisions of the constitution. That the Legislature has done; and I respectfully submit to any lawyer that, in view of the constitutional and local provisions of the statute-book of the State of Maryland, this honorable House of Representatives can find no authority under the Constitution or decisions of the Federal courts in this country to justify them in going behind the State statutes. But, Mr. Speaker, I know that our friends inject a vast amount of India rubber into that instrument. And I fancy I see plodding through their minds and their consciences the declaration which they deem an unanswerable reply to the declaration which I have made, that this House is the absolute judge of the qualifications and returns of its members.

Mr. Speaker, while it is, it is so under the limitations of constitutional provision. No man, no lawyer or man who professes to be a lawyer, and no layman of ordinary capacity would undertake to read and construe one provision of the Constitution except in the light of adjacent and other provisions of that Constitution. Now, sir, I come (and I am sorry to say that I have no further time) to what I know my friends upon the other side construe as the turning-point and the conclusion of the whole question in controversy in this case, and that is the reported condition of things in the first precinct of the third district of Anne Arundel County.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the gentlemen upon the other side understand this question as well as I do. They know they are upon thin ice in the Calvert County matter; they know they are on thinner ice in regard to improperly registered voters; and therefore they are reduced to the desperate expedient of taking out 200 votes in the election district in Anne Arundel County, or they can not stand before an intelligent people and ask that the seat to which I was elected be given to the contestant in this case. Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish I had time. As I said in the outset of my remarks I propose to deal with the facts in this case and abide and stand on the record, but upon one general proposition connected with it I wish to take a little latitude. It was upon this question of intimidation of colored voters and the general proposition that I desire to address myself earnestly to my friends on the other side of this House, but I fear the time will be denied me.

I could a tale unfold, gentlemen of the Republican party, in connection with this question, keeping justly and rigidly within the pale of truth, as I have endeavored to do within the pale of this record, and open the eyes of any man from your section who is, as you must be, personally unacquainted with the true condition of things in the section of Maryland from which I come; but, as I said, the time is denied me.

Mr. WASHINGTON. Take the time.

Mr. COMPTON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish I could take the time, but I am not the master of the time. Upon what testimony and upon what kind of testimony do our friends upon the other side rely for this claim of intimidation of 175 colored voters, and the justification which they find therefor in throwing out this election precinct? First, sir, they produce the Republican return judge, and I undertake to say here, and I would say it if he stood there, because the record justifies me in saying it, that a swifter witness to perjure himself never stood on any stand. I say it deliberately, and I appeal to the record.

What did he say and what did he do? He was there during the entire day. He remained in the room with his associates and the clerks during the entire day. He had the power under the law of Maryland to summon the posse comitatus and command the peace. What did he do? He did not allude to the fact of anything wrong outside of the room, because he had no knowledge of any wrong, though he had two eyes and two ears and an open window between him and where the said wrong was done. And after the poll was closed the ballot-box was opened, and that return judge there and then with his associates counted the ballots, next day took them to Annapolis, and there in the presence of Major Howard and his clerk announced to him that the election the day previous was a perfectly fair and quiet one, and no trouble about it.

What does he say on cross-examination? When asked if he did not know that as judge of election he had the power under the law to command the peace, he said no; he knew nothing about that. When asked if he had ever served as judge of election before, he said he had never served as a judge of election before; and out of the mouth of his own associates in the room, and a crowd of responsible and respectable witnesses outside of it, it is proved that the man had served three times as judge of election, and on one occasion he had refused to sign the returns.

And as to Jubb, the other judge of election. His animosity to me and his character were enough to break his testimony.

And now let me call your attention to the testimony of one of the contestant's own witnesses in this case. He called Mr. John Williams and asked Mr. Williams if he would believe Mr. Hines and Mr. Jubb upon their oath. Mr. Williams said:

I do not know why I should not.

Then he was asked:

Then, Mr. Williams, if these gentlemen made a statement under oath to a certain set of facts and other named gentlemen made a statement of a different set of facts, what would you believe?

He answered:

I would believe the others as against Hines and Jubb.

Now, as to Mr. Hall. I have nothing to say against Hall except that he was a man whose dignity was easily offended.

Mr. Speaker, our friends on the other side talk about intimidation. The record brings out the fact which we in Maryland, and especially in my district, all had knowledge of, that only two years before the election in question these poor, "timid" colored men who, gentlemen tell us, obey the lash and the dictates of their former masters—one of these "timid" colored men brained a white man and killed him in his tracks right at the very window where this election was held. The testimony in this case shows that but one single man, and Hall himself swears he was a small man, interfered with any voter there, and Hall does not say the man pulled him out of the line; he simply says that he tore his ticket in halves.

Now, what do we find in this record? Numbers of these colored men—and I ask the privilege of putting the testimony upon this point into the record—numbers of these very colored men unqualifiedly swear that they saw nothing to stop them from voting except that Brother Hall told them not to vote. But, Mr. Speaker, there is one feature of this case that I want to present and to drive home to the minds of gentlemen upon the other side, and it is this: I charge right here and now that the testimony in this case shows, and it is demonstrable from the record, that there was a conspiracy there between the colored people and the Republicans to have that district thrown out. Four or five men who had repaired from the election to Mr. Armijener's store, when asked by him if they had voted, innocently answered, "No, we have not voted; Brother Hall told us not to vote; we are going to throw the district out;" and the testimony to that effect comes out from the mouths of more than one witness on the stand.

Now, as to Ed. Pamphrey; my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] describes him as a Democratic deputy marshal, and they ask why we did not summon him. Mr. Speaker, we did summon him and he declined to appear. We summoned him the second time and he came in such a condition that we could not put him on the stand. We then asked the other side to summon him; they dared not do it, because he was the go-between between the shrewd Republican sheriff of the county and the leaders there who, in connection with Hall and under instructions, sought to prevent the colored men from casting their votes in order to have a pretext for throwing out the district. We believed that we could drive him to the wall and prove the fact from his own lips, and we tried to get him, but he would not come, and the other side did not dare to summon him.

And Jubb (the judge), after saying there were about one hundred colored people at the window when the two men were pulled out (he says two or three), testified (page 60) as follows:

Q. How long after the colored men had been pulled away was it that Bill Hall told all the rest of the colored men, you say maybe a hundred, to go away?

A. The darkies seemed disposed to go to the window until Bill Hall said that, and then they left.

Q. The other colored people were disposed to go up and vote, and Bill Hall said that they had better go away, and they took Bill Hall's advice?

A. They were disposed to hold their ground.

Q. Until Bill Hall told them that?

A. Yes, sir; and then they went home.

Q. They appeared to take his advice?

A. Yes, sir; they moved off.

Elijah Richards (page 207), contestant's witness:

Q. How near to the polls did you get?

A. I suppose I got within about 5 feet of the window or door or whatsoever it is.

Q. Why didn't you vote?

A. The reason I didn't vote the time that I tried to get upon the window there was a little scrimmage made and they all came away from the window and I followed the crowd out.

Q. What sort of a scrimmage was it?

A. There was one young man got hold of another colored man there and threw him away from the door and told him he didn't vote there; he didn't belong in that precinct at all.

I. E. Cephas (page 119), contestant's witness:

He was asked why he did not vote, and he said in reply that he saw the vote of Hall was objected to, and they saw Hall could not vote there; he thought he would get away, and Hall said he did not think the votes would be anything if he did vote. Cephas then added: "Gentlemen, I did not see no danger; I didn't see no threatnings and no guns or anything of that kind."

J. J. Tankard (pages 106, 107), witness for contestant.

After giving the distance he was from the polls, he was asked:

Q. Why did you not go closer?

A. Well, sir, I started, and William H. Hall was ahead of me, and I saw they tore his ticket in two in his hand, and he said: "Men, leave the polls!" and with that all turned off and left the polls.

Q. And you heard Hall say, "Leave the poll, leave the poll?"

A. Yes, sir; after the men tore his ticket, and he said, "Men, leave the poll, leave the poll."

Testimony of Samuel Henson, colored:

Q. Who objected to your voting?

A. I don't know the man's name; I don't know the names now about the Neck much; but the man objected to our vote, and our head captain said he thought it would be best for us not to vote.

Q. What time did you get there in the morning?

A. I guess about 7 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Andrew Sampson when he went up to vote?

A. I did, sir.

Q. What happened to him?

A. Some man called him away, and said he couldn't vote in that district.

Q. Did you see Hall go up to vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened to him?

A. Some of them pulled him away; I can't say his name.

Q. Then you left?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anybody interfere with you or say anything to you?

A. They did not, sir.

Q. Did anybody trouble you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody threaten you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You say he, the head captain. Who is that?

A. Yes, sir; our head captain is Mr. Hall.

Q. Which Hall?

A. William H. Hall—old man Bill Hall.

Q. And he is the head captain?
A. Yes, sir.

Testimony of J. E. Wright, colored:

Q. How near to the polling place did you get?

A. I got up to the polls.

Q. Did you vote?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You voted, then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What hour was it that you voted, do you know?

A. I do not know, sir; I am hardly prepared to tell you what hour it was, but it was in the forenoon.

Q. When the polls first opened?

A. Pretty much when they first opened; yes, sir.

Q. Were you there when Mr. Hall was pulled away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you voted before that?

A. No, sir; I just came up behind him after he was pulled away.

Q. And you got your vote in?

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination.

By Mr. STANLEY:

Q. You say you voted there after Hall was pulled away?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anybody try to stop you from voting?

A. No, sir; not me.

Q. And they did not interfere with you at all, then?

A. No, sir; they didn't say any word to me at all.

Q. And you went there and voted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could other people have voted there if they had wanted to?

A. Yes, sir; there was an objection made at the same time I voted; but still I ventured it.

Q. You were determined to vote and you voted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of a confusion was there?

A. Well, there was a good deal of them talking, I don't know what they were talking about, right at the window where they handed the tickets in.

Q. Some one told you something?

A. They never told me nothing, and I asked no questions any more than what I seen; an interruption and the talking of them men, and some of them said there was a confusion, and some said they were rejecting the votes, and would not take tickets.

Q. So you went away?

A. Yes, sir; I went away and went home. I came down there about 8 o'clock and at half past 9 I left the polls.

Q. You didn't offer to vote?

A. No, sir; I had a ticket in my pocket.

Q. You saw no fighting?

A. No, sir; I didn't see no fighting.

And now, Mr. Speaker, what conclusion do the gentlemen upon the other side reach in reference to this district? Why, sir, they reach the very logical conclusion that because 175 colored men failed or refused to vote, made no effort to vote, did not try to vote, therefore 200 other men who did try to vote and who did vote should have their votes thrown out and not counted. I want to put one simple question to these gentlemen. I do not mean any reflection, I do not mean anything unkindly, but I ask you gentlemen, honestly and squarely, to come around a corner here with me and tell me whether, if there had been 168 votes for Mudd and 32 votes for me instead of 168 for me and 32 for Mudd, you would ever have thrown out that district. [Laughter.] Now, answer that question—just a whisper between you and me. [Laughter.]

Is not that the milk in that cocoanut? Is it not because you know that unless you do throw out that district this seat, to which I was honestly elected, is mine and can not be taken from me?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. COMPTON. I appeal to the House to indulge me for three minutes longer.

Mr. MCCOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be allowed the time he desires.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. I make the same request, Mr. Speaker.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. COMPTON. I only want to say, after thanking my colleagues [Mr. MCCOMAS and Mr. STOCKBRIDGE] for the request which they have made in my behalf, that I suppose the guillotine is ready and the ax is sharpened. If that is so, sir, the victim is ready, and while he will fall with the hot breath of an earnest protest upon his lips, he will fall without a quiver. I am made, I hope to God, of that kind of stuff which does not know how to—

* crook the pregnant hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning.

[Great applause on the Democratic side.] I would not flatter Neptune for his trident or Jove for his power to thunder.

Thank God, sir, I will resign and leave this office, as I have every other that I have ever filled, with clean hands and a conscience void of offense towards any one. [Applause.] I have sought, and if, as my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] said, I have won, the respect and esteem of gentlemen on the other side, I am proud of it; I have a right to be proud of it, for I have won it at no cost of principle.

But, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, make no mistake. I am a Democrat of the strictest sect. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I believe, and I know that every honest and fearless and honorable man will give me credit for it, and for the others I care nothing—I believe, in my cool judgment and on my conscience, that the preservation of American liberty, of the rights of the American people—all of them, not black only, but white, too—depends upon the enforcement of those principles which are inscribed upon the platform and record of the Democratic party. [Applause.] The motto on that flag as I see it borne aloft and always in the front, high, advanced, inscribed thereon, "Justice to all and special privileges to none," is the shibboleth under which I propose to live and die. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I take my seat, believing and knowing that my account here, as best my poor abilities have enabled me to perform my duties, is settled, square and correct, here and yonder. I ask naught of man but what as an honest man I am entitled to. Justice is all I ask. And what I say to you in conclusion is simply this: Fiat justitia, ruat cælum. If I am entitled to the seat, be men enough to give it to me; if I am not, on your consciences, I have no fault to find.

I return, sir, to a people whose confidence and affection, thank God! those of them whose good will is worth having. I feel in my heart of hearts I have and hold to-day; to a humble and unpretentious home where, thank God! happiness prevails. I go, if go I must, without a regret, because I have no self-reproach; and I tell you here and now, "exiled, more joy" I shall feel than any tin Caesar, with a whole House of Representatives at his heels. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio (after a pause, during which members on the Democratic side were crowding around Mr. Compton to extend their congratulations). Mr. Speaker, if the exercise of passing by and viewing the remains at this funeral is over, I would like to yield thirty minutes to my friend from Maryland [Mr. MCCOMAS].

Mr. MCCOMAS. Mr. Speaker, this is, as my colleague [Mr. Compton] has admonished the House, an important and serious question, but not to be decided by the eloquence with which my colleague has argued his own cause. Possessed of a warm heart and an intrepid spirit, he has urged that view which I am sure he honestly and wholly believes, that he was elected to the seat he fills. And if it be otherwise, Mr. Speaker, every generous-minded man must concede to him sincerity of spirit behind the fervor and the fire of his deliverance with respect to this controversy. But, upon this record and upon the reports and briefs which I have read and carefully considered I believe that my colleague was not elected on the face of all the precinct returns.

I find that Mr. Mudd was elected. I believe he was elected on the face of the returns by a plurality of 2 votes; that he is therefore entitled to the seat held by my colleague Mr. Compton.

If we go behind the returns after rejecting votes improperly counted and count votes improperly refused, Mr. Mudd was elected by a strong plurality.

The clear plurality on the face of the returns and upon the revision of the ballots is swelled to a plurality of more than 150 when we consider the transactions at the election in the first precinct of the third district of Anne Arundel County, justly thrown out by the majority of the committee because of the intimidation there practiced, intimidation which my colleague, the sitting member, is in no way responsible for and had, I am sure, no knowledge of, but which no longer should deprive Mr. Mudd of the seat to which he was elected.

I say that Mr. Mudd was elected on the face of these returns because the tabulations of all the precinct returns of all the Congressional district show that fact.

The only answer made to this tabulation is that from Calvert County, the returns sent to the governor only allowed Mr. Mudd 1,134 votes instead of 1,166 votes actually received by him. That Mr. Mudd did receive 1,166 votes in Calvert County is not only sworn to by the return judges from every precinct in that county, but proved by due certification by the clerk of court of the very returns signed by them and filed in the clerk's office of Calvert County two days after the election.

It is significantly affirmed by two newspapers, whose editors, standing by when the official count was made by the return judges, printed the returns in the two papers, one of them, at least, Democratic—the papers I now hold in my hand—one of them, as I understand, being edited by the counsel of the contestee; printed in the daily papers of Baltimore at the time, and promptly reported by the clerk to the governor when he wrote to the governor that the correct vote was 1,166, and asked the leave of the governor to correct this clerical error.

I have not found in the record a particle of proof denying that Mr. Mudd received these 28 votes taken from him by a clerical error. The minority report does not pretend that Mr. Mudd did not receive these 28 votes. This House will not deny him these votes as set out in the returns of the precinct judges here in this record. Thus, when we vote on the face of the returns, Mr. Mudd is the elected member, and the burden of proof is upon the contestee, Mr. Compton, to oust Mr. Mudd, under a familiar rule adopted by Congress.

I know that my colleague [Mr. GIBSON], in his speech yesterday, talked about the figures 379. If my friend has found anywhere in the returns the figures 379, as a correction of any of the precinct returns I hold in my hand, he can have thirty seconds of my time to show what page of the record it is on.

Mr. GIBSON. I made the statement then, and I make it to-day, that there was a forgery of the figures in the second precinct of the first election district of Calvert County—

Mr. McCOMAS. What part of the record proves your charge?

Mr. GIBSON. A forgery which is apparent from the record itself, because of the fact that it is only by the combination of the figures 379 and the other figures to which my colleague has alluded that there was a possibility of those five judges and two clerks adding up 1,138.

Mr. McCOMAS. Very well; then my friend finds 1,138, and because the figures on the precinct returns do not correspond with the 1,138, he goes back and says that some combination of figures (I am not talking of combinations; I shall talk of conspiracies presently)—that the combination of figures which he makes must squeeze the actual, true figures so as to correspond to the clerical error—

Mr. GIBSON rose.

Mr. McCOMAS. I can not yield further. My friend, in his endeavor to force down the majority, hits arbitrarily upon that precinct in that election district, and says, "These figures should be 379 instead of 407."

Mr. Speaker, there it stands. The President received 391 votes. Mr. Mudd ran a few votes ahead of that and received 407 votes.

But my friend says you must press and crush these figures into a smaller compass. My friend is an imaginative man. He has been led astray in this matter by visions. He has been dreaming. If he had gone on a summer trip instead of being engaged in this case he might have seen the sea serpent. [Laughter and applause.] If he had gone to the mountains he would have fancied faces and forms on every cliff. In every storm my eloquent friend would find a banner in the sky. It is this high imagination which causes these fancies and peoples for my friend the universe with strange but non-existent things. [Renewed laughter.] And thus my friend imagines these 379 votes. They are not in the record. They are not in the case, nor anywhere save in the perturbed and distorted fancy of my colleague [Mr. GIBSON]. Adding the votes of S. N. Mudd, S. E. Mudd, and Mudd, adding the vote wrongfully taken from Mudd, they make up 1,166; and no living witness has been brought to assail the verity of those official returns. Take the official count, take the official returns as filed by the proper officers; there they are, as they stood on the night of the election, as they stood on the day the return judges made them, as they stood when the proof was taken. They prove themselves and they make up 1,166 votes. When you add the three votes for S. N. Mudd and S. E. Mudd and Mudd there is a plurality of two on the face of the precinct returns upon which the contestant was in truth entitled to his seat upon this floor one year ago.

Mr. GIBSON rose.

Mr. McCOMAS. I have not the time to yield.

Mr. GIBSON. I will take but ten seconds. Explain why it is in this precinct, where I charge forgery, it is the only precinct in Talbot County where the two attesting clerks do not certify.

Mr. McCOMAS. Where does my colleague find that?

Mr. GIBSON. Do you understand that?

Mr. McCOMAS. I have not time to yield further. But if my friend wants an answer he shall have it.

Mr. GIBSON. Explain it if you can.

Mr. McCOMAS. There were three judges, and all the judges called swore the returns were correct. The clerks were then living. Living men could have been called. If that return was fraudulent living men could have been called to prove it. But no man was called to prove it. The minority report does not show it. Yet upon that shred Mr. Mudd, the contestant in this case, has been deprived of a seat upon this floor when he was entitled to it by having a majority of the votes on the precinct returns.

Mr. CRISP. Does the gentleman say those returns show the correct vote?

Mr. McCOMAS. I do.

Mr. CRISP. Does not the gentleman know that Compton was deprived unjustly of 19 votes, and if they had been included in the returns, conceding everything you say, Compton would have had a majority.

Mr. McCOMAS. I deny that there was a recount of that box.

Mr. CRISP. I mean of the whole district. You are attacking the face of the returns.

Mr. McCOMAS. I am.

Mr. CRISP. I say the votes making the return do not show the true vote.

Mr. McCOMAS. Does the gentleman say there is a scintilla of proof on the part of any living man that the total vote in that county was not 1,166 votes?

Mr. CRISP. I am talking now about another thing. The gentleman is talking—

Mr. McCOMAS. But that is my question, and I have been talking of the vote in Calvert County.

Mr. CRISP. But you say that on the face of the returns the contestant ought to have had the certificate of election. Now, I ask you if you do not know that these returns do not show the true state of the vote as admitted by the committee?

Mr. McCOMAS. Now, the gentleman does not answer my question, and I will give him 10 seconds of the brief time I have to do so.

Mr. CRISP. But the gentleman has switched off from his question, and so I have asked him one which I would like to have answered.

Mr. McCOMAS. My question was a very simple one, but it seems hard for the gentleman to answer. I say that the total face of the precinct returns in this county as footed up in this table showed 1,166 as the true actual vote. I asked the gentleman to show the error in that.

Mr. GIBSON. I will answer the gentleman's question, if he will permit me.

Mr. CRISP. If my friend will allow me a moment, I want to get him back to the point.

Mr. McCOMAS. I must decline to be interrupted unless the gentleman can put his question in a very few seconds.

Mr. CRISP. I will do so. I can not of course, without turning to the record, give the exact figures, but you are talking about the whole certificate. Now, you stated that the contestant ought to have had the certificate on the face of the returns, and I ask you if you do not admit what the committee admits, that the face of the returns does not show the true vote?

Mr. McCOMAS. Now the distinguished gentleman from Georgia is harping on the recount, and he can not give the figures, as he says, without taking time to examine the record and looking up the points which will enable him to make an answer to my challenge.

Mr. CRISP. Oh, that is immaterial.

Mr. McCOMAS. It is entirely material. It is the point. I am not talking of the official count as the governor had it, but of the official precinct returns, of the aggregate returns in Calvert County and adding to them the votes given for S. E. Mudd, S. N. Mudd, and Mudd combined, give him a plurality on the face of the official precinct returns throughout the Congressional district, without any question of error or mathematical correction or without any assault upon the figures which would entitle the contestee to the certificate.

Mr. CRISP. But the point is that you do not claim that they represent the true vote.

Mr. GIBSON. And the living witness that my colleague has asked for—

Mr. McCOMAS. Well, I can not yield any further to my colleague. My friend is certainly not that living witness.

Mr. GIBSON. I will state that there were three witnesses living who have certified to the vote as 1,138, and not 1,166.

Mr. McCOMAS. And I answer from the record that there is not a living witness to so testify, and when I challenged my friend last night to lay his hand upon the fact he did not do it, and he comes in to-day without an instance in the whole record to substantiate his assertion that the contestant's vote was 1,166.

Now, if the majority on the precinct returns approaches the disputed votes—and I must hasten on, as my time is rapidly drawing to a close—and the minority allow Mr. Mudd 22 votes and the majority allow him 54, while the minority allow Mr. Compton 10 and the majority allow him 17, taking the addition of these disputed votes and the division made by the minority and the majority of the committee and adding them to the precinct returns, instead of benefiting the contestee in this case you merely add to the plurality of the contestant in the total vote. Any fair determination of these disputed votes overwhelms the alleged gain by this recount.

This class of votes in a Maryland court would be allowed without contention. I speak of registered, qualified voters, who presented themselves for registration at the proper time, who were duly registered as qualified voters, who went to the polls on election day and proffered their lawful votes and were refused merely because of the deliberate fraud or ministerial neglect of the registrar of voters to put their names on the poll-book in the hands of the judges of election, a neglect which the diligent voter could not possibly know until he applied at the election window; for he has a right to rely on the registration, "which registration," says the State constitution (section 5, article 1), "shall be conclusive evidence to the judges of election of the right of every person thus registered to vote at any election."

It is the common practice in Maryland for those voters convenient to the clerk's office, where the registrar's lists are deposited, to go from the polls to the clerks of the court to get the certificates of the clerk when the poll-books omit the names, but I have never before heard it contended that a citizen more remote from the court-house could be disfranchised by the criminal or ignorant neglect varying with the miles of distance or facilities of travel in any contest wherein it was proved he was a duly qualified registered voter and in person had proffered his ballot at his polling place.

For twenty-odd years I have observed the registration law in our politics. I know too well there is something in our climate causing the partisan registrar, whose perquisite it is in Maryland to tamper with our suffrage, to omit or misspell Republican names on the poll-books; but I have never yet known any court in that State, where our judiciary is impartial, to hesitate a moment in counting the votes such as are counted here, in part by the minority, and to the number of 54 for the contestant and 17 for the contestee by the majority of the committee in this report. Nearly all of these votes are of this character and are justly allowed Mr. Mudd. I shall not pause to discuss an isolated vote contested on the ground of identity, nor to insist upon six of these votes rejected because six other persons had illegally voted on the true voters' names.

In passing I remark that, with our Democratic election machinery, whenever you are told that six persons voted illegally on Republican names you may safely assume that the six illegal voters have cast six Democratic ballots. Political knaves in Maryland are not idiots. When they repeat at elections they repeat to count for their side.

The minority report in this case itself shows the weakness of the case of my colleague, the sitting member. It claims his plurality to be 30 votes. And this plurality of 30 votes includes the 28 votes in the second precinct of the first election district of Calvert County, to which Mr. Mudd is entitled, because his total vote in Calvert County was 1,166 instead of 1,138. Although on the third page the minority endeavor by argument too technical and too unsound to reject these 28 votes when properly certified by the clerk of the court of Calvert County from the precinct returns on the poll-books deposited in his office by law, nevertheless the minority adopts the same method of proof to give the sitting member 1 vote in the first precinct of the sixteenth ward of Baltimore.

When from the plurality of 30 in the minority report (on page 12) we deduct the 28 votes which in truth and in fact, as approved by the certified precinct returns, Mr. Mudd is entitled to, the plurality of my colleague is but 2 votes, which becomes a majority for Mr. Mudd when the 3 votes for "Mudd," "S. N. Mudd," and "S. E. Mudd" are given to the contestant, for whom they were polled.

On their report, therefore, the minority really start with a majority for the contestant, a majority on the face of the returns for Mr. Mudd. The recount of a few boxes in the district, boxes in certain precincts of certain wards of Baltimore City, boxes in the custody of a Democratic return judge, in the custody of the Democratic police board of Baltimore City and its Democratic employes, of the Democratic clerk of the circuit court of Baltimore County and his Democratic employes—such a recount does not import verity in Baltimore.

It will not satisfy an earnest seeker after the truth who knows the juggling with ballot-boxes there performed. Strong locks have not hitherto barred some of these partisans from changing ballots at will. Pasting a paper over the office and locking the ballot-box are not sure guards of the ballots. We in Maryland know this too well. Like Rob Roy's purse, these boxes are guarded at the top, but easily opened at the bottom. Such a recount has here been liberally allowed to Mr. Compton, giving 19 more votes than were counted for him in those few precincts, when he failed to recount all the precincts of the Congressional district.

On page 18 of the report is the final table of the minority. I show it to you. It gives a scant plurality for contestee of 37. Deduct the 20 votes therein of Mr. Mudd's assumed loss on this partial recount and the plurality dwindles to 17; but these 17 are included in the 28 votes belonging to Mr. Mudd in the Calvert County total of 1,166. These 17 votes are a plurality in the teeth of 28 votes which no member of the minority signing this report can deny Mr. Mudd actually received.

Such, Mr. Speaker, is the weakness of this case that the minority, with the face of the returns against their report and apart from the question of intimidation in the third district of Anne Arundel County, hang the whole case of the sitting member on again of 20 by a recount in a few precincts, chosen capriciously.

The intimidation of colored voters in the first precinct of the third district of Anne Arundel County was very effective. Of 475 registered voters, 252 are white and 223 are colored. When the polls opened 4 white men voted, then 15 colored men voted, then 187 white men followed, but 175 qualified registered voters with black skins swear that they left their homes to vote, but did not deposit their ballots. One hundred and sixty-one of these went to the polling-place, but did not cast a vote. The contestee's claim is these black men did not vote because they shrewdly suspected there would be a contest for this seat in Congress and that by abstaining this precinct would be thrown out. Surely an amazing compliment to these black voters! How skilled were they in the election law! Yet, practically, how stupid; for these 175 black votes would have carried the box for Mudd. There is a better reason why the colored vote was not polled; a better explanation why, after 15 black votes were rapidly polled, 175 failed to reach the box.

Five or six Baltimore roughs, strangers in that community, invaders of its peace, with "Tip" Wells, for five years a registered voter in Baltimore, as their guide, with Edward Pumphrey, and William Chairs, Democratic district manager, as their allies, were early on the ground. Some of them, with badges as United States marshals on the lapels of their coats, had stolen the livery of the nation to serve the Democratic party in. These Baltimore roughs early in the morning began to press Democratic tickets upon black voters. One, Samuel Gaither, was hindered, and when "Tip" Wells and Chairs gave the signal these roughs dragged Andrew Sampson from the line and snatched from the hand of William Hall, an excellent colored man seventy years of age, the leader of his race, one of the richest men of his community—snatched his ticket from his hand and tore it in pieces, denouncing them both, saying, "they did not belong there."

White Democrats quietly suffered this. "Tip" Wells and several roughs shouted, "Not a damn one of you shall vote unless you vote for Cleveland," and Hall was pulled away, and no "damned negro" did vote except the Democrat black man who did vote for Cleveland. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

They kept their faith, their oath, and their profanity together, and when White came up, and he was at the head of a line of 30 or 40, he was driven back.

In the wagons at that time were guns; some say that guns were loaded behind the house; and pistols were seen on the persons of these roughs. The black people were wholly unarmed, and Hall, with others about him, turned away, because, as Hall said, "If we can not vote, if our votes are rejected, we had better go away." One, John Emery White, tried to vote, and his ticket was grabbed away and he was told he could not vote unless he voted for Cleveland; and it appears that Frank Chairs, a Democratic internal-revenue storekeeper, and Wells agreed, "we have got them in check;" and when the blacks in a body again started for the window, the Democratic leader, William Chairs, called out, "Boys, don't go any closer; no damn nigger can vote here to-day;" and about 10 o'clock Rhoderick Kess, a black voter, tried again to vote and was struck in the face by one of the roughs, while Pumphrey went about the crowd of black voters and assured them that more roughs and marshals were coming that would shoot them if they tried to vote.

The minority say that these men ought to have done more to secure their votes. They say that this was a pretext to get them to throw out the box. If those 175 had been allowed to vote, besides the 33 that Mudd did get, it would have given that box to him by a clear majority. One hundred and seventy-five swear that they were not allowed to vote, and if they had been allowed to vote it would have given Mudd a clear majority.

The gentleman from Texas who signs the minority report may say it was not much of a storm. [Laughter.] Perhaps down in Texas it might not be. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] whose name is next thereon may say that this is very slight intimidation, and only a small matter which ought not to be considered. It might in Georgia be a small matter; but, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that when these men stood there and tried to reach the place to deposit their ballots and were hurled away, that certainly was intimidation grave and monstrous.

The minority assert that the old man Hill had stated that these people would get the box thrown out; that they might as well give it up; that the box would be thrown out, and that they could make an appeal. He is an American citizen and he concluded that he had a right to make an appeal to this Congress. And why could not he make an appeal? If you can not reach so far as Arkansas or as Mississippi to correct fraud on the ballot-box, if you can not secure a fair election free from intimidation and have the ballot-box easy of access and unattended by intimidation there, here under the shadow of the Capitol, here near the very seat of Government itself, he may have hoped that the national Congress would do justice, and not condone this accused intimidation of black citizens. Every fair-minded man in the State of Maryland will applaud you in the justice you will do. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I shall occupy none of the brief time remaining to me either in answering the eulogy which the contestee has so feelingly and eloquently pronounced upon himself or in discussing the merits of the contestee or of the State of Maryland. I honor and respect them both, and, if it be true, as was roaringly announced here yesterday, that that State has covered the contestee with honors, I congratulate him. If he has "sounded all the depths of honor and all the shallows of fame" he can better afford to enjoy a season of rest in honorable retirement than to remain here occupying a seat to which he was certainly not elected and which is as certainly the property of another. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, I can only glance at the salient features of this case. The first to which I call attention is the statement of the eloquent gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON] who addressed the House yesterday, that the important and decisive question in this case was whether the contestant was entitled to have counted for him 1,166 votes in Calvert County instead of 1,133. I do not agree with the gentleman that that question is decisive of this case, because, eliminating the 28 votes in dispute there, still the contestant is clearly elected. But if the gentleman's proposition be true, then what becomes of the claim of the contestee in this case? For, sir, I undertake to say that if anything in this case be proven beyond a reasonable doubt it is that in the county of Calvert 1,166 votes were cast for the contestant. The gentleman [Mr. GIBSON] loudly proclaimed upon yesterday that on the night of the election the judges of election in the second precinct of that county swore that there were 379 votes cast for the contestant, instead of 407, as we claim, and he has loudly announced that the judges upon that night proclaimed to all the bystanders that there were 379 votes cast for the contestant, and not 407.

Mr. GIBSON. The clerks.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. Very well; the clerks. Say the clerks, then. Now, I want to say here, Mr. Speaker, that a careful scrutiny of the record in this case justifies me in stating that neither the clerks nor the judges did either of those things, and I stand here to challenge the naming of a witness or the specification of an exhibit or a paper that even tends to prove any such statement as that made by the gentleman from Maryland. Sir, it is unquestionably proved that the judges and clerks upon that night did count in the precinct in question 407 votes for the contestant, and so announced and so returned. The gentleman also declared that the second day after the election eight men swore that there were 1,138 and not 1,166 votes cast for the contestant in Calvert County. I again say that careful examination of this record shows that statement to be wholly unfounded in fact.

All the justification there is for the statement is that upon the second day after the election these judges came together, when a hiring deputy clerk who was doing the clerical work figured up, or attempted to make a tabulation of, the precinct returns, and in so doing, instead of correctly stating them to be 1,166, he erroneously made the number 1,138, and that summing up went to the governor. That is all there is of it, and that is all the justification there is for saying that there were any men there who "swore" to these figures, 1,138. Because these men were sworn officers and signed that return supposing it to be correct—there being no evidence that they ever examined the figures or ever tried to prove or scrutinize or verify them—because they signed that return as made out by the clerk, supposing it to be correct, the returns forsooth are to be taken to be intallible.

Who ever heard of such a doctrine? Upon the contrary, to demonstrate there were 1,166 votes, we have the testimony of bystanders who were there when the count was made, among them a Democrat who voted for Cleveland and for the contestee, the editor of a Democratic paper, who was there for the double purpose of ascertaining as a politician what the vote was and of getting the figures of the true vote so that he might publish them in his paper. He swears that, sitting there, he ascertained the fact to be, and that it was understood and known generally, that the contestant had 1,166 votes, and he so published in his paper. And the Baltimore Sun, too, which, although unlike its New York namesake, does not shine for all, does at least shine for all Maryland Democrats, proclaimed that there were 1,166 votes cast there for the contestant. And, finally, as the primary evidence, the best evidence, the unanswerable evidence, I produce the returns themselves, certified copies of which are in the record, which show as certainly as two and two make four that 1,166 votes were cast in that precinct for the contestant. And yet, because this deputy clerk made this error, an error which he himself acknowledged and which he says as soon as he ascertained it he wrote to the governor for the privilege of correcting—because that clerk made this error we are told that no correction is to be made, but this Congressional district is to be disfranchised and the man elected as its Representative is to be deprived of his seat upon that technical ground, at the instance of a gentleman who thanks God with uplifted hands that he is right both here and hereafter. [Laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

I suppose that according to the theory of the gentleman who appeals to us as lawyers, if he were trying before a jury an issue as to what was the amount of three promissory notes and he produced the deposition of a man who swore that he had examined the notes and computed the amount and had found the aggregate to be $1,000, and rested his case, and then the other side produced the three promissory notes themselves, which read, as plainly as writing could, that each note called for $500, and also produced the man who had made the computation, and he said that after looking at the notes again he was satisfied he made a mistake and the true amount was $1,500, still my friend would insist that the deposition was correct and that the amount must still be $1,000, for that is the theory upon which the gentleman bases his claim as to the point which he says is to be decisive of this case. If so, sir, then is not the claim of the contestee the thinnest and baldest of pretenses? Enough upon this question. Now, sir, as to our right to have counted the votes of duly registered and qualified legal voters of this district who, being entitled to vote, having done all in their power to qualify themselves to vote, and, being duly qualified, presented their votes, which were rejected, I have only to say that if the plain letter of the statutes of the United States is to be regarded and followed there is no question in this case; and that is conceded, and the only answer made by contestee upon this point is that the law is unconstitutional. Sir, the law has never been declared unconstitutional. On the contrary, whatever courts have had occasion to review it have affirmed its constitutionality, and it was enacted expressly to meet a decision of the highest tribunal of the Republic, and is clearly constitutional under that decision. But I have always observed, sir, that whenever our friends upon the other side are driven from every other defense and compelled to abandon every other argument, they make a final grand rally, call up their reserve forces, and cry aloud that the proposition they object to is "unconstitutional." Their wondrous reverence and idolatry for that sacred document are only equalled by their vigilance and zeal in apologizing for or justifying the nullification and violation of the Constitution when they incur to the benefit of the Democratic party.

But, sir, leaving these points, by which the case of the contestant is most clearly established, I pass to the consideration of the first precinct in the third district of Anne Arundel County. There are several undisputed and unchallenged facts in that case. First, that there were 207 duly registered, legally qualified Republican voters in that district entitled to vote, and 174 Democrats entitled to vote there, and of these 174 the eloquent gentleman who has just pronounced his valedictory was scratched from 6, leaving 168 votes for the contestee. It is also in proof, by testimony undenied—indeed, admitted—that there were but 32 votes cast for the contestant, and that by the count upon that night and as allowed by the governor the contestee received 136 majority in that Republican precinct.

It is not denied that there were 175 colored Republicans there at the polls for the purpose of voting. Many of these poor men had walked weary miles for the purpose of exercising the privilege of casting their votes. They were there with tickets in their hands. They marched up to the polls to vote; they tried to vote, but did not vote because they were (whether there was reason for it or not) frightened away, and in consequence of their fright and terror the contestant lost 175 votes which, if they had been cast for him, would have left this contestee more than 100 in a minority, giving him everything he claims and eliminating from the contestant's claim everything to which the contestee objects.

I say these things are all conceded; and the only answer that is made by the contestee is that these men were frightened away without sufficient reason; that the conditions environing them were not such as to frighten away men of ordinary courage. Let us see. It is conceded that there had been trouble at these polls before and there had been rumors in the air in this precinct that it would be perilous for colored men to vote. Accordingly, as they arrived they did not venture to go at once to the polls, but gathered around an old mill near the polls until there had collected about 80 or 100 colored Republicans. They then concluded to venture up, in the hope that the assurance given by their numbers and the formidable array which they made would protect them from assault.

And right here, Mr. Speaker, may I not stop to inquire whether it is not a withering reproach, a blistering shame in this fair, free land of ours that upon election day, that day of days to the American citizen, a portion of the citizens of this Republic are compelled either to wait and collect in numbers sufficient to repel assault before they dare approach the polls or to skulk around in hiding-places watching for an opportunity to steal forth, noiselessly and silently, to the polls and then noiselessly and silently flee away like fugitive criminals or hunted beasts? I pray God, sir, that you and I and all of us may yet live to see the day when every American citizen can upon election day, in peace, in assured safety, go to the polls, the palladium of American freedom [applause], and there with his ticket enfolding his judgment, his conscience, his convictions, and wishes, deposit that ticket and walk away in peace and safety, knowing that his vote will be counted as he left it, knowing further that the thus expressed conviction, conscience, and judgment of a majority of his fellow-men shall dominate in the councils and policy of the nation. [Applause.]

Sir, until that happy day comes we are living under a continual menace. Until that day comes there can not be that peace, that quiet, that confidence, upon the part of all citizens which is the essential prerequisite to permanent prosperity. Until that day comes, great, proud, powerful, and rich as our Republic is, it can never arrive at the full measure of its majestic stature. Until that day comes the reasonable hope of the men who more than a century ago founded our institutions in their sacrifice and blood, and the reasonable hope of the heroic men who within our own memory poured out their blood in crimson currents on more than a hundred battle-fields, will never have been justified. [Applause.]

In the presence of this question, involving the integrity of the Republic, the supremacy of the Constitution, obedience to the law, and the enjoyment of the dearest and most valuable rights incident to American citizenship, all other issues dwindle into comparative insignificance.

But when these colored men marched up to the polls, who else were there? There were many Democratic white men; and there were a few Republican white men, who were so timid and cowed that they were of no assistance to their colored friends; and, over and above all, there were two wagon loads of Baltimore "toughs," a name which has been a synonym of lawlessness and outrage for more than a generation in our land. Why were they there? They did not live in the precinct; they had no right to vote there. But you can read the answer to the question in the conduct which followed. They were there early; they remained until every colored Republican had left the polls, abandoning in despair the effort to vote. Although these toughs lived twelve or thirteen miles away, they were there before the polls opened.

In this body of eighty or one hundred colored men there was one old patriarch more than seventy-two years of age. By his age, his intelligence, his education, his wealth (for it is in proof that he was one of the largest tax-payers in the precinct), and his conservative views, he had become a leader, a banner man among his race. He marched up well in front. As he approached the polls these "toughs" seized him; they dragged him from the ranks; they tore his ticket from him; they thrust him back and said to him, "You can not vote here." The poor old man asks, "Why are not our votes to be taken?" The response, in the hoarse voice of the "tough," is, "No d—d nigger shall vote here unless he votes for Cleveland." And it is in proof that no negro was permitted to vote but one; and he, lifted upon the exulting arms of these "toughs," inflicted upon himself the disgrace of voting the Democratic ticket.

That is not all. This old colored man turns to the leader, the captain of the Democratic forces, and says, "Look here; how is this? Can't we vote?" And the man thus addressed is solemn and silent as a sepulcher. Turning to the judges, this old colored man says, "See here! they have torn my ticket; can't we be allowed to vote? Can't we boys vote to-day?" And no man answered. No Republican there had the courage, no Democrat there had the manhood, to give one word of encouragement to these poor men.

What was this old patriarch to do? He might have advised a conflict. He might have said, "Boys, we will fight it out; we will insist on voting, let the consequences come;" but would it not have been a fearful responsibility on his part? These colored men were there in numbers, it is true, but they were black men whose inheritance of centuries of subjugation and degradation unfitted them for conflict with the race to which their ancient masters had belonged. [Applause.] They were there fully conscious that in every conflict with the white race, no matter how begun nor how thrust upon them, it was the black man that always bit the dust and it was always the black man's blood which reddened the grass. [Applause.]

Yes, he might have invited a conflict between the whites and the blacks, but the result of that conflict he could well read in the dust which had been reddened with the blood of the black man in a hundred such contests. He could read the result of such contests in the lurid glare of multitudes of burning cabins, burning because their owners were "bad negroes," which in the South meant negroes who dared assert their rights, who dared defend themselves against the violence of white men.

He dared not do that. He exercised that better part of valor. He said, "If we can't vote, let us go home." I have no doubt if my friend from Texas had been there, if the old man had asked whether they should fight it out or go home, he would have advised him to go home and not make a fuss. The old patriarch did advise his friends to go home. He did advise them to go home and make no fuss.

Yet, sir, these men are to be disfranchised because they did not fight.

But that was not all; most of the colored men still lingered around, reluctant to leave without voting, and finally a man named Kess attempted to vote, but as he approached the polls he was seized by the roughs, pushed backwards violently some distance, the length of the building, was struck a crushing blow in the face, and was told to go home, that "no damned negro votes here to-day."

After a while another man makes the same attempt and meets with the same fate.

The vigilant leader of the Democratic forces, Mr. Chairs, whenever he saw one or two colored men going up to the polls, artfully intercepts them and tells them, according to the testimony, "If you go there there will be a fuss; you had better keep away," and they stopped and went away.

Then there is Ed. Pumphrey, who, it is said, was a Republican. I stand here to pronounce that to be untrue. Pumphrey never claimed the honor of being a Republican, and he never deserved that honor. He has been an unwashed Democrat all his life, and is likely to die one. [Laughter.]

He was there as a deputy marshal, and according to the testimony, whenever he saw any of these negroes going up to vote he would go to them and say, "Do not go up to vote; if you do there will be a riot, and I can not be responsible. You had better give it up and go home; although I am a deputy sheriff I can not protect you."

Then, to enliven the monotony of the day, we find these men from Baltimore shooting off their guns and revolvers, pretending to shoot at a mark. Their real mark was to frighten these colored men away, and they hit the mark in the center. These men stood there until the last colored man was intimidated and driven away.

But we are told they did not exercise ordinary courage and are told there was a peaceful election there. Yes, there was a peaceful election there after all the colored men had been driven away. As my friend from Massachusetts has said, there was peace in Warsaw after Kosciuszko fell. There was peace in Jerusalem after the triumphant Roman had run the plowshare over its ruins. Sir, a peace which is the result of the entire surrender by the majority of their dearest and most valuable rights at the behest of the minority is a peace which is antagonistic to our institutions and is not healthful or desirable in this land of ours. [Applause.]

There was such peace at this precinct, and as a result when the vote was counted there was 136 majority for the contestee, and, sir, great, honest, and honorable as he says he is, it is beyond all contention that the contestee has for more than a year occupied the position and enjoyed the emoluments of a Representative in Congress by virtue of the terrorism which took place at that election precinct that day.

The pretense that the negroes refrained from voting was the result of a conspiracy on the part of the Republicans to secure the throwing out of the vote of this precinct is supremely absurd in the face of the undisputed fact that if they had voted the contestant would have had 39 majority in this precinct, and so would have been 39 votes better off than if the precinct was thrown out.

I do not charge the contestee with the outrageous conduct at this precinct. I do not say that he encouraged it or was a party to it, but I do charge, for it is beyond gainsaying, that he has enjoyed the usufruct thereof and is disposed to continue to do so.

Now, what shall this House do? As I said, Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary for the purposes of this contest that this precinct shall be considered; but, for one, as the Representative of an American constituency, I regret that this is not the decisive question in the case and the crucial test thereof, for I would be glad to put it to the manhood of this House to say whether such practices as that which I have referred to, and the truth of which can not be controverted, are to prevail.

Sir, the Constitution of this land guaranties to every citizen the right to approach the polls and there express his own convictions and conscience according to his own desires; and it is the demand of the people, of those that have placed us in control, especially is it the demand of the great, progressive Republican party which gave to the colored man his freedom, gave him equality before the law and in the courts, and invested him with the priceless and peerless rights and unfathomable responsibilities of American citizenship—the party would not be content until the guaranty of perpetual enjoyment of those rights so granted was stamped deep into the sacred face of the Constitution itself, and that we see to it, whenever a case comes up here presenting features like these, that we do all in our power to rebuke and stamp out such outrages as the thrifty husbandman would stamp out the rinderpest in his herd or on his farm. [Applause on the Republican side.] And I trust and believe we will do it. And yet the contestee appeals to this House upon this state of facts, because he has been an honest man, an honorable man, a courteous man, that we shall forget the law, that we shall forget the Constitution, that we shall forget the rights of the people of this district, and the rights of the poor black man throughout the country, and retain him in his seat.

Sir, under the circumstances I can not but regard such an appeal as an invitation to the House to do itself dishonor, and against the acceptance of that invitation I most earnestly protest, having no apprehension that it will be accepted by the majority of those around me.

I ask a vote on the pending question. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] desire to offer a substitute for the resolutions of the committee?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman from Texas has charge of this case.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to substitute for the resolutions of the majority the resolutions presented by the minority of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The resolutions will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That S. E. Mudd was not elected as a Representative to the Fifty-first Congress from the Fifth Congressional district of Maryland.

Resolved, That Barnes Compton was duly elected, and is entitled to retain his seat.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman demand a division.

Mr. MOORE, of Texas. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 145, nays 155, not voting 29; as follows:

YEAS—145.

Abbott,	Crain,	Lester, Ga.	Rowland,
Alderson,	Crisp,	Lester, Va.	Rusk,
Allen, Miss.	Culbertson, Tex.	Lewis,	Sayers,
Anderson, Miss.	Cummings,	Magner,	Seney,
Andrew,	Davidson,	Maish,	Shively,
Bankhead,	Dibble,	Mansur,	Spinola,
Barnes,	Dockery,	Martin, Ind.	Springer,
Barwig,	Dunphy,	Martin, Tex.	Stahnecker,
Blanchard,	Edmunds,	McAdoo,	Stewart, Ga.
Bland,	Elliott,	McCarthy,	Stewart, Tex.
Blount,	Ellis,	McClellan,	Stockdale,
Boatner,	Enloe,	McCreary,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Fitch,	McMillin,	Stone, Mo.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Pithian,	McRae,	Stump,
Brickner,	Flower,	Mills,	Tarsney,
Brookshire,	Forman,	Montgomery,	Tiltman,
Brown, J. B.	Forney,	Moore, Tex.	Tracey,
Brunner,	Fowler,	Morgan,	Tucker,
Buchanan, Va.	Gelsenhainer,	Mutcher,	Turner, Ga.
Bullock,	Gibson,	Norton,	Turner, N. Y.
Bynum,	Grimes,	Oates,	Venable,
Campbell,	Hare,	O'Ferrall,	Walker, Mo.
Candler, Ga.	Hatch,	O'Neill, Ind.	Washington,
Carlisle,	Hayes,	O'Neill, Mass.	Wheeler, Ala.
Carlton,	Haynes,	Outhwaite,	Whiting,
Catchings,	Heard,	Owens, Ohio	Wike,
Chipman,	Hemphill,	Parrett,	Wiley,
Clancy,	Henderson, N. C.	Peel,	Wilkinson,
Clarke, Ala.	Herbert,	Penington,	Willcox,
Clements,	Holman,	Perry,	Williams, Ill.
Clunie,	Hooker,	Pierce,	Wilson, Mo.
Cobb,	Kerr, Pa.	Price,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cooper, Ind.	Kilgore,	Quinn,	Wise,
Cottman,	Lane,	Reilly,	Yoder,
Covert,	Lanham,	Richardson,
Cowles,	Lawler,	Robertson,
	Lée,	Rogers,

NAYS—155.

Adams,	Culbertson, Pa.	Knapp,	Rife,
Allen, Mich.	Cutcheon,	Lacey,	Rockwell,
Anderson, Kans.	Daizell,	La Follette,	Rowell,
Arnold,	Darlington,	Laidlaw,	Russell,
Atkinson, Pa.	De Haven,	Laws,	Sanford,
Atkinson, W. Va.	De Lano,	Lehlbach,	Sawyer,
Baker,	Dingley,	Lind,	Scranton,
Banks,	Dolliver,	Lodge,	Scull,
Bartine,	Dorsey,	Mason,	Sherman,
Bayne,	Dunnell,	McComas,	Simonds,
Beckwith,	Evans,	McCord,	Smith, W. Va.
Belden,	Ewart,	McCormick,	Snider,
Belknap,	Farquhar,	McKenna,	Spooner,
Bergen,	Featherston,	McKinley,	Stewart, Vt.
Bliss,	Finley,	Miles,	Stivers,
Boothman,	Flick,	Milliken,	Stockbridge,
Boutelle,	Flood,	Moffitt,	Struble,
Bowden,	Frank,	Moore, N. H.	Sweeney,
Brewer,	Funston,	Morey,	Taylor, Ill.
Browne, Va.	Gear,	Morrill,	Taylor, Tenn.
Buchanan, N. J.	Gest,	Morrow,	Taylor, E. B.
Burrows,	Greenhalge,	Morse,	Thomas,
Burton,	Grosvenor,	Niedringhaus,	Thompson,
Butterworth,	Groat,	Nute,	Townsend, Colo.
Caldwell,	Hall,	O'Donnell,	Townsend, Pa.
Candler, Mass.	Hansbrough,	O'Neill, Pa.	Vandever,
Cannon,	Harner,	Osborne,	Van Schaick,
Carter,	Haugen,	Owen, Ind.	Vade,
Caswell,	Henderson, Ill.	Payne,	Walker, Mass.
Cheadle,	Henderson, Iowa	Perkins,	Wallace, Mass.
Cheatam,	Hermann,	Peters,	Wallace, N. Y.
Clark, Wis.	Hill,	Pickler,	Watson,
Clegg,	Hitt,	Post,	Wickham,
Coleman,	Houk,	Pugsley,	Williams, Ohio
Comstock,	Kelley,	Quackenbush,	Wright,
Conger,	Kennedy,	Raines,	Yardley.
Connell,	Kerr, Iowa	Randall, Mass.
Cooper, Ohio	Ketcham,	Ray,
Craig,	Kinsey,	Reed, Iowa

NOT VOTING—29.

Biggs,	Dargan,	Phelan,	Turpin,
Bingham,	Gifford,	Randall, Pa.	Wheeler, Mich.
Brosius,	Goodnight,	Reyburn,	Whithorne,
Brower,	Hopkins,	Skinner,	Wilber,
Browne, T. M.	Lansing,	Smith, Ill.	Wilson, Ky.
Buckalew,	McClammy,	Stephenson,
Bunn,	Paynter,	Taylor, J. D.
Compton,	Payson,	Turner, Kans.

So the substitute was rejected.

Mr. MAISH. I would like to inquire, Mr. Speaker, whether my name is recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will recapitulate the vote.

The Clerk recapitulated the names of those voting.

The following pairs were announced until further notice:

Mr. GIFFORD with Mr. TURPIN.

Mr. STEPHENSON with Mr. GOODNIGHT.

Mr. WHEELER, of Michigan, with Mr. BUNN.

Mr. REYBURN with Mr. McCLAMMY.

Mr. WILSON, of Kentucky, with Mr. PAYNTER.

Mr. WILBER with Mr. RANDALL, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. SMITH, of Illinois, with Mr. SKINNER.

Mr. LANSING with Mr. DARGAN, for one week.

Mr. HOPKINS with Mr. BUCKALEW, from Tuesday, for five days.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR with Mr. WHITHORNE, on this question.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. BIGGS, on this vote.

Mr. BROWER with Mr. PHELAN, on this question.

Mr. MAISH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to record my vote. I was standing on the other side of the Hall listening for my name but did not hear it called.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman listening at the time the roll was being called for his name?

Mr. MAISH. I was listening attentively.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's name will be called.

Mr. MAISH's name was called and recorded as above.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the resolutions presented by the committee.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio. I ask that the resolutions be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Barnes Compton was not elected as a Representative to the Fifty-first Congress from the Fifth district of Maryland, and is not entitled to the seat.

Resolved, That Sydney E. Mudd was duly elected as a Representative for the Fifth Congressional district of Maryland to the Fifty-first Congress, and is entitled to his seat as such.

Mr. CRISP. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 159, nays 145, not voting 25; as follows:

YEAS—159.

Adams,	Bayne,	Bowden,	Candler, Mass.
Allen, Mich.	Beckwith,	Brewer,	Cannon,
Anderson, Kans.	Belden,	Brosius,	Carter,
Arnold,	Belknap,	Browne, Va.	Caswell,
Atkinson, Pa.	Bergen,	Buchanan, N. J.	Cheadle,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Bingham,	Burrows,	Cheatam,
Baker,	Bliss,	Burton,	Clark, Wis.
Banks,	Boothman,	Butterworth,	Clegg,
Bartine,	Boutelle,	Caldwell,	Coleman,

Comstock,	Harmer,	Morey,	Simonds,
Conger,	Haugen,	Morrill,	Smith, W. Va.
Connell,	Henderson, Ill.	Morrow,	Smyser,
Cooper, Ohio	Henderson, Iowa	Morse,	Snider,
Craig,	Hermann,	Niedringhaus,	Spooner,
Culbertson, Pa.	Hill,	Nute,	Stewart, Vt.
Cutcheon,	Hitt,	O'Donnell,	Stivers,
Daizell,	Houk,	O'Neill, Pa.	Stockbridge,
Darlington,	Kelley,	Osborne,	Struble,
De Haven,	Kennedy,	Owen, Ind.	Sweeney,
De Lano,	Kerr, Iowa	Payne,	Taylor, Ill.
Dingley,	Ketcham,	Payson,	Taylor, Tenn.
Dolliver,	Kinsey,	Perkins,	Taylor, E. B.
Dorsey,	Knapp,	Peters,	Thomas,
Dunnell,	Lacey,	Pickler,	Thompson,
Evans,	La Follette,	Post,	Townsend, Colo.
Ewart,	Laidlaw,	Pugsley,	Townsend, Pa.
Farquhar,	Laws,	Quackenbush,	Turner, Kans.
Featherston,	Lehlbach,	Raines,	Vandever,
Finley,	Lind,	Randall, Mass.	Van Schaick,
Flick,	Lodge,	Ray,	Wade,
Flood,	Mason,	Reed, Iowa	Walker, Mass.
Frank,	McComas,	Rife,	Wallace, Mass.
Funston,	McCord,	Rockwell,	Wallace, N. Y.
Gear,	McCormick,	Rowell,	Watson,
Gest,	McKenna,	Russell,	Wickham,
Greenhalge,	McKinley,	Sanford,	Williams, Ohio
Grosvenor,	Miles,	Sawyer,	Wilson, Wash.
Groat,	Milliken,	Scranton,	Wright,
Hall,	Moffitt,	Scull,	Yardley.
Hansbrough,	Moore, N. H.	Sherman,

NAYS—145.

Abbott,	Crain,	Lester, Ga.	Rowland,
Aikerson,	Crisp,	Lester, Va.	Rusk,
Allen, Miss.	Culbertson, Tex.	Lewis,	Sayers,
Anderson, Miss.	Cummings,	Magner,	Seney,
Andrew,	Davidson,	Maish,	Shively,
Bankhead,	Dibble,	Mansur,	Spicola,
Barnes,	Dockery,	Martin, Ind.	Springer,
Barwig,	Dumphy,	Martin, Tex.	Stahlnecker,
Blanchard,	Edmunds,	McAdoo,	Stewart, Ga.
Bland,	Elliott,	McCarthy,	Stewart, Tex.
Blount,	Ellis,	McClellan,	Stockdale,
Boatner,	Enloe,	McCreary,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ark.	Fitch,	McMillin,	Stone, Mo.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Fithian,	McRae,	Stump,
Brickner,	Flower,	Mills,	Tarsney,
Brookshire,	Forman,	Montgomery,	Tillman,
Brown, J. B.	Forney,	Moore, Tex.	Tracey,
Brunner,	Fowler,	Morgan,	Tucker,
Buchanan, Va.	Geissenhainer,	Mutchler,	Turner, Ga.
Bullock,	Gibson,	Norton,	Turner, N. Y.
Bynum,	Grimes,	Oates,	Venable,
Campbell,	Hare,	O'Fallon,	Walker, Mo.
Candler, Ga.	Hatch,	O'Neill, Ind.	Washington,
Carlisle,	Hayes,	O'Neil, Mass.	Wheeler, Ala.
Carlton,	Haynes,	Outwaite,	Whiting,
Caruth,	Heard,	Owens, Ohio	Wike,
Catchings,	Hemphill,	Parrett,	Wiley,
Chipman,	Henderson, N. C.	Peel,	Wilkinson,
Clancy,	Herbert,	Pennington,	Willcox,
Clarke, Ala.	Holman,	Perry,	Williams, Ill.
Clements,	Hooker,	Pierce,	Wilson, Mo.
Clunie,	Kerr, Pa.	Price,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cobb,	Kilgore,	Quinn,	Wise,
Cooper, Ind.	Lane,	Reilly,	Yoder.
Cothran,	Lanham,	Richardson,
Covert,	Lawler,	Robertson,
Cowles,	Lee,	Rogers,

NOT VOTING—25.

Biggs,	Gifford,	Randall, Pa.	Wheeler, Mich.
Brower,	Goodnight,	Reyburn,	Whithorne,
Browne, T. M.	Hopkins,	Skinner,	Wilber,
Buckalew,	Lansing,	Smith, Ill.	Wilson, Ky.
Bunn,	McClammy,	Stephenson,
Compton,	Paynter,	Taylor, J. D.
Dargan,	Phelan,	Turpin,

So the resolutions were adopted.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. THOMAS M. BROWNE with Mr. BIGGS, on this vote.

The vote was recapitulated.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. Sydney E. Mudd (being conducted to the area in front of the Speaker by Mr. COOPER, of Ohio) was duly qualified by taking the oath of office prescribed by law. [Applause on the Republican side and in the galleries.]

The SPEAKER. Order! Order!

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the pension appropriation bill.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I would like the gentleman from California to give me his attention for a moment.

The SPEAKER. The question is not debatable.

Mr. SPRINGER. I would move that we suspend business until the galleries are cleared, as they ought to have been before.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I simply desire to suggest to the gentleman from California that we can not complete that bill this afternoon. It is now after 4 o'clock, and the House is not in a condition to take up a business matter; and I would suggest that we adjourn, and then we can complete this bill in a single sitting. The time for general debate is two hours and five minutes, which would run after 6 o'clock. So I would ask the gentleman to agree that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. MORROW. We can, at least, have an hour's debate before the House adjourns, and that time will be well disposed of, I think.

Mr. HOOKER. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was put; and the Speaker announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Several MEMBERS on the Democratic side. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 132, noes 131.

Mr. MORROW. Yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 122, nays 154, not voting 53; as follows:

YEAS—122.

Abbott,	Cowles,	Lawler,	Richardson,
Alderson,	Crisp,	Lee,	Rogers,
Allen, Miss.	Culbertson, Tex.	Lester, Ga.	Rowland,
Anderson, Miss.	Cummings,	Lester, Va.	Sayers,
Andrew,	Davidson,	Lewis,	Seney,
Bankhead,	Dibble,	Magner,	Spinola,
Barnes,	Flockery,	Malish,	Springer,
Barwig,	Dunphy,	Mansur,	Stahlnecker,
Blanchard,	Edmunds,	Martin, Tex.	Stewart, Ga.
Bland,	Elliott,	McAdoo,	Stewart, Tex.
Blount,	Ellis,	McClellan,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Enloe,	McCreary,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Fitch,	McMillin,	Stone, Mo.
Brickner,	Flower,	McRae,	Stump,
Brown, J. B.	Forney,	Mills,	Tarnsey,
Brunner,	Geissenhainer,	Montgomery,	Tillman,
Buchanan, Va.	Gibson,	Moore, Tex.	Tracey,
Bullock,	Grimes,	Morgan,	Turner, Ga.
Campbell,	Hare,	Mitchler,	Turner, N. Y.
Candler, Ga.	Hatch,	Norton,	Walker, Mo.
Carlisle,	Hayes,	O'Ferrall,	Washington,
Carlton,	Haynes,	O'Neill, Ind.	Wheeler, Ala.
Caruth,	Hemphill,	O'Neill, Mass.	Wilke,
Chipman,	Henderson, N. C.	Owens, Ohio	Wiley,
Clancy,	Herbert,	Peel,	Wilkinson,
Clarke, Ala.	Holman,	Pennington,	Wilson, W. Va.
Clements,	Hooker,	Perry,	Wise,
Clunie,	Kerr, Pa.	Pierce,	Yoder.
Cobb,	Kilgore,	Price,
Cothran,	Lane,	Quinn,
Covert,	Lanham,

NAYS—154.

Adams,	Daizell,	Laws,	Sanford,
Allen, Mich.	Darlington,	Lehibach,	Sawyer,
Arnold,	De Lano,	Lodge,	Scranton,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Dingley,	Martin, Ind.	Scull,
Baker,	Dolliver,	Mason,	Sherman,
Banks,	Dorsey,	McComas,	Shively,
Bartine,	Dunnell,	McCord,	Simonds,
Bayne,	Evas,	McKenna,	Smith, W. Va.
Beckwith,	Farquhar,	McKinley,	Smyser,
Belden,	Featherston,	Moffitt,	Snider,
Belknap,	Finley,	Moore, N. H.	Spooner,
Bergen,	Fithian,	Morey,	Stivers,
Bliss,	Flick,	Morrill,	Stockbridge,
Boothman,	Flood,	Morrow,	Struble,
Boutelle,	Forman,	Morse,	Sweeney,
Bowden,	Funston,	Mudd,	Taylor, Ill.
Brewer,	Gear,	Niedringhaus,	Taylor, Tenn.
Brookshire,	Gest,	Nute,	Taylor, E. B.
Browne, Va.	Greenhalge,	O'Donnell,	Thomas,
Buchanan, N. J.	Grout,	O'Neill, Pa.	Thompson,
Burrows,	Hall,	Owen, Ind.	Townsend, Colo.
Burton,	Hansbrough,	Parrett,	Townsend, Pa.
Butterworth,	Harmer,	Payne,	Tucker,
Bynum,	Haugen,	Payson,	Turner, Kans.
Caldwell,	Henderson, Ill.	Perkins,	Vandever,
Candler, Mass.	Hermann, Iowa	Venable,	Walker, Mass.
Cannon,	Hill,	Wade,	Wallace, Mass.
Carter,	Hill,	Post,	Wallace, N. Y.
Caswell,	Houk,	Pugsley,	Watson,
Chandle,	Kelley,	Raines,	Wickham,
Cheatham,	Kennedy,	Randall, Mass.	Willcox,
Clark, Wis.	Kerr, Iowa	Ray,	Williams, Ill.
Cogswell,	Ketcham,	Reed, Iowa	Williams, Ohio
Coleman,	Kinsey,	Reilly,	Wilson, Mo.
Comstock,	Knapp,	Rife,	Wright,
Connell,	Lacey,	Rockwell,	Yardley.
Cooper, Ind.	La Follette,	Russell,
Cooper, Ohio	Laidlaw,
Culbertson, Pa.

NOT VOTING—53.

Anderson, Kans.	Cutcheon,	McClammy,	Stephenson,
Atkinson, Pa.	Dargan,	McCormick,	Stewart, Va.
Biggs,	De Haven,	Miles,	Taylor, J. D.
Bingham,	Ewart,	Milliken,	Turpin,
Boatner,	Fowler,	Oates,	Van Schaick,
Brosius,	Frank,	Paynter,	Wheeler, Mich.
Brower,	Gifford,	Phelan,	Whitins,
Browne, T. M.	Goodnight,	Quackenbush,	Whitthorne,
Buckalew,	Grosvenor,	Randall, Pa.	Wilber,
Bunn,	Heard,	Reyburn,	Wilson, Ky.
Catchings,	Hopkins,	Robertson,	Wilson, Mo.
Conger,	Lansing,	Rusk,
Craig,	Lind,	Skinner,
Crain,	McCarthy,	Smith, Ill.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. MORROW. I ask unanimous consent to omit the recapitulation.

Mr. HOOKER. I object.

The vote was recapitulated.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs upon the motion of the gentleman from California that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the pension appropriation bill.

The question was put, and the Speaker announced that the "ayes" seemed to have it.

Mr. HOOKER. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 93, noes 60.

Mr. HOOKER. Yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 168, nays 59, not voting 102; as follows:

YEAS—168.

Adams,	Cooper, Ohio.	Lacey,	Rowell,
Allen, Mich.	Covert,	Laidlaw,	Russell,
Andrew,	Craig,	Lane,	Scranton,
Arnold,	Culbertson, Pa.	Lehibach,	Scull,
Atkinson, Pa.	Cummings,	Lind,	Shenman,
Atkinson, W. Va.	Cutcheon,	Lodge,	Shively,
Baker,	Daizell,	Magner,	Smith, W. Va.
Barnes,	De Lano,	Malish,	Smyser,
Barwig,	Dorsey,	Martin, Ind.	Snider,
Bayne,	Dunnell,	Mason,	Spooner,
Beckwith,	Dunphy,	McCarthy,	Springer,
Belden,	Evas,	McClellan,	Stahlnecker,
Bergen,	Farquhar,	McComas,	Struble,
Bingham,	Featherston,	McCord,	Sweeney,
Bliss,	Finley,	Moffitt,	Tarnsey,
Boothman,	Fitch,	Moore, N. H.	Taylor, Ill.
Boutelle,	Fithian,	Morey,	Taylor, Tenn.
Bowden,	Flick,	Morrill,	Taylor, E. B.
Brewer,	Flood,	Morrow,	Thomas,
Brickner,	Forman,	Morse,	Townsend, Colo.
Brookshire,	Fowler,	Mudd,	Townsend, Pa.
Brosius,	Gear,	Mitchler,	Tracey,
Browne, Va.	Geissenhainer,	Niedringhaus,	Tucker,
Brunner,	Greenhalge,	Nute,	Turner, Kans.
Buchanan, N. J.	Grout,	O'Donnell,	Vandever,
Burrows,	Hall,	O'Neill, Pa.	Venable,
Burton,	Hansbrough,	Osborne,	Wade,
Butterworth,	Harmer,	Outhwaite,	Walker, Mass.
Caldwell,	Hatch,	Owens, Ohio	Walker, Mo.
Candler, Mass.	Haugen,	Parrett,	Wallace, Mass.
Cannon,	Hayes,	Pennington,	Wallace, N. Y.
Caswell,	Henderson, Iowa	Perkins,	Watson,
Cheadle,	Hermann,	Peters,	Wickham,
Cheatham,	Hill,	Pickler,	Willcox,
Clancy,	Hitt,	Post,	Williams, Ill.
Clark, Wis.	Holman,	Pugsley,	Williams, Ohio
Clunie,	Houk,	Quinn,	Wilson, Mo.
Cogswell,	Kennedy,	Raines,	Wilson, Wash.
Coleman,	Kerr, Iowa	Ray,	Wise,
Conger,	Ketcham,	Reed, Iowa	Wright,
Connell,	Kilgore,	Reilly,	Yardley.
Cooper, Ind.	Knapp,	Rife,	Yoder.

NAYS—59.

Alderson,	Cowles,	Lester, Va.	Price,
Allen, Miss.	Dockery,	Lewis,	Richardson,
Anderson, Miss.	Edmunds,	Mansur,	Rowland,
Banks,	Elliott,	Martin, Tex.	Sayers,
Blanchard,	Ellis,	McMillin,	Stewart, Ga.
Blount,	Enloe,	McRae,	Stockdale,
Breckinridge, Ark.	Flower,	Mills,	Stone, Ky.
Breckinridge, Ky.	Forney,	Montgomery,	Stone, Mo.
Buchanan, Va.	Grimes,	Moore, Tex.	Stump,
Bullock,	Hare,	Morgan,	Turner, Ga.
Bynum,	Hemphill,	Norton,	Turner, N. Y.
Carlisle,	Henderson, N. C.	Oates,	Washington,
Caruth,	Herbert,	O'Ferrall,	Wheeler, Ala.
Clements,	Hooker,	Peel,	Wilson, W. Va.
Cobb,	Kerr, Pa.	Pierce,

NOT VOTING—102.

Abbott,	Darlington,	Lester, Ga.	Sawyer,
Anderson, Kans.	Davidson,	McAdoo,	Seney,
Bankhead,	De Haven,	McClammy,	Simonds,
Bartine,	Dibble,	McCormick,	Skinner,
Belknap,	Dingley,	McCreary,	Smith, Ill.
Biggs,	Dolliver,	McKenna,	Spinola,
Bland,	Ewart,	McKinley,	Stephenson,
Boatner,	Frank,	Miles,	Stewart, Tex.
Brower,	Funston,	Milliken,	Stewart, Va.
Brown, J. B.	Gest,	O'Neill, Ind.	Stivers,
Browne, T. M.	Gibson,	O'Neill, Mass.	Stockbridge,
Buckalew,	Gifford,	Owen, Ind.	Taylor, J. D.
Bunn,	Goodnight,	Payne,	Thompson,
Campbell,	Grosvenor,	Paynter,	Tillman,
Carlton,	Haynes,	Payson,	Turpin,
Carter,	Heard,	Perry,	Van Schaick,
Catchings,	Henderson, Ill.	Phelan,	Wheeler, Mich.
Chipman,	Hopkins,	Quackenbush,	Whitting,
Clarke, Ala.	Kelley,	Randall, Mass.	Whitthorne,
Comstock,	Kinsey,	Randall, Pa.	Wilke,
Cothran,	La Follette,	Reyburn,	Wilber,
Craig,	Lanham,	Robertson,	Wiley,
Crisp,	Lansing,	Rockwell,	Wilkinson,
Culbertson, Tex.	Lawler,	Rogers,	Wilson, Ky.
Dargan,	Laws,	Rusk,
	Lee,	Sanford,

So the motion was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced for the rest of this day:

Mr. T. M. BROWNE with Mr. STEWART.

Mr. THOMPSON with Mr. DAVIDSON.

On motion of Mr. MORROW, the recapitulation of the names of members voting was dispensed with.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

PENSION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. BURROWS in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the annual pension appropriation bill.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I yield the floor to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE].

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve my time, and I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BURROWS, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7160) making appropriation for the payment of invalid and other pensions and had come to no resolution thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. KENNEDY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 5751) to increase the pension of Isaac Endaly;

A bill (S. 140) to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases from one State to another and for the punishment of certain offenses;

A bill (H. R. 3592) granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield; and

A bill (H. R. 417) for the erection of a public building at Houlton, Me.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CHEATHAM, until next Tuesday, on account of important business.

To the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, for three days, in order to make an investigation under the concurrent resolution providing for an immigration investigation.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE GAY.

On motion of Mr. WILKINSON, by unanimous consent, the special order designating Saturday, March 22, for the delivery of eulogies on the late Representative Gay, of Louisiana, was modified so as to provide that the exercises shall begin at 2 o'clock p. m.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORROW. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was agreed to; and the House accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 17 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

INITIAL MONUMENTS, MINERAL SURVEYS.

Letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Interior for an appropriation for initial monuments for mineral surveys—to the Committee on Appropriations.

FLOODS UPON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers with a report from the president of the Mississippi River Commission, in further response to the House resolution of the 15th instant, relating to the floods upon the Mississippi River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

REGULAR SUPPLIES, QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Quartermaster-General, inclosing a proviso relative to certain equipments for the enlisted men of the Army, which he recommends to be inserted under the head of "Regular supplies, Quartermaster's Department," in the Army appropriation bill—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

MATTER OF THE BRIG EXPERIENCE.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the conclusions of fact and of law filed by said court under the act approved January 20, 1885, in the following spoliation claim, to wit: In the matter of brig Experience, James Houston, master; Mary B. Scott, administratrix de bonis non of Jacob Clement, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A bill (S. 189) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Dover, in the State of New Hampshire—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 189) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Nashua, in the State of New Hampshire—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 314) for the relief of Mary B. Le Roy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 640) granting a pension to Annie D. Rundlett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 916) granting a pension to Mary E. Harney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (S. 1029) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Spokane Falls, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1030) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Tacoma, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1031) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Seattle, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1075) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Walla Walla, in the State of Washington—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1136) for the relief of William De Ford, trustee for C. D. De Ford & Co.—to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1319) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Deadwood, in the State of South Dakota—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1354) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Sioux Falls, in the State of South Dakota—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 1453) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Saginaw, in the State of Michigan—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 2692) to establish certain ports of delivery in Alaska Territory—to the Committee on Commerce.

A bill (S. 3060) to carry out the provisions of section 15 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the division of Dakota into two States, and to enable the people of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington to form constitutions and State governments and to be admitted into the Union," approved February 22, 1889—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

A bill (S. 3089) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to survey and mark the seventh standard parallel between the States of North and South Dakota—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following resolution was delivered to the Speaker and referred as follows:

By Mr. HITT:

Resolved, That Thursday, April 3, after sixty minutes of the morning hour have passed, be set apart for the consideration of bills reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs;

to the Committee on Rules.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, reports of committees on bills of the following titles were filed, and, with accompanying bills, ordered to be printed, and referred as follows:

Mr. PERKINS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 344) to grant the right of way to the Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes—to the House Calendar.

Mr. COLEMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported favorably the resolution of the House requesting the President of the United States, if not inconsistent with the public interests, to send to the House copies of all correspondence between the United States and Mexico relating to the seizure at port of Tampico of the schooner Rebecca in February, 1884, etc.—to the House Calendar.

Mr. MCCREARY, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 2211) for the relief of R. F. Harrison—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HERMANN, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 4809) for the cancellation of contract with United States engineer for delivery of stone for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia River in Oregon and Washington—to the House Calendar.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (S. 1230) for the erection of a public building in the city of Pawtucket, R. I.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MONTGOMERY, from the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 7817) for the relief of Phillip N. Fox—to the Committee of the Whole House.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and a joint resolution of the following titles were delivered to the Speaker, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ROWELL: A bill (H. R. 8447) to fix the salaries of certain employes of the House of Representatives—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania (by request): A bill (H. R. 8443) to authorize the payment of pensions to certain persons—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: A bill (H. R. 8449) to repeal chapter 418 of the acts passed at the second session of the Fiftieth Congress—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 8450) for the erection of a public building at Decatur, Ala.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8451) for the erection of a public building at Florence, Ala.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8452) to correct the record of certain soldiers of the late war and pay the amounts that may be due to them—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LEE (by request): A bill (H. R. 8453) to authorize the construction of the Potomac Railroad in the District of Columbia and to define the route of the same—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. GRIMES: A bill (H. R. 8454) to authorize the Secretary of War to cause an examination and survey to be made and the cost of improvement to be estimated of the Chattahoochee River between West Point, Ga., and Franklin, Ga.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 8455) for the erection of a public building at Leadville, Colo.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. McCORD: A bill (H. R. 8456) providing for the erection of range lights and steam fog-whistles on Plum Island, in Lake Michigan—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SNIDER: A bill (H. R. 8457) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize foot and carriage or railroad bridges across the Mississippi River at St. Paul, in the State of Minnesota, approved July 5, 1884—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BOATNER: A bill (H. R. 8458) authorizing the purchase of tents by the Secretary of War, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLUNIE: A bill (H. R. 8459) for the protection of watersheds and irrigation systems, and for the establishment of a forest administration on the western mountains and plains—to the Select Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands in the United States.

By Mr. SPINOLA: A bill (H. R. 8460) to provide for the retirement of disabled and wounded general officers of the United States volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WADE: A bill (H. R. 8490) to enforce the eight-hour law on Government premises—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BOATNER: A joint resolution (H. Res. 131) authorizing the Mississippi River Commission to use funds and plant under their control for certain purposes—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. ABBOTT: A bill (H. R. 8461) to quiet the title of certain lands in the State of Mississippi, and for the relief of Eli Ayers—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BECKWITH: A bill (H. R. 8462) to remove limitation from claims of Henry L. Potter—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BOWDEN: A bill (H. R. 8463) giving the Court of Claims jurisdiction of the claims on account of property of the Chesapeake Female College possessed and used by the United States military authorities—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: A bill (H. R. 8464) for the relief of the estate of F. Z. Tucker—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. COOPER, of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 8465) to increase the pension of Daniel King—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CRAIG: A bill (H. R. 8466) granting a pension to Eli G. Flemming—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: A bill (H. R. 8467) for the relief of Alexander Van Loon, late private in Company B, Fourth New York Heavy Artillery—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ELLIS: A bill (H. R. 8468) for the relief of the heirs of J. S. Stull—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FINLEY: A bill (H. R. 8469) for the relief of Hart County, Kentucky—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 8470) granting a pension to Adam Mueller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8471) granting a pension to Fritz Roddewig—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LACEY: A bill (H. R. 8472) granting a pension to Mary B. Clammer, daughter of David Clammer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8473) granting a pension to Thompson Riley—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MARTIN, of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 8474) to restore the name of Belinda Lloyd to the pension-roll and pay her a pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOREY: A bill (H. R. 8475) granting a pension to Sarah W. Beckett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'FERRALL (by request): A bill (H. R. 8476) for the relief of the estate of Benjamin F. Gibbs—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: A bill (H. R. 8477) granting a pension to William Pfister—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8478) to increase the pension of Sarah Rains, the oldest pensioner on the rolls of the war of 1812, she being ninety-nine years of age—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8479) granting a pension to George W. Weaver—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIMONDS: A bill (H. R. 8480) to correct the military record of Patrick Mackin—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SNIDER: A bill (H. R. 8481) for the relief of Benjamin F. Hartley—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8482) for the relief of O. M. Laraway—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8483) for the relief of Horatio Phillips Van Cleave—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8484) granting a pension to Jared D. Wheelock—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. STEWART, of Texas: A bill (H. R. 8485) granting an increase of pension to Owen C. Powell—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TARSNEY: A bill (H. R. 8486) for the relief of Samuel Mason—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8487) for the relief of Timothy McCarty—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WALKER, of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 8488) to correct the military history of Owen Smith—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 8489) removing disabilities from charge of desertion and decision of court-martial from George W. Morgan, of Company E, Eightieth Regiment, New York Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the following changes of reference were made:

A bill (H. R. 4714) for the relief of Sampson P. Boyly—Committee on Elections discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (H. R. 5348) to place the name of Sarah A. Smail upon the pension-roll and grant her a pension of $25 per month—Committee on Military Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BROOKSHIRE: Petition of George W. Murphy, president, and Thomas Moran, secretary, of Subordinate Union No. 5 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Terre Haute, Ind., praying the amendment of the law so that citizens of the United States shall be preferred as laborers to do public work controlled by the United States Government—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BUCHANAN, of New Jersey: Petition of Union No. 17, Bricklayers' Union, Trenton, N. J., against the employment of alien labor on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BULLOCK: Memorial of Dental Association of Florida, asking that dentists be appointed for the Army and Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CANDLER, of Massachusetts: Petition from 50 firms of grocers' packers, in regard to tariff on canned lobsters—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CANNON: Petition of F. H. Hacker, Henry Brand, and others, of Danville, Ill., of North American Turnerbund, protesting against proposed system of emigrant inquisition through consular representation abroad—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. CARUTH: Paper to accompany H. R. 6676, to pension John J. Tulley—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CATCHINGS: Claim of Alfred Smith for quartermaster supplies—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Petitions of various Grand Army of the Republic posts, in favor of a service pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COGSWELL: Petition of Arthur A. Mack and other citizens of Salem, Mass., members of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, asking that aliens may be excluded from employment on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CONGER: Concurrent resolutions of the Iowa Legislature, for the passage of a pure-lard bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. COVERT: Petition of S. T. Preston and others, for a breakwater at Mattituck Bay, Long Island—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CRAIG: Petition of citizens of Madison, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, favoring bill to prevent manufacture of adulterated lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of ex-soldiers of Indiana County, for passage of service-pension, prisoners' pension, widows' pension law, and for repeal of limitation to the granting of arrears of pensions—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: Petition of stenographers and others, on behalf of the Lawler resolution as to the short-hand method of spelling—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Petition of farmers of Muskegon County, Michigan, favoring a bounty on American flour shipped in American vessels—to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. EVANS: Petition of Benjamin F. Johnson, asking Congress to refer his quartermaster claim to the Court of Claims under so-called Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. GEST: Petition and proof in the pension claim of Margaret Hawkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: Joint resolution of the Iowa Legislature, praying for the repeal of the limitation contained in pension act of 1879—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, joint resolution of same body, for immediate construction of Hennepin Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HAYNES: Memorial and petition of D. Carter and 71 others, citizens of Detroit, Mich., praying for the erection of a monument at Put-in Bay, Ohio, commemorative of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry and others who participated in the battle of Lake Erie on September 10, 1813—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HEARD: Petition of citizens of Missouri, relative to improvement of the Missouri River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa: Joint resolution of the General Assembly of Iowa, favoring the construction of a canal from the Mississippi River to the Illinois River at Hennepin, Ill.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, joint resolution of same body, favoring the repeal of the limitation in the arrears act of 1879—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, joint resolution of same body, urging legislation to prevent adulteration of lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Honey Creek Monthly Meeting of the Friends Church, of Hardin County, Iowa, numbering 788 members, earnestly protesting against the Senate proposition for a large increase of the Navy and other coast defenses—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolutions of Chester Alliance of Farmers from Union, Hardin County, Iowa, favoring the Butterworth bill against gambling in farm produce—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. KELLEY: Petition of Thirty-third Judicial District Veteran Association, asking for the passage of service-pension bill and protesting against the dependent or pauper provisions in any bill; headquarters of association, Dighton, Kans.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of A. B. Jetman and 83 others, citizens of Topeka, Kans., asking for increase of pay of letter-carriers, and asking for passage of House bill 3963 introduced by J. LOGAN CHIPMAN—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Mt. Joy Lodge Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, No. 2049, State of Kansas, asking for abolition of national banks, for free coinage of silver, for a chance to elect United States Senators by the people by direct vote, for liberal pensions to discharged soldiers, for an increase in the volume of the currency—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of Elden Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Iowa, for service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions of Grand Army of the Republic post at Monroe, Iowa, for the same purpose—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions favoring the Butterworth bill against dealing in farm products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LANE: Petition of citizens of Illinois, for the suppression of corrupt literature—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. MCKINLEY: Petition of citizens of Ohio, in favor of the employment of home labor on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. MILLIKEN: Petition of H. M. Savage, for relief—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of D. S. Moore and others, for pure lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MOREY: Petition by soldiers of Gray County, Kansas, for passage of law repealing limitation of arrears of pension, service-pension, and dependent-pension laws—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORRILL: Resolutions of the ex-soldiers of Gray County, Kansas, asking for pension legislation by passage of the Ingalls service bill and repeal of limitation to arrears act—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Protest of G. F. Bock & Son and four other dealers in hardware at Battle Creek, Mich., against an increase in duty on tin—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, protest of A. R. Barrett, Union City, Mich., for same purpose—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition from 89 farmers of Branch County, Michigan, asking the passage of a law directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay a bounty for the export of flour by the barrel in American vessels—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of Jasper J. Stone and 25 other ex-Union soldiers, residents of Coney Township, Montgomery County, Kansas, asking for the passage of the service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of S. Slater and 50 others, asking for legislation providing for free coinage of silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. PERRY: Petition of citizens of Fairfield County, South Carolina, against the passage of the bills taxing cotton-seed-oil products—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Petition of Mary M. Shock, for pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RANDALL, of Massachusetts: Petition of citizens of Massachusetts, relative to the iron and steel industries—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RAY: Petition of Subordinate Union No. 6, city of Uniontown, Pa., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, against the employment of alien labor on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of 600 citizens of Western Pennsylvania, for the improvement of Youghiogheny River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SCULL: Petition of Subordinate Union, No. 13, city of Altoona, Pa., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, praying for such an amendment to the laws as will secure to citizens of the United States preference in work on the construction of public buildings and other Government structures—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of Bricklayers and Masons' Union, of Findlay, Ohio, against the employment of aliens instead of citizens on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SPRINGER: Petition of Chicago Paint and Oil Club, for a simple and inexpensive system of bankruptcy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions passed by Lumbermen's Alliance No. 1299, Smithland, Iowa, urging the passage of H. R. bill 5353, defining options and futures and imposing penalties to lessen and prevent gambling in farm products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania (by request): Two petitions of bricklayers' and masons' unions against alien labor on Government buildings and works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. TURNER, of Georgia: Petition of W. B. McDaniel and 14 others, of Faceville, Decatur County, Ga., in favor of the bill to prevent the adulteration of lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WICKHAM: Petition of Huntington Brown and 64 others, citizens of Richland County, Ohio, for the erection of monument to mark burial place of those who were killed in the battle of Perry's victory—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. WILLCOX: Petition for harbor at Duck Island—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition for breakwater, Duck Island harbor, Connecticut, signed by leading merchants, masters, and owners of vessels of Calais, Me., Newport, R. I., New London, Conn., Norwich, Conn., Mystic River, Conn., Mystic Bridge, Conn., New York City, Jersey City, N. J., and Brooklyn, N. Y., River Head, Long Island, Stonington, Conn., Fair Haven, Conn.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. WILSON, of Washington: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Washington, relating to light-house on San Juan Island—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, same from same body, relating to a light-house and fog-signal at Callam Head—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, same from same body, requesting that the surviving soldiers of the Indian war be granted lands in the State of Washington—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, same from same body, relative to the improvement of the Columbia River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, same from same body, relative to the improvement of the Upper Columbia—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, same from same body, relative to an appropriation for public surveys—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, same from same body, relative to the improvement of the Cowitz River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, March 21, 1890.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

AID TO COMMON SCHOOLS—PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. RANSOM. I notice from the papers this morning that there is some confusion with reference to my pair on what is known as the Blair educational bill, which was voted upon yesterday. I desire to state that I should have voted for the bill and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CASEY], with whom I paired, would have voted against the bill, if we had been present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial of the Journeymen Bakers and Confectioners' International Union of America, remonstrating against the ratification of the extradition treaty with Russia; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of Right Reverend John J. Keane, rector of the Catholic University of America, praying for the passage of the bill to extend the line of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railroad; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. VEST presented a petition of citizens and residents of the city of St. Louis, Mo., praying that the right to labor on public Government works and Government buildings be confined to citizens of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SPOONER. I present resolutions adopted by William Evans Post, No. 53, Grand Army of the Republic, of Menominee, Wis., declaring that the Grand Army of the Republic in that State is in favor of the dependent-pension bill, and praying that it be passed. I move that the resolutions be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS presented a memorial of members of the North American Turnerbund residing in Minnesota, remonstrating against any alterations of the immigration and naturalization laws; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Board of Trade of St. Paul, Minn., favoring the establishment of a navy-yard at New Orleans, La.; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented resolutions adopted by Baxter Post, No. 158, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Minnesota, favoring the passage of the service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented resolutions adopted by Wilkins Post, No. 19, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Minnesota, favoring the legislation recommended by the pension committee of the Grand Army of the Republic in regard to pensions; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of the Bar Association of Polk County, Minnesota, praying for the passage of the bill dividing the district of Minnesota into two divisions, with terms of court to be held in each; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Minnesota, praying for legislation to prohibit fictitious transactions in farm products; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. FARWELL. I present a petition of citizens of Belleville, Ill., praying for such amendment of the laws in regard to the erection and construction of United States public buildings that aliens shall not be employed thereon; and I move that it be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state for the information of the Senate that petitions of a character similar to the one presented by the Senator from Illinois have been referred to three different committees, as the Chair is advised, the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Education and Labor, and the Committee on the Judiciary. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. EDMUNDS. For the object the petitioners have in view I think that is a very wise course to take, because, speaking as a fisherman, if I fish in three different streams I am more apt to catch something than if I fish in only one. [Laughter.] But I think, really, leaving the amusement of it apart, that the Committee on Education and Labor is the best one to consider those petitions; and when I get time I shall ask the Committee on the Judiciary to report back for reference to that committee the petitions that have gone to the Judiciary Committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The petition will be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. COLQUITT presented a petition of 23 granges of Patrons of Husbandry in the State of California, praying for the removal of the duty on jute and jute bagging and grain bags; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HARRIS presented a memorial of the Farmers' Exchange of Memphis, Tenn., remonstrating against the levying of a tax on compound lard, because it is practically a tax upon cotton-seed; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WASHBURN presented memorials of the Single Tax League of Minneapolis, Minn., remonstrating against the passage of Senate bill No. 2, providing for the making and altering of regulations as to the times, places, and manner of holding elections for Representatives in Congress; which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented a memorial of the Society of Friends, of Minneapolis, Minn., remonstrating against the expenditure of money for the Navy and so-called coast defenses; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 23, Warren, Ohio, Masons' International Union of America; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 20, of Tiffin, Ohio, Masons' International Union of America; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 3, of Toledo, Ohio, Masons' International Union of America, and a petition of Subordinate Union No. 25, of Springfield, Ohio, Masons' International Union of America, praying that none but citizens of the United States be employed on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of the Monthly Meeting of Friends, of Clinton County, Ohio, remonstrating against large expenditures for the Navy and coast defenses; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of 94 citizens of Woodward and vicinity, in the State of Iowa, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a resolution adopted by the Farmers and Bee-keepers' Association of Newaygo County, Michigan, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition, purporting to contain 500 names of individual signers, citizens of Indiana, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 1 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Evansville, Ind., praying for the consideration of legislation discriminating in favor of Americans against aliens as employees on the public works of the Government; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MANDERSON. I present a large number of petitions from different sections of the State of Nebraska, very numerous signed, praying for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The motion was agreed to; and the petitions were referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

- A petition of 32 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 3 citizens of Saunders County, Nebraska;
- A petition of 10 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 68 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 7 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 16 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 26 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 53 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 67 citizens of Nebraska;
- A petition of 47 citizens of Nebraska; and
- A petition of 28 citizens of Nebraska.

Mr. MANDERSON presented a petition of McConibie Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic, of Nebraska, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a memorial of citizens of Nebraska, remonstrating against an extension of time within which the Pacific railways shall pay their indebtedness to the Government; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. TELLER presented two petitions of citizens of Boulder, Colo., praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR presented a petition of citizens of Waltham, Mass., praying for the amendment of certain laws of the United States in regard to work on public buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of citizens of Massachusetts, praying for the passage of the Sunday-rest bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. CULLOM presented sundry petitions of citizens of Macoupin, Moultrie, and Montgomery Counties, in the State of Illinois, praying that the law of the State of Illinois and the United States law in relation to the transmission through the mails of obscene matter be harmonized; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 15) to pension Julia Fleming; and

A bill (H. R. 16) to pension Hiram Wilbur.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3180) for the relief of John M. Robinson, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Claims; which was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1988) to establish a hospital and home for inebriates and dipsomaniacs in the District of Columbia, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3115) to punish the unlawful appropriation of the use of the property of another in the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PLUMB. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 117) authorizing the appointment of thirty medical examiners for the Bureau of Pensions, fixing their salaries, and appropriating money to pay the same to June 30, 1890, to report it without amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. PLUMB. I give notice that to-morrow, at the conclusion of the formal morning business, I shall ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution which I have just reported.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to state that that is not a unanimous report by any means, and that a motion will be made when the joint resolution comes up to strike out the words providing that the examination for the appointment of these medical examiners shall be in the discretion and under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior. I give notice that I shall move to strike that out and subject these gentlemen to examination and appointment under the civil-service law and regulations to which the Republican party is solemnly pledged.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 249) providing for the completion of the public building in the city of Pensacola, Fla., as originally designed, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

FORT ABRAHAM LINCOLN, NORTH DAKOTA.

Mr. PIERCE. I ask that the action by which the bill (S. 1406) making appropriation for extending and repairing the military quarters at Fort Abraham Lincoln, North Dakota, was indefinitely postponed yesterday be reconsidered, and the bill placed on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made if there be no objection. The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 3209) providing for the extension of the coal laws of the United States to the district of Alaska; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. FARWELL introduced a bill (S. 3210) granting an increase of pension to George W. Shears; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 3211) for the relief of Carl F. Kolbe; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3212) for the relief of Jacob Barr; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PADDOCK introduced a bill (S. 3213) to make the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries an officer of the Department of Agriculture, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3214) granting a pension to Mary S. Miller; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3215) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of De Witt C. Hood; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MOODY. My colleague [Mr. PETTIGREW] has prepared two bills, but he is necessarily absent now on account of his position as a member of the Committee on Immigration. At his request I introduce the bills for proper reference.

The bill (S. 3216) to ratify and confirm an agreement with the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Dakota or Sioux Indians, and for other purposes was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs; and

The bill (S. 3217) to authorize the Pierre and Fort Pierre Ponton Bridge Company to construct a ponton bridge across the Missouri River at Pierre, S. Dak., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. COKE introduced a bill (S. 3218) for the relief of Adams & Wickes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BARBOUR (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3219) to authorize the Washington and Western Railroad Company of Virginia to extend its line into and within the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 3220) increasing the pension of Isaiah Mitchell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DAVIS introduced a bill (S. 3221) granting a pension to Kate M. Smith; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3222) granting a pension to Jared D. Wheelock; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3223) for the relief of C. T. Trowbridge, George D. Walker, and John A. Trowbridge; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. CULLOM introduced a bill (S. 3224) granting a pension to Robert A. Stuart; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 3225) to amend an act relating to the importing and landing of mackerel, etc., approved February 28, 1887; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Fisheries.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 5751) to increase the pension of Isaac Endaly;

A bill (S. 140) to prevent the introduction of contagious diseases from one State to another and for the punishment of certain offenses;

A bill (H. R. 3592) granting a pension to Mrs. Anna Butterfield;

A bill (H. R. 417) for the erection of a public building at Houlton, Me.; and

A bill (S. 1332) granting to the city of Colorado Springs, in the State of Colorado, certain lands therein described for water reservoirs.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business?

Mr. SHERMAN. If there is no further morning business, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production. It is really the unfinished business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask that the bill be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read at length.

The Chief Clerk read the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will state that upon further consideration the Committee on Finance have reported a substitute for the bill, which I ask to have read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute proposed by the Committee on Finance will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Committee on Finance report to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and to insert:

That all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign states, or citizens or corporations thereof, made with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States, or with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in articles of growth, production, or manufacture of any State or Territory of the United States with similar articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of any other State or Territory, or in the transportation or sale of like articles, the production of any State or Territory of the United States into or within any other State or Territory of the United States; and all arrangements, trusts, or combinations between such citizens or corporations, made with a view or which tend to advance the cost to the consumer of any such articles, are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful, and void. And the circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section, and to issue all remedial process, orders, or writs proper and necessary to enforce its provisions. And the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

Sec. 2. That any person or corporation injured or damaged by such arrangement, contract, agreement, trust, or combination defined in the first section of this act may sue for and recover, in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, without respect to the amount involved, of any person or corporation a party to a combination described in the first section of this act, twice the amount of damages sustained and the costs of the suit, together with a reasonable attorney's fee.

Mr. REAGAN. If the Senator from Ohio will permit me and if it is the proper time now, I wish to present for consideration the amendment that I submitted on a former day.

Mr. SHERMAN. It would not now be in order. An amendment is pending.

Mr. REAGAN. It is an amendment in the second degree, and I believe that is allowable under the rules.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator prefers to offer it now, very well.

Mr. REAGAN. I desire to do so now because I do not wish to be cut out by some other amendment coming in ahead.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well; offer it now and let it be pending.

Mr. REAGAN. I offer it now, not to interfere with the Senator from Ohio at all.

Mr. PLATT and Mr. ALLISON. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to substitute for the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance the following:

That all persons engaged in the creation of any trust, or as owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any trust, employed in any business carried on with any foreign country, or between the States, or between any State and the District of Columbia, or between any State and any Territory of the United States, or any owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any corporation using its powers for either of the purposes specified in the second section of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by both of said penalties, in the discretion of the court trying the same.

SEC. 2. That a trust is a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons, or of any two or more of them for either, any, or all of the following purposes:

First. To create or carry out any restrictions in trade.

Second. To limit or reduce the production or to increase or reduce the price of merchandise or commodities.

Third. To prevent competition in the manufacture, making, purchase, sale, or transportation of merchandise, produce, or commodities.

Fourth. To fix a standard or figure whereby the price to the public shall be in any manner controlled or established of any article, commodity, merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, use, or consumption.

Fifth. To create a monopoly in the making, manufacture, purchase, sale, or transportation of any merchandise, article, produce, or commodity.

Sixth. To make or enter into or execute or carry out any contract, obligation, or agreement of any kind or description by which they shall bind or shall have bound themselves not to manufacture, sell, dispose of, or transport any article or commodity or article of trade, use, merchandise, or consumption below a common standard figure, or by which they shall agree, in any manner, to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure, or by which they shall, in any manner, establish or settle the price of any article, commodity, or transportation between themselves or between themselves and others, so as to preclude free and unrestricted competition among themselves and others in the sale and transportation of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine, or unite in any interest they may have in connection with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity that its price may, in any manner, be so affected.

SEC. 3. That each day any of the persons, associations, or corporations aforesaid shall be engaged in violating the provisions of this act shall be held to be a separate offense.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Texas to the amendment reported from the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I did not originally intend to make any extended argument on this trust bill, because I supposed that the public facts upon which it is founded and the general necessity of some legislation were so manifest that no debate was necessary to bring those facts to the attention of the Senate.

But the different views taken by Senators in regard to the legal questions involved in the bill and the very able speech made by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] relative to the details of the bill led me to the conclusion that it was my duty, having reported the bill from the Committee on Finance, to present in as clear and logical a way as I can the legal and practical questions involved in the bill.

Mr. President, the object of this bill, as shown by the title, is "to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production." It declares that certain contracts are against public policy, null and void. It does not announce a new principle of law, but applies old and well recognized principles of the common law to the complicated jurisdiction of our State and Federal Government. Similar contracts in any State in the Union are now, by common or statute law, null and void. Each State can and does prevent and control combinations within the limit of the State. This we do not propose to interfere with. The power of the State courts has been repeatedly exercised to set aside such combinations as I shall hereafter show, but these courts are limited in their jurisdiction to the State, and, in our complex system of government, are admitted to be unable to deal with the great evil that now threatens us.

Unlawful combinations, unlawful at common law, now extend to all the States and interfere with our foreign and domestic commerce and with the importation and sale of goods subject to duty under the laws of the United States, against which only the General Government can secure relief. They not only affect our commerce with foreign nations, but trade and transportation among the several States. The purpose of this bill is to enable the courts of the United States to apply the same remedies against combinations which injuriously affect the interests of the United States that have been applied in the several States to protect local interests.

The first section declares:

That all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign States or citizens or corporations thereof, made with a view, or which tend, to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States; or with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in articles of growth, production, or manufacture of any State or Territory of the United States with similar articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of other State or Territory, or in the transportation or sale of like articles, the production of any State or Territory of the United States, into or within any other State or Territory of the United States; and all arrangements, trusts, or combinations between such citizens or corporations, made with a view or which tend to advance the cost to the consumer of any such article, are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful, and void. And the circuit courts of the United States shall have original jurisdiction in all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section, and to issue all remedial process, orders, or writs, proper and necessary to enforce its provisions, and the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

This section will enable the courts of the United States to restrain, limit, and control such combinations as interfere injuriously with our foreign and interstate commerce, to the same extent that the State courts habitually control such combinations as interfere with the commerce of a State.

The question has arisen whether express jurisdiction should be conferred on the circuit courts of the United States to enforce this section, with authority to issue the ordinary remedial process of courts of law and equity, or whether such power is already sufficiently contained in the several acts organizing the courts of the United States. The third article of the Constitution vests the judicial power of the United States in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as Congress may ordain and establish.

The judiciary act of 1789 defines the jurisdiction of the several courts, and, by separate acts, this jurisdiction has been, from time to time, extended to new subjects of legislation. The committee therefore deemed it proper by express legislation to confer on the circuit courts of the United States original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section, with authority to issue all remedial process or writs proper and necessary to enforce its provisions, and to require the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such suits to final judgment and execution.

The second section of the bill provides that any person or corporation injured or damaged by such a combination may sue for and recover in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, of any person or corporation a party to such a combination, all damages sustained by him. The measure of damages, whether merely compensatory, putative, or vindictive, is a matter of detail depending upon the judgment of Congress. My own opinion is that the damages should be commensurate with the difficulty of maintaining a private suit against a combination such as is described.

These two sections are distinct and different in their scope and object. The first invokes the power of the National Government, in proper cases, to restrain such a combination, by mandatory proceedings, from interfering with the trade and commerce of the country, and the second section is to give to private parties a remedy for personal injury caused by such a combination.

A third section was added when the bill was first reported by the Committee on Finance which declares that all persons entering into such a combination, either on his own account or as an attorney for another or as an officer, attorney, or as a trustee or in any capacity whatever, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

The amendments, then, proposed by the Committee on Finance to the first section would be proper amendments to the third section, but not to the first, where they have no proper place. The first section, being a remedial statute, would be construed liberally, with a view to promote its object. It defines a civil remedy, and the courts will construe it liberally; they will prescribe the precise limits of the constitutional power of the Government; they will distinguish between lawful combinations in aid of production and unlawful combinations to prevent competition and in restraint of trade; they can operate on corporations by restraining orders and rules; they can declare the particular combination null and void and deal with it according to the nature and extent of the injuries.

In providing a remedy the intention of the combination is immaterial. The intention of a corporation can not be proven. If the natural effects of its acts are injurious, if they tend to produce evil results, if their policy is denounced by the law as against the common good, it may be restrained, be punished with a penalty or with damages, and in a proper case it may be deprived of its corporate powers and franchises. It is the tendency of a corporation, and not its intention, that the courts can deal with. Therefore the amendments first reported to the first section are not in the substitute.

The third section is a criminal statute, which would be construed strictly and is difficult to be enforced. In the present state of the law it is impossible to describe, in precise language, the nature and limits of the offense in terms specific enough for an indictment. This section is applicable only to individuals.

A corporation can not be indicted or punished except through civil process. The criminal law can only reach officers or agents employed by the corporation. Whether this law should extend to mere clerks, as was proposed in the third section, is a matter of grave doubt. The business conducted by them may be innocent and lawful, and they should not be punished or threatened for the offenses of others. I am, therefore, clearly of the opinion that at present at least it is not wise to include this section in this bill. Such penalties may come later when the limits of the power of Congress over the subject-matter shall be defined by the courts.

It is sometimes said that without this section the law would be nugatory. I do not think so. The powers granted by the first section are ample to check and prevent the great body of illegal combinations that may be made; but, if not, it is easy enough hereafter to provide a suitable punishment for a violation of this statute. But if the criminal section is retained the amendments first proposed by the Committee on Finance should apply only to that section, and not to the civil section. Every corporation engaged in business must be responsible for the tendency of its business, whether lawful or unlawful, but individuals can only be punished for criminal intentions. To require the intentions of a corporation to be proven is to impose an impossible condition and would defeat the object of the law. To restrain and prevent the illegal tendency of a corporation is the proper duty of a court of equity. To punish the criminal intention of an officer is a much more difficult process and might be well left to the future.

This bill, as I would have it, has for its single object to invoke the aid of the courts of the United States to deal with the combinations described in the first section when they affect injuriously our foreign and interstate commerce and our revenue laws, and in this way to supplement the enforcement of the established rules of the common and statute law by the courts of the several States in dealing with combinations that affect injuriously the industrial liberty of the citizens of these States. It is to arm the Federal courts within the limits of their constitutional power that they may co-operate with the State courts in checking, curbing, and controlling the most dangerous combinations that now threaten the business, property, and trade of the people of the United States. And for one I do not intend to be turned from this course by fine-spun constitutional quibbles or by the plausible pretexts of associated or corporate wealth and power.

It is said that this bill will interfere with lawful trade, with the customary business of life. I deny it. It aims only at unlawful combinations. It does not in the least affect combinations in aid of production where there is free and fair competition. It is the right of every man to work, labor, and produce in any lawful vocation and to transport his production on equal terms and conditions and under like circumstances. This is industrial liberty and lies at the foundation of the equality of all rights and privileges.

The right to combine the capital and labor of two or more persons in a given pursuit with a community of profit and loss under the name of a partnership is open to all and is not an infringement of industrial liberty, but is an aid to production. The law of partnership clearly defines what is a lawful and what is an unlawful partnership. The same business is open to every other partnership, and, while it is a combination, it does not in the slightest degree prevent competition.

The combination of labor and capital in the form of a corporation to carry on any lawful business is a proper and useful expedient, especially for great enterprises of a quasi public character, and ought to be encouraged and protected as tending to cheapen the cost of production, but these corporate rights should be open to all upon the same terms and conditions. Such corporations, being mere creatures of law, can only exercise the powers specially granted and defined. Experience has shown that they are the most useful agencies of modern civilization. They have enabled individuals to unite to undertake great enterprises only attempted in former times by powerful governments. The good results of corporate power are shown in the vast development of our railroads and the enormous increase of business and production of all kinds.

When corporations unite merely to extend their business, as connecting lines of railway without interfering with competing lines, they are proper and lawful. Corporations tend to cheapen transportation, lessen the cost of production, and bring within the reach of millions comforts and luxuries formerly enjoyed by thousands. Formerly corporations were special grants to favored companies, but now the principle is generally adopted that no private corporation shall be created with exclusive rights or privileges. The corporate rights granted to one are open to all. In this way more than three thousand national banks have been formed with the same rights and privileges, and the business is open to all competitors. In most of the States general railroad laws provide the terms on which all railroads may be built, with like rights and privileges. Corporate rights open to all are not in any sense a monopoly, but tend to promote free competition of all on the same conditions. They are mere creatures of the law, to exercise only well defined powers, and are not in any way interfered with by this bill.

This bill does not seek to cripple combinations of capital and labor, the formation of partnerships or of corporations, but only to prevent and control combinations made with a view to prevent competition, or for the restraint of trade, or to increase the profits of the producer at the cost of the consumer. It is the unlawful combination, tested by the rules of common law and human experience, that is aimed at by this bill, and not the lawful and useful combination. Unlawful combinations made by individuals are declared by the several States to be against public policy and void, and in proper cases they may be punished as criminals. If their business is lawful they can combine in any way and enjoy the advantage of their united skill and capital, provided they do not combine to prevent competition. A limited monopoly secured by a patent right is an admitted exception, for this is the only way by which an inventor can be paid for his invention.

Any other attempt by individuals to secure a monopoly should be subject to the same law of restraint applied to partnerships and corporations. A partnership is unlawful when its business tends to restrain trade, to deal in forbidden productions, or to encourage immoral and injurious pursuits, such as lotteries and the like; but if its business is lawful and open to competition with others with like skill and capital, it can not be dangerous. A corporation may be, and usually is, a more powerful and useful combination than a partnership. It is an artificial person without fear of death, without a soul to save or body to punish; but if other corporations can be formed on equal terms a monopoly is impossible. If it becomes powerful enough to exercise an undue influence in one State it is met by free competition with producers in all the other States in the Union and by importation from all the world, subject only to such duties as the public necessities demand.

Mr. President, I have thus far confined my argument to the statement of what this bill does not do; that is, it does not interfere with any lawful business in the United States, whether conducted by a corporation, or a partnership, or an individual. It deals only with unlawful combinations, unlawful by the code of any law of any civilized nation of ancient or modern times.

But associated enterprise and capital are not satisfied with partnerships and corporations competing with each other, and have invented a new form of combination commonly called trusts, that seeks to avoid competition by combining the controlling corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the same business, and placing the power and property of the combination under the government of a few individuals, and often under the control of a single man called a trustee, a chairman, or a president.

The sole object of such a combination is to make competition impossible. It can control the market, raise or lower prices, as will best promote its selfish interests, reduce prices in a particular locality and break down competition and advance prices at will where competition does not exist. Its governing motive is to increase the profits of the parties composing it. The law of selfishness, uncontrolled by competition, compels it to disregard the interest of the consumer. It dictates terms to transportation companies, it commands the price of labor without fear of strikes, for in its field it allows no competitors. Such a combination is far more dangerous than any heretofore invented, and, when it embraces the great body of all the corporations engaged in a particular industry in all of the States of the Union, it tends to advance the price to the consumer of any article produced, it is a substantial monopoly injurious to the public, and, by the rule of both the common and the civil law, is null and void and the just subject of restraint by the courts, of forfeiture of corporate rights and privileges, and in some cases should be denounced as a crime, and the individuals engaged in it should be punished as criminals. It is this kind of a combination we have to deal with now.

If the concentrated powers of this combination are intrusted to a single man, it is a kingly prerogative, inconsistent with our form of government, and should be subject to the strong resistance of the State and national authorities. If anything is wrong this is wrong. If we will not endure a king as a political power we should not endure a king over the production, transportation, and sale of any of the necessities of life. If we would not submit to an emperor we should not submit to an autocrat of trade, with power to prevent competition and to fix the price of any commodity. If the combination is confined to a State the State should apply the remedy; if it is interstate and controls any production in many States, Congress must apply the remedy. If the combination is aided by our tariff laws they should be promptly changed, and, if necessary, equal competition with all the world should be invited in the monopolized article. If the combination affects interstate transportation or is aided in any way by a transportation company, it falls clearly within the power of Congress, and the remedy should be aimed at the corporations embraced in it, and should be swift and sure.

Do I exaggerate the evil we have to deal with? I do not think so. I do not wish to single out any particular trust or combination. It is not a particular trust, but the system I am at. I will only cite a very few instances of combinations that have been the subject of judicial or legislative inquiry, to show what has been and what can be done by them.

I quote from the opinion of Judge Baxter, in the case of Handy et al., trustees, vs. Cleveland and Marietta Railroad Company, Federal Reporter, volume 31, pages 689 to 693, inclusive, where it appears, to quote the exact language of the learned judge:

That the Standard Oil Company and George Rice were competitors in the business of refining oil; that each obtained supplies in the neighborhood of Macksburgh, a station of said railroad, from whence the same was carried to Marietta or Cleveland, and that for this service both were equally dependent upon the railroad, then in the hands of the receiver.

It further appears that the Standard Oil Company desired to "crush" Rice and his business, and that under a threat of building a pipe for the conveyance of its oil and withdrawing its patronage from the receiver, O'Day, one of its agents, "compelled" Terry, who was acting for and on behalf of the receiver, to carry its oil at 10 cents per barrel and charge Rice 35 cents per barrel for a like service, and pay the Standard Oil Company 25 cents out of the 35 cents thus exacted from Rice, "making," in the judgment of the receiver, "$25 per day clear money" for it (the Standard Oil Company) "on Rice's oil alone."

It also appears in an equity suit in which the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was complainant and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was defendant, filed in the supreme court of Pennsylvania for the western district, in the year 1879, and where A. J. Cassatt, then third vice-president in charge of the transportation department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, testified that the Standard Oil Company were receiving over and above current drawbacks the following rebates and allowances, namely:

Forty-nine cents per barrel on crude oil from the Bradford oil region to tide water; 51½ cents per barrel on crude oil from the lower oil region to tide water; and 64½ cents on refined oil from Cleveland to tide water.

In the year 1878 the railroad shipments of oil had reached 13,700,000 barrels. Assuming 20 per cent. of this to be the traffic of the Standard Oil Company and that but 50 cents per barrel rebate was paid by the railroad companies, the annual illegal receipts by the Standard Oil Company would have been $5,480,000, not including the receipts of the American Transfer Company from such traffics was not embraced within the 80 per cent. of the Standard Oil Company.

Another case of unlawful combination was the case of David M. Richardson vs. Russell A. Alger et al., recently decided in the supreme court of the State of Michigan. I have the opinion by the chief-justice which sufficiently states the nature of the combination and the view taken of it by that court. This is quite a leading case. In order that I may not do injustice to any one I will lay before the Senate the judgment of the court in full, as expressed by the judges of the supreme court of Michigan:

Supreme court of the State of Michigan.

[David M. Richardson vs. Russell A. Alger et al. Filed November 15, 1889.]

SHERWOOD, C. J. I think no one can read the contract in question and fail to discover that considerations of public policy are largely involved. The intention of the agreement is to aid in securing the objects sought to be attained in the formation and organization of the Diamond Match Company. This object is openly and boldly avowed. Not only does this appear in its organization and in the business it proposes to conduct and in the modes and manner of carrying it on, but the testimony of General Alger himself avers it and settles its character beyond question. The organization is a manufacturing company. The business in which it is engaged is making friction matches. Its articles provide for the aggregation of an enormous amount of capital, sufficient to buy up and absorb all of that kind of business done in the United States and Canada, and to prevent any other person or corporation from engaging in or carrying on the same, thereby preventing all competition in the sale of the articles manufactured.

This is the mode of conducting the business and the manner of carrying it on. The sole object of the corporation is to make money by having it in its power to raise the price of the article or diminish the quantity to be made and used at its pleasure.

Thus, both the supply of the article and the price thereof are made to depend upon the action of a half-dozen individuals, more or less, to satisfy their cupidity and avarice, who may happen to have the controlling interest in this corporation—an artificial person—governed by a single motive or purpose, which is to accumulate money, regardless of the wants and necessities of over sixty millions of people.

The article thus completely under their control has, for the last fifty years, come to be regarded as one of necessity, not only in every household in the land, but one of daily use by almost every individual in the country. It is difficult to conceive of a monopoly which can affect a greater number of people, or one more extensive in its effect in the country, than that of the Diamond Match Company. It was to aid that company in its purposes, and in carrying out its object that the contract in this suit was made between these parties, and which we are now asked to aid in enforcing it.

Monopoly in trade, or in any kind of business in this country, is odious to our form of government. It is sometimes permitted to aid the Government in carrying on a great public enterprise or public work under governmental control in the interest of the public. This tendency is, however, destructive of free institutions and repugnant to the instincts of a free people, and contrary to the whole scope and spirit of the Federal Constitution, and is not allowed to exist, under express provision in several of our State constitutions.

Indeed, it is doubtful if free government can long exist in a country where such enormous amounts of money are allowed to be accumulated in the vaults of corporations, to be used at discretion in controlling the property and business of the country against the interests of the public and that of the people for the personal gain and aggrandizement of a few individuals.

It is always destructive of individual rights and of that free competition which is the life of business, and it revives and perpetuates one of the great evils which it was the object of the framers of our form of government to eradicate and prevent. It is alike destructive to both individual enterprise and individual prosperity, and therefore public policy is, and ought to be, as well as public sentiment, against it.

All combinations among persons or corporations for the purpose of raising or controlling the prices of merchandise or any of the necessities of life are monopolies and intolerable, and ought to receive the condemnation of all courts. In my judgment, not only is the enterprise in which the Diamond Match Company is engaged an unlawful one, but the contract in question in this case, being made to further its objects and purposes, is void, upon the ground that it is against public policy.

CHAMPLIN, J. I concur with the chief-justice in dismissing the bill of complaint for reasons which render it unnecessary to discuss the merits of the controversy between the parties.

It appears from the testimony that the Diamond Match Company was organized for the purpose of controlling the manufacture and trade in matches in the United States and Canada. The object was to get all the manufacturers of matches in the United States to enter into a combination and agreement, by which the manufacture and output of all the match factories should be controlled by the Diamond Match Company. Those manufacturers who would not enter into the scheme were to be bought out, those who proposed to engage in the business were to be bought off, and a strict watch was to be exercised to discover any person who proposed to engage in such business and he be prevented if possible.

All who entered into the combination and all who were bought off were required to enter into bonds to the Diamond Match Company that they would not, directly or indirectly, engage in the manufacture or sale of friction matches, nor aid nor assist nor encourage any one else in said business anywhere by doing it, so it might conflict with the business interest or diminish the sales or lessen the profits of the Diamond Match Company. These restrictions varied in individual cases as to the time it was to continue, from ten to twenty years. Thirty-one manufacturers, being substantially all the factories where matches were made in the United States, either went into the combination or were purchased by the Diamond Match Company, and out of this number all were closed except about thirteen.

General Alger was a witness in the case, and was asked by his counsel the following question:

"Q. It appears that during the years 1881 and 1882 large sums of money were expended to keep men out of the match business, remove competition, buy machinery and patents, and in some instances purchase other match factories. I will ask you to state the reasons, if any there are, why those sums should not be treated as an expense of the business and charged off from this account."

To which he replied: "Because the prices of matches were kept up to correspond so as to pay these expenses and make large dividends above what could have been made had those factories been in the market to compete with the business."

It also appears from the testimony of General Alger that the organization of the Diamond Match Company was in a measure due to his exertions. There is no doubt that all the parties to this suit were active participants in perfecting the combination called the Diamond Match Company, and that the present dispute grows out of that transaction, and is the fruit of the scheme by which all competition in the manufacture of matches was stifled, opposition in the business crushed, and the whole business of the country in that line engrossed by the Diamond Match Company.

Such a vast combination as has been entered into under the above name is a menace to the public; its object and direct tendency is to prevent free and fair competition and control prices throughout the national domain. It is no answer to say that this monopoly has in fact reduced the price of friction matches. That policy may have been necessary to crush competition. The fact exists that it rests in the discretion of this company at any time to raise the price to an exorbitant degree. Such combinations have frequently been condemned by courts as unlawful and against public policy:

Hooker vs. Vandewater, 4 Denio, 349.

Stanton vs. Allen, 5 Denio, 434.

Marice Run Coal Company vs. Barclay Coal Company, 68 Pa., 185.

Central Ohio Salt Company vs. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St., 672.

Craft vs. McConoughy, 79 Ill., 346.

Hoffman vs. Brooks, 11 Week. Lw. Bl., 358.

Hannah vs. Fife, 27 Mich., 172.

Alger vs. Thatcher, 19 Pick., 59.

It is also well settled that if a contract be void as against public policy the court will neither enforce it while executory, nor relieve a party from loss by having performed it in part:

Foot vs. Emerson, 10 Vt., 44; and see Hannah vs. Power, 8 Dana, 91.

Pratt vs. Adams, 7 Paige, 616.

Pratt vs. Oliver, 1 McLain, 300.

Pratt vs. Oliver, 2 McLain, 277.

Stanton vs. Allen, 5 Denio, 434.

It is not necessary that the parties, or either of them, should rely upon the fact that the contract is one which it is against the policy of the law to enforce. Courts will take notice of their own motion of illegal contracts which come before them for adjudication, and will leave the parties where they have placed themselves.

Campbell, J., concurred with Mr. Justice Champlin.

Mr. PLATT. What was the conclusion of the court?

Mr. SHERMAN. They declared the combination null and void, against public policy, and refused to entertain jurisdiction to settle the accounts between the parties, because this case arose on a dispute between two of the parties, Mr. Richardson and General Alger. They declared it unlawful and void and set aside the contract.

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator will permit me, the object of my inquiry was to make it appear clearly that the court as at present constituted has so decided.

Mr. SHERMAN. That was a State matter between parties living within the State, and therefore did not involve any of the questions which are requisite to impart jurisdiction to United States courts under this bill.

Mr. CULLOM. Where was this?

Mr. SHERMAN. It was in Michigan. The supreme court of Michigan made the decision. I have here the case of Craft et al. vs. McConoughy, in the supreme court of Illinois, reported in the seventy-ninth volume of Illinois Reports. I am showing that the State courts in different States have declared this thing, when it exists in a State, to be unlawful and void.

Mr. CULLOM. Everywhere.

Mr. SHERMAN. In every case, everywhere, and all I wish is to have the courts of the United States do by these greater combinations what has been done already by the courts of the States.

In the case of Richard C. Craft et al. vs. James O. McConoughy, in the supreme court of Illinois, reported in the seventy-ninth volume of Illinois Reports, it was decided that—

A contract entered into by the grain dealers of a town which, on its face, indicates that they have formed a partnership for the purpose of dealing in grain, but the true object of which is to form a secret combination which would stifle all competition and enable the parties, by secret and fraudulent means, to control the price of grain, costs of storage, and expense of shipment at such town, is in restraint of trade, and consequently void on the ground of public policy.

I will insert in my remarks the decision of Mr. Justice Craig without reading it at this time.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator state what was the decision of the court in that case?

Mr. SHERMAN. They set aside the contract.

Mr. GEORGE. The suit was to annul the contract?

Mr. SHERMAN. To annul the contract, and they said they would treat it as illegal. This is the decision:

While these parties were in business, in competition, they had the undoubted right to establish their own rates for grain stored and commissions for shipment and sale. They would pay as high or low a price for grain as they saw proper and as they could make contracts with the producer. So long as competition was free the interest of the public was safe. The laws of trade, in connection with the rigor of competition, was all the guaranty the public required, but the secret combination created by the contract destroyed all competition and created a monopoly, against which the public interest had no protection.

I find
es. The P Reports,
pany was Chicago quently and Co.
gas in purpose, of the cit
them, al one hund
the busin
Here is venting o
I have o quoted f have:

The defe in the ter ance of th ing "that away with involved i rule of lav engaged i contract w

In a r
Trust Co

ter under the Gas T
tion and ufacture, or sell the or elsewh a majority
Chicago, I
The info shares of and exere law."

"That b
the compa
corporatio
versity of ual monop tion thus no power
asan incid ted in its

Mr. CU
Mr. SE

into the
of it by that of T Company of Repres before th carried to 2, Abbott fendant, of the cas ing judg

The case engaged i board of shares of s of pora
the busin sued by th its capital general in corporatio exercising pating "in the court
Daniels.

The de ing its fra corporated subordinat purpose de sion of the torney-gen charter."

This ca cused an pronounc the great sented th
the bases

Any con broad and detriment every mon definite pr

I find another case, that of the Chicago Gas-Light and Coke Company vs. The People's Gas-Light and Coke Company, on page 531, 121 Illinois Reports, in which it appears that the Chicago Gas-Light and Coke Company was incorporated in 1849 with the exclusive privilege of supplying Chicago and its inhabitants with gas for a period of ten years. Subsequently another company, under the name of the People's Gas-Light and Coke Company, was chartered, with power to manufacture and sell gas in the city of Chicago and to erect the necessary apparatus for that purpose, with the usual provisions as to laying their pipes in the streets of the city. Subsequently the two companies divided the city between them, allowing each the exclusive right of supplying gas therein for one hundred years and stipulating that neither would interfere with the business of the other in its own territory.

Here is the judgment of the court setting aside that contract as preventing competition, as null and void by the rules of the common law. I have only now been able to get this, but I will see that it is correctly quoted from the regular report, and will read the brief statement I have:

The defendant company, claiming as the assignee of the exclusive privilege in the territory set off to it, filed a bill against the other for a specific performance of the contract of assignment. The court refused the relief sought, holding "that by the grant of the second charter the Legislature intended to do away with the monopoly" granted under the first; "that, although the contract involved a partial restraint of trade, and therefore might not, by the general rule of law, be invalid, yet that the general rule does not apply to corporations engaged in a public business in which the public have an interest," and that the contract was void.

In a recent case, that of the People of Illinois vs. The Chicago Gas Trust Company, which I find reported in a late paper—the trust combination consisted of a new corporation holding a separate charter under the general incorporation law of Illinois. In applying for its charter the Gas Trust Company stated the objects of its incorporation to be "the erection and operation of works in Chicago and other places in Illinois for the manufacture, sale, and distribution of gas and electricity, and to purchase and hold or sell the capital stock of any gas or electric company or companies in Chicago or elsewhere in Illinois." Having received its charter the company purchased a majority of the capital stock of each of the gas companies doing business in Chicago, four in number.

The information charges that, by so purchasing and holding a majority of the shares of the capital stock of each of the four companies, the appellee usurps and exercises "powers, liberties, privileges, and franchises not conferred by law."

"That by purchasing and holding such stock it secured the control of each of the companies; that such control 'by the appellee, an outside and independent corporation, suppresses outside competition between them and destroys their diversity of interest and all motive for competition. There is thus built up a virtual monopoly in the manufacture and sale of gas.' It also held that 'a corporation thus formed for the purpose of manufacturing and selling gas * * * has no power to purchase and hold or sell shares of stock in other gas companies as an incident to the purpose of its formation, even though such power is specified in its articles of incorporation.'"

Mr. CULLOM. That is a recent decision.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, a very recent decision, and it has not yet gone into the reports. There is a still more recent case, and I am reminded of it by the remark of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], that of The People of New York vs. The North River Sugar-Refining Company, a trust which was investigated by a committee of the House of Representatives, of which Mr. Bacon was chairman, and which came before the supreme court of New York at circuit in January, 1889, was carried to the general term in November last, and is reported in volume 2, Abbott's New Cases, page 164, both decisions being against the defendant, a member of the so-called trust company. This is a statement of the case together with the decision of Mr. Justice Daniels in rendering judgment:

The case was that seventeen corporations, in at least six different States, all engaged in the sugar-refining business, arranged to transfer their stock to a board of eleven members and were to receive in return from the association shares of stock to be issued by it and to be distributed among the several corporations in proportion to the amounts of stock held by them. The profits of the business were to be divided among the holders of certificates for shares issued by the board. No limit for the duration of the association was fixed, and its capital stock was fixed at $50,000,000. A suit was brought by the attorney-general in the name of the people of New York against one of the associate corporations to vacate and annul its charter for "abuse of its powers" and for exercising "privileges or franchises not conferred upon it by law" by participating "in a combination with certain sugar refineries." Upon both grounds the court found against the defendant.

Daniels, Justice, in rendering his judgment, said:
"The defendant has disabled itself from exercising its functions and employing its franchises, as it was intended it should by the act under which it was incorporated, and had by the action which was taken placed itself in complete subordination to another and different organization, to be used for an unlawful purpose detrimental and injurious to the public. * * * This was a subversion of the object for which the company was created, and it authorized the attorney-general to maintain and prosecute this action to vacate and annul its charter."

This case may be said to be a leading case and was thoroughly discussed and considered. The opinion of the court at the general term pronounced by Mr. Justice Barrett covers the whole ground upon which the great body of the trusts in the United States rests. The suit presented the distinct question raised by many of the contracts which are the bases of these combinations. To use the language of that judge:

Any combination the tendency of which is to prevent competition in its broad and general sense, and to control, and thus at will enhance, prices to the detriment of the public, is a legal monopoly. And this rule is applicable to every monopoly whether the supply be restricted by nature or susceptible of indefinite production. The difficulty of effecting the unlawful purpose may be greater in the one case than in the other, but it is never impossible. Nor need it be permanent or complete. It is enough that it may be even temporarily and partially successful. The question in the end is, does it inevitably tend to public injury?

Then follows a long and elaborate decision, and I think it is the unanimous judgment of the court—at least I see no dissent marked, and I presume it is the unanimous judgment of that high court of the State of New York—in a case which occurred only last year when it had before it this sugar company. That being a corporation of New York, it could deal with that corporation alone, but the combination was between that company and sixteen others, if I remember aright—perhaps the number was greater. In the courts of the United States all of them might have been parties, but as a matter of course the supreme court of New York could not extend its jurisdiction beyond the limits of its own territory.

I might add to the cases cited innumerable cases in nearly all the States and in England, and in all of them it will appear that while the law in respect to contracts in restraint of trade and combinations to prevent competition and to advance the price of necessities of life has varied somewhat, but in all of them, whether the combinations are by individuals, partnerships, or corporations, when the purpose of the combination or its plain tendency is to prevent competition, the courts have enforced the rule of the common law and have vigorously used the judicial power in subverting them.

And now it is for Congress to say, when the devices of able lawyers and the cupidity of powerful corporations have united to spread these combinations over all the States of the Union, embracing in their folds nearly every necessary of life, whether it is not time to invoke the judicial power conferred upon the courts of the United States to deal with these combinations; when lawful to support them and when unlawful to suppress them.

I might state the case of all the combinations which now control the transportation and sale of nearly all the leading productions of the country that have recently been made familiar by the public press, such as the cotton trust, the whisky trust, the sugar-refiners' trust, the cotton-bagging trust, the copper trust, the salt trust, and many others, some of which have been the subjects of legislative inquiry and others of judicial process; but it is scarcely necessary to do so, as they are all modeled upon the same plan and involve the same principles. They are all combinations of corporations and individuals of many States forming a league and covenant, under the control of trustees with power to suspend the production of some and enlarge the production of others, and absolutely control the supply of the article which they produce, and with a uniform design to prevent competition, to break it down wherever it appears to threaten their interest.

I have seen within a few days in the public prints a notice of a combination intended to affect the price of silver bullion, as follows:

WITH A CAPITAL OF TWENTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

CHICAGO, March 2.

The Herald to-day says that, with the exception of five companies, all the refining and smelting companies of the United States have formed a trust, with a capital of $25,000,000, of which $15,000,000 is to be common stock and the remaining preferred.

If such a combination is formed it will enable a few corporations in different States to corner the Government of the United States in its proposed effort, by a bill pending in the Senate, to purchase silver bullion as the basis and security for paper money. Can any one doubt that such a combination is unlawful, against public policy, with power enough to control the operation of your laws, and destructive to all competition which you invite? It is scarcely necessary on this point to quote further from the law books. Every decision or treatise on the law of contracts agrees in denouncing such a combination.

Judge Gibson, in the case of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania vs. Carlisle, states the general principle in terse and vigorous language:

A combination is criminal whenever the act to be done has a necessary tendency to prejudice the public or to oppress individuals by unjustly subjecting them to the power of the confederates, and giving effect to the purpose of the latter, whether of extortion or of mischief.

The solicitor of the Standard Oil Trust, Mr. Dodd, in an argument which I have before me, admits that certain combinations are null and void. He says:

When I speak of unrestricted combinations I do not mean that combinations should be allowed under all circumstances and for all purposes. While combination is not, per se, evil its purposes may be. The law is possibly our best guide on this subject. It has progressed as experience and the necessities of business required it to progress, from the idea that all combinations were wrong to the idea that all persons should be left free to combine for all legitimate purposes. To this day, however, the law is properly very jealous of certain classes of combinations, such as—

First. Where the parties combining exercise a public employment or possess exclusive privileges, and are to that extent monopolies.

Second. Where the purpose and effect of the combination is to "corner" any article necessary to the public.

Third. Where the purpose and effect of the combination is to limit production, and thereby to unduly enhance prices.

These things are just as unlawful without combination as with it. In other words, the evil is not in the combination, but in its purposes and results.

The law condemns any arrangement the purpose or necessary tendency of which is to destroy all competition and thus to prejudice the public.

I accept the law as stated by Mr. Dodd, that all combinations are not void, a proposition which no one doubts, but I assert that the tendency of all combinations of corporations, such as those commonly called trusts, and the inevitable effect of them, is to prevent competition and to restrain trade. This must be manifest to every intelligent mind. Still this can not be assumed as against any combination unless upon a fair hearing it should appear to a court of competent jurisdiction that the agreement composing such combination is necessarily injurious to the public and destructive to fair trade. These modern combinations are uniformly composed of citizens and corporations of many States, and therefore they can only be dealt with by a jurisdiction as broad as their combination. The State courts have held in many cases that they can not interfere in controlling the action of corporations of other States. If corporations from other States do business within a State, the courts may control their action within the limits of the State, but when a trust is created by a combination of many corporations from many States, there are no courts with jurisdiction broad enough to deal with them except the courts of the United States.

I admit that it is difficult to define in legal language the precise line between lawful and unlawful combinations. This must be left for the courts to determine in each particular case. All that we, as lawmakers, can do is to declare general principles, and we can be assured that the courts will apply them so as to carry out the meaning of the law, as the courts of England and the United States have done for centuries. This bill is only an honest effort to declare a rule of action, and if it is imperfect it is for the wisdom of the Senate to perfect it. Although this body is always conservative, yet, whatever may be said of it, it has always been ready to preserve, not only popular rights in their broad sense, but the rights of individuals as against associated and corporate wealth and power.

It is sometimes said of these combinations that they reduce prices to the consumer by better methods of production, but all experience shows that this saving of cost goes to the pockets of the producer. The price to the consumer depends upon the supply, which can be reduced at pleasure by the combination. It will vary in time and place by the extent of competition, and when that ceases it will depend upon the urgency of the demand for the article. The aim is always for the highest price that will not check the demand, and, for the most of the necessities of life, that is perennial and perpetual.

But, they say, competition is open to all; if you do not like our prices, establish another combination or trust. As was said by the supreme court of New York, when the combination already includes all or nearly all the producers, what room is there for another? And if another is formed and is legal, what is to prevent another combination? Sir, now the people of the United States as well as of other countries are feeling the power and grasp of these combinations, and are demanding of every Legislature and of Congress a remedy for this evil, only grown into huge proportions in recent times. They had monopolies and mortuaries of old, but never before such giants as in our day. You must heed their appeal or be ready for the socialist, the communist, and the nihilist. Society is now disturbed by forces never felt before.

The popular mind is agitated with problems that may disturb social order, and among them all none is more threatening than the inequality of condition, of wealth, and opportunity that has grown within a single generation out of the concentration of capital into vast combinations to control production and trade and to break down competition. These combinations already defy or control powerful transportation corporations and reach State authorities. They reach out their Briarean arms to every part of our country. They are imported from abroad. Congress alone can deal with them, and if we are unwilling or unable there will soon be a trust for every production and a master to fix the price for every necessity of life.

But it is said by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], who honors me with his attention, that this bill is unconstitutional, that Congress can not confer jurisdiction on the courts of the United States in this class of cases. I respectfully submit that, in his subtle argument, he has entirely overlooked the broad jurisdiction conferred by the Constitution upon courts of the United States in ordinary cases of law and equity between certain parties, as well as cases arising under the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States. Much the greater proportion of the cases decided in these courts have no relation to the Constitution, laws, or treaties. They embrace admiralty and maritime law, all controversies in which the United States are a party, controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects.

This jurisdiction embraces the whole field of the common law and of commercial law, especially of the law of contracts, in all cases where the United States is a party and in all cases between citizens of different States. The jurisdiction is as broad as the earth, except only it does not extend to controversies within a State between citizens of a State. All the combinations at which this bill aims are combinations embracing persons and corporations of several States. Each State can deal with a combination within the State, but only the General Government can deal with combinations reaching not only the several States, but the commercial world. This bill does not include combinations within a State, but if the Senator from Mississippi can make this clearer any proposition he will make to that effect will certainly be accepted and I will cheerfully vote for his proposition. Can any one doubt the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in all cases in which the United States is a party and in all cases between citizens, including corporations, of different States? I will read a note from Story on the Constitution:

It has been very correctly remarked by Mr. Justice Iredell that "the judicial power of the United States is of a peculiar kind. It is, indeed, commensurate with the ordinary legislative and executive government and the powers which concern treaties. But it also goes further. When certain parties are concerned, although the subject in controversy does not relate to any special objects of authority of the General Government, wherein the separate sovereignties of the separate States are blended in one common mass of supremacy, yet the General Government has a judicial authority in regard to such subjects of controversy; and the Legislature of the United States may pass all laws necessary to give such judicial authority its proper effect."

The judicial power of the United States extends to all questions of law and equity which arise between citizens of different States or between the other classes named. The jurisdiction of the courts of the United States may depend either upon the nature of the cause arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, or upon the parties to the case.

Chief-Justice Marshall, in the case of Cohens vs. Virginia, 6 Wheaton, page 378, says:

The second section of the third article of the Constitution defines the extent of the judicial power of the United States. Jurisdiction is given to the courts of the Union in two classes of cases. In the first, their jurisdiction depends on the character of the cause, whoever may be the parties. This class comprehends "all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority." This clause extends the jurisdiction of the court to all the cases described, without making in its terms any exceptions whatever, and without any regard to the condition of the party. If there be any exception, it is to be implied against the express words of the article.

In the second class the jurisdiction depends entirely on the character of the parties. In this are comprehended "controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, and between a State and foreign states, citizens, or subjects." If these be the parties, it is entirely unimportant what may be the subject of controversy. Be it what it may, these parties have a constitutional right to come into the courts of the Union.

The same question was involved in the celebrated case of Osborn vs. Bank of the United States (9 Wheaton, page 738), in which it was contended that the courts of the United States could not exercise jurisdiction because several questions might arise in such suits, which might depend upon the general principles of law, and not upon any act of Congress. It was held that Congress did constitutionally possess the power and had rightfully conferred it in that charter. Chief-Justice Marshall said there, in one of the most famous of his opinions involving grave constitutional questions:

A cause may depend upon several questions of fact and law. Some of these may depend on the construction of a law of the United States; others, on principles unconnected with that law.

It was held in that case that the Bank of the United States being created by Congress the right might be conferred upon it by Congress to sue in the courts of the United States without respect to the nature or character of the controversy.

The clause giving the bank a right to sue in the circuit courts of the United States stands on the same principle with the acts authorizing officers of the United States who sue in their own names to sue in the courts of the United States.

If it be said that a suit brought by the bank may depend in fact altogether on questions unconnected with any law of the United States, it is equally true with respect to suits brought by the Postmaster-General.

Cases may also arise under laws of the United States by implication as well as by express enactment, so that due redress may be administered by the judicial power of the United States.

This goes to show that, the jurisdiction once acquired by having the parties before the court, it extends to any kind of remedial jurisdiction, any kind of a case.

It has also been asked, and may again be asked—

Chief-Justice Marshall says—

why the words "cases in equity" are found in this clause. What equitable causes can grow out of the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States? To this the general answer of the Federalist seems at once clear and satisfactory. There is hardly a subject of litigation between individuals which would not involve those ingredients of fraud, accident, trust, or hardship which would render the matter an object of equitable rather than of legal jurisdiction, as the distinction is known and established in several of the States. It is the peculiar province, for instance, of a court of equity to relieve against what are called hard bargains. These are contracts in which, though there may have been no direct fraud or deceit sufficient to invalidate them in a court of law, yet there may have been some undue and unconscionable advantage taken of the necessities or misfortunes of one of the parties which a court of equity would not tolerate.

By the Constitution of the United States this jurisdiction of the courts of the United States extends to all cases in law and equity between certain parties. What is meant by the words of "cases in law and equity?" Does this include only cases growing out of the Constitution, statutes, and treaties of the United States? It has been held over and over again that, by these words, the Constitution has adopted as a rule of remedial justice the common law of England as administered by courts of law and equity.

Judge Story, in his work on the Constitution, volume 2, page 485, says:

What is to be understood by "cases in law and equity" in this clause? Plainly, cases at the common law, as contradistinguished from cases in equity, according to the known distinctions in the jurisprudence of England, which our ancestors brought with them upon their emigration, and with which all the American States were familiarly acquainted. Here, then, at least, the Constitution of the United States appeals to and adopts the common law to the extent of making it a rule in the pursuit of remedial justice in the courts of the Union. If the remedy must be in law or in equity, according to the course of proceedings at the common law, in cases arising under the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, it would seem irresistibly to follow that the principles of decision by which these remedies must be administered must be derived from the same source. Hitherto such has been the uniform interpretation and mode of administering justice in all civil cases in the courts of the United States in this class of cases.

But I need not pursue the matter further. The question of the character and nature of the controversy when the proper legal parties are before the court is never entered into. In some cases, where the rules of law and equity have been modified by legislation, the courts of the United States have followed the local law as construed and administered by the courts of the State where the controversy arose, but it is clearly within the power of Congress to prescribe the rule as well as to define the methods of procedure in the courts of law and equity of the United States; so I submit that this bill as it stands, without any reference to the specific powers granted to Congress by the Constitution, is clearly authorized under the judicial article of the Constitution. This bill declares a rule of public policy in accordance with the rule of the common law. It limits its operation to certain important functions of the Government, among which are the importation, transportation, and sale of articles imported into the United States, the production, manufacture, or sale of articles of domestic growth or production, and domestic raw materials competing with a similar article upon which a duty is levied by the United States.

If this bill were broader than it is and declared unlawful all trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production null and void, there could be no question that in suits brought by the United States to enforce it, or suits between individuals or corporations of different States for injuries done in violation of it, it would be clearly within the power of Congress and the jurisdiction of the court. The mere limitation of this jurisdiction to certain classes of combinations does not affect in the slightest degree the power of Congress to pass a much broader and more comprehensive bill.

Nor is it necessary to limit the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to suits between citizens of different States. It extends also to suits by the United States when authorized by law. It is eminently proper that when a combination of persons or corporations of different States tends to affect injuriously the interests or powers of the United States, as well as of citizens of the United States, the proceeding should be in the courts of the United States and in the name of the United States. The legal process of quo warranto or mandamus ought, in such cases, to be issued at the suit of the United States. A citizen would appear in such a suit at every disadvantage, and even the United States is scarcely the equal of a powerful corporation in a suit where a single officer with insufficient pay is required to compete with the ablest lawyers encouraged with compensation far beyond the limits allowed to the highest government officer. It is in such proceedings that the battle with these great combinations is to be fought.

But, aside from the power drawn from the third article of the Constitution, I believe this bill is clearly within the power conferred expressly upon Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States and its power to levy and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises.

And here, Mr. President, I wish to again call attention to the argument of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE]. He treats this bill as a criminal statute from beginning to end, and not as a remedial statute with civil remedies. He says:

The first thing which attracts our attention, therefore, is that if the agreement or combination, which is the crime, be made outside of the jurisdiction of the United States it is also without the terms of the law and can not be punished in the United States.

It is true that if a crime is committed outside of the United States it can not be punished in the United States. But if an unlawful combination is made outside of the United States and in pursuance of it property is brought within the United States such property is subject to our laws. It may be seized. A civil remedy by attachment could be had. Any person interested in the United States could be made a party.

Either a foreigner or a native may escape "the criminal part of the law," as he says, by staying out of our jurisdiction, as very many do, but if they have property here it is subject to civil process. I do not see what harm a foreigner can do us if neither his person nor his property is here. He may combine or conspire to his heart's content if none of his co-conspirators are here or his property is not here.

Again he says:

But suppose, what I think, however, is highly improbable, some of these great combinations should be made in the United States. Will the case be any better for the people in whose interest we profess to legislate? The combination, agreement, or trusts, etc., must, under the bill, be made "with the intention to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States."

The word "intention" is not in the bill. It was proposed as an amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. It was in the bill as reported.

Mr. SHERMAN. Ah, it was proposed as an amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. By the Committee on Finance?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, but the Senator treated it as being a part of the bill. It was a proposed amendment to the bill and was never adopted.

Mr. GEORGE. The original bill was proposed by the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. SHERMAN. That had no such word in it.

Mr. GEORGE. That had no such word in it, but when the bill came back from the committee it did have the word in it.

Mr. SHERMAN. But the bill as it comes from the committee now has certainly no such word in it. It was proposed as an amendment, but has no place in the first section. The language is: "made with a view or which tend." The "intention" can not be proved, though "tendency" can. The tendency is the test of legality. The intention is the test of a crime.

And so all through his speech he quotes the phrases of a "certain specified intent," "specific intent," "penal legislation," "reasonable doubt," "indicted must be acquitted." He treats this bill very much as he does the Constitution of the United States, something to be evaded, to be strictly construed, instead of being what it is, a remedial statute, a bill of rights, a charter of liberty. He no doubt is partly justified in this by the amendments proposed but not adopted, and by the third section, which would be subject to his criticism, and which I will join him in striking out.

Mr. GEORGE. It was an amendment proposed by the committee?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes. Now, Mr. President, what is this bill? A remedial statute to enforce by civil process in the courts of the United States the common law against monopolies. How is such a law to be construed? Liberally with a view to promote its objects. What are the evils complained of? They are well depicted by the Senator from Mississippi in this language, and I will read it as my own with quotation marks.

Mr. GEORGE. I am very much obliged for the compliment.

Mr. SHERMAN. "These trusts and combinations are great wrongs to the people. They have invaded many of the most important branches of business. They operate with a double-edged sword. They increase beyond reason the cost of the necessities of life and business, and they decrease the cost of the raw material, the farm products of the country. They regulate prices at their will, depress the price of what they buy and increase the price of what they sell. They aggregate to themselves great, enormous wealth by extortion which makes the people poor. Then, making this extorted wealth the means of further extortion from their unfortunate victims, the people of the United States, they pursue unmolested, unrestrained by law, their ceaseless round of speculation under the law, till they are fast producing that condition in our people in which the great mass of them are the servitors of those who have this aggregated wealth at their command."

One would think that with this conception of the evil to be dealt with he would for once turn his telescope upon the Constitution to find out power to deal with so great a wrong, and not, as usual, to reverse it, to turn the little end of the telescope to the Constitution, and then, with subtle reasoning, to dissipate the powers of the Government into thin air. He overlooks the judicial power of the courts of the United States extending to all cases where the United States is a party, or where a State may sue in the courts of the United States, or where citizens of different States are contesting parties with full power to apply a remedy by quo warranto, mandamus, judgment, and execution. He treats the question as depending alone upon the power to regulate foreign and domestic commerce and of taxation. I submit that, without reference to the judicial power, they are amply sufficient to justify this bill. What are they?

Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States and with the Indian tribes.

The want of this power was one of the leading defects of the Confederation, and probably as much as any one cause conducing to the establishment of a Constitution. It is a power vital to the prosperity of the Union; and without it the Government could scarcely deserve the name of a National Government and would soon sink into discredit and imbecility. It would stand as a mere shadow of sovereignty to mock our hopes and involve us in a common ruin. (Story on the Constitution, volume 2, page 2.)

What is the extent of this power? What is the meaning of the word "commerce?" It means the exchange of all commodities between different places or communities. It includes all trade and traffic, all modes of transportation by land or by sea, all kinds of navigation, every species of ship or sail, every mode of transit, from the dog-cart to the Pullman car, every kind of motive power, from the mule or horse to the most recent application of steam or electricity applied on every road, from the trail over the mountain or the plain to the perfected railway or the steel bridges over great rivers or arms of the sea. The power of Congress extends to all this commerce, except only that limited within the bounds of a State.

Under this power no bridge can be built over a navigable stream except by the consent of Congress. All the network of railroads crossing from State to State, from ocean to ocean, from east to west, and from north to south are now curbed, regulated, and controlled by the power of Congress over commerce. Most of the combinations aimed at by this bill are directly engaged in this commerce. They command and control in many cases and even own some of the agencies of this commerce. They have invented or own new modes of transportation, such as pipelines for petroleum or gas, reaching from State to State, crossing farms and highways and public property.

Can it be that with this vast power Congress can not protect the people from combinations in restraint of trade that are unlawful by every code of civil law adopted by civilized nations? It may "regulate commerce;" can it not protect commerce, nullify contracts that restrain commerce, turn it from its natural courses, increase the price of articles, and therefore diminish the amount of commerce?

It is said that commerce does not commence until production ends and the voyage commences. This may be true as far as the actual ownership or sale of articles within a State is subject to State authorities. I do not question the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Coe vs. Errol, quoted by the Senator from Mississippi, that property within a State is subject to taxation though intended to be transported into another State. This bill does not propose to deal with property within a State or with combinations within the State, but only when the combination extends to two or more States or engages in either State or foreign commerce. It is said that these combinations can and will evade this bill. I have no doubt they will do so in many cases, but they can do so only by ceasing to interfere with foreign and interstate commerce.

Their power for mischief will be greatly crippled by this bill. Their present plan of organization was adopted only to evade the jurisdiction of State courts. They still maintain their workshops, their mode of production, by means of partnerships or corporations in a State. If their productions competed with those of similar partnerships or corporations in other States it would be all right. But to prevent such competition they unite the interests of all these partnerships and corporations into a combination, sometimes called a trust, sometimes a new corporation located in a city remote from the places of production, and then regulate and control the sale and transportation of all the products of many States, discontinuing one at their will, some running at half time, others pressed at their full capacity, fixing the price at pleasure in every part of the United States, dictating terms to transportation companies, controlling your commerce; and yet it is said that Congress, armed with full power to regulate commerce, is helpless and unable to deal with this monster.

Sir, the object aimed at by this bill is to secure competition of the productions of different States which necessarily enter into interstate and foreign commerce. These combinations strike directly at the commerce over which Congress alone has jurisdiction. "Congress may regulate interstate and foreign commerce," and it is absurd to contend that Congress may not prohibit contracts and arrangements that are hostile to such commerce.

Congress also has power "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises." It may exercise its own discretion in acting upon this power, and is only responsible to the people for the abuse of the power. All parties, from the foundation of the Government, have held that Congress may discriminate in selecting the objects and rates of taxation. Some of these taxes are levied for the direct and some for the incidental encouragement and increase of home industries. The people pay high taxes on the foreign article to induce competition at home, in the hope that the price may be reduced by competition, and with the benefit of diversifying our industries and increasing the common wealth.

Suppose one of these combinations should unite all, or nearly all, the domestic producers of an article of prime necessity with a view to prevent competition and to keep the price up to the foreign cost and duty added, would not this be in restraint of trade and commerce and affect injuriously the operation of our revenue laws? Can Congress prescribe no remedy except to repeal its taxes? Surely it may authorize the executive authorities to appeal to the courts of the United States for such a remedy, as courts habitually apply in the States for the forfeiture of charters thus abused and the punishment of officers who practice such wrongs to the public. It may also give to our citizens the right to sue for such damages as they have suffered.

In no respect does the work of our fathers in framing the Constitution of the United States appear more like the work of the Almighty Ruler of the Universe rather than the conception of human minds than by the gradual development and application of the powers conferred by it upon different branches of the Federal Government. Many of these powers have remained dormant, unused, but plainly there, awaiting the growth and progress of our country, and when the time comes and the occasion demands we find in that instrument, provided for thirteen States, a thread along the Atlantic and containing four millions of people, without manufactures, without commerce, bankrupt with debt, without credit or wealth, all the powers necessary to govern a contimental empire of forty-two States, with sixty-five millions of people, the largest in manufactures, the second in wealth, and the happiest in its institutions of all the nations of the world.

While we should not stretch the powers granted to Congress by strained construction, we can not surrender any of them; they are not ours to surrender, but whenever occasion calls we should exercise them for the benefit and protection of the people of the United States. And, sir, while I have no doubt that every word of this bill is within the powers granted to Congress, I feel that its defects are in its moderation, and that its best effect will be a warning that all trade and commerce, all agreements and arrangements, all struggles for money or property, must be governed by the universal law that the public good must be the test of all.

Mr. INGALLS and Mr. VEST addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANDERSON in the chair). Does the Senator from Kansas rise to speak to this bill?

Mr. INGALLS. I rose to inquire if an amendment in the second degree is now pending.

Mr. REAGAN. There is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Texas to the amendment reported from the Committee on Finance is pending.

Mr. INGALLS. I give notice, then, of my intention, when it shall be in order, to offer the amendment which I send to the desk, and which I ask may be now read, and ordered to be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read for the information of the Senate, and ordered to be printed.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to substitute the following:

That for the purposes of this act the words "options" shall be understood to mean any contract or agreement whereby a party thereto, or any person, corporation, partnership, or association for whom or in whose behalf such contract or agreement is made acquires the right or privilege, but is not thereby obligated, to deliver to another at a future time or period any of the articles mentioned in section 3 of this act.

Sec. 2. That for the purposes of this act the word "futures" shall be understood to mean any contract or agreement whereby a party agrees to sell and deliver at a future time to another any of the articles mentioned in section 3 of this act, when at the time of making such contract or agreement the party so agreeing to make such delivery, or the party for whom he acts as agent, broker, or employee in making such contract or agreement, is not at the time of making the same the owner of the article so contracted and agreed to be delivered.

Sec. 3. That the articles of which the foregoing sections relate are wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, cotton, and all other farm products; also, beef, pork, lard, and all other hog and cattle products.

Sec. 4. That special taxes are imposed as follows: Dealers in "options" or "futures" shall pay annually the sum of $1,000, and shall also pay the further sum of 5 cents per pound for each and every pound of cotton, or of beef, pork, lard, or other hog and cattle products, and the sum of 20 cents per bushel for each and every bushel of any of the other articles mentioned in section 3 of this act, the right or privilege of delivering which may be acquired under any "options" contract or agreement, as defined by section 1 of this act, or which may be sold to be delivered at a future time or period under any "futures" contract or agreement as defined in section 2 of this act, which said amounts shall be paid to the collector of internal revenue, as hereinafter provided, and by him accounted for, as required in respect to other special taxes collected by him. Every person, association, copartnership, or corporation who shall, in their own behalf, or as broker, agent, or employee of another, deal in "options," or make any "options" contract or agreement, as hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed a dealer in "options," and every person, association, copartnership, or corporation who shall, in their own behalf or as broker, agent, or employee of another, deal in "futures," or make any "futures" contract or agreement, as hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed a dealer in "futures."

Sec. 5. That every person, association, copartnership, or corporation engaged in or proposing to engage in the business of dealer in "options" or of dealer in "futures" as hereinbefore defined shall, before commencing such business or making any such "options" or "futures" contract or agreement, make application in writing to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which he proposes to engage in such business or make such contract or agreement, setting forth the name of the person, association, partnership, or corporation, place of residence of the applicant, the business engaged in, and where such business is to be carried on, and in case of partnership, association, or corporation the names and places of residence of the several persons constituting the same, and shall thereupon pay to such collector the sum aforesaid of $1,000, and shall also execute and deliver to such collector a bond in the penal sum of $50,000, with two or more sureties satisfactory to the collector, conditioned upon the full and faithful compliance by the obligor therein with all the requirements of this act; and thereupon the collector shall issue to such applicant a certificate in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall prescribe that such applicant is authorized for the period of one year from the date of such certificate to be a dealer in "options" or "futures" and to make "options" or "futures" contracts or agreements as hereinbefore defined, and for the period specified in such certificate the party to whom it is issued may conduct the business of dealer as aforesaid. Such certificate may be renewed annually upon the compliance with the provisions of this act, and any "options" or "futures" contract or agreement as defined by this act shall be absolutely void as between the parties thereto and their respective assigns unless the party making such contract or agreement shall have at the time of making the same a certificate as aforesaid authorizing the making thereof.

Sec. 6. That it shall be the duty of the collector to keep in his office a register containing a copy of each and every application made to him under the foregoing section and a statement in connection therewith as to whether a certificate had been issued thereon and for what period, which book or register shall be public record and be subject to inspection of any and all persons desiring to examine the same.

Sec. 7. That every "option" or "futures" contract or agreement as hereinbefore defined shall be in writing and signed in duplicate by the parties making the same; and any such contract or agreement not so made and signed shall, as between the parties thereto and their assigns, be absolutely void.

Sec. 8. That it shall be the duty of every person, copartnership, association, or corporation, on the first day of the week next succeeding the date of the certificate issued to them, and on the first day of each and every week thereafter, to make to the collector of the district in which any "options" or "futures" contract or agreement has been made full and complete return and report, under oath, of any and all such contracts and agreements made or entered into by such person, copartnership, association, or corporation during the previous week, together with a statement of the articles or articles embraced in or covered by such contracts or agreements, and the amounts, respectively, of each, and the name of the party or parties with whom such contracts or agreements have been made, and at the same time to pay to such collector the amount of the tax herebefore required of 5 cents per pound on each and every pound of cotton, and of pork, lard, or other hog products, and of 20 cents per bushel on each and every bushel of any of the other articles mentioned in section 3 of this act, which are the subject of or covered by such contracts or agreements, or any of them, for which sums such collector shall give his receipt to the party so paying, and the sums so collected shall be accounted for by the collector as provided by law in respect to other taxes collected by him.

SEC. 9. That every person who shall, in his own behalf or in behalf of any other person, association, partnership, or corporation, enter into any "options" or "futures" contract or agreement, as defined by this act, without having a certificate of authority from the collector, as hereinbefore provided, and covering the time at which such contract or agreement shall be made, shall, besides being liable for the amounts prescribed in section 4 of this act, be fined not less than $5,000 and not more than $10,000 for each and every such offense. And every person who shall make to the collector a false or fraudulent return or report required by section 8 of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than $5,000 nor more than $10,000, or to imprisonment for not less than six months or more than two years, or to both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 10. That neither the payment of the taxes required nor the certificate issued by the collector under this act shall be held to legalize dealing in options and futures, nor to exempt any person, association, copartnership, or corporation from any penalty or punishment, now or hereafter provided by the laws of any State for making contracts or agreements such as are hereinbefore defined as "options" or "futures" contracts or agreements, or in any manner to authorize the making of such contracts or agreements within any State or locality contrary to the laws of such State or locality; nor shall the payment of the taxes imposed by this act be held to prohibit any State or municipality from placing a tax or duty on the same trade, transaction, or business for State, municipal, or other purposes.

SEC. 11. That section 3209 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is, so far as applicable, made to extend and apply to the taxes imposed by this act and to the persons upon whom they are imposed.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to suppress and punish unlawful trusts and combinations, to prevent dealing in options and futures, and for other purposes."

Mr. VEST. Mr. President—

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the Senator from Missouri allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the substitute reported from the Committee on Finance and read this morning may be considered as the text of the bill. It will be more convenient in offering amendments.

Mr. INGALLS. Then the amendment I have just submitted will be an amendment in the second degree and in order.

Mr. SHERMAN. It will be in order.

Mr. INGALLS. And the pending question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question would then be on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas. The Chair understands this to be the position of the question—

Mr. REAGAN. I understand the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio—

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the amendment reported from the Committee on Finance.

Mr. REAGAN. I have offered an amendment to that in the nature of a substitute, which is pending. That is an amendment in the second degree.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the parliamentary condition of the bill. The substitute reported by the committee upon the 18th day of March is considered as the original bill for the consideration of the Senate. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] is an amendment in the first degree, and that proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] an amendment in the second degree. The question now is on the amendment proposed as a substitute by the Senator from Kansas, on which the Senator from Missouri is entitled to the floor.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, no one can exaggerate the importance of the question pending before the Senate or the intensity of feeling which exists, especially in the agricultural portions of the country in regard to it. I take it that there will be no controversy with the Senator from Ohio as to the enormity of the abuses that have grown up under the system of trusts and combinations which now prevail in every portion of the Union. What we desire is one thing; what we can accomplish under the autonomy of our Government is another.

We live, very fortunately, in my judgment, under a written Constitution, and we are governed by the decisions of the Supreme Court in regard to the legislative powers vested in us. Acts of Congress and treaties are the supreme law of the land, in accordance with the Constitution. I deprecate as much as the Senator from Ohio can possibly do that spirit of hypercriticism which would consider the Constitution of the United States as a bill of indictment. I believe that it is a great bill of human rights, conservative, liberty-preserving, liberty-administering; and it is conservative, it preserves and administers liberty because it is a written Constitution and not because it is given to Congress to legislate as it sees proper, under the general and nebulous presumption of the general welfare, without regard to the grants that are made by the people to them as their legislative servants.

The grants of power to the courts of the United States are limited also by this written Constitution, and the grants of power in the judicial clause of the Constitution consist of two sorts: first, the jurisdiction which comes from the character of the litigants and, secondly, the jurisdiction that comes from the subject-matter involved. This is elementary law, and I simply announce it as one of the necessary premises in any discussion such as that in which we are now engaged.

As I understand the provisions of the original bill reported by the Senator from Ohio and the amendment which he offers now as a substitute, the attempt is made under one or the other of these two classes of jurisdiction, and then, permit me to say respectfully, by an uncertain and nebulous commingling of the two to give the power to Congress to pass this proposed act.

I know how ungrateful and dangerous it is now for a public man to object to this kind of legislation against this terrible evil, this enormous abuse of trusts and combines which the whole country is properly denouncing. I appreciate fully the significance of the remark of the Senator from Ohio when he says that unless relief is given, to use the language of Mr. Jefferson, "worse will ensue."

But, sir, even in the face of the popular indignation which may be visited upon any one who criticises any measure that looks to the destruction of this evil, I can not violate my oath to support the Constitution and all the habitudes of thought which have come to me as a lawyer educated and trained in my profession.

As I said, what we want is one thing, what we can do is another; and for Congress to pass a law which will be thrown out of the Supreme Court under the terrible criticism that any such law must invoke is simply to subject ourselves to ridicule and to say to our constituents that we are powerless to enact laws which will give them relief.

This bill, if it becomes a law, must go through the crucible of a legal criticism which will avail itself of the highest legal talent throughout the entire Union. It will go through a furnace not seven times but seventy-seven times heated, because the ablest lawyers in this country, it goes without saying, are on the side of the corporations and of aggregated wealth.

Without invoking this spirit of hypercriticism, which the Senator from Ohio deprecates, let us look at the provisions of the original bill and then of the amendment which he proposes shall take its place. In the original bill the Senator from Ohio undertakes to derive jurisdiction in Congress, not from the character of the litigants, but from the subject-matter in litigation, and this is evident from a cursory reading even of the first section of the original bill.

That all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between persons or corporations—

Not between corporations or persons residing in different States, not between corporations whose stockholders are citizens of different States, but between "persons or corporations"— made with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States, or in the production, manufacture, or sale of articles of domestic growth or production, or domestic raw material that competes with any similar article upon which a duty is levied by the United States, or which shall be transported from one State or Territory to another, etc.

Here the Senator from Ohio puts the legislative jurisdiction of Congress, which he invokes, not upon the fact that persons living in different States compose these corporations, but the subject-matter is invoked. It must be as to productions going from one State to another or coming from a foreign country into the area of territory composing the United States.

For the able argument of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], I have no words to express my admiration as a lawyer. I was exceedingly glad that it was made, because it is just through that species of argumentation that this legislation must pass.

It must be subjected to the crucible which was brought here by the Senator from Mississippi in that admirable dissertation upon constitutional power. After that argument was made the Senator from Ohio found it necessary to amend this original bill, and he did so by putting into it another element of jurisdiction; and that was the character of the litigants, in addition to the jurisdiction he had already invoked as to the subject-matter. This is evident from the first clause of the substitute.

That all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations—

Now, there is the original bill, and if it had stopped there the substitute would have agreed with it, but mark the addition—or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign states, or citizens or corporations thereof, made with a view, etc.

It is plain that the Senator from Ohio, recognizing the weakness of the original bill, then determined or attempted to invoke that idea which is found in the Constitution of the United States and the judiciary act of 1789, that citizenship in different States conferred Federal jurisdiction.

Now, let us see if the Senator by any such process as that can evade the argument made by the Senator from Mississippi. Sir, I shall not attempt to make any elaborate argument, but will simply read the Constitution and then inquire under what clause the legislative jurisdiction to enact this bill can be found. The Constitution of the United States provides as to the judicial power as follows:

The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity.

If it had stopped there much of the argument of the Senator from Ohio would have been pertinent; but it goes further:

All cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution.

That is to say, you must find the jurisdiction within the limits of this instrument.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not want to interrupt the Senator, but he reads the clause relating to cases in law and equity when there is an independent clause relating to controversies between citizens of different States.

Mr. VEST. I will come to that.

Mr. SHERMAN. The decisions of Chief-Justice Marshall set forth the power distinctly.

Mr. VEST. I do not think there will be any disagreement among lawyers as to the meaning of this clause. I am simply analyzing the grants of the Constitution.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think Chief-Justice Marshall was a pretty good lawyer.

Mr. VEST. I am taking the clauses as they come. The first is:

All cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution—

Under this particular instrument, coming from the Constitution itself—

the laws of the United States—

There is another grant—and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority.

Now, there are three distinct clauses of jurisdiction: first, under the Constitution; next, under the laws made in pursuance thereof; next, under the treaties made with foreign countries. It proceeds:

To all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States;—between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens or subjects.

Mr. President, let us take these clauses separately and see whether the power to pass this bill can be found under all or any of them. I shall reserve until the last my comments upon the first clause, which is, "To all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority," because I think it can be established beyond any doubt that the jurisdiction is not found in the other clauses that follow. If this bill can be sustained at all, it is because there is a clause in the Constitution which authorizes it outside of the other clauses, which I shall proceed to enumerate. For instance, the next clause is:

To all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls.

Unquestionably the power is not there. No minister, no consul is involved in this legislation.

To all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.

Unquestionably it is not found there, because the bill proposes only to affect contracts made upon land, not upon the ocean, and there is no admiralty or maritime question involved. Next:

To controversies in which the United States shall be a party.

Unquestionably it does not affect that unless it be in that uncertain and unsatisfactory statement of the Senator from Ohio that he means in one clause of his amendment to give to the United States the power to proceed by quo warranto, injunction, or otherwise. In his original bill he had a direct criminal proceeding on the part of the Government of the United States against these trusts and he struck it out in the substitute. He has eliminated from this discussion the direct criminal proceeding in the name of the United States against the parties composing this trust and against the trust itself. There is no machinery provided for any proceeding by the United States in his amendment; but only the uncertain statement that the United States may proceed by remedial process. There is nothing else to lead us to believe that he intends that the United States shall do anything else except proceed in some fashion by information against the persons composing these trusts or the trusts themselves.

To controversies between two or more States.

Unquestionably the bill is not under that clause.

Between a State and citizens of another State.

There is nothing in this amendment which gives jurisdiction under that clause.

Between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens, or subjects.

Of course there will be no contention that the jurisdiction is found under that clause. It must be then found under the clause—

Mr. SHERMAN. I have stated that the jurisdiction is sufficiently conferred in the ordinary language of the judiciary act of 1789, in all controversies in which the United States is a party and in controversies between citizens of different States.

Mr. VEST. Unquestionably.

Mr. SHERMAN. Those are the two clauses to which I referred. I did not claim any other power.

Mr. VEST. Unquestionably where there is any litigation between citizens of different States the Federal courts have jurisdiction, no matter what is the subject-matter. That is elementary law known to every student. But here is a bill which is put upon no such ground. The bill says:

All arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign States.

Not where there are litigants, not where one is plaintiff and the other is defendant. There is where the Constitution gives Federal jurisdiction. If the corporation itself is composed of citizens of different States then this jurisdiction attaches. Any citizen can sue although he lives in the same State with the corporation. There is the distinction.

Let me say that it excludes all the remedy that can be given to any citizen of the United States against the enormous evils depicted by the Senator from Ohio, because if this bill be passed and the Supreme Court of the United States decides it constitutional, you will never hear of the corporation which proposes to create or manipulate a trust that does not have the personnel of its stockholders all in the same State. That goes without saying, and it is to impute idiocy to the men whose schemes and machinations we are now attacking to suppose that they would do anything else. The idea that they, with the best counsel in the United States and even in the world, with the highest legal talent upon their side, will not immediately construct their corporations so as to nullify such a law is to impute to them a degree of mental imbecility that is simply ludicrous.

The Senator makes no distinction between the parties to the suit and the composition of the corporation which is itself a plaintiff or a defendant. He puts this jurisdiction upon something unknown to the Constitution, and the result would be (and it can be read between the lines) that if we enacted this into law the Supreme Court of the United States would immediately confront us with that clause of the Constitution and the judiciary act of 1789 and throw the case out of court.

It is very obvious that this attempt to invoke the web and wool of the judiciary act of 1789, which was made in pursuance of the clause of the Constitution that I have read, is an uncertain commingling of two elements utterly incongruous and utterly inconsistent.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the Senator from Missouri say that there is anything in the bill that confers jurisdiction when they are citizens or members of a corporation of different States? There is nothing of that. The language of the bill is plain. I have read it. I do not see what the Senator is driving at.

Between two or more citizens or corporations—

The corporation is considered as a unit and the citizen as a unit— or both, of different States.

This must be some persons and some corporations, distinct and separate personalities, not citizens who are members of the corporation. There is no such provision—

Mr. VEST. I am very unfortunate in my expressions if I have not made the Senator understand me.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the Senator is unfortunate, although he is not very often so.

Mr. VEST. Here is what I mean, and I think the Senator must agree with me: The Constitution of the United States makes one basis of jurisdiction to be the diverse citizenship of the litigants.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well.

Mr. VEST. Nothing can be plainer than that.

Mr. SHERMAN. This points that out. They must be citizens of different States or corporations of different States, or both.

Mr. VEST. Of course. Although it is so simple a matter that it hardly needs elucidation, I may put it thus: If Mr. Brown lives in the State of Missouri and Mr. Smith lives in Ohio they can sue each other without regard to the subject-matter, provided it comes within the limits which was fixed in the judiciary act as to the jurisdiction of a Federal tribunal. The Senator does not put his bill upon that ground at all. He undertakes to put it upon the composition of one of the litigants alone. He does not say, if one of these citizens lives in one State and one in another, which we would all admit to confer Federal jurisdiction, but he gives Federal jurisdiction because the corporation which makes the trust is composed of citizens of different States. If it does not mean that, then the English language has lost all its flavor and I have lost my power to understand it.

Here is what he says; I will read it again ad nauseam:

All arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States.

And that gives jurisdiction, provided they go on and undertake to do the other things enumerated in the other part of the section as to goods brought from foreign countries or goods carried from one State to another.

The Senator does not follow the Constitution, which says that when a suit shall be brought by a citizen of one State against a citizen of another State for doing the thing which he enumerates afterwards, which is another matter of argument, but he says if the corporation offending is composed of people living in different States, then the Federal courts have jurisdiction, which I submit is an unheard-of proposition and no lawyer ever advanced it before. As I undertook to show, how easy is it for these corporations to evade any such provision by simply having their stockholders all living in the limits of any particular State? It affords no remedy, even if the argument of the Senator from Ohio could stand for a moment, which it can not.

But, Mr. President, I proceed now, for it is not my disposition to make any elaborate argument, to the latter clause of the amendment, disregarding entirely the original bill, which for the purposes of discussion has been removed. If a corporation is composed of two or more persons living in different States or if it is composed of citizens or corporations, or both, in the United States and a foreign country, and they make a combination to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States, then this proposed law takes effect, and they become subject to the jurisdiction we invoke legislatively.

I do not propose to make any hypercritical argument, but I do insist that unless we adhere to the opinions of the Supreme Court, especially in the great case of Brown vs. The State of Maryland, we are at sea without rudder or compass in this whole discussion.

The Senator invokes the commerce clause of the Constitution, that clause which gives to Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign countries, among the States, and with the Indian tribes. The first question that meets us in limine, which any lawyer would be ashamed to confess that he did not invoke at the very beginning of his argument on this commerce clause, is the material question, what is commerce? What is commerce with a foreign country? There is the point in this whole legislation, the point that has given me the most trouble after long and exhaustive thought to the extent of my ability.

I will confess now, parenthetically but honestly, that in all my experience as a lawyer I have never encountered a subject so full of difficulty as that now before the Senate. I can very well understand how it is full of difficulty. Notwithstanding the eulogium in which I cordially unite with the Senator from Ohio upon the framers of the Constitution, it is simply impossible, unless we attribute to the framers of this instrument the intellect of gods, that they in the thirteen original colonies, poor, struggling for existence, limited in their territorial area to the Atlantic sea-board, should ever have contemplated the immense country for which we are now legislating, and the enormous aggregation of wealth which startles and amazes the world. They undertook in the Constitution to meet contingencies, but here is one which beggars Aladdin's lamp in the reality that is before us and with us to-day. It is no reflection, then, upon their intellect or their patriotism to say that they could not have contemplated an emergency such as that which now rests upon the people of the United States.

Mr. President, I come back to the question, What is commerce? We have the power to regulate it, but we must first find what commerce is in order to exercise our legislative power. I shall not undertake to read the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, which are elementary law upon this subject. In the great case of Brown against The State of Maryland, which leads upon this subject, and to which every lawyer goes first, decided by the most eminent men who ever sat upon the bench in this country, and the equals of any in the world, the regulation of foreign commerce was declared to be the regulation of the importation and sale of articles brought from a foreign country before they had left the hands of the importer and been broken as to the original package. I state crudely, but I think accurately.

The Supreme Court in that case settled the question of foreign commerce by declaring, as to the power of a State to tax foreign importations, that so long as the original package remained in the hands of the importer unbroken it was the subject of foreign commerce. When it left his hands and the package was broken, and the goods went into the common mass of the property of the people of the State, then the commercial clause of the Constitution as to foreign commerce ceased to operate.

Mr. President, apply that decision to the provisions of this bill. Here is one clause of the amendment which provides that if a corporation composed of citizens of different States does any act "with a view or which tends to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States," this proposed law shall take effect.

Does the Senator from Ohio pretend that, after the importer has brought in the goods and the package has been broken and the merchandise has been mingled or commingled with the other goods of the people of the State into which the importation is made, under this clause of the Constitution we can enact such a law as is proposed? I take it that the statement of the case is sufficient to answer the proposition. But it is undertaken to get this jurisdiction under another clause of the Constitution. The bill proceeds:

Or with a view or which tends to prevent full and free competition in articles of growth, production, or manufacture of any State or Territory of the United States with similar articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of any other State or Territory, or in the transportation or sale of like articles, the production of any State or Territory of the United States into or within any other State or Territory of the United States.

I shall not repeat the argument made by the Senator from Mississippi as lucidly and conclusively as any argument could have been made, that we have no power under any clause of the Federal Constitution to legislate as to any article simply because it is manufactured in any State of the Union and may be at some time carried to another State. That clause in the Constitution of the United States which affects interstate commerce, or, to speak more accurately, commerce among the States, has been defined by the Supreme Court in three leading cases to mean the power to regulate commerce in articles, whether manufactured in the State or not, after they have gone into commerce and are in transitu from one State to another.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that it is not for the manufacturer or the owner to say, "I intend these goods to go into another State." They must actually be in transitu; they must be in the hands of the common carrier, or in his depot or warehouse, with the impression distinctively made upon them that, to use the expression of one judge, they are dedicated to commerce among the States.

The Senator from Ohio makes the fatal mistake as a lawyer that, because goods manufactured in one State may be at some time or other taken into another, which as a matter of course is possible in every contingency, therefore he can invoke the general interstate commerce clause of the Constitution. He can not do it. If we pass this bill upon any such assumption and it goes to the Supreme Court of the United States, we shall simply be told that all we have done here is vox et præterea nihil, sound and fury, signifying nothing.

Mr. President, one year ago the Senator from Ohio struck the keynote as to all these trusts and combinations in the United States. It was in the expression made in this Chamber that whenever he was satisfied that any trust or combination was protected by a high tariff duty he would be in favor of reducing that duty. This is the remedy; and any other remedy, without an amendment of the Constitution of the United States, any remedy such as is proposed in this bill, will be absolutely nugatory and ineffectual.

The Senator from Ohio has drawn an eloquent picture of the operations of trusts in the United States. Sir, these trusts—and every intelligent man knows it, whether a legislator or a citizen—are protected by your high tariff, and are enabled to work their iniquitous purposes under that buttress which the tariff law erects around them.

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. VEST. Of course.

Mr. ALLISON. Am I to understand the Senator as saying that the only remedy as respects trusts is that which enables us to reduce tariff duties upon particular articles, and therefore if a trust or combination is made which is not in any way influenced by duties there is no remedy without an amendment to the Constitution?

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, if I stated it that strongly perhaps I went beyond my exact meaning. I believe there is a remedy if you take the jurisdiction of the State and also the jurisdiction of Congress and put them together, but I do not believe there is any complete remedy in the action of either separately and of itself. What I meant to say was that as to nearly all the trusts which have been denounced here to-day the most apparent remedy is to take away the protection which these trusts have from the high tariff that is now upon our statute-books and in operation.

Mr. PLATT. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT. What is the difficulty of the States dealing with this matter? What prevents any State from dealing with the matter of trusts?

Mr. VEST. I do not think there is any difficulty whatever as to that class of cases in which the products, or the transactions, to speak more accurately, take place entirely within the limits of a State; but we know that these trusts evade the State statutes even when they are made, and if we desire to apply a remedy we must remove the cause or else we are legislative empirics. If it is true that the tariff permits these trusts and protects them and we do not seek to remove the cause, all the remedies we attempt to apply are simply surface and skin, expedients that amount to nothing, and the real cause of the difficulty still remains.

Mr. INGALLS. Will the Senator inform me upon what ground the Missouri anti-trust bill was declared unconstitutional in his own State?

Mr. VEST. The circuit court at St. Louis, Mo., decided the act of the Legislature to be unconstitutional upon the ground that the forfeiture of the charter of a corporation was a judicial act, and could not be done by the act of the secretary of state. It was decided in the court at St. Louis by Judge Dillon, but it has not yet been decided in the supreme court, that the forfeiture of the charter of a corporation was a judicial act, and that the act of the Legislature which gave to the secretary of state the power of himself to declare the forfeiture of the charter was therefore unconstitutional. That was the ground.

But, Mr. President, whether it was on one ground or another, these corporations, with the amount of legal talent they are enabled to employ and invoke, will be able in almost every instance to avoid these statutes, and I solemnly assert here that in my judgment the only real remedy is to be found in taking away the protection and origin of these trusts, which is in the high tariff taxes which stand like a wall and enable these trusts to exist.

The Senator from Ohio has spoken of these trusts. Now, Mr. President, I happen to have here a list of them, and these are only a few. The first is the steel-rail trust, buttressed by a tariff tax of $17 per ton.

Mr. GEORGE. What per cent. is that?

Mr. VEST. I do not recollect the per cent. We discussed it in the last Congress. Seventeen dollars is the taxation per ton; steel rails are protected that much. As my friend from Iowa very well knows, I tried to reduce it, and he resisted the attempt.

Mr. ALLISON. I beg to put an interrogatory to the Senator, if he will allow me, right there upon the question of steel rails.

Mr. VEST. I do not want an argument upon every one of these items.

Mr. ALLISON. I will not say a word by way of argument.

Mr. VEST. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator if it is not true that at this moment the price of steel rails in England is practically the same as it is in the United States, or within a dollar or two? If that be so, how is it that the $17 duty upon steel rails at this moment is injuring the great body of the rail purchasers in this country?

Mr. VEST. Why, Mr. President, if we were told anything in the discussion in which my friend and myself participated rather largely in the last Congress—and I know it was urged by the Senator from New York [Mr. HISSOCK] now in my sight—it was that whenever you reduce the price in any one country you reduce it all over the world, and necessarily in every other country. We know very well that competition always reduces prices. It is no argument to say that steel rails are as cheap, even if it were true, in England to-day as they are in the United States; that will not do. I say if you let these two manufacturing interests compete together and create competition, you then secure lower prices to the consumer. That is the law of trade and that is the law of manufactures the world over.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask the Senator a question, if he will allow me.

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. Is not the Senator from Missouri aware that there is a steel trust in Great Britain that includes every steel establishment in Great Britain except one, and includes the German and Belgian establishments also?

Mr. VEST. I know that statement was made, but I never took the trouble to investigate it. Now, I make this statement to supplement it, and it is as absolutely true as that I am standing in this Senate Chamber. I know that there are trusts in Great Britain, and I have no doubt there will be trusts in any country under the present conditions of manufactures and of commerce; but here is the difference between trusts in Great Britain and the United States:

When you make a trust or attempt to make a trust in Great Britain, you must corner the products of all the world and you must have enough capital to do this, because you compete with every part of the civilized globe and you have no tariff to protect you and prevent competition, and therefore the capital necessary to effect the purposes of the combine must be at hand; but when you come to the United States the combine is helped by the tariff because the tariff tax shuts out the foreign producer and foreign importer, and limits necessarily the amount of capital necessary to achieve the purpose.

Mr. FRYE. If that is true, will the Senator from Missouri please account for the fact that 25,000 tons of steel rails manufactured in the United States were last week sold in Mexico, where all the nations of the earth have free competition one with the other?

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I am obliged to my friend from Maine. That shows the blessings and the equities of the high protective tariff! These very people making steel rails in the United States, who must be protected in order to live by a subsidy of $17 per ton, are able to go into Mexico and in a free-trade market to undersell the English, the Belgians, or anybody else!

Mr. FRYE. But the Senator does not reply to the question which I asked him.

Mr. VEST. I was attempting to do so.

Mr. FRYE. The Senator was asserting that a protective tariff prevented competition and created the trusts. I say there is no protective tariff which prevents competition in Mexico, because there is the same tariff against the products of England as against the products of the United States, and yet the United States sells 25,000 tons of steel rails to Mexico.

Mr. VEST. As a matter of course, Mr. Disston, of Philadelphia, who is protected on his saws, it was testified before the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, can sell his saws in England and undersell the English manufacturers, and yet Mr. Disston gets his protection in the United States. How will the Senator answer my proposition when he says that we sell 25,000 tons of steel rails in Mexico?

I have a letter in my possession from a gentleman who lives at Piedras Negras on the Rio Grande, which I believe is translated Black Rock, upon the Mexican side, and opposite to it is a small American village, and there are two stores belonging to the same party, one on American soil and one in Mexico, and in Mexico the same goods are sold one-third cheaper than in the United States, because on the Mexican side this man is bound to compete with the whole world, whilst on the American side he is protected by the tariff and competition does not exist.

Is it any argument to tell me that we sell our saws, our watches, our machinery, our cutlery, all over the world, and do it successfully? I say it is an argument against the high protective tariff because it shows that the subsidy we are paying inside of the United States to enrich these manufacturers is a sham and fraud. They do not need it.

That is what is the matter with the people of the West to-day; that is why the complaint is made of combines and trusts; that is why the farmers are combining or attempting to do so in order to protect themselves against the aggregation of capital, which by this legislation is enabled to compete outside of the United States successfully, and yet to shut out the competition after they reach our own shores. Let me give the facts:

THE TARIFFS AND THE TRUSTS.
[From Justice, Philadelphia.]

1. The Steel Rail Trust, buttressed by a tariff tax of $17 per ton.
2. The Nail Trust, by a tariff tax of $1.25 per 100 pounds.
3. The Iron Nut and Washer Trust, by a tax of $2 per 100 pounds.
4. The Barbed Fence-Wire Trust, by a tax of 63 cents per 100 pounds.
5. The Copper Trust, by a tax of $2.50 per 100 pounds.
6. The Lead Trust, by a tax of $1.50 per 100 pounds.
7. The Slate-Pencil Trust, by a tax of 30 per cent.

I should like to hear my friend from North Carolina [Mr. VANCE] on that.

8. The Nickel Trust, by a tax of $15 per one hundred pounds.
9. The Zinc Trust, by a tax of $2.50 per one hundred pounds.
10. The Sugar Trust, by a tax of $2 per one hundred pounds.
11. The Oilcloth Trust, by a tax of 40 per cent.
12. The Jute Bag Trust, by a tax of 40 per cent.
13. The Cordage Trust, by a tax of 30 per cent.
14. The Paper Envelope Trust, by a tax of 25 per cent.
15. The Gutta Percha Trust, by a tax of 35 per cent.
16. The Castor Oil Trust, by a tax of 80 cents per gallon.
17. The Linseed Oil Trust, by a tax of 25 cents per gallon.
18. The Cottonseed Oil Trust, by a tax of 25 cents per gallon.
19. The Borax Trust, by a tax of $5 per one hundred pounds.
20. The Ultramarine Trust, by a tax of $5 per one hundred pounds.

And so on, and they are adding to them day by day. Now, Mr. President, the favorite argument of our friends who sustain the high protective tariff is that high duties lower the cost of products to the consumer by reason of the competition between the manufacturers inside of the United States. If that be so, why are these trusts created? They are created because when foreign competition has been shut out and competition becomes acute and severe between American manufacturers they come together and create these combines at the expense of the consumer in order to enhance their own profits. If the high protective tariff were removed the foreign competition would furnish, if not an absolute, certainly a most beneficial remedy to remove this evil.

We have been told in some directions that the trusts and combines have nothing to do with the tariff. Mr. President, that reminds me of a very suspicious old gentleman who when the Siamese twins were in this country thought he would invest twenty-five cents in looking at this great natural curiosity. He paid the tax, went into the exhibition room, and there found two grown young men posing before the audience in the most approved style. He was very suspicious and he examined them critically, and finally examined the ligament that bound them together in that world-renowned connection which scientists, even, were not able to explain, and he found in this ligament the pulsation which indicated animal life to the fullest extent. He stepped back, still suspicious, and said to them, "Now, boys, tell me the truth; are you brothers?" [Laughter.] So with the connection between the trusts and the tariff.

Mr. DAWES. Would it interfere with the Senator if I put a question?

Mr. VEST. Oh, no.

Mr. DAWES. I appreciate the difficulties of this subject as well as the Senator does. I understand him to say that the remedy, the method of putting down the trusts in this country is to open these trusts to the competition of the foreign trusts. Now, the query I want to put to him is this: What is to hinder taking one more into a trust and taking the foreign trust into the American trust or the American trust into the foreign trust and then having it beyond all control?

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I am against all trusts, and the Senator—

Mr. DAWES. The Senator does not get my point. I asked him what remedy he would get by erecting free trade so as to cause active competition between the two trusts. Would there not be just the same motive and just the same opportunity and just the same facility to put these two trusts together when they were competing as there would be to have two competing with each other here at home?

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, any sort of assumption could be made as to what parties would come in as competitors from a foreign country. With that I have nothing to do so far as the purposes of my arguments are concerned. I take it that in the natural course of trade the foreign importer would come in and compete with the American manufacturer. I know absolutely that the purpose of the friends of a high protective tariff is to shut out foreign competition. If I had any doubts about that, they were removed in the last Congress when my friend from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] and my friend from Rhode Island [Mr. AL-

RICH] and my friend from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] applied in every case as to every item in the tariff bill that they reported, not the test whether protection was needed for the manufacturer in this country or for the consumer, but how much of the competing article was brought in during the last year.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. Did we not in that bill provide for a reduction of 50 per cent. upon the sugar duty as against 18 per cent. in the House bill, cutting down the profits of the refiners of sugars one-sixth of a cent as compared with the House bill in addition?

Mr. VEST. Oh, yes; they did all that. I understand there was a reduction upon sugar. I do not propose to go into the sugar question just at this time, but in my judgment that reduction was in the interest of the refiner. The raw sugar was permitted to come in, which is their raw material.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator that if he will take half an hour to examine the details of that bill he will see that the reduction made by the Senate bill was not only not in the interest of the refiners, but was against their interest as compared with the bill that came to us from the House of Representatives, and against their protest.

Mr. VEST. We discussed all that, and so far from taking a half hour I took something like two months on that bill and examined every provision in it and every item in it, and without wanting to go into that argument and thrash over old straw I say now that the Senator and his colleagues took pains to increase the duties on all the necessities of life that were imported in competition with American manufactures.

Mr. DAWES. To wit, duties on what?

Mr. VEST. On hardware, on woolen goods, on a dozen other articles that are absolutely necessities of life, and refused to take them off lumber and salt and other things that enter into the daily consumption of the American people. That is the fact, and the Senators know it.

As a matter of course they reduced the duties upon coarse cotton cloths, because they are made in the South, but they took care to put the duties up on fine cotton cloths, that are made in New England; and now the Senator from Iowa says they reduced the duties on sugar. That was because sugar was raised in Louisiana. It was for a climatic reason, and that only. If the sugar had been raised in the North, all of them, I think, would have "taken sugar in theirs," and if the Senate wanted to reduce the duties upon necessities why was it not done? It was not done because the Republican party could not afford to do it and did not do it.

Sir, I have spoken longer than I intended. I hope that some member of the majority, because it will be useless for me to do so, will move to refer this question to the Judiciary Committee. The amendment of the Senator from Texas is now pending before a subcommittee of that committee, together with other proposed legislation on this subject, which has been introduced into the Senate. This is a subject so elaborate, so important, so overwhelming, that it should be approached with the greatest caution and treated with the greatest care.

I sympathize with the objects of the Senator from Ohio. I am willing to vote for any bill which I think as a law will stand judicial criticism and construction, but in my judgment to pass a law which the Supreme Court would declare to be unconstitutional is simply to invite additional disaster.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, I sympathize with a great deal that has been said by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and agree to all that he has said against trusts and combinations, and I am willing to join hands with him in every effort that promises success to defeat them. I do not, however, sympathize with the expression which has been made here that a public legislator can not afford to resist efforts in the direction of unwise, illegal, and unconstitutional legislation because his action may be misconstrued. One is always safe in predicating his action upon the intelligence of the people, and they will understand that the bill or the amendment to the bill now offered by the Senator from Ohio is absolutely ineffectual to remedy the evils which he has so elaborately and ably commented upon.

In reference to interstate and foreign commerce, I understand that he states the proposition to be that the initial point with us in respect of foreign and interstate commerce is when the merchandise is launched on its way to its destination, or at least is in the hands or possession of the common carrier who transports it there. There is no doubt that is the law of the land. Bearing that in mind, let us briefly take this amendment and see precisely what it means and what it proposes. What merchandise it covers and what transactions it declares void. It provides—that all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign States, or citizens or corporations thereof, made with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in the importation—

It prohibits a contract and arrangement preceding the very act which gives Congress jurisdiction over it—importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States,

The provision on the face of it applies to contracts which are made before importation has commenced, before the article is within the purview of the Constitution, and they are declared to be void. It is in the purchase of the goods, Mr. President, within the language of the provision, that the combination may not be made to prevent importation into this country, and "with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition," is the preceding language. Goods may be purchased and diverted from the United States, and that may be the object of the combination, to send them elsewhere, divert them from coming here and flooding our markets, and the amendment proposed takes jurisdiction of that.

I hope that the Senator from Ohio will point out the clause of the Constitution that gives us the power and the right to take jurisdiction of goods which may never be imported here; never come within the jurisdiction of the Federal Constitution or of the laws which have been passed under it. But an article reaches here, and, as has been well said, it has passed beyond the hands of the importer.

It is then subject to State law, State taxation; and yet this amendment follows it, and under this provision if it becomes a law penalties are imposed. At both ends it legislates with reference to commerce before the merchandise has been dispatched on its way to this country, and after it has reached here and after it has been taken out of the volume of commerce. Let us take the next clause of this amendment:

Or with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in articles of growth, production, or manufacture of any other State or Territory of the United States, with similar articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of any other State or Territory, or in the transportation or sale of like articles, the production of any State or Territory of the United States into or within any other State or Territory of the United States.

That clause provides that if the trust may prevent competition of property which is grown in one State or Territory and merchandise which is manufactured in one State or Territory with that produced in another, then it is illegal and void; it need not be transported. I call the Senator's attention to the effect. There may never have been an intention of transporting it into another State, and yet the provision of this section of the bill applies to it.

It takes control of the manufacturing, of the mining, and of the agricultural industries of the whole country wherever there may be competition as between the people of one State and the people of another. The language is explicit. As I remarked, the article may never have been produced for the purpose of transportation or delivery from one State into another, still this amendment reaches out and takes jurisdiction of it.

The damages which may have resulted from the trust may have been incurred by the individual before it has entered upon transit from one State to another, and yet, under the provisions of this bill a plaintiff can recover. What follows?

And all arrangements, trusts, or combinations between such citizens or corporations, made with a view or which tend to advance the cost to the consumer of any such articles, are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful, and void.

There is no limitation upon the language. It does not pretend to regulate interstate commerce. Let us go back again to the first lines of the bill, "made with a view or which tend" to do this; and these arrangements are void, under the provisions of the bill, as against public policy. It takes the control of every manufacturing industry; it takes the control of every mine; it takes the control of all the merchants, because, as I have said, it does not limit its operations and effects to goods in interstate commerce.

And the circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section, and to issue all remedial process, orders, or writs proper and necessary to enforce its provisions. And the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

Inquisitorial power is given to the officers of the General Government to reach into the management of every industry in the United States, and I repeat it does not depend upon the fact that the merchandise is to be involved in interstate commerce. Not at all. If by its production a certain effect may be had, if it may compete in any way, the penalties follow. Now, with the interchange of commodities we have in this country, it is fair to say that wheat raised in Dakota competes with wheat raised in New York if not a bushel of that wheat is transported to the State of New York. Competition is now in the markets of the world, and it is not confined to States or the markets of States between themselves.

If this bill shall be carried into effect I shall expect the Senator from Ohio to present here next year an amendment to it that manufacturers are to be licensed and their business carried on under the restrictions of that license and under the inquisitorial power of the Attorney-General, the district attorneys, or some other officials.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that I have commented enough on the enormities, the far-reaching effect of this bill if it shall become a law and be declared by the courts to be constitutional. The logic of the decision will be for Congress to take control of every producing interest in the respective States of the Union.

The Senator from Ohio has read several decisions here upon the subject of the power of the courts over this question and the illegality of these trusts. In each case that he cited the court established its jurisdiction and its power to afford a remedy, and the Senate would have been under great obligation to the Senator from Ohio if he had pointed to a single case as to which there is not a complete remedy or may not be a complete remedy under State laws. I should be obliged to him if, in the progress of this discussion, before its close, he would point out and describe the cases in which there is not ample jurisdiction in the Legislatures and courts of the States, respectively, in respect to all these trusts and combines.

As I have already said, interstate commerce commences when the goods are entered for transportation from one State to another. Up to that point of time every contract made in reference to them, the control of the goods themselves, is within the jurisdiction of the State courts and of the Legislatures of the States, respectively.

I think something has been said here that the framers of the Constitution neglected to put something in the Constitution that might properly have been placed there giving Congress the proper authority in respect to this subject.

Why did they need to put it there? I ask, Mr. President, bearing in mind what I have stated, that up to the point when an article of production is delivered to the common carrier every contract in reference to it and the custody of the goods is within the jurisdiction of the Legislature of the State in which it starts, and when it reaches another State it is subject to the jurisdiction of the courts and of the laws of that State.

It is with reference to interstate commerce that Congress has the right to take jurisdiction; that is the act of exchange from one State to another; and we all know why that provision was placed in the Constitution. One of the chief reasons was that the General Government might prevent States from practically prohibiting commerce between each other, for the purpose of regulating taxation upon property which was to go from one State to another. The purpose was obvious; but it was not the intention of the framers of the Constitution to take the jurisdiction of the property until it had passed beyond the point when it was subject to State taxation and State control.

The Senator from Ohio has seemed to think, and has argued here, that we might take control of this subject on account of that provision of the Constitution which gives jurisdiction to the courts of persons, forms of action, and all that. I hope in the progress of this discussion the Senator will tell us if he believes that our courts can create a cause of action. That is the question involved here as he presents it. They may have jurisdiction of the litigants and of the cause of action in actions of law and in equity, but it should be borne in mind they have no power to create a cause of action. They have ample and full jurisdiction over the remedies, but the creation of the cause of action rests with the law-making power, and not with the court, and Congress, the law-making power, looks to the Constitution for its authority to create a cause of action, and nowhere else.

Mr. President, criticisms have been made upon this bill that in my judgment may be obviated by amendments to it. I have devoted no time to defects of that kind. The objections that I make to the bill are fundamental; they can not be obviated by any amendments that possibly can be proposed.

What I maintain is that whenever property, either in process of manufacture or completely manufactured, has not already been put on its course of transit either into this country or from one State to another, whatever the intention may have been in its production, up to the point of time when it is started to its destination, absolute and complete control of that property is within the legislative power, the law-making power, and the jurisdiction of the courts, of the States and countries respectively in which it is situated.

If the Senator from Ohio will point to a single case in which the Legislature and the courts have not the one the power to give the other jurisdiction, and the latter to administer it, I will join hands with him in an effort to perfect a bill by Congress that shall give to the Federal courts jurisdiction with reference to that subject. But it must be borne in mind that this is not a jurisdiction that can be abdicated by the States. It is not a jurisdiction that can be possessed by a State and the General Government at the same time. There is no partnership in respect to it, and there can be none. If the States have jurisdiction the National Government can not have it, and if the National Government has jurisdiction, or can take it, it can not be possessed by the States.

As I said some time since, my objections to the bill are fundamental; they can not be reached by Congressional legislation. According to the cases that have been read here, there is full and ample power on the part of each State Legislature in respect to this very subject. Why not then leave it there as a matter of right and wrong between the States? Local and State sentiment will take care of these questions. It does not depend upon one State alone. The State from which the goods are started has jurisdiction and the States to which they are consigned has it also.

Mr. President, I have not gone through with this bill to elaborate the different subjects, all the matters of which it proposes to take jurisdiction. The language is remarkable in it:

Made with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition.

I can summon here to answer those who would be injured by the bill whose voice would be as potential to put up or down the supporter of it as all those who can be invoked by popular clamor against trusts; and I hope we shall be told in the progress of this discussion if there is a labor organization in the United States that is not affected by it. Every organization which attempts to take the control of the labor that it puts into the market to advance its price is interdicted by this bill.

Sir, I am one of those who believe in labor organizations. I believe the only safety to labor rests in the power to combine as against capital and assert its rights and defend itself.

The criminal section of this proposed law has been eliminated from it. Perhaps it was wise to do that, because under that section these organizations and their promoters might have been reached. Possibly under the damage provisions in the bill they never would be pursued; but it strikes at them as viciously as it is possible to conceive of. Will it be said that their combinations are not made with a view of advancing costs and regulating the sale of property? Will it be argued that they do not directly do it? If we have entered upon a race to outstrip each other in the denunciation of capital, the manufacturing industries, the combinations of capital, and it is to be on the line of the support of this bill, I announce that there are two sides to it. If Senators are to be deterred from their opposition to it by this clamor, I call their attention to the fact that the bill takes within its embrace those affected by its provisions and injured by its provisions who are very potential in asserting their rights and respect for their wishes.

In my judgment, Mr. President, neither this bill nor any like it should be enacted into law unless it is within the warrant of our charter, unless we are satisfied that it is legal and constitutional. No attempt should be made to reach into the States and take from the jurisdiction of the State Legislatures the subjects of which they have full and ample control.

AID TO COMMON SCHOOLS.

During the remarks of Mr. HISCOCK,

Mr. BLAIR. By the courtesy of the Senator from New York I ask the floor to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate refused to order to a third reading Senate bill No. 185, the educational bill.

Mr. INGALLS. What is the motion, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. A motion to reconsider the vote upon the educational bill.

Mr. INGALLS. Will the Senator from New York yield to me a moment?

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President—

Mr. INGALLS. I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. BLAIR. I have the floor. My motion is pending.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Chair understand that the Senator from Kansas wishes present consideration of the motion which he has just made? [A pause.] The Senator from New York will proceed.

PROPOSED ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

After the remarks of Mr. HISCOCK—

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope not. I hope the Senate will meet to-morrow.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I did not suppose there would be any objection to the motion.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the Senate will meet to-morrow for the purpose of disposing of business on the Calendar.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. As far as I am concerned, I have no desire to interfere with the wish of the Senate. I find that I can dispose of a good deal more work by having one day in the week that I can devote to work outside of the Senate Chamber, and I was in hopes that the Senate would adjourn over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arkansas withdraw his motion?

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the Senator will withdraw the motion.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I am willing to let the Senate determine the question. I prefer to have a vote upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas, that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The question being put, a division was called for, and the yeas were 16—

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will withdraw his motion.

Mr. SHERMAN. To save time I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BATE (when Mr. FAULKNER's name was called). The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] requested me to state that he is paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. The Senator from West Virginia is necessarily absent.

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], but I take the liberty to transfer my pair to my colleague

[Mr. FARWELL], so that both the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO], with whom my colleague is paired, and myself can vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. PASCO. I vote "yea."

Mr. WASHBURN (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. EUSTIS] and I withdraw my vote.

Mr. HIGGINS (after having voted in the negative). I am paired generally with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON]. I did not observe that he was out of the Chamber when I voted, and I therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. GEORGE (after having voted in the affirmative). Has the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR] voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not.

Mr. GEORGE. I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MORGAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. EVARTS]. I thought he was in the Chamber when I voted. I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 25; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Barbour,	Gorman,	Pasco,	Walthall,
Bate,	Hampton,	Pugh,	Wilson of Md.
Berry,	Harris,	Reagan,
Coke,	Hearst,	Turpie,
Colquitt,	Jones of Arkansas,	Vest,

NAYS—25.

Aldrich,	Edmunds,	Pierce,	Stewart,
Allison,	Frye,	Platt,	Teller,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Plumb,	Wilson of Iowa,
Davis,	Hiscock,	Sawyer,	Wolcott.
Dawes,	Hoar,	Sherman,
Dixon,	Morrill,	Spooner,
Dolph,	Paddock,	Stanford,

ABSENT—40.

Allen,	Chandler,	Hale,	Morgan,
Beck,	Cockrell,	Higgins,	Payne,
Blackburn,	Daniel,	Ingalls,	Pettigrew,
Blair,	Eustis,	Jones of Nevada,	Quay,
Blodgett,	Everts,	Kenna,	Ransom,
Brown,	Farwell,	McMillan,	Squire,
Butler,	Faulkner,	MCPHERSON,	Stockbridge,
Call,	George,	Manderson,	Vance,
Cameron,	Gibson,	Michell,	Voorehes,
Casey,	Gray,	Moody,	Washburn.

So the motion was not agreed to.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 28, 1890, a statement in regard to expenses of a three-years' cruise around the world of one line-of-battle ship of 10,000 tons displacement, etc.

The Secretary proceeded to read the communication.

Mr. FRYE. Why should not that be printed and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs without being read?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the communication will be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and printed.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production, the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. INGALLS to the amendment of Mr. REAGAN.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, with some of the criticisms made upon the bill reported by the Senator from Ohio I agree. I think the country is debtor to that distinguished Senator for his efforts to furnish a remedy for a great and dangerous evil. I know the difficulty of preparing a bill to be enacted by Congress to meet this evil. I have presented an amendment by way of substitute for the bill reported by the Senator from Ohio. I do not know but that when it becomes subject to criticism it may fare as badly as his bill has done, and yet I have tried to formulate a measure which would obviate the objections that have been urged to his. Whatever authority we have here over this subject is derived from the provision in the Constitution which confers upon Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and between the States. Keeping that in view, I will read the first section of the amendment which I have offered:

That all persons engaged in the creation of any trust, or as owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any trust, employed in any business carried on with any foreign country, or between the States, or between any State and the District of Columbia, or between any State and any Territory of the United States, or any owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any corporation using its powers for either of the purposes specified in the second section of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by both of said penalties, in the discretion of the court trying the same.

I concede that the penalty provided here is a very strong one, but it is designed to meet a very great evil perpetrated by powerful and wealthy parties. It is designed to arrest and prevent an evil which can only be met, in my judgment, by strong, coercive measures. Now, I desire to call attention to the second section of my amendment, which is simply intended as a definition of the things prohibited in the first section. The second section is:

That a trust is a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons, firms, corporations, or associations of persons, or of any two or more of them for either, any, or all of the following purposes:

It will be understood that it is for these purposes when performed under the influence of the first section of this proposed act, that is, by persons engaged in commerce with foreign countries or between the States:

First. To create or carry out any restrictions in trade.

Second. To limit or reduce the production or to increase or reduce the price of merchandise or commodities.

Third. To prevent competition in the manufacture, making, purchase, sale, or transportation of merchandise, produce, or commodities.

Fourth. To fix a standard or figure whereby the price to the public shall be in any manner controlled or established of any article, commodity, merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, use, or consumption.

Fifth. To create a monopoly in the making, manufacture, purchase, sale, or transportation of any merchandise, article, produce, or commodity.

Sixth. To make, or enter into, or execute, or carry out any contract, obligation, or agreement of any kind or description by which they shall bind or shall have bound themselves not to manufacture sell, dispose of, or transport any article or commodity, or article of trade, use, merchandise, or consumption below a common standard figure, or by which they shall agree, in any manner, to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure or by which they shall, in any manner, establish or settle the price of any article, commodity, or transportation between themselves, or between themselves and others, so as to preclude free and unrestricted competition among themselves and others in the sale and transportation of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine, or unite in any interest they may have in connection with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity that its price may, in any manner, be so affected.

SEC. 3. That each day any of the persons, associations, or corporations aforesaid shall be engaged in violating the provisions of this act shall be held to be a separate offense.

I am advised that some criticisms have been made upon the second section; that it relates to things which it is said Congress has no jurisdiction of. I apprehend that those who make that criticism read the second section of the bill without considering that everything in the second section is controlled by the provision of the first section, which makes the things referred to in the second section those which are involved in commerce with foreign nations or among the several States.

As to the authority of Congress to act upon the subject, that is all I now care to say upon that point. I deem it proper to say that, though I was present when the Senator from Ohio gave notice yesterday evening that he would call the subject up to-day, other duties prevented any consideration of it which might prepare me to discuss it now as its importance and merits deserve.

It will be seen that, as between the bill reported by the Senator from Ohio and my amendment, his provides for civil suits only for damages by persons who conceive themselves to be injured, damaged by these unlawful combinations, while the amendment which I have presented does not make provision for civil suits, but provides for a criminal prosecution and severe penalties against those who may be engaged in these unlawful occupations. After what has been said by other Senators this morning on the subject, if we were better prepared to discuss these points it is not necessary that I should go over the evils which it is intended to prevent by this character of legislation. I am inclined, however, to think that if the amendment which I present should be adopted as a substitute for the bill of the Senator from Ohio, it would be well to incorporate in it after its adoption, or at some time, a provision of that measure authorizing civil suits. I am inclined to think that it would be well that whatever law should be adopted on this subject should embrace both jurisdiction of civil and criminal proceedings to prevent and punish these evils.

In speaking of this subject and in looking at its difficulties, I feel sure, notwithstanding the great demand for action by Congress, that the people interested, the people oppressed and distressed by operation of these trusts, look too much to the Congress of the United States for the desired relief. Congress can go no further, as I understand its authority under the Constitution, than to provide a remedy with reference to those things which come into the category of commerce with foreign nations and commerce between the States. That is as far as it may rightfully go; and it seems to me that it is one of the highest and most important duties under the circumstances that it should go that far. But if the people of this country expect salutary relief on this subject they must look to their State governments, for they have jurisdiction over the great mass of transactions out of which these troubles grow. If the Federal Government will act upon those things which relate to international and interstate commerce, and the States, responding to the necessity of the country and the complaints of the people, will act upon the branch of subjects of which the States have jurisdiction, we may, it seems to me, arrest the evil of trusts and combinations to augment prices or to depress prices in the interest of monopoly and for the oppression and wrong of the people.

I am inclined to say right here, Mr. President, that it seems to me unfortunate that of late years the people of this country, whenever a grievance arises, feel that they must appeal to Congress for the redress of that grievance without considering whether it is one that Congress can redress or not. The idea seems to have become prevalent all over the country that anything which is wrong, anything which oppresses or depresses the people, must be remedied by Congress. I think it most unfortunate that the people forget that their own local governments at home, controlled by their immediate representatives, are able to furnish the remedies for most of the grievances of which they complain, and for many of which they complain over which Congress has no power whatever. On this subject, however, Congress does have a limited power; but the exercise of its power under the Constitution and the doing of what it may do rightfully under the Constitution will not give relief to the people of the country unless the Legislatures of the several States take hold of the subject and make provisions there which will cover the larger number and the greater amount of the wrongs complained of by the people.

I had intended to make a criticism upon the bill of the Senator from Ohio which has in part been made by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] and in part by the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK]; and inasmuch as those criticisms have been made I do not feel disposed to occupy the attention of the Senate by going over them again. I simply say in conclusion that I think the bill presented by the committee is objectionable on account of its not being within the provisions of the Constitution for the most part of it. The first clause of the first section is within the provisions of the Constitution, that which relates to commerce with foreign nations. A good deal of it, I think, is not within the provisions of the Constitution; and if the Senate should agree with me upon that point and should then agree with me that the provisions of the amendment which I have presented are within the purview of the Constitution, I shall hope they will adopt the amendment which I have presented.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I do not desire at this hour of the day, or at any time indeed, to discuss the merits of the bill presented by the Committee on Finance. I only rise now to occupy a few moments somewhat in response to the suggestions made by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], who has discussed the question so fully.

I must say that his argument as a lawyer discourages me somewhat as respects a remedy for these so-called trusts or combinations. If I understood the Senator correctly, he says that without an amendment of the Constitution the only practical remedy there is at this time is either an abolition or a great reduction of tariff duties or concurrent legislation of the States and of the United States, I suppose as respects interstate commerce; that beyond this narrow limit we have no power here to legislate upon this subject.

To fortify his argument as respects the tariff, he stated, as I understood him, that the tariff is the fruitful source of these combinations. If that be true, it is a curious thing to me that all these great combinations in our country are practically outside of and independent of the tariff.

The Senator read a number of trusts from a statement which he held in his hand, showing that the articles in the combinations alluded to by him were also articles that were included in the tariff schedules. But the complaint of the people, as I understand it, is not in respect mainly to the articles embraced within the tariff. I know it is true as respects the great article of sugar. Those whom I represent upon this floor in part, living in the State of Iowa, and those represented I have no doubt in part by the Senator from Missouri, are in favor practically of no tariff duty upon sugar. They believe that sugar is a necessary of life, and they believe that because of the fact that our entire production of sugar in this country amounts to but one-tenth of the consumption, the duty upon sugar is a tax upon that consumption, and therefore they are for its abolition or practical abolition if we can spare the revenue from that source.

With the exception of sugar and with the exception perhaps of steel rails, I know of no product in this country to-day (and in this I shall be glad to be corrected if I am mistaken) of any great magnitude that is affected by the tariff.

Nor will I admit that the tariff duty in and of itself produces even the sugar trust. I am not sure but that if sugar was to-day free, as it is in Great Britain, there would still be a combination among the sugar-refiners of our country to hold the market of our country. Whilst I have no doubt the present high rate of duty upon sugar has to some extent the effect to enable refiners and others more thoroughly to complete this combination, as fewer men can engage in sugar refining because of the high duty, yet I believe that if there was no duty upon sugar it would still be possible for a combination to exist here as respects the refining of sugar.

So it is practically with steel rails. The price of steel rails in England is substantially the price of steel rails in the United States to-day. Therefore the combination, if there be a combination, has not at this time any effect upon the price of steel rails in the United States. I will join the Senator from Missouri in making a proper and fair reduction of the duty on steel rails when we reach the question of the tariff, but the tariff on steel rails to-day has practically no effect upon the price, because, as I have stated, the price abroad is nearly equal to the price at home.

The Senator from Missouri illustrated his argument by reference to the copper trust. It is well known to every man who has studied the copper question that we can put copper upon the free-list any moment we choose to do so. We reduced the duty one-half upon copper in the proposed act of 1888, and it might just as well have been put upon the free-list. There has been a trust in copper. I do not know whether it exists now, but I presume it does. But that trust has not even an existence in the United States. It is a combination in a foreign jurisdiction which comes here and buys all the copper we produce and all the copper produced in the world. We are the largest producers of copper in the world. We are large exporters of copper to foreign countries. Therefore the duty upon copper has no more effect as respects trusts than if copper was upon the free-list.

The Senator from Missouri read one or two little instances or illustrations of trusts as respects our tariff, but I waited for him to show illustrations from the great tariff schedules as respects trusts and combinations resulting from the tariff. What are the great schedules that we deem important to protect American manufactures against similar manufactures and products of foreign countries? They are the great staples of woolen and cotton and leather and iron and steel.

The Senator from Missouri, with a production of steel of perhaps one thousand five hundred million dollars per annum, only illustrated by his statement as respects steel rails and nails. Those two items as compared with the great production of steel and iron in our country are infinitesimal and mere "leather and prunella." The manufactures of iron extend throughout the length and breadth of our country. Although there may be a few instances where iron production or steel production is under these trust combinations, I maintain that they are not there, because there is a tariff duty upon the articles.

Who has ever heard of a trust in woolen goods and woolen manufactures? The Senator from Missouri said the Committee on Finance of last year failed to reduce the duties upon woolen goods, and upon wool, and thereby oppressed the consumers of the country. Those consumers, whatever may be their conditions and relations to the tariff duties, which I will not discuss now, are not oppressed by reason of trust combinations. I state without fear of successful contradiction that in the two or three hundred millions of woolen goods manufactured in the United States there is no trust combination as respects those manufactures, and if I am mistaken in this I should be glad to be corrected now by any Senator.

Take the great manufacture of cotton, which the Senator from Missouri says in our tariff bill last year we reduced as respects the lower grades of cotton, and not upon the higher, and he undertook to criticize the committee by saying that that was done because the coarser cottons were manufactured in the Southern States and the finer products in the North. Mr. President, for myself, and for myself alone, I want to say to the Senator from Missouri that in dealing with the tariff I know no section of the Union, whether it be North or South. The reason why the duties upon cotton fabrics of a coarser character were proposed to be reduced was because those who produced those fabrics said they could produce them in competition with the world upon the rate we fixed. Yet with all these millions of cotton manufactures in the United States there is not a trust in any one of them of which I have ever heard.

Take another great article which is protected by the tariff, the article of leather and its productions. Boots and shoes and all the products of leather are produced in the United States, and are produced relatively at as cheap a rate as they are produced abroad, notwithstanding our tariff duties. They amount to hundreds of millions of dollars per annum. There is not within the range of all the States of this Union a trust or combination in the manufacture of boots and shoes.

So we are developing in this country a great silk industry. I have not heard, I do not know, how many millions of production we have, certainly up to the fifties, being nearly one-half of the silk consumed in the United States, and protected by a heavy duty upon silk manufactures. If there is now or ever has been a trust or combination as respects the silk manufactures of the United States, I have not heard of it.

So, Mr. President, agreeing to what the Senator says as respects trusts and combinations, I differ with him absolutely in the statement that they originate wholly in our tariff legislation. If we shall put wool and woollens upon the free-list, if we shall put cotton and manufactures of cotton upon the free-list, if we shall put leather and all its products upon the free-list, there will be no more and no less combinations in this country. If we should put practically all the iron upon the free-list, it would not change the trust relations and combinations except as to a few articles which were named by the Senator from Missouri.

These combinations exist, I admit, under the tariff in some of its relations, but the mass of these great combinations exist outside of it and beyond it. The Senator from Missouri himself is chairman of an important committee looking into a very important industry in our Western States, as respects the slaughtering of beef. He has been engaged in taking testimony upon that question. It is the common and the current belief among the farmers of the State in which I reside and of all the West that there is a combination in the city of Chicago which not only keeps down the price of cattle upon the hoof, but also has such relations and situations as respects the internal commerce of this country that its members are enabled to make the consumers of beef pay a high price for that article. Does anybody for a moment say that this great combination, involving the price of cattle perhaps in all the Northwestern States and Territories, has in the slightest degree its origin in the tariff? Certainly not.

So I might illustrate by going into other great trusts in our country, like the whisky trust. Is that controlled in any way by the tariff? Yet it is perfectly well known that the production of distilled spirits is and has been under a close trust for a good many years.

Take the Standard Oil Trust, another great and ramifying corporation, not only in this country, but throughout the world. That combination, whatever it is, not only controls practically the price of the raw material in our country, but it controls the price of the refined oil throughout the civilized world. Year by year as we go on we not only produce more of this raw material in our own country, but we add year by year to the exports of refined oil in competition with the rest of the globe, and without any relation or without any respect whatever to the tariff.

Mr. President, there has been in our Western country for four years a combination as respects the production of oatmeal. Is that affected in any way by the tariff? Yet the producers of oatmeal have had a local combination whereby they have been enabled to keep up the price of oatmeal, not only to the cost of production, but to a point of reasonable profit, and sometimes beyond it, as I have heard.

So, when I heard the declamation of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES] the other day, and again repeated in substance by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] to-day, that our tariff system is the fruitful source of all our woes, I can not forbear for a single moment to show, not by going into debate, but by mere illustration, that although I agreed with those gentlemen who are in favor of remodeling and revising the tariff, if we are to correct the great evils which arise from combinations and trusts in this country, we shall fall far short of our duty and far short of accomplishing what we propose if we undertake to do it simply by a change and modification of tariff rates.

Therefore, Mr. President, I welcome this discussion as respects the measure of our duty here and as respects the means whereby we can accomplish the desired result. I undertake to say that it is our duty to the extent of our power, whatever that power may be, to put upon our statute-books such national legislation as we can put there inhibiting these combinations and trusts, and I merely call attention to the fact that that is our duty in connection with the fact, that we can not do it by merely modifying or changing existing tariff rates.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] has offered a very important amendment. I suppose this debate will not be closed to-day, and I do not propose now to discuss the bill before the Senate particularly, unless there is a disposition to vote upon it to-night. It will not be voted upon to-day, I understand.

I rose to call the attention of the Senate a little more in detail to a question I asked the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], who on several occasions I have heard express the opinion that these trusts, which have become very prevalent in this country, were the result of the tariff, and that, too, in the face of what the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] has so well just said, that the principal trusts in this country and against which there is the greatest complaint, and under which the people are suffering the most, have no relation whatever to the tariff. There is not a civilized country anywhere in the world now that is not more or less cursed with trusts. A trust may not be always an evil. A trust for certain purposes, which may mean simply a combination of capital, may be a valuable thing to the community and the country. There have been trusts in this country that have not been injurious. But the general complaint against trusts is that they prevent competition.

I have before me, and I propose to read, testimony taken in 1886 before the British Commission to inquire into the cause of the depression of trade. If I had known that this discussion was coming up to-day (and it is only by accident that I have this book with me) I could have read other testimony showing that there are other trusts besides the one I am going to mention.

Mr. I. T. Smith was called before the commission on the 17th day of December, 1885, and interrogated with reference to a trust that I suppose the Senator from Missouri must have heard about, whether he has ever read this report or not, because I think everybody who has studied the industrial question in this country has known that that trust existed—a trust composed, as will be seen by reading here, of all the steel manufacturers of Great Britain with one single exception, of all of the manufacturers of steel rails in Germany with the exception of two, and of all the Belgian manufacturers. I need not observe that it was composed of the great free-trade country, Great Britain, on the one hand; Germany, a protective country, on the other; and Belgium, the country of free trade par excellence, where they have free trade with all its beauties, including the yoking of women and dogs together to do the common work. This Mr. Smith said (I shall read the questions and the answers):

Can you give us any information with regard to the association which we understand has been formed for the purpose of distributing the orders received for the manufacture of rails?

I had something to do with the origin of that association, and the conduct of it since. It was formed two years ago—

That would be in 1883—at which time steel rails were being sold at less than 4l. per ton at the works, that price, I believe, being a loss to the parties selling them varying from 5s. to 10s. a ton. The quantity of rails that were required then had fallen off to only about one-third of what it had been in previous years; we were all of us working nothing like half time, and when orders came in it became a question, Is it better to take these orders at a known loss or let the works stand and have an indirect loss in that way? The competition became so keen that we got down to less than 4l. a ton at the works. After some time the makers in England, all except one firm, agreed to join the association, and it was decided to endeavor to associate the Belgians and Germans with us as being the only two countries that exported rails.

You will see later that when other countries attempted it they interfered with their exportations.

It ended, after taking the figures of three years of the exports from the three countries, that Great Britain kept 66 per cent. of the entire export trade—

Now, this is in the trust—

Belgium had 7 per cent., and Germany 27 per cent. We have since modified the division a very little, and given Germany 1 or 2 per cent. more and Belgium 1½ per cent.; but in effect this country has reserved two-thirds of the export trade. The next thing that we had to do, having agreed upon what proportion each country was to have of the orders of the world, was to agree amongst ourselves how we should divide those orders, and we thereupon assessed the capabilities of each work, each company representing a certain number of parts out of one hundred parts. The effect of this has been that we have gone on for two years dividing the orders in something like a proper proportion, and we have maintained a price of 4l. 13s. a ton at the works, it having been when we began 4l.

In this last distribution he is speaking of the distribution among the English manufacturers, and not the manufacturers of the world. He continues at some length, but as the hour is late I will not read it all. The chairman said:

Who regulates the prices, the council?

A. Yes; we have never altered the price, but once raised 2s. 6d. a ton four months after we commenced, and we have continued that since. Personally, I should prefer to reduce it again, but in an association of this kind you are obliged to deal very carefully with the opinions of those you are working with, and it is only recently that we have all come to the conclusion that to avoid the competition of firms outside the union we must reduce the price considerably.

Evidently they were making rails at a good round profit or they would not voluntarily reduce the price. Mr. Dale, one of the board, asks this question:

Mr. DALE. Your association is charging more than they really need to charge for profit?

A. We are not charging much profit.

Mr. DRUMMOND. What proportion of the firms in England are in the union?

A. All except one; in Germany all except two, and in Belgium all the firms are in the union.

The CHAIRMAN. What would be the position of a man opening a new firm?

A. The position of a man opening a new firm would be that if he would not join the union we should have to put our price to the point that would prevent other people coming into it. The point to which we regulate our price is to minimize competition as much as we can.

Mr. HOULDSWORTH. When you say all the firms you mean steel-making firms?

A. Yes; steel-rail makers.

Does the association extend to anything except rails?

A. No.

Mr. DALE. Does the firm that stood out at first come in?

A. No; they still stand out.

Have the prices since you established the association been such as were calculated to insure an inordinate profit or such as were calculated rather to insure against loss by undue competition?

A. The price was fixed at very much what we considered the cost price would be at the least favored works, and any amount of profit upon the prices we fixed is due to the better position and better plant of the various works.

There is no competition at all. They took the lowest as they always do in such cases, the price of the least favored works, and made that the standard price, which gave, of course, to the more favored works a great advantage.

And any amount of profit upon the prices we fixed is due to the better position and better plant of the various works.

Did your least favored works agree to that?

A. The least favored works are in a minority.

Mr. PALMER. Could you say how much you advanced the price under the arrangement?

A. I should say that we advanced the price certainly by from 12s. 6d. to 13s. a ton.

Upon what price?

A. Upon the price that was current when the association started; but it is not quite fair to consider it in that way, because it was impossible for the prices that existed when the association started to be maintained for any length of time; it was absolute ruin to almost everybody to go on.

The price would have been about 4l. then, according to the figure you have given?

A. Under the extreme competition that was going on just at the time we started it was about 4l., and we put the price up to 4l. 15s., but we have only realized about 4l. 13s., because there have been a good many cases in which we have had to compete with France, and one or two cases in which we have had to compete with Austria, and when any firm supplies rails under the standard price the price is made up out of the funds of the association.

I hope the Senator from Missouri understands that system of executing a trust. That simply means that when France undertook to export rails and Austria undertook to export rails, some member of the association put down the price of rails to such an extent that he lost by it, and the association made up the difference in order to ruin the export of France and Austria.

This contains very interesting reading, but I will not detain the Senate with the entire volume. After asking as to the amount of rails they had produced, the examination proceeded thus:

Then we may take it that the result of the combination has not assisted at all the quantity, although it has given the iron-masters a somewhat better price?

A. As far as we can make out the combination has not interfered with the volume of trade at all; we can not make out that we have lost a single order that would have been placed if the combination had not existed.

But then you still have the fact before you that you have willingly surrendered to Germany, during the period I have named, 246,000 tons?

A. We have willingly surrendered, that is true; but we should have had probably to surrender an equal quantity if we had gone on competing and to have surrendered it at a less price. The share of work given to the Germans and Belgians in the last two years is based upon giving them the share that they took in 1881, 1882, and 1883, in competition with us.

Mr. PALMER. May I ask why you gave 2 per cent. recently, more to Germany?

A. Because the Germans alleged that there had been an error in the figure upon which our calculation was made two years ago.

Then the witness went on to say that by the terms of this combination they were nearly ready to close, but they were considering the propriety of continuing this trust.

The Senator from Missouri has on several occasions complained of the tariff, especially with reference to steel rails, as I understood he did today, and as to steel generally, notwithstanding, as stated by the Senator from Iowa, practically steel rails and steel have been at the same price in Great Britain and in this country for a number of years. In December, 1885, steel rails were sold in Great Britain, according to the testimony to be found in this book, for more money than they were selling for in New York, and I want to call the attention of the Senator from Missouri and the Senate to a statement made here as to the manufacture of steel generally.

This is the testimony of Mr. Vickers, who is a steel manufacturer, and I want to say that the commission which took this testimony did not call before it Tom, Dick, and Harry, but it called men who stood at the front in the industrial enterprises in Great Britain. It took the masters of the question and brought them before it, and there never has been in the history of the world such a collection of important facts connected with the history of the industries of a country as was collected before that commission; and it is important both on account of the industry of the men who took it and on account of the great character and learning of the men who were in business who appeared before the commission. If this book could be put before the American people, if they could read the whole of it, the Senator from Missouri and those who think like him would have very little to say, I imagine, about the benefits of free trade to the industrial enterprises of any country.

Mr. VEST. I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado a question, which it seems to me concerns the people of this country a great deal more than the evidence taken before that commission. Does he not know that it is a fact that the steel-makers, including the steel-rail men, in this country entered into a trust a few years ago; that they made a trust here in the United States in order to put up the price and keep up the price of steel rails and other steel products?

Mr. TELLER. I understand they did, but they made it just exactly as it was made in Great Britain, and they will make it without any tariff; and if we had been exporters of rails, which we are now to some extent, but not largely, our American rail manufacturers would have entered into that trust with the British. I have no doubt about it at all. I am not saying that the men who manage these great industries will not get all they can out of the people. I am not defending trusts. I intend to vote for any measure that is constitutional and legal to break up these trusts, and I propose to say something about the bill which I do not care to say to-night, because I want to examine more carefully the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas. I wish, however, to read from this volume about the price of steel.

Mr. Vickers went on then to tell about a pool, which is another name for a trust, that existed among the manufacturers of other steel besides steel rails. Let me read the questions put to him and his answers:

Mr. AIRD. Upon that I would ask you whether you do not believe that these pools or arrangements amongst individuals or companies tend to discourage individual enterprise.

A. I do not think they do; if manufacturers combine together and agree to sell at the same price, of course their great aim is to try to manufacture as cheaply as possible, in order to try to get a larger profit than other manufacturers at equal prices.

But surely it has the effect of discouraging an individual who may be an energetic, business-like man in pushing his own individual works to the front.

A. A man can always retire from the pool if he wishes to do so.

But that retiring from the pool would be very likely to bring upon him—

A. The favor of the buyers.

And the opposition of the manufacturers?

A. The opposition of the manufacturers would do him no harm, but the favor of the buyer would do him a great deal of good.

That is proof positive, if he would have the favor of the buyer, that there is an opinion among the buyers in that country that these pools do put up unduly the price of the product.

You are aware that the manufacturers inside the ring contribute to assist each other to the prejudice of those outside the ring when orders are given under certain circumstances.

A. I am not aware of that.

Where the pool is used in that way, do you not think it is to the detriment of the trade?

A. I do not think that a pool is at all to the detriment of the trade in the country in which it exists, but it is a subject I have not thought much of.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you aware whether there are any similar pools in America?

A. I am not.

Mr. ECKOYD. In reference to an answer you gave to Professor Bonamy Price just now, do you know whether the price of steel in America is just so much higher than the price here as represents the duty?

A. The price of steel in America now is so low that we can hardly send steel at all to America. I have here some prices which were reported by our agents in April, 1885. American steel sold, in competition with our best cast steel, at 7½ cents a pound, without duty. This price would net us 15½ 17s. per ton in Sheffield. If the raw materials—that is to say, the iron—were given to us we could not manufacture it at the price.

That is a Sheffield iron manufacturer, and everything is free there. Then the examination proceeds:

That is not quite what I wanted to elicit. If the price of a certain quality of steel at Sheffield is 40s. a ton and if the price of the same manufacturer in America were 42s. a ton, you could not, of course, export?

A. It would be impossible to compete with them.

Because the duty would bring yours up to 53s. 16s. a ton, while theirs would be 42s.?

A. Yes.

That shows who pays the duty.

Therefore, it does not follow that the consumers pay the extra price represented by the duty?

A. Certainly not. They do not pay anything like the amount that is represented by the duty, because the works have been established and their proprietors must now manufacture at a low price in order to keep the works going; they do not manufacture at a large profit.

The effect of the American tariff is to keep your goods out without raising the price in America to the consumer to anything like the amount represented by the duty?

A. That is so now; it was not so in the past.

Professor BONAMY PRICE. But do you believe that the word "now" is to go on?

A. I believe the duty in the past has fostered the building of these works; these works are there and must be kept going.

At a profit?

A. At a profit or no profit, they must keep them going.

What I wanted to know was this: Whether, supposing the tariff not acting, the works are in the state that they would have been in if they had no duty as far as the steel goes?

A. I believe at the present time they are paying no more for their steel than they would be if they had no duty. When I say "at present" I should say three months ago. I believe prices have risen considerably in the last three months in America. I am informed that trade has very much improved there.

With that improved trade, is the price of steel increasing?

A. The price of steel is still too low to enable us to compete.

That was on the 21st of January, 1886. Now, Mr. President, at the risk of worrying the Senate I want to read one or two other things that I have got here, which I think may prove to be of interest. Several of these witnesses were asked the question directly who paid the duty, and so far as I have been able to find in this testimony—and I think I have read everything in it, and it is pretty voluminous—not a single witness ever suggested that we paid the duty, but they all declared that the duty came out of them, and witness after witness declared over and over again in every department of industry in Great Britain in this volume, and in the other to which I have referred, that it was the hostile legislation of France, of Germany, of the United States, and of Russia that was ruining the business of England so that the English could not compete, that manufactures were being built up in these countries to such an extent that they could manufacture as cheaply as the British manufacturers could, and that they had to pay the tariff duties and they could not do it.

Now, Mr. President, speaking of Germany, Mr. I. T. Smith said:

Then you do not look to the development of the steel and iron industry in England in supplying countries like Germany, America, France, and Belgium, who make so largely for themselves and who have hostile tariffs against us to-day?

A. To those three countries which you have named I do not anticipate that we shall send any material quality of iron or steel, but to other countries we shall, although there are hostile tariffs there also; but in Germany they are making their iron and steel nearly as cheap as we do, and we, having to pay import duty, are necessarily barred from that country.

That is Germany. He said they had been selling some rails to the United States which he thought they sold because theirs were superior; at all events, they had got a higher price than the ranging price in the United States.

Then it is owing to the inferiority of their rails and to your having a better article that the Americans will pay you 6 guineas a ton more for rails manufactured by you than for rails manufactured in their own country?

A. Two pounds ten shillings a ton.

And 3s. 16s. for duty?

A. No, we pay the extra price; they pay us 2s. 10s., and we pay the duty.

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator from Colorado permit me to ask a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. I understand that the Senator in what he is reading is dealing alone with the question of steel rails.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator is mistaken. I am reading now because I happen to have this volume here; but the Senator will find that same statement running through the testimony of all the men who testified before the commission, all the manufacturers of woolen goods, of Sheffield hardware, and of everything else.

Mr. GORMAN. Take the item of tin-plate, which is not manufactured in this country, on which the duty is three-fourths of a cent a pound. I ask the Senator whether it is not the fact that the consumer pays that entire amount, and if the duty were removed would not the consumer have tin-plate three-fourths of a cent a pound cheaper than he is compelled to pay for it to-day?

Mr. TELLER. No, Mr. President; tin-plate is a high manufacture of iron. That is all there is of it. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] says he would like to answer the question, and I yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. DAWES. When the Mills tariff bill was reported, which put tin-plate on the free-list, tin-plate went up in the British market just exactly the amount of the duty. If anybody indulges in the delusion that when the foreigner can secure the control of our market he will put down the price to accommodate us, it is not I.

Mr. VEST. I want to call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to another startling fact. We took the duty off quinine a few years ago and immediately quinine went up, but it did not stay up, for it is down now.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Missouri is not serious in saying or pretending that the fall in the price of quinine had anything to do with our taking the duty off that article. The Senator knows very well that quinine went up for a little while—

Mr. VEST. A little! It went up for a year, and it was pointed to by the protectionists of this country as a horrible example of the fact that taking off duty did not diminish the cost to the consumer.

Mr. TELLER. It would have staid up but for the fact that the production of quinine exceeded anything that had ever before been heard of. The British Government and other Governments had fostered and encouraged the raising of the shrub from which quinine comes, and just about that time they had arrived at the stage when they could begin to realize upon it, and quinine went down, the world over, in its raw state. That is why it went down, and our tariff had nothing to do with it. But I am not to be diverted on the quinine business just now. I am on the steel business.

I continue to read the questions put to Mr. Smith and his answers:

Would you explain a little further your statement to Mr. Pearce about you paying duties on steel rails which went to America?

A. When we deliver steel rails at New York we can not land those rails in New York without paying a duty of $17 a ton.

You do not mean to say that the exporters pay the duty?

A. We do.

You mean that the duty is paid, not by the importing people, but by the exporting people?

A. The price is fixed free to New York, and you can not put the rails into railway trucks for inland transport until the duty is paid.

Mr. JACKSON. That is one of the conditions of the bargain?

A. That is it.

EARL OF DUNRAVEN. Do you mean that you sell the article cheaper per ton to the American importer to the extent of the duty?

A. Yes.

There is not a Senator on the other side of the Chamber who has ever made a speech on free trade or the tariff who has not over and over again reiterated that we paid the duty, not only on steel rails, but on everything else.

Mr. VEST. I suggest to the Senator from Colorado that I wish the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] was in the Chamber, who stated in the last Congress that the tariff was put on in order to put up the price. That was said in debate.

Mr. TELLER. The tariff is put on to protect our people from just what these trusts did with reference to France and Austria, so that when we want to export or when we want to trade with our own people these trusts shall not come in and break down our enterprises. That is what he said.

Mr. VEST. No, sir.

Mr. TELLER. And it compels them to do just what he said it was for their interest to do, to sell at a loss rather than to shut up their establishments.

Now, let me read a little further what this witness said:

Then the exporter has to pay the duty?

A. Yes; if no duty had to be levied it would make a difference of $17 less per ton.

There was one other part I intended to read, but I do not remember the page it is on and I shall not stop to find it now.

Mr. President, I suggest that the Senators who are so certain that the tariff always raises the prices of all articles and that the consumer pays the tariff duty under all circumstances should get a copy of this work and give some attention to this testimony. We published the testimony taken by the Commission on the Precious Metals, and I think the Committee on Printing will do a great service to this country if they will cause this volume to be published for free distribution, because the cost of the total publication is, I think, about $15, or something in that neighborhood, and beyond the reach of the great mass of our people. There could be no public document sent out that would give the people so much information and instruction as can be obtained from these volumes. If it was the farmer complaining, he would find that the people of Great Britain have suffered immeasurably greater evils than the farmers of this country have suffered, and he would find a statement of affairs there that would be frightful. I shall take occasion before long, probably when some other question is pending, to present some of the testimony in this report in detail. I can say that the testimony before this commission shows that the income of the farmers of Great Britain for the year before the testimony was taken had been reduced by the depreciation of farm products in round numbers $42,000,000 in one single year; that the farmers, as a rule, had sunk from 40 to 60 per cent. of their capital, and that the landlords had lost from 30 to 40 per cent. of their rents.

Mr. President, I do not attribute this depreciation to free trade. The people of Great Britain attribute it to free trade largely, and the men who appeared before the commission testified that in their opinion very largely it was the effect of free trade, though some of them were so decidedly free trade in their proclivities and in their notions that they declared there was not any reason for it and there could not be any given, that nobody could tell. Some said it was occasioned by bad seasons, but they said with bad seasons or with good seasons the farmer was growing poorer and poorer and losing more every year and had been doing it for twelve straight years. I can demonstrate, and I intend to do so some day on this floor, that the trouble with Great Britain, as with us, is not because of the tariff duties, but it is owing to a lack of money, and that is what the whole world is suffering from to-day.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. COKE. I should like, before that motion is put, to submit an amendment, which I intend to propose as a substitute for the trust bill at the proper time. I ask that it be printed and lie on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will be ordered to be printed.

Mr. DAWES. I ask the Senator from Illinois to withhold his motion for a moment.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Massachusetts desires to say a word, and I will yield to him.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] made an inquiry in reference to tin-plate and I made such answer as I was able to make at the time from memory in reference to that. He wanted to know what would be the effect upon the price of tin-plate in this country if those who have now the monopoly of its production abroad should have permission to introduce it free of duty here, and I spoke from memory. I should like now to read from the Pall Mall Gazette of July 25, 1888, this extract:

A RISE IN THE PRICE OF TIN.

The passing by the United States House of Representatives of the Mills tariff bill, which places tin-plates on the free-list, has led to a sharp rise in the price of tin. Yesterday Straits touched 89. 7 1/2 cask and 89. 15 1/2, three months. This is an advance of from 14. to 15c on the figures quoted recently. If the Senate passes the bill in its present form tin will command higher prices than have ruled of late, and a great impetus will be given to an important branch of manufacture in this country.

The Ironmonger, a paper published about the same time, further speaks of this matter in a manner which will be highly instructive to those of our friends who are teaching those workmen employed on tin-plate that they are taxed because of an effort to furnish them with the raw material in this country. This is what The Ironmonger says:

The promoters of the home-made plan are exceedingly pertinacious and are leaving no effort untried in order to achieve success, and through the Pittsburgh exhibition the way will be made easier for pushing a bill through Congress next session, having for its object the imposition of much heavier duties upon imported tin-plates. Should this scheme succeed, there is no doubt that a great deal of American capital will be promptly embarked in the business and sooner or later the tin-plate will cease to be a monopoly of South Wales and Monmouthshire. Nevertheless, we see no reason why the manufacturers of tin-plate in this country need grow disheartened or despondent.

I hope the Senator from Missouri will listen to this.

Mr. VEST. I suppose that extract is from The Economist.

Mr. DAWES. This is from the London Ironmonger:

They have the advantages of possession, position for shipment, trained labor, and all materials on the spot. These are very important points, but, in addition, the Welsh makers have strong allies in the United States, and if the alliance is made the most of, we should have very considerable doubts of the success of any application to Congress to increase the present duties. But to insure that result the Welsh makers and their business connections must not only watch, but work, and work hard, to checkmate the advance of the American ultra-protectionists.

Mr. CULLOM. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] to make an announcement.

Mr. GEORGE. I call the attention of Senators to what I am going to say. With the consent of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and one or two others over there, for my personal convenience, I ask that the bill now before the Senate be passed over until the conclusion of the morning business on Monday morning, and be then the unfinished business. I suppose it will require unanimous consent to make that arrangement.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. VEST. Will the Senator from Ohio agree to that?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no personal objection to letting the bill go over if it can be considered as the unfinished business for Monday.

Mr. VEST. I have not the slightest objection. Then, if that is the agreement, I renew the motion that we adjourn over until Monday. I am on two committees which meet to-morrow.

Mr. CULLOM. I think it is pretty generally understood that there is to be a session to-morrow to consider the Calendar of unobjected cases.

Mr. HARRIS. Will not the Senator from Illinois ask unanimous consent that to-morrow shall be devoted to the Calendar under Rule VIII?

Mr. CULLOM. While upon the floor and before insisting upon my motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business, I ask that to-morrow's session be devoted to the consideration of the Calendar of unobjected cases under Rule VIII.

Mr. GEORGE. Now I should like to have my request acted upon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. PLATT. Of course there is no objection to allowing this bill to go over, but if unanimous consent is required that this bill is to be proceeded with on Monday, whatever may come up at that time and no matter what other business may come up at that time, I do not want to agree to that. I do not want to bind ourselves that this business shall proceed on Monday as against all other business.

Mr. HARRIS. There can be no objection to letting this bill remain as the unfinished business.

Mr. PLATT. I have no objection to letting it remain the unfinished business.

Mr. HARRIS. That is all that was implied.

Mr. PLATT. If that is all that was implied, I have no objection to that.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent that to-morrow's session be devoted to the Calendar under Rule VIII.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. INGALLS. Does that include the entire day, from the conclusion of the formal morning business until the adjournment?

Mr. HARRIS. Unless an executive session is interposed, I should think.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not suppose it would preclude an executive session later in the day.

Mr. INGALLS. Everything but that?

Mr. CULLOM. Everything but that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CULLOM. Now I insist on my motion for an executive session.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator yield to me to offer an amendment?

Mr. CULLOM. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. GEORGE. I offer an amendment which I intend to propose to the pending bill, and I ask that it be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be received and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope Senators will all understand that on Monday we shall proceed with this bill and try to finish it before the adjournment on that day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. PLATT. What is that?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That the bill under consideration at the present time shall go over until Monday next and be considered as the unfinished business, to be disposed of on that day.

Mr. ALLISON. The unanimous consent does not go to the point of finishing the bill on Monday.

Mr. HARRIS. Oh, no; not to that extent. We do not know how long the bill may take.

Mr. PLATT. No, and it does not go to the point of considering it on Monday either.

Mr. CULLOM. A majority can settle that on Monday. I now insist on my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After three minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, March 22, 1890, at 12 o'clock m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 21, 1890.

UNITED STATES CONSULS.

James F. Ellis, of Wisconsin, to be consul of the United States at Brockville, Canada.

James C. Kellogg, of Louisiana, to be consul of the United States at Stettin.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, March 21, 1890.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. GEORGE ELLIOTT, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the purpose of considering the annual pension appropriation bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, is not this day set apart under the rules for the consideration of the Private Calendar?

The SPEAKER. Under the rules the Committee on Appropriations has the right to make this motion at any time after the reading of the Journal on any day.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Without a formal motion to dispense with the Private Calendar?

The SPEAKER. Without that.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. MORROW, and the Speaker declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 93, noes 25; so the motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. BURROWS in the chair.

PENSION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering the annual pension appropriation bill. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Chairman, the bill under discussion is the largest annual appropriation for pensions ever made, and I would not attempt to underestimate its cost to the country. I know that pension expense is heavy and must be heavier for several years to come. The Government these pensioners saved from destruction solemnly promised its citizen heroes that if they would volunteer in its defense those who were wounded or broken in health, and the widows and children of those who died should be properly cared for. The patriotic soldiers performed their part of the contract; they volunteered and saved the nation's life, and it remains to be seen whether those who are charged with the administration of the Government now will fulfill its promises and redeem its pledges made to the soldiers of the war of 1861-1865.

I wish to call the attention of the House and the country in the time given me to the duty of providing a service pension for life to our citizen heroes and to the duty of providing a pension for the widow of every deceased Union veteran and of properly caring for all who are now broken in health.

I had the honor of introducing House bill No. 235, a bill which authorizes and directs the payment of a service pension to every honorably discharged Union soldier, sailor, and marine who served sixty days in the war of 1861-1865 and who has now arrived or shall hereafter arrive at the age of fifty years.

This bill also authorizes the granting of a pension to the widow of every deceased veteran at the rate of $12 a month. If I could I would make the rate of pension for every widow $20 a month, and then repeal all laws in conflict with this provision, and thus end at once and forever all forms of class legislation upon the disability of widowhood, a disability in which there can be no degrees and yet one for which in this land of constitutional equality of citizenship Congress has dared to grant to one widow $3,500 a year and to another $144 a year.

This bill authorizes the granting of a pension to every disabled veteran and simplifies the ratings for invalid pensions below the specific rates granted for the loss of limbs, eyes, and for deafness, or their equivalents, thus giving practical effect to the statement of our honored President, who in one of his public speeches said, "In granting pensions to our Union veterans they ought not to be weighed in apothecary balances," meaning thereby, I have no doubt, that there never should be such fine distinctions in ratings that it would require these pensions to be divided into the fractional part of a cent per month, as they now are under existing laws. The bill also meets the demand for the repeal of the arrears act by providing that all invalid pensioners whose pensions do not carry arrears shall be granted a pension of $5 a month from the date of the incurrance of the disability to the date of the issuing of the existing pension.

A bill so just and patriotic as this one is, a measure which is in nearly every one of its provisions so thoroughly in harmony with the legislative precedents of the Government from its organization, merits, in my opinion, the most careful consideration and study by every member of this House and by the people of the whole country. I think it is conceded by every fair-minded and patriotic citizen of the Republic that it was the Union soldiers, sailors, and marines who, by their valor, their sacrifices, and their sufferings, suppressed the gigantic rebellion against the life of the nation, conquered an honorable and lasting peace, and thereby secured and re-established this temple of constitutional liberty with all its manifold blessings to the present and coming generations who shall follow us.

If, then, it is to them that we are indebted for all the blessings of this peerless citizenship of ours; if, having suffered so much and risked life itself to secure for us these inestimable blessings, what are the just and legal rights of those who still live, who were of that grandest and noblest of all armies in that greatest of all conflicts? I repeat, Mr. Chairman, what are the just and legal rights of these veterans?

I hold, as I am quite sure the great mass of our people hold and as the solemn pledges of the Government made to these men when they left their homes and enlisted imperatively demand, that it is their right to claim, yes, Mr. Chairman, their right to demand and receive, the same benefits and honors which have heretofore been conferred by the Government upon their fathers who participated in other wars and rendered heroic service to their country in the earlier days of the Republic. If it be true that the Government did recognize and honor its heroes in its earlier history, when its people were poor and its Treasury was hard pressed to meet the current demands of Government, surely a patriotic Congress and people can not consistently refuse to grant a patient hearing to these claims and will not deny so just a demand at this time, when the wealth of the nation has quadrupled since that war began, and at a time when the national Treasury can promptly meet every pension demand that may be made upon it without increasing the tax burden upon the country one cent.

The language of the bill and existing laws will give to every honorably discharged veteran who now draws a pension of less than $8 a month, or who is not pensioned at all, who served sixty days in the war of 1861-1865, and who shall have arrived at fifty years of age, a service pension for life. The term of service demanded of those who fought in the early wars of the Republic were by no means as hard. If they served for a period of fourteen days in the Army or if they had been one day in battle, they were entitled to the pension. The language of this bill calls for sixty days' service, and is therefore more than four times the term of service required of the Revolutionary patriots. Surely no one can find fault with this provision of the bill.

I do not ask the enactment of this bill into law, as I am sure the great mass of our people do not ask its enactment, for the purpose merely of providing for the maintenance and support of these patriots and their loved ones, and to keep the wolf of hunger and want from their homes. I want it enacted, as I know the people do, and the service pension for life granted and conferred upon these veterans, as a badge of distinction for patriotic service rendered the Government, and as a token of gratitude to the heroes who so loved that flag, Mr. Chairman, and this Government of the people, for the people, and by the people, that they laid aside their vocations of peace, left home with all its endearments and hallowed associations, and, taking their lives in their hands, went down to war, tendered their services to those charged with the duty of defending the honor and life of the nation, and through campaign and battle so marched and fought that they suppressed the rebellion against the life of the Government, conquered an honorable peace, saved the union of States and with it this temple of constitutional liberty, the benefits of which we now enjoy.

It was, Mr. Chairman, their bravery upon land and sea, their sacrifices, and theirs alone, that made it possible for this nation to exist and enables us to meet as Representatives of the people, and to rejoice to-day over the fact that the flag above your head is the emblem of freedom and national unity, and that this Government by the people still lives. We owe these men, Mr. Chairman, a debt of gratitude which we can never repay. The liberties protected by law which we now enjoy, the blessings of constitutional liberty vouchsafed to those who shall come after us, all that we have, all that we are as a nation, all that we can ever hope to be, we owe to their heroic efforts upon land and sea as they fought and struggled for all these blessings from Belmont to Appomattox.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that pensions should be the evidence of acknowledged devotion to duty, granted by a grateful and patriotic nation. Perish forever the thought that to secure and entitle one to receive a pension he must claim it as a person in need of food and clothing, the absolute necessities of life. I would demand this service pension for the defenders of the life of my country as an absolute and completed right. Devotion to country in its hour of peril is the highest evidence of patriotism, and I would make the granting of pensions the highest evidence of the gratitude of the Republic to those who risked their lives in its defense.

PROMISES MADE VETERANS.

When hostilities began in 1861, the Government was without an army and without money. Congress was at once convened in special session and the authorities set resolutely at work to suppress the rebellion and restore peace. Promises were made by the Government. Promises to the men who loaned it money and promises to those who volunteered in its defense. The Government, through its proper officers, made pledges to the money-lenders, and every promise made to every person who loaned it money has been kept.

The citizen who invested his money in its bonds has been paid, fully paid, in gold. When the war cloud lowered and the hearts of the people were full of sorrow, and hope hung trembling in the balance, and when the credit of the Government was partially destroyed, men bought Government bonds at 50 cents on the dollar. How have those bonds been paid? They have been paid at their face value in gold, and to-day, when the end of a quarter of a fiscal year is reached, sufficient clerical force has been at work to promptly remit every cent of interest at maturity to every holder of our bonds.

It will not be denied that the most solemn promises were made by the Government to induce men to enlist. Promises were made by the authorities, by the press, by the orators, by the people. These promises were universal. Every man who had the courage to volunteer was to be pensioned for life, if he should be fortunate enough to return to his home when the war was over. Each one of us was to receive, in addition thereto, 160 acres of land. From the orator, the press, and even from the sacred desk, came the most solemn promise, that, if we fell in battle, died fighting under that flag for freedom and the right, our loved ones should become the wards of the nation; that the widow and children of the hero who died for his country should never come to want.

We are all familiar with what followed. The brave men of the North responded to the call for help and created the grandest army ever marshaled in battle. The official rolls show that there were 2,778,304 enlistments. The army opposed to us was composed of men of the same ancestry, of the same nationality, of the same religion. They were flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone. Even the leaders of the contending hosts had been classmates in the same military school, had studied the same tactics, and were educated in the same theories of war, had fought side by side under the same flag; hence the contest was the most terrific. In that war more battles were fought and more men killed and wounded than in any conflict of which reliable history gives account. At last, thank God, at last the war was ended, and peace came to bless our beloved land, and the great armies were disbanded, and the Union veterans returned to their homes and resumed the peaceful pursuits of life.

How have we as a nation kept the promises and fulfilled the pledges made these heroes? Have we made the widow and children of our heroic dead the wards of the nation? Have we properly cared for him who lost his health in that fearful contest and has since realized the fact that he can not successfully fight the battle of life for food and raiment? Let the presence of a full army corps, 25,000 of these heroes, who live upon the charity of their local government or in the almshouses of the States, make answer. How have we kept our promises to these heroes? Capital paid in full. The bondholders' claim fully adjudicated, and I honor my Government for paying these claims in full, dollar for dollar, cent for cent; and yet the men whose bravery upon land and sea was the only guarantor capital ever had or could have for the payment of its interest and principle have not been paid at all.

A part of those who lost limb or health have been, it is true, partially pensioned, and I present you, from the last annual report of the Commissioner of Pensions, a bill of particulars, where the ratings are so technical that in some instances fractions of a cent per month are necessary to differentiate the disabilities. Read them:

Rate per month.	No. of pensioners.	Rate per month.	No. of pensioners.
$1.00 .....	35	$2.50 .....	1
2.00 .....	26,875	2.66 .....	5
2.25 .....	4	2.66½ .....	8
2.33½ .....	1

I would like to gaze upon the photograph of a medical referee who could give a reason for the two-thirds of a cent per month of those eight pensioners:

Rate per month.	No. of pensioners.	Rate per month.	No. of pensioners.
$3.00 .....	1,556	$6.00 .....	50,397
3.75 .....	331	6.25 .....	77
4.00 .....	69,048	6.37 .....	3
4.25 .....	345	6.66½ .....	2
5.00 .....	1,073	6.75 .....	1
5.25 .....	2	7.00 .....	165
5.33 .....	3	7.25 .....	2
5.33½ .....	18	7.50 .....	844
5.75 .....	17	7.75 .....	16

Mr. Chairman, it is true that some of the men who risked their lives for their country have been partially recompensed. The foregoing facts, taken from the last official report of the Pension Office, are conclusive upon that point. The technical and trivial distinctions in ratings establish, however, one fact beyond question and that is that the ridiculous modes of procedure and distinctions in ratings for physical disabilities in our Pension Office need a radical revision, and need it at once. The farcical distinctions have existed long enough.

I have heard it said that these veterans ought to be satisfied and thankful for the invalid pensions already granted their comrades. Thankful for what? Thankful that while every man who invested his money in that war issue has been fully and promptly paid there now remain unadjudicated (after the lapse of twenty-five years) more than 450,000 invalid pension claims in our Pension Office, while the Treasury is fully prepared to meet any pension demand that may be made upon it and thoroughly competent men are anxious for a chance to go to work in adjudicating those claims? Thankful, indeed, that, in the face of the most solemn pledges to tenderly care for all who were broken in health, 25,000 of their comrades who are broken in health are now inmates of the poor-asylums of the States?

Thankful can they be while scores upon scores of thousands of the widows of their dead comrades are not pensioned at all, and are to-day bending over wash-tubs or at other hard work striving to keep soul and body together, and when the little children of these heroes are crying for bread, while the money in our national Treasury is being used to buy up our war bonds at a premium of 25 cents on the dollar? Thankful, do you say—thankful that the nation they fought so bravely to save from destruction should fail, either through neglect, or avarice, or cowardice, to keep its promises to any one of the millions of brave men who risked their own lives in its defense? These heroes will be thankful when their Government shall have redeemed its pledges to all who dared or died in that great contest; when it shall be able to present as clear a balance-sheet upon the pension question as it can upon the war debt.

The veterans believe that the claims of those who risked life should be held to be as precious and as sacred in the estimation of the Government as the claims of those who risked the mighty dollar in that contest for the life of the nation, and every patriotic citizen of the Republic must admit that their faith and belief is well founded. These veterans know that their claims are the most sacred ones pending before Congress to-day, and they demand as of right justice for all who risked life in that contest, and until every claim shall be granted they can not in honor be thankful to the Government their valor saved from destruction.

COST OF PENSIONS.

The claim is frequently made that the service-pension bill ought not to pass because it would cost too much money. I shall not pause to argue at length the question of cost. We all know by experience the full force of the saying, "All that a man hath will he give for his life," and I hold that this is as true of nations as of men. The men whose claims I this day present for your consideration did not stop to consider the cost of their gift to their country. They heard the cry for help, and went as only proud and brave men could go to the rescue. It cost them an inestimable loss in money, a sum far greater than all the pensions they will ever receive, and who would dare here and now to undertake to estimate the losses they sustained by reason of exposure on marches, in hospitals, on battle-fields, or in prisons by torture?

Did the man who objects to a service-pension law because it will cost too much ever stop and investigate the facts? If he will pause and learn the truth he will find that the total cost of all pensions growing out of the late war to June 30, 1889, is less than one-half of the cost for interest on the war debt to June 30, 1889. There has been paid out by the Government in interest alone upon the war debt to June 30, 1889, the sum of $2,407,807,989.45; and yet who would stand here and object to the payment of interest upon the war debt because it has cost so much money? During the same period there has been paid out on account of pensions $1,059,847,826.04 only, or just $144,056,163.68 less than one-half the sum of money paid out as interest upon the war debt, and yet we hear gentlemen object to a service-pension bill on account of its cost. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that this comparison of the actual cost of interest and pensions must be a complete answer to and should end at once every objection against the passage of a service-pension bill upon the question of its cost.

When the Government shall have paid to pensioners a sum of money equal to the amount it has paid upon interest, it will, in my judgment, be quite soon enough for Congress to raise the question of its cost as a reason why the measure should not be enacted into law. Pensions vs. interest; which one of these claims should be held to be the most sacred by those who are charged with the duty of representing the Government which the persons who make claim for pensions saved from destruction?

During the war the loyal, patriotic people of the Union submitted without a murmur to the most burdensome taxation in order to raise the required sum of money necessary to maintain the nationality of the Union, and the patriotic citizens of the country will never object to the payment of pensions on account of the cost. They can not in good conscience object, because they are now enjoying the blessings procured by the heroic efforts of the veterans whose claims I this day present.

Congress has removed from time to time since the close of the war taxes which aggregate the enormous sum of $397,000,000 a year, and there yet remain two items of war taxes which bring annually into the Treasury more than $129,000,000 a year—I refer to the revenue tax upon tobacco and alcohol in all of its forms—so that I am justified by the facts and repeat that a service-pension bill can be enacted into law and a service pension can be granted to every Union veteran over fifty years of age, the invalid pensions can be continued, and the total cost thereof can be paid out of the Treasury without levying one cent of additional taxes upon the country.

Mr. Chairman, I want the House and country to keep in mind this fact: The long delay on the part of the Government in adjudicating pending pension claims, and the consequent increased sum of money required to make the first payment to pensioners whose claims are now being allowed, does not in any sense belong to the annual pension expense and ought not to be considered as an item of the annual cost of pensions should this or some other service-pension bill become a law. These first payments are past-due obligations, and should have been paid years ago, and during the last fiscal year amounted to between 24 and 25 per cent. of the total cost of pensions.

I have made a careful estimate of the additional annual expense should a service-pension law be enacted and all invalid pensioners who now receive less than $8 a month elect to take a service pension in lieu of their invalid pension. This would increase the cost between six and one-half and seven millions of dollars a year. Thus far in this investigation there can be no serious differences, because we have reliable data from which to make estimates. At this point there will be a divergence of views, because there are no official or reliable data by which we can estimate the number of veterans who are now living. It is all guess work, guess work at the War Department, guess work here in Congress.

No man in his logic and reasoning was ever nearer correct than Abraham Lincoln, and he reasoned about the questions of greatest importance by and from his knowledge of the smaller ones that came under his own personal observation. He reasoned and unerringly from the smaller to the greater. We know the total number of enlistments. They were 2,773,304. There were so many men, however, who enlisted twice and three times, and in thousands of cases four times, that it is impossible to know how many different men did actually enlist. The figures vary half a million nearly, from 2,035,000 to 2,500,000; so do the estimates vary as to the number now living. One man who has given the question careful study places the number at 1,500,000. Captain Ainsworth, of the War Department, fixes the number at 1,285,471, July 1, 1890. Another gentleman who has prepared at great cost a list of every military and naval organization of the war, and has secured the names and addresses of 400,000 veterans, tells me that he was astonished to learn the proportion of those who served two, three, and even four enlistments. He does not believe there are over 900,000 living.

During the last nine years the Pension Office has been procuring the names and post-office address of these veterans. It has been aided by the thousands of the Grand Army of the Republic posts, by the hundreds of soldier associations, by its corps of special examiners, by requests repeated over and over to the postmasters in the United States, and by the hundreds of thousands of pensions claimants, and yet with all these aids it has been unable to secure 850,000 names. I find that in the Ninth Indiana district just about 48 per cent. of the veterans are pensioned; and that if the ratio of 40 per cent. was extended to the total number of pensioners the total number of living veterans would be 943,000. From a careful study of all the data I have been able to find, I do not think the census will show that one million of us survive the 1st of July of this year.

Three hundred and sixty-four thousand one hundred and sixteen died in the service; this statement is accurate and made from official reports. The annual reports of the Adjutant-General of the Army show that only 979,722 men of the volunteer army were mustered out of service from November 1, 1864, to January 20, 1866, the date of the last muster-out. If we accept the War Department figures as correct we will be confronted with this fact, that after deducting from their total number of enlistments those who died in the service, and then from the remainder their estimate of the number now living, we shall learn that all of the deaths out of the service since the war began, twenty-nine years ago, is only 25 per cent., or less than 1 per cent. a year; when we who served any length of time know that almost one-fourth of our comrades were mustered out during the war on account of breaking down in the service, and that of these nearly all of them are gone.

To emphasize the death rate, I will name three widely different commands from my own State:

Last fall at their annual reunion the Eleventh Indiana Battery had left 30 men only.

An infantry company that only served a short term went into service with 86 men; they lost four in the service, came back 82 strong. Of this number 31 have since died and 51 are now living. This death rate is 50 per cent higher than Captain Ainsworth's estimate.

Take the company I served in: It was in the service three years and had on its rolls 147 men. I only wish that I could say to this House that only so few of my comrades had laid aside life's burden; but, alas! I can not. The death angel has come again and again into our company until the greater portion are now at rest. I do not believe there is a veteran in this House who can find three-fourths of his comrades who returned home with him who are still alive. Therefore I place the number of survivors at one million. If a service-pension law shall pass, and we pension all who shall be entitled to its benefits at fifty years of age, then the average length of time they will receive pensions will not be to exceed eight years.

On the 1st of March, 1890, there were, in round numbers, on the pension-rolls 377,000 invalid pensioners. This would leave not to exceed 633,000 veterans to pension for an average of eight years; and then what? We find that the total cost under the most liberal construction that can be placed upon the service and per diem bill can not exceed $648,000,000.

I do not think that the increased cost for the next fiscal year, if a service-pension law shall pass, including the cost to pension all the widows of our comrades, will exceed $41,000,000. I wish to call attention to the fact that the appropriation bill now under consideration includes first payments upon claims that the Government has neglected to allow to the amount of about $25,000,000, and that the total annual expense of invalid pensions and the service pensions, exclusive of first payments on invalid claims, will be about $110,000,000 for the next fiscal year. The present Commissioner of Pensions is pushing the work in that office, and in my opinion the amount required to make first payments for the next fiscal year will be the largest in our pension history.

Suppose that the high-water mark of pensions should reach $150,000,000 a year, and that this sum should be required for seven years, what then? I wish to remind the House and country that should this sum be required, great as its cost would be, yet at the expiration of the seven years pensions will not have cost the country as much money by $300,000,000 as the interest upon the war debt will have cost at that time.

I admit that a service-pension law will cost a vast sum of money. I want it to cost money. I want this generation and the country to know and feel the cost of that war. I want the world to know that nothing is too good or expensive for the brave men who in that great contest saved, at the cost of so much blood and sacrifice, this Government by the people. And, Mr. Chairman, I want a service-pension granted as an object lesson for our children; I would impress upon their minds the honor and gratitude of the Government to its citizen soldiers who in that war saved its life.

What reasonable excuse can therefore be urged against such a measure, in the light of the pledges made these veterans and of the absolute justice of their demands, upon the mere question of its cost. Will this House decide that the claims of men who loaned the Government money in that crisis in its history are more sacred and entitled to greater consideration than the claims of the men whose heroic services upon land and sea saved the life of that Government and made it possible for this House to meet and legislate for the welfare, the honor, and glory of the Republic? I honor my Government for keeping all of its pledges to the men who risked their money in that contest, and so does every veteran; but I do not stop there; I go further, and demand that it shall redeem every pledge and keep every promise to every man who risked his life in that great war; every promise, Mr. Chairman, to every veteran and to his widow and to his children; and to fail to keep these solemn promises would be, in my opinion, an inexcusable crime.

I have heard it said you must not ask for a service-pension law, because it will not pass this House; that such a law can not pass this House. I ask why? Is it not a just bill? The Treasury can meet the expense without increasing the taxes one cent. An army corps of these veterans are dying every year, and if aid is ever to come to them it must come to them now.

The men who quailed not in the supreme hour of the nation's peril are now demanding it. They have petitioned for it by scores, yes, by hundreds of thousands. The great mass of what the martyr President, Mr. Lincoln, called the common people favor it. Their claim is a just one. The nation is amply able to pay them, besides every principle of justice, honor, and gratitude demands their payment. Then, I repeat, why not enact the bill into law, and thus redeem the pledges we made these heroes as we have already redeemed the pledges made those who then loaned the Government money?

Can it be true, Mr. Chairman, that we, the representatives of the people, are wanting in patriotism ourselves? Are we afraid that some men or papers will condemn us if we shall keep the promises made by those charged with the administration of the Government from 1861 to 1865? I trust not, sir. I hope that we shall possess the courage to do right. Speaking for myself I shall do all I can to bring this plain and patriotic question before the House. I want an opportunity to record my vote in favor of it, and if that privilege is given me I would leave as a heritage to my children the knowledge of the fact that as a Representative of the people I voted in favor of a bill which granted a service pension for life to every honorably discharged Union soldier, sailor, and marine who served sixty days in the war of the rebellion of 1861-1865, thus discharging my full duty as a representative in compelling the Government to do justice to and fulfill its promises made to the heroes who saved it from destruction.

Speaking in behalf of and for these veterans to the gentlemen charged with the leadership of this side of the Chamber and of this Congress, I desire to impress upon their minds the fact that what these veterans ask and demand is the enactment of a measure which shall afford to them ample and just relief in compliance with the promises made them. They do not want any more promises. Promises are cheap and easily broken. They will not longer be content with mere promises, they and their friends, and be it said to the great credit of the masses of the people of the North and West, they are united and in favor of service pensions, and, Mr. Chairman, they have sent us here to execute their will. Every other interest has had its day in Congress.

The veterans whose valor made it possible for Congress to exist now ask and demand their day in Congress, and, Mr. Chairman, they will have it.

I respectfully suggest to those charged with the leadership of this House that a pension bill which will require a veteran to file in the Pension Office evidence of the fact of his poverty, of his absolute need of the necessities of life, before he can receive a pension, will not meet the expectations of the veterans, nor will it satisfy their demands. Shame upon any man or party claiming to be patriotic that would ask a man who was brave enough to risk his own life for the preservation of the life of this Republic to so humble himself and family as to compel him to make oath to the fact that he was a pauper before he can receive from the Government the aid that was solemnly promised him when he went to war.

I have read of a State noted for the bravery of its men where prior to the war the children who availed themselves of the benefits of the public schools could only do so after their parents had made oath to the facts, first, that they were not freeholders and, second, that they were not financially able to maintain their children in select schools. It is said that thoughtless children, and even grown persons, would chide those children with the fact of the poverty of their parents, and in many instances the pride of the parents and the pride of the children would not permit them to bear these insults, and rather than bear them the children grew to manhood and womanhood in ignorance, because their parents were poor. There were, however, some parents and children who were brave enough not to be deterred by their jeers and sneers, and so the few heroic souls had broken to them the bread of knowledge, even though their parents had to make oath to their poverty.

Will this House of Representatives, servants of the people, ay, the servants of the veterans themselves, go back to the barbarous past and enact here in this tribunal of the people a law which will compel a man who was proud enough and brave enough to risk his life in defense of this nation to so humble and debase himself as to make oath that he is a pauper, as a condition precedent to his right to receive the pension which was gratuitously promised him ere he made the tender of his services to his country? God forbid that such a law shall ever disgrace our national statute-books. I will not vote for such a law, because it would be an insult to every comrade of mine who is to-day, by reason of exposures in camp, on the march, and on the field of battle, made sole heir to poverty and want.

Old comrades of mine, One who is mighty to save hath said, "The poor ye always have with you," but, as your Representative, you will excuse me, please, if I decline to vote for a measure which will compel you to make oath to your poverty ere you can receive the relief which was so solemnly pledged you in the long-ago. Some tenderfoot on the subject of pensions and of doing justice to the Union veteran says: "Hold on, you advocates of a service pension; you must wait longer; you are entirely too previous. To enact such a law now would cost too much money, because so many of you veterans are still living." Why wait any longer, Mr. Chairman? More than half of the men who stood in line of battle under that flag have laid aside the burdens of life and are sleeping the sleep of death, and annually whole divisions of their surviving comrades are joining the host beyond the river.

Recently I read the report of a speech upon this subject, made by one of the bravest soldiers of that war, a man who bears with him at all times the evidence of having been in the thickest of the fray and where death held high carnival, a speech which, though brief, was long enough to chill my blood to the heart. In speaking upon service pensions for the common soldiers the paper made him utter these hateful words, "Wait until 1915, and then the Government can grant life pensions." This man would make my comrades wait fifty years from the close of the war, twenty-five years from now, before they shall have the right to ask for that recognition to which they are entitled by precedent and by the most solemn promises of those charged with the high duty of preserving the nation's life from 1861 to 1865.

The man who uttered those words is a Regular Army officer, at this time a major-general, who receives, and is paid, $7,500 a year as a salary, and, when age shall have dimmed his eye and broken his energies, the Government that educated him has provided that he can retire and live at his ease and continue to draw $5,625 a year so long as he lives; and yet this man, who rode to the fame and position he now enjoys over the dead and dying men of the line, the musket-carriers, whose patriotism, bravery, and devotion to duty, even at the cost of their own lives, made him what he is, insults the patriotism of the nation by demanding that the men who did all of the fighting and most of the dying shall wait in poverty half a century for recognition. Words so cruel, Mr. Chairman, have rarely ever been uttered. The very incarnation of heartlessness is the cry, "Wait a quarter of a century longer, Union veterans, for the recognition so long promised you."

I desire to be just and conservative in every statement made upon this question of pensions, and I am sure that no one will question the truth of my statement that now is the accepted time to enact a service-pension law if one is ever to be enacted for those who saved the life of the nation. We are now considering a measure to reduce the revenues of the Government, to revise the tariff and internal-revenue schedules, and if we shall reduce the revenues before we enact the service-pension bill, then, in that event, there will be no money with which to pay these pensions, and if we who are now charged with the duty of providing just and proper relief for these heroes shall fail to pension them when the revenues from existing laws will furnish an ample sum of money without the levy of an additional cent of taxes upon the country, how can we expect those who are to succeed us here to do it, when it will be necessary for them to levy additional taxes upon the country?

Mr. Chairman, we ought to meet this issue here and now and settle it. Every consideration demands that it be done. It seems to me that our line of action is plain. This Government, in its hour of peril, through its legally constituted officers, pledged its honor to keep every promise to these veterans. That pledge has not been redeemed. They were promised so many dollars per month as pay. The currency they were paid in was not worth the number of dollars it purported to represent. They have never been paid the difference, although every promise to pay dollars to the men who invested their money in that contest has been paid in dollars worth one hundred cents in gold to the dollar.

Every one of those obligations has been so paid. Then it was said the Government could not fulfill its promises because the revenues were not sufficient to meet the demands. Now they are, and we have the money to pay them.

We of the North, Republicans and Democrats, have pledged ourselves in our county, State, and national platforms to be in favor of doing justice to our Union veterans. A quarter of a century has elapsed since the war closed and these promises have not been fulfilled, and now we are face to face with a golden opportunity to redeem them. Will we do it? I shall have but one policy upon this question, one and only one line of action: standing here in my place as a representative of the people I shall favor the enactment into law of a service-pension bill as an act of justice, a recognition of the patriotism of the men who so loved this Union that they risked life in its defense.

To me this is my first, my highest duty, because it will be the fulfillment of the most solemn promises ever made by a Government to its citizen heroes, and because gratitude, honor, and every other consideration demand it. I shall at the same time oppose every material reduction of the revenues of the Government except upon sugar and every material revision of the tariff schedule until my comrades shall have received the pensions which have been promised them, for the reason that experience teaches me that if we shall reduce the revenues of the Government we shall put the Government in a position where it can not keep these promises, and I repeat, in my opinion, to do that would be an act of basest ingratitude.

I would remind my colleagues upon this side of the Chamber that it has been the boast of the Republican party that it always has been, and now is, par excellence the friend of the Union soldier. To-day the Republican party is in possession of every branch of the National Government, the legislative, the executive, the judicial. A great responsibility rests upon it. The Republicans can not escape it. I would not escape it if I could. I am in favor of keeping every pledge, of fulfilling every promise my Government has made.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Can the gentleman point to any pledges of the Government to the soldiers that have not been kept?

Mr. CHEADLE. I am trying to point out the pledges which the Government made; and the facts will show what part of those pledges and promises have been kept.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Will you point out any specific case in which the Government has failed to redeem its pledge to the soldiers?

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] one question on this point. I understood him to say that the Government could pass a service-pension bill without increasing taxation. Now I understand that according to the estimates a service-pension bill would involve an expenditure of $144,000,000 a year. How can we pass such legislation without increasing taxation, instead of taking the tax off sugar or making any other reduction which is proposed?

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Chairman, I stated as clearly as I could my estimate of the additional expense which would be incurred should a service-pension law be enacted. I want to say, and I say it in all charity, that any man, I care not where or who he may be, who says that the enactment of a bill giving a service pension for life to every Union veteran who has attained to the age of fifty, would amount to $150,000,000 a year, is not well posted as to the number of Union veterans now surviving.

Mr. MORSE. In answer to the question where and in what place the Government made pledges and promises to these men who periled their lives in its defense, may I read a quotation from Abraham Lincoln?

Let us strive to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphan; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

In my own State such representative men as John A. Andrew, "war governor," Judge Russell, and Henry Wilson repeatedly stated in war meetings to promote enlistments that the wounded survivors of the war and the widows, orphans, and dependent relatives of those that fell in battle should be cared for by a grateful people. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] is asking this great, rich, powerful nation, of boundless resources and with an overflowing Treasury, to redeem that promise here and now. Shall we falter? Shall we refuse?

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Chairman, national honor is a priceless jewel. We are charged with the high duty of preserving it, and I want it kept sacredly with every one of its citizens. The fact that it will cost money to maintain national honor has no weight with me. Honor is above all cost. I would maintain the national honor regardless of expense. When I contemplate the magnitude of the victories won in behalf of liberty protected by law by our Union veterans, the manifold blessings they have conferred upon us and those who shall come after us, and then pause and reflect upon the sacrifices they made, the dangers they braved, the privations and suffering they endured, I stand uncovered and amazed that any patriotic citizen of the Republic, that any member of this House, should even think of the cost of doing justice to and keeping the solemn pledges made them by the nation we now represent.

The history of pension legislation began with its first administration, and the soldiers and sailors of every war, from the Revolution of 1776 to the rebellion of 1861-1865, have been the recipients of service-pension recognition. Washington, the patriot soldier and statesman, both before and after he became President, was an earnest and persistent advocate of pensions. It will be well to pause a moment in the midst of the rush and whirl of this money age and revert to the early and patriotic era of our national history and commune for a time with the patriot Washington. Replying to a committee of the Army who visited him in 1778 and made known the sufferings and demands of our soldiers, he replied as follows:

It is not indeed consistent with reason or justice to expect that one set of men should make a sacrifice of property, domestic ease, and happiness, encounter the rigors of the field, the perils and vicissitudes of war, to obtain those blessings which every citizen will enjoy in common with them, without some adequate compensation. It must also be a comfortless reflection to any man that after he may have contributed to securing the rights of his country, at the risk of life and the ruin of his fortune, there would be no provision made to prevent himself and family from sinking into indigence and wretchedness.—Journal of Congress, volume 4, page 211.

In March, 1783, in a communication to the President of the Continental Congress, asking for just recognition for the officers and soldiers who had fought under him in the war of the Revolution, he wrote as follows:

If the whole Army have not merited whatever a grateful people can bestow, then I have been beguiled by prejudice and built opinion on the basis of error. If this country should not in the event perform everything which has been requested in the late memorial to Congress, then will my belief become vain and the hope that has been excited void of foundation. And if, as has been suggested for the purpose of influencing their passions, "the officers of the Army are to be the only sufferers in the Revolution;" if, retiring from the field, they are to grow old in poverty, wretchedness, and contempt; if they are to wade through the vile mire of despondency and owe the miserable remnants of their life to charity, which has hitherto been spent in honor, then shall I have learned what ingratitude is; then shall I have realized a tale which will embitter every moment of my future life. But I am under no such apprehensions. A country rescued by their arms from impending ruin will never leave unpaid the debt of gratitude.—Spark's Writings of Washington, volume 3, page 397; 4 Journal of Congress, pages 210, 211.

With what marvelous force the closing sentence, "A country rescued by their arms from impending ruin will never leave unpaid the debt of gratitude," appeals to the members of the Fifty-first Congress to-day as we stand face to face with the opportunity of paying the debt of gratitude this nation now owes to the Union soldiers, sailors, and marines, who, in the greatest and most stubbornly contested war of any age, not only preserved the life of the Government, but gave it permanent stability among the nations of earth. In 1783 the Republic was an experiment. The Federal Treasury was then almost bankrupt, and yet neither poverty, high rate of taxation, nor any other condition was a sufficient answer to the just demands urged by Washington for the heroes who had under him by force of arms established the Republic.

What wonderful changes have taken place among the nations of earth since then. Empires have perished; thrones and dynasties have crumbled into dust; kingdoms that were ruled by iron hands have disappeared from the maps of the world forever, while this Republic, whose foundations Washington and his compatriots laid, wherein the sovereign right to rule was reserved to the people, has increased its population and wealth, extended its territorial limits, developed its resources, and forced its way to the front, until it is to-day the accepted leading nation of the earth. The patriotic and golden words Washington wrote more than one hundred years ago to the Continental Congress are as true and applicable to us to-day as they were to that Congress when he wrote them, and I repeat them again. Washington, the patriot and statesman, in an address to the Continental Congress in 1783, in presenting the claims of his soldiers for pension recognition said: "A country rescued by their arms from impending ruin will never leave unpaid the debt of gratitude."

Mr. Chairman, can we not well afford at this time to heed his patriotic advice? Every consideration demands that it be done. Then our Government was weak in its resources and its Treasury was well-nigh bankrupt; now it has grown to be a giant in its proportions and its Treasury receipts are amply sufficient to meet any and all demands that may be made upon it. The great mass of the common people want the law enacted. The veterans unanimously demand it. National honor requires it. National gratitude calls for it; and if we, Mr. Chairman, who are sent here to formulate into law the will of those we represent, shall do our duty faithfully and well, we will promptly enact a service-pension bill into law, and thus prove our gratitude and that of the Republic by doing an act of justice, though long deferred, to the brave men to whose heroic efforts upon land and sea we are this day indebted for all the blessings of American citizenship.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I yield ten minutes of the time allotted to our side of the House to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS].

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Speaker, I have listened with deep interest to the arguments on this bill begun by the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW] in charge of the measure, and continued subsequently by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHEON], and to-day by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE]. After listening to their arguments on this bill, I am inclined to ask for information why it was that Mr. Tanner was invited to resign the office of Commissioner of Pensions.

The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] has justified on this floor the action of Mr. Tanner in putting on the pension-roll those who had not been honorably discharged, upon the idea that they had rendered good service before they left the service without permission, or, in other words, deserted. He has also justified the increase of the two-dollar pensions to higher rates, which was done in the brief period of a few months, according to his statement, in cases to the number of over five thousand, as I understand it. He has put in an argument to justify that, supplemented by a suggestion from the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE].

I read from his remarks appearing in the speech of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] made last Tuesday, as follows:

Mr. MORSE. If the gentleman will permit me, I will remark at this point in justification of Commissioner Tanner. It has been stated here that he ordered all the pensions that were at the rate of $2 a month to be increased to $4 a month. If I understood Commissioner Tanner's position correctly it was that a man who was receiving $2 per month ought either to be taken off the pension-roll altogether, because he was not entitled to any sort of a pension, or else that his pension should be increased.

The gentleman from Kansas also said:

During the year ending June 30, 1887, there were 32,107 pensions increased. During the year 1888 there were 45,716 pensions increased. During the year 1889 there were 71,198 pensions increased. The very fact to which I have called attention will, to some extent, account for the number of increases during the year 1889 over prior years.

He also says, in relation to desertion:

I want to call attention also to the decision which it is claimed was made by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior in regard to soldiers dishonorably discharged. It is a ruling of the Pension Department (and it is right) that a pension is not based upon an honorable discharge, but is based on the service the man has given to his country and upon his disability. I may have fought valiantly for two years and may have lost an arm or a leg during that time in the service, and then for some reason may have left my command and gone home. Yet the mere fact that I fought for two years and lost an arm or a leg entitles me to a pension, though I may have been dishonorably discharged for leaving my command.

As a gentleman suggests to me, the punishment for desertion is one thing and the granting of a pension for a disability received in the line of duty is another; and there should be in law and equity no connection between the two.

The late Commissioner has also been justified by the gentleman in the increase and rerating of pensions of employes of that office. Let me read the language of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] referring to this increase of pensions:

Of course gentlemen can pick out individual and exceptional cases and comment upon them; but I am speaking of the aggregate; and I say that so far as the aggregate of increase is concerned the result is such as to reflect credit upon the Pension Department, rather than discredit.

Now, that is the line of vindication or justification set up here by gentlemen on the other side for rerating and increasing pensions and the new rulings in the Pension Office under the late Commissioner Tanner. I again ask those gentlemen—and I will pause for an answer—why it was that this Administration invited him summarily to resign that office. I am not justifying him; but if, as you seem to insist, he did right, why did he have to resign?

Mr. MORROW. Does the gentleman desire that we shall occupy his time in making the answer?

Mr. CLEMENTS. I only have thirty minutes, and I do not desire that you shall take very much of that time.

Mr. MORROW. I appreciated that fact, and that was the reason I did not respond earlier to the gentleman's invitation. But I do say there is a reply to the gentleman that can be easily and quickly afforded. But we have exhausted our time on this side, and, of course, I have no right to trespass on the gentleman's time.

Mr. CLEMENTS. If you want two or three minutes to give the answer on that point I will yield and be glad to hear it.

Mr. MORROW. I do not think it would be just to our position in this matter to attempt a reply in two or three minutes.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Very well; the gentleman has more time on that side.

Mr. MORROW. No; we have exhausted the time on this side.

Mr. CLEMENTS. You have control of the time and can no doubt procure further time, and we will agree to that; but I do not wish to yield now for any considerable length of time.

Mr. MORROW. It would be necessary of course to enter into some details in regard to that matter.

Mr. CLEMENTS. We will consent that this debate be extended long enough to give time for that explanation. I would be glad to hear the answer.

Mr. MORROW. You prefer, I presume, to proceed now.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to talk a little about the figures that have been presented and commented on in regard to this bill, and I will ask the Clerk to read in this connection again what was read by the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW] two or three days ago when this debate was begun, being a portion of the report of the Secretary of the Interior.

The Clerk read as follows:

The estimates for pensions made for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1889, were not only inadequate, but must have been known to be so when recommended to Congress. The estimate for the previous year was $80,000,000. But before this estimate for the present year was completed it was apparent that a deficiency would be incurred, as it was incurred, for the previous year, to the amount of at least $8,000,000, and that this added to the original eighty millions would not be enough to meet the obligations accruing before the end of even that fiscal year.

It was known also that the pension-list was increasing, and if the payments of 1888-'89 could not be met with $80,000,000, but a deficiency bill had to be passed for $8,000,000 more, it must have been anticipated that the former Commissioner's successor would be run into a deficiency. Yet the estimate for pensions was confined to $80,000,000 for 1889-'90. The result, if the cause were not so easily detected, might produce an unfair comparison between the previous administration and the present as to the amount to be expended in this branch of the service. I do not hesitate, however, to assume the responsibility, as I have done in the estimates for the next fiscal year, of recommending an increase in the appropriation for pensions, so that a liberal and legal payment may be made to all the deserving pensioners of the Republic. This sum will reach $97,210,252.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. Chairman, it will be seen by the extract just read from the Report of the Secretary of the Interior that he not only assumes, as he says, with some degree of consciousness, the responsibility of making the increased estimates for the coming fiscal year for this purpose, but at the same time criticises rather harshly the estimates made by his predecessor in that office under the last Administration for the present fiscal year, saying that it was inadequate and must have been known to be so at the time it was submitted to Congress, thereby implying that the Department at that time did not act in good faith either towards the country or towards Congress in making the estimates as to what was necessary for this year.

It is unnecessary for me to go at any length into the details of this question, in justification of the action of the Commissioner of Pensions under the last Administration on this point, but I want to put before the committee in connection with this statement a fact which was brought out before the subcommittee on appropriations in the consideration of the urgent deficiency bill, in which was embodied an item of twenty-one and a half millions of dollars for the balance of this fiscal year to make up the deficiency which has occurred.

The fact was there developed that the estimate for the next fiscal year, ninety-eight and a half millions of dollars, carried by this bill, was first made by his predecessor, the late Commissioner of Pensions, Mr. Tanner, or under his supervision, and sent up to his superiors for one hundred and fourteen millions instead of ninety-eight and a half millions, as it is now, and that the estimate so made was sent back to the present Commissioner of Pensions to be recast and re-estimated, and in that way it was brought down from one hundred and fourteen millions, as originally made up in that office under this Administration and submitted to the Secretary of the Interior and to the approval of this Administration to send to Congress, to ninety-eight and a half millions of dollars. And I want to say right here—

Mr. MORROW. If the gentleman will permit me, I wish to recall to his attention the fact that the Commissioner of Pensions who made the statement that was presented before the committee and referred to in my remarks, informed us that the present estimate was based upon calculations made in the office, and that these calculations disclosed the fact that the amount would be about $98,000,000.

Mr. CLEMENTS. That I understand to be the general statement of the present Commissioner, that it is an estimate made in the office. But that does not dispose of the fact that another estimate was made in the office also, which carried a much larger sum, and which made it necessary in the opinion of the then Commissioner to appropriate, not ninety-eight and a half millions, but one hundred and fourteen millions.

Mr. MORROW. But which estimate was not supported by any calculation or method of making the estimate which was deemed sufficiently accurate by the Commissioner.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Well, I can only say in reply that it was made up in the same Pension Office, under the same Administration, by the same experts and accountants, and there is nothing to show that it was not deemed accurate by the Commissioner who made it.

Mr. MORROW. I do not so recollect it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Will the gentleman permit me to ask—

Mr. CLEMENTS. And, Mr. Chairman, if the estimates of the experts are not reliable in one case, how are we to depend upon them in another?

Mr. CUTCHEON. The question I desired to ask the gentleman has been partly met in his response to the gentleman from California, as to whether the details for this estimate of 114,000,000 were submitted to the committee; that is, the number of claims to be allowed on which the estimate was based. I suppose that Commissioner Tanner estimated for the allowance of a larger number of claims, and therefore a larger amount was necessary for the first payments.

Mr. CLEMENTS. In reply, I will say that the Commissioner of Pensions did not state to us that the former estimate of one hundred and fourteen millions was made upon a detailed estimate showing the number of cases to be adjudicated. The simple statement, so far as I remember it, was to the effect that it was an estimate of the office sent up and then returned to be recast and was brought down, and that the powers that be were gratified exceedingly when it was brought within a hundred millions of dollars.

Mr. MORROW. The estimate of Commissioner Tanner, however, was not supported by any calculation, as I remember.

Mr. CLEMENTS. In response to the gentleman's remark I can only state that it was prepared by the same experts and indorsed by the same office. I do not know what different method of calculation was adopted to arrive at such a different result. I suspect that somebody was alarmed at the figures, and I would like to ask the gentleman, in this connection, if he really believes that the ninety-eight and a half millions of dollars carried by the bill will be sufficient on his investigation for the next fiscal year?

Mr. MORROW. It will be sufficient to pay all the pensions under the laws existing at this time or at the time the appropriation is made. But, of course, if there are additions to the pension-roll by special acts of Congress or if the pensions are increased by reason of the action of Congress, there will be deficiencies to that extent.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. And in another way there will be also deficiencies: if the force of the Pension Office is increased by the 30 medical examiners and by other means, there will be doubtless more claims considered and allowed.

Mr. MORROW. The gentleman is quite correct in that. For the adjudication of the claims will be more rapid by an increase of the force, and there will be, undoubtedly, many additions to the pension-roll.

Mr. CUTCHEON. And another increase may arise from the fact that by withdrawing the large force of clerks heretofore employed in answering Congressional inquiries and answering them by circulars this force may also be utilized.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I was just going to say, in answer to that suggestion, that without any new laws upon this subject of increasing pensions or of the number of pensioners on the rolls, the Commissioner of Pensions has recently issued a circular in which he says that the time that will be saved by taking the time of the employees of that office from answering Congressional inquiries and others as to the status of claims will be utilized in working up claims for final adjudication; and that there will therefore be a large increase in the cases adjudicated this year under that new system.

Mr. MORROW. And which will require additional appropriations.

Mr. CLEMENTS. It will be so year after year, and will require a greater appropriation.

Mr. MORROW. I agree with the gentleman as to that.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I make this prediction: that without new laws passed by this Congress increasing pensions or the rate of pensions this appropriation of ninety-eight and a half millions will be inadequate to fulfill existing laws; and you will have a large deficiency, which will come up, for the next fiscal year, to the one hundred and fourteen millions estimated by Commissioner Tanner.

Mr. PETERS. The gentleman will remember, if he will allow me, that since this bill was formulated and presented to the House we have passed a bill which will increase the appropriation $450,000.

Mr. CLEMENTS. That is true; and in addition to that, further legislation has passed giving an increase of thirty medical examiners to hasten the cases forward. And so, under existing laws, under the present mode in the Pension Office, the bill you now offer will appropriate an inadequate amount; and we will have a deficiency which will be as great as the one we have now.

Mr. PETERS. But I do not understand that the gentleman from Georgia is criticising the deficiency that would arise by reason of the expenditures.

Mr. CLEMENTS. What I am talking about is the strictures of the present Secretary of the Interior, in which he seems to question the good faith of the last one in making his estimate, in which he says that, in his opinion, the former Secretary must have known it to be inadequate, while he seems to be doing the same thing, and that, too, in the face of the fact that the estimates made to him were $114,000,000, which, in my judgment, will be necessary to carry out existing law, but which he seems to have arbitrarily cut down so as to bring it down to about ninety-eight and a half millions.

Mr. MORROW. The point of the Secretary's criticism is that it does not appear that under the former administration, by reason of the acts of President Cleveland on pensions, there was a large increase of the pensions during that time.

Mr. CLEMENTS. But the figures show that there was a large increase of pensioners under the administration of General Black from year to year.

Mr. CUTCHEON. The natural increase.

Mr. FLOWER. Why not make a full charge now?

Mr. CLEMENTS. I am dealing with the bill that the present Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of Pensions favor and they were charged to look into. And when we have evidence that it does not carry the amount actually required for the next year they submit it in this shape, and come in here with a report criticising the last administration for doing what I say they are now doing themselves. The figures and the facts will show it and time will prove it.

Mr. FLOWER. Why not do it now?

Mr. CLEMENTS. I listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks made by the gentleman from Indiana, a distinguished soldier, in behalf of soldiers and service pension and dependent soldiers.

Now, I want to say that unquestionably there is not a considerable minority of the people in any community of the United States that begrudges to the genuine, true soldiers of the Union adequate pensions under the policy of this Government to take care of those who are needy and disabled and who served their Government. But there is great discontent at the looseness of the pension laws and their administration, whereby great injustice has been done not only to the taxpayers of the Government but also to the true soldiers themselves. By such legislation and such administration of the laws unworthy ones have been pensioned. The records show that unworthy cases are discovered and dropped from the rolls from time to time; doubtless many are never discovered.

These are the causes of complaint. When the gentleman says that the Government is not dealing fairly with the soldiers I want to call attention to the statement of a distinguished soldier, and certainly a soldiers' friend, Hon. James A. Garfield, when on the Committee on Appropriations of this House in 1876, when he said, in a congratulatory statement to the country, that the maximum of pension expenditures had, in his judgment, then been reached upon a bill which carried $28,500,000.

Mr. MORROW. That is fourteen years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I yield five minutes more to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS].

Mr. CLEMENTS. That has been fourteen years ago. This House has been Democratic from that time to this, except for the two years of the Forty-seventh Congress, and now the pension-roll is $100,000,000 a year in round numbers, which is more than three times the amount that General Garfield said was the maximum, and the expenditures have been going on increasing and increasing all the time.

Again, reference has been made to the policy of the Government in regard to the other wars.

This Government has never passed a general service-pension bill for the survivors of any war earlier than thirty-five years from the end of that war. It was more than thirty-five years after the end of the Revolutionary war before the men who called this Government into existence and caused its recognition by the nations of the world received a service pension. It was over thirty-five years before the survivors of the Mexican war received a service pension, and over fifty years after the war of 1812 before the survivors of that war received a service pension. Now, it has only been twenty-five years since the close of our last war—

Mr. RAINES. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. CLEMENTS. I have little time, but I will listen to a brief question.

Mr. RAINES. Is not the gentleman aware of the fact that the country is better able now to pay a service pension than it was in the other cases when it did pay it?

Mr. CLEMENTS. I do not know that to be a fact. There were a great many soldiers in the late war, a much larger number than any preceding war, and there are a great many of the people of this country who do not think they are able to pay for extravagant expenditures. For instance, the farmers of Kansas have been talking aloud lately, and, according to the newspapers, the Farmers' Alliance there does not feel that they are able to pay very heavy and unnecessary taxes.

Mr. PETERS. I want to say to the gentleman that that statement of the newspapers is inaccurate. That communication does not come from the Farmers' Alliance, but it is an open letter from the editor of a paper addressed to the Congressional delegation. The Farmers' Alliance has nothing to do with it.

Mr. CLEMENTS. It purports to come from the Farmers' Alliance, but the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] is no doubt well informed as to what he states.

But, however that may be, Mr. Chairman, this publication discusses matters that are being agitated not only in Kansas, but elsewhere also. It says:

Many of the questions that are receiving the attention of Congress are far less urgent than those upon which the safety of the home and the welfare of the family depend. The people believe that the white citizens of Kansas have some rights as well as the colored citizens in the South. They believe that fallen heroes, both white and black, in the past struggles for liberty and the perpetuity of our institutions, can afford to wait for one moment until the rights of living heroes in the present struggle for American homes receive some recognition by the men who have been chosen to represent them in Congress. Behind these demands are more than 100,000 ballots in the State of Kansas, and the time is coming and is not far distant when the legislators will heed the voice of their constituents.

Mr. KELLEY. If the gentleman can suggest what those fallen heroes are expected to wait for, I shall be glad to hear it.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I am not objecting to proper pension appropriations, and gentlemen will bear me out that I do not oppose just pensions. I say of this bill that it appropriates less, I believe, than your own Administration knows will be necessary to provide for pensions for the next year under existing law.

In my remarks just before I read this extract I was speaking in reply to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE], who had arraigned the Government on a charge of illiberality to the soldiers of the late war and compared what has been done for them with what was done for the survivors of former wars, and I was interrupted by a statement that the country was now better able to make these great expenditures than it was in the cases of former wars. Now, it is all right and proper to take care of the soldiers. Nobody questions that—nobody in any section of this country. But there are some other things we ought to take into account; some other conditions and some other people that ought to be considered occasionally.

I do not know whether or not this newspaper (the Post, of this city) is accurate in its editorial comments on this communication I have read when it says:

Representative FURSTON inclines to the opinion that more liberal pension laws would put more money in circulation, and hence have a tendency to boom prices and materially assist the farmers. This view is coincided in by Congressmen PETERS and PERKINS.

[Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, that is a new idea in favor of pension legislation, that it is to "boom" Kansas or to "boom" any other section of the country. My idea was that pensions were granted to the soldiers for their services, sacrifices, and necessities, not that they were to be given to "boom" prices in any particular locality, a thing which can not be done without depressing prices in some other locality. But the "booming" idea is a new one in connection with pensions.

Mr. PETERS. The gentleman from Georgia will understand that the word "boom" was used not by the Representatives named in the article, but by the newspaper.

Mr. CLEMENTS. But the gentleman only disowns the word "boom," and not the idea expressed in the quotation I have read. I do not desire an increase of the amount carried in this bill, nor do I believe it will be wise to enact additional legislation which will make greater appropriations necessary hereafter. It is proper, however, that there should be no concealment of the actual expenditure for the next fiscal year, for that expenditure will be made regardless of any arbitrary scaling of estimates by which this bill is brought within a hundred millions. The deficiency is sure to follow. These facts ought not to be lost sight of at this time when there are so many pending measures looking to still greater increase by new legislation.

I repeat that there are other subjects and interests that demand the patriotic attention of Congress besides this. When the indebted and distressed condition of a portion of this country is such as to cause that condition to enter into the consideration of pension legislation for the purpose of alleviating that condition by the distribution in a particular locality of the revenues of the Government, which have been taken from the hard earnings of the people of the whole country, there is something radically wrong.

It is not the agricultural interests of Kansas alone that are depressed, but the same is true in other sections. There are many widows and orphans and poor men throughout the country who pay a daily tax on the necessities of life, thereby contributing to make up the great sum annually collected and expended by the Government. They have a right to demand that these expenditures shall not be unreasonable or extravagant. They have a right to demand that they shall be taxed only for public purposes.

The agricultural and business interests of the entire country are suffering for want of an adequate circulating medium necessary to prosperity. When shall this question, as well as that of removing unnecessary burdens of taxation, engage the attention of Congress?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM].

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, I avail myself of this opportunity, not to say anything on the merits of this bill, because I presume if there is any objection that could be urged to its passage it would be that it is too small instead of too large. It would certainly be best to so increase the amount as that the sum appropriated would equal the sum required to pay the pensions now provided for by law for the next fiscal year.

I desire at this time to call the attention of soldiers of the country to the fact that the other side is quite derelict in carrying out the promises they made during the last campaign. During that period Republican candidates and Republican speakers, from the highest to the lowest, made the most liberal promises that if they succeeded to power they would enact the most liberal pension laws. They were not slow to denounce a Democratic House for failing to pass a general service-pension bill, and also a bill to repeal the limitation clause of the arrears act. It is now practically determined by the Republican side of the House and by the soldiers of the country that neither of these bills is to be passed by this Congress.

As late as the 11th day of last February, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], in his speech in favor of the change of the rules, gave as a reason that under the old rules it was impossible for any one on his side of the House to secure recognition to move to pass some one of the general pension bills upon the Calendar. General Alger, commander of the Grand Army, visited this Capital recently, and then started out, it is generally believed, at the instigation of the Administration, to prepare the soldiers for disappointment. Members upon that side have been called upon to fulfill their promises, but instead of doing so they are framing excuses and dodging in every conceivable manner.

I desire to have the Clerk read a letter which has been published throughout the State of Kansas, a letter emanating from the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS].

The Clerk read as follows:

The following is a letter from Congressman PETERS in answer to some resolutions of the Grand Army of the Republic men, adopted at Sterling, on the 15th of February, when Captain Powers, of Terre Haute, Ind., addressed them on the service-pension bill:

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,

"Washington, February 19, 1890.

"MY DEAR SIR: I have the resolutions adopted at a mass meeting of the old veterans and citizens in Sterling. There is no trouble about the Kansas delegation. If Mr. Powers would spend his time and money in traveling East into the New England States and New York and Pennsylvania, and bring influence to bear upon the Representatives from that section of the country, he would accomplish much more good. Every member of the Kansas delegation is an old soldier.

"I hope the old soldiers of Kansas will not allow themselves to be imposed upon by any interloper from other States, who claims to be a friend of the service-pension bill and endeavors to make use of it for the purpose of bleeding our soldiers. There has been a little too much of that and it should be put a stop to. If these parties wish to work for the cause let them go and travel where the work is needed. The Indiana men had better stay at home and labor with their own Representatives. I think the soldiers of Kansas are able to take care of themselves; and I know the Kansas delegation would think a good deal more of the Indiana fellows if they would stay at home and try to secure at least half of their delegation in Congress that could be relied upon to support pension measures. The State of Indiana has thirteen members in the House of Representatives, and only three of the thirteen can be relied upon to vote for a service pension. Don't you think it is about time for the Indiana fellows to stay at home and look after their own men? It looks very much that way to me, at least.

"Yours, truly,

"S. R. PETERS.

"THOMAS L. POWERS, Secretary, etc."

The gentleman does not state the names of those that can be relied upon to support the measure, but it is evident, as the delegation stands, ten Democrats to three Republicans, that he counts as reliable those upon his own side of the House and as unreliable those upon this side of the House. I am perfectly conscious of the dilemma in which gentlemen upon the other side have placed themselves. I am aware that their professions of a great desire to pass a service-pension bill and to repeal the limitation clause in the arrears act in the last Congress were not sincere, and that their declarations to this effect during the last campaign were not to be carried out, but I did not suppose that any of them would attempt to shirk the fulfillment of their pledges by misrepresenting the attitude of other members upon this floor.

Upon what authority did the gentleman from Kansas assume to speak for the Democratic Representatives from Indiana? Certainly not from their records in this House and in the Departments, because none can be found from any State which gives greater satisfaction to their constituents. I venture to say that the amount of labor performed by the Democratic Representatives from Indiana for the soldiers is not exceeded, if equaled, by any other ten Representatives upon this floor. The records of the Pension Office will bear testimony to this fact. I have prepared a table showing the per cent. of pensioners in Indiana of the number of soldiers enlisted from that State in comparison with Ohio upon one side and Illinois upon the other.

Per cent. of pensions to the number of soldiers in the war of the rebellion.

States.	Soldiers.	Pensioners.	Per cent.
Illinois.....	259,147	36,595	17+
Ohio.....	319,659	50,981	15+
Indiana.....	197,147	42,553	20+

The above showing is certainly proof that there has been no lack of industry upon the part of the friends of the soldiers in Indiana; no other State similarly situated can show such a favorable record. Upon the passage of the dependent pension bill in the Forty-ninth Congress, every Democratic Representative from that State voted for the bill, and upon the vote to pass the same over the veto of the President, 6 voted for the bill and only 2 against, while 1 was absent.

Now, what is the situation to-day? The rules which gentlemen upon the other side pretended prevented them from accomplishing anything in the last Congress have been changed. No filibustering can be indulged in; even the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] failed in the attempt, although his motives were both patriotic and economical. The Committee on Invalid Pensions have been given leave to report at any time, and yet nearly four months of the session have passed and not a single measure promised to the soldier has been brought into the House and placed upon the Calendar. Let us compare for a moment the work of this committee with the labors of other committees of the House.

The Committee on Territories has prepared a measure of great intricacy for the organization of a Territory in Oklahoma and the government of the same, and reported bills for the admission of Wyoming and Idaho as States. The Committee on the Judiciary has canvassed the constitutionality of the direct-tax bill and reported the same favorably, and about completed the difficult task of framing a national bankrupt law, besides accomplishing many minor tasks. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has considered and reported about seventy public-building bills, and had passed more than a dozen of them.

The Committee on Ways and Means prepared, reported, and had considered and passed a bill for the better or worse administration of the custom laws, and since then a majority of the members of that committee, rumor says, in some dark corner in the subbasement of the Capitol have attended the birth of some kind of a revenue measure, the parentage of which has not as yet been acknowledged, but no doubt the gentleman from Michigan will inform the country in due time that it is of legitimate origin. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

The Committee on Elections, none of whose members are overly able-bodied and healthy, have considered some ten or a dozen contests, maturely digested something like 20,000 pages of testimony, read several hundred pages of arguments, reported upon more than a half dozen cases, had considered five of them, and turned out four Democrats and seated four Republicans; and yet the Committee on Invalid Pensions has not been able to consider a single measure for a service pension or for the repeal of the limitation of the arrears act, although the measures were submitted to them in perfect form three months ago.

Why did not the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS], instead of heaping his indignation upon the members upon this side from Indiana, inform his constituent that his colleague [Mr. MORRILL], chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, had failed to report any service-pension bill to the House, and until that was done every member upon the floor was powerless to do anything. The silence of members upon the other side of the House upon the subject of pension legislation, permit me to suggest, has become painful. The mild appeal from my colleague [Mr. CHADLE] is all that we have heard.

True, we have had an occasional wave of the ensanguined garment, and I have no doubt but what several gentlemen over there are now ready and eager to give it a shake, but the soldiers of Indiana held an encampment in the district I represent, a few days ago, and somewhat forcibly said that that exercise was no longer entertaining.

It is apparent that the decree has gone forth that there must be no service-pension bill, that there must be no attempt to repeal the limitation clause of the arrears act. Columns of figures cooked up for the purpose of startling the country and stampeding the soldier organizations are paraded almost daily; the commander of the Grand Army has been sent out to try to appease the wrath and allay the indignation that are sure to arise when the soldiers realize that they have been duped.

I wish to assure the gentleman from Kansas of one thing, the Democratic Representatives from Indiana are not pledged to the support of any particular measure. They are here, however, as the soldiers' friends, and the confidence reposed in them by their soldier constituencies has not been misplaced. They are here to see that deception is no longer to be practiced, and so far as lies within their power the service-pension bill and the bill repealing the limitation clause of the arrears act shall come before this House and shall be voted up or voted down, as a majority of the Representatives may decide. [Applause on Democratic side.]

There can be no excuse for any further delay by the Committee on Invalid Pensions. The power has been given to the committee to report at any time. Their bills are privileged in the House, and they must redeem their pledges or stand convicted before the soldiers and before the country of obtaining the suffrages of the veterans under false pretenses. [Great applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LANE. The gentleman will allow me to interrupt him for a moment. Does he know that the Democratic members of the Committee on Invalid Pensions have voted in favor of an arrearage bill to be reported to the House?

Mr. BYNUM. I do not know it. I am not advised as to what has been done in the committee-room. I only know that a majority of the committee are Republicans, and that no bill has, as yet, been brought into the House.

Mr. LANE. Mr. MARTIN, of Indiana, has called up that bill at every meeting of the committee and pressed every day that it be reported to the House.

Mr. BYNUM. I know of none of my colleagues being opposed to the measure; and while I had no positive knowledge upon the subject I was satisfied that it was not the fault of my colleague [Mr. MARTIN], who as a member has labored assiduously and industriously for the soldiers and the soldiers' widows of Indiana since he became a member, that this bill was not reported.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. BYNUM. Certainly.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I understood my friend from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS] to say a moment ago that this House had been in the hands of the Democratic party since 1876, which is strictly true, but for a period of two years in the Forty-seventh Congress, when it was in the hands of the Republican party. And now I wish to know from the gentleman from Indiana whether when you had control of the House you ever reported a service-pension bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. BYNUM. The Democratic party never pledged itself to pass a service-pension bill. Democratic Representatives never pledged to the soldiers that if they were elected the legislation demanded by them would be passed. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] They never falsely pretended upon this floor that they favored the measure, but they now and here serve notice that you of the Republican side of the House, who have made such pledges, shall bring the measures into the House or go home and confess to the soldiers that you deceived them. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I want to know when and where the Republican party pledged itself to a general service pension.

Mr. SPRINGER. Everywhere.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I will yield for ten minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SPINOLA].

Mr. SPINOLA. Mr. Chairman, it is to be regretted when a question shall arise affecting the interests of the men who served their country in preserving our Government it is to be injected with politics, but inasmuch as it has been done the men on this side of the House, who claim to be as good friends to the soldier as any one in the country, do not intend any longer to sit here and quietly submit to utterances which have come from the dominant party on the other side for a number of years, and especially during this session of Congress. [Applause on the Democratic side.] For, as the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM] has indicated, you have to face the music, and we intend to force you to it. We intend to draw the line of battle on the service-pension bill. [Applause on the Democratic side.] You have got to march up to it, because we no longer intend you shall mask yourselves before the country as the special friends of the veterans when up to this time you have done but little to alleviate their sufferings.

Why, sir, the Democratic party has forced the pension-roll from $28,000,000 up to about $100,000,000.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa, rose.

Mr. SPINOLA. Be quiet, my friend, and keep your seat, for I have only ten minutes and have no time to spare.

The Democratic party, I say, Mr. Chairman, forced the pension-roll up from $28,000,000 in round numbers to $100,000,000. Yet our friends on the other side go home, and on the stump tell the people what great friends they have been to the men of the Union Army. It will not do any longer, comrades on that side.

Mr. BOUTELLE. Did not the Democrats furnish the opposition to pension legislation on every occasion? [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. SPINOLA. The record does not sustain it. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BOUTELLE. It does absolutely.

Mr. SPINOLA. No, sir; and we will not have it any longer; and you have got to face the music. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] At the time the Republican party was appealing to the people for renewal of power, after we had elected Grover Cleveland President of the United States, they spent nearly four years in cultivating the vote of the veterans. The battle was to have been fought in Indiana. That State was to have been the battle-field.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. And did not your President veto the bill for those veterans? [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. SPINOLA. What was done in that campaign? My old friend, Corporal Tanner, the long-roll was beaten for him and he marched out like a veteran. He took off his coat and took off his neck-tie and stripped himself almost to the skin in advocating the doctrines President Harrison put in his mouth; the pledges to the veterans of Indiana were made at the suggestion of President Harrison and the Republican committee in that State. What was the result? Why, after those pledges had been made, after Indiana had been carried by Corporal Tanner visiting every Grand Army post, when he came to carry out his promises, after having made innumerable pledges to veterans and other citizens, when he was called upon to do what in the name of the Republican party he had promised, and he was placed in a responsible position to do it, what was the result? Let us read what he says himself:

I want to say to you, I did not resign until the President and Secretary said to me in the same minute that the completed report of the investigating committee, which lay before them, had not one word which would impeach the honesty of my action in the slightest degree.

But, nevertheless, he had to go.

I haven't the slightest doubt that I would have been removed if I had not resigned.

Here was a gallant soldier, a man who lost both legs on the battle-field, who was rewarded by the Republican party—nay, by the President of the United States—for the gallant services he had rendered to the party in the campaign of 1888, and yet he had to resign or, as he was aware, his head would roll into the basket.

In fact, I knew it—

He says—

Noble had pronounced his ultimatum to be my head or his resignation.

His head for what? Why, because he had done that which he promised the veterans of the North he would do—promises that he had made with the advice and under the suggestion of President Harrison and the Republican party, to carry that State. That is the way you reward the veterans.

Now, sir, I care not what it may cost. Corporal Tanner in his estimate for the expense of the Pension Office for the coming year has made a calculation which is much nearer accurate than the bill now before the House. He says it will require one hundred and fourteen millions, and I believe he is correct. And I believe you will find a deficiency next year, when you come to consider your appropriation bills, greater than, or at least equal to, the difference between the bills and my amendment. Now, what should be done, and done for the veterans who saved the nation? Let us make provision for their care for all time to come. [Cries of "That's it!"] Let us make it in such a way that there can be no quibbling about it in the future. Let us pledge the internal-revenue taxes as they stand to-day to the credit of the pension fund of this country. The internal-revenue taxes of to-day are all that remain of the war taxes of the country. That tax was an absolute necessity as a war tax. The pension-roll as it exists to-day is a result of the war; it grew out of the war, and for myself I do not care if it takes the last dollar in the coffers of the United States. If it is necessary to extract the last dollar from your Treasury, I say take it and meet that obligation. And there is where the American people stand, in my judgment; the overwhelming majority of them, as well as the majority of the men on this side of the House, will be found occupying the same position.

Now, a service-pension bill is for all purposes the correct thing, for the reasons assigned by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHADLE] this morning. Do not place any man who has forfeited his health, or who lost a limb, or who suffered in many other ways in defense of this Union, under the necessity of taking the oath that he is a pauper, which is repulsive to every veteran as well as their friends.

Now, sir, there were 33,000 men on the pension-roll when Corporal Tanner took the office, that had been accumulating there for 24 years—33,000 who were receiving a less rate of pension than $4 per month. Corporal Tanner says less than $4 a month pension for a man who served the country on the field of battle, amid privations and dangers and the other things incident to the life of a soldier, is not adequate, and hence issued an order to put them on the roll at $4 a month. What did the Republican Administration do with it? How did they serve the veterans? Why they said that order must be revoked, and revoked it was. They did not commence by recalling the sums paid to the rerated men of the Pension Office; not one of them was changed or reduced. They carried off their swag, one of them to the extent of $8,000, I believe. To be sure, they removed a few, but they did not revoke the order rerating them. But when the order came rerating the poor soldiers from $1 to $4 a month, the Republican Administration was alive to the occasion, and then and at once struck the blow and placed them upon the pittance that had been previously accorded to them.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ENLOE].

Mr. ENLOE. Mr. Chairman, following in the same line of thought with the gentleman from Indiana and the gentleman from New York, who has just taken his seat, I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic has been reported in the papers of the day as going through the country and making speeches at the Grand Army camp-fires in all directions to the soldiers, in which he states that they must abandon all hope of getting a service pension through this Congress, because of the hostility of Eastern and Southern Representatives to the bill or because the Representatives from those sections are opposed to the measure.

Now, I want to call further attention to the fact that the Republican party has a Committee on Pensions which could report the arrears bill at any time, a committee which could report a service-pension bill at any time, a committee which could report the prison-pension bill any day they saw proper, but, notwithstanding this, they have not yet reported any one of these bills; but its Committee on Elections finds plenty of time to consider the voluminous records in contested-election cases and bring them before the House. And there is no lack on the part of the Republican party of power or time to consider these election cases and to elect a Republican who was defeated at the polls every day that they set for that purpose and to unseat a Democrat who was elected by the people to represent them on this floor.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Will you allow a question?

Mr. ENLOE. No, sir; I don't want any of your questions now, as my time is limited and I have other business in hand.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I only want to know if you would vote for either of these bills if reported.

Mr. ENLOE. I don't propose to discuss the bill now before the committee as I would like to do if time permitted. I suppose it will pass the House without objection. But I do propose to emphasize the point that an investigation of the Pension Office is needed. I have been working on this line for some time, and I have already called the attention of the House to a state of facts in connection with the administration of the Pension Office which calls for investigation at the hands of Congress.

Now, Mr. Chairman, since I made my speech the other day in reference to the resolution of inquiry I introduced early in the session, I have received additional evidence that it is necessary that an investigation should be made. I received a letter this morning which I will have read from the Clerk's desk, marked "personal." It is from a man who is credited with having written the many objectionable decisions promulgated by Mr. Bussey.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 20, 1890.

DEAR SIR: In your speech in the House the 11th instant, on the Tanner investigation and pensions, you referred to the ruling of Assistant Secretary Bussey in relation of a "dishonorable discharge" to a claim for pension, and your remarks demonstrated your total lack of information on the subject. The Assistant Secretary's ruling is in strict harmony with the precedents set by every Secretary of the Interior since and including Alexander H. H. Stuart—including each of the Democratic Secretaries since that time—and never disputed until General Black issued an order, written by a well known ignoramus in the Pension Office, upsetting an unbroken line of legal precedents. I inclose a copy of Bussey's ruling, which has been pronounced by several of the ablest lawyers in the land an unanswerable statement of the law. General Black set all of Tanner's bad rulings, and his administration, if investigated will make his record exceedingly disreputable.

Secretary Noble displayed the highest courage in bringing the irregularities of Black and Tanner to grief with promptitude and effectually.

Yours truly,

GEORGE BABER.

Hon. B. N. ENLOE,
House of Representatives.

Mr. ENLOE. I maintain, Mr. Chairman, that the author of this letter who volunteers to address me is not entitled to any protection on account of his effort to screen himself from criticism while he indulges in offensive criticism of my utterances on the floor of this House. It relates to a public and not to a personal matter, and if he was smarting under the criticism which fell from his superior and rested on him he should have either submitted in silence or he should have come out like an honorable man and made his offensive criticism in a public manner. He says my remarks demonstrated my "total lack of information on the subject" of Mr. Bussey's decision in relation of a dishonorable discharge to a claim for pension.

Now, if he had read my remarks before he assumed to criticize them he would have seen that I did not question the decision as a naked proposition of law, and so stated, but that I criticized his action in reversing a ruling which was intended to make the pension-roll a roll of honor, and not a record of dishonor. If he had been honest in his criticism he would have chosen some other ground, and if he had been as anxious to keep in harmony with the truth as he is to keep in harmony with this Administration he would have read my speech before he volunteered to criticize it.

I understand that he is or was a Democrat [laughter on the Republican side]—so represented or believed to be when he was serving under Commissioner Black, whose record he now assails. He says:

General Black set all Tanner's bad rulings and his administration, if investigated, will make his record exceedingly disreputable.

His statement, if it can be believed, only confirms what I have said as to the necessity for this investigation.

If an investigation would make General Black's administration appear disreputable, so be it; but if it is ordered, as I contend the facts demand, I hope the scope of it will be broad enough to show what part this bird, which befools its own nest, contributed to make that record disreputable. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

There are evidences all along the line that this investigation ought to be made. Some of the rulings in widows' cases deserve public attention. The widow of a New York colonel who was in the Pension Office drawing a salary of $1,200 a year applied for an increase under Commissioner Tanner. The facts were that the widow was drawing a small pension and had been since her husband's death, which occurred several years ago—disability, a headache resulting from his army service. One morning he was found floating in the Hudson River, his skull broken, and his pockets rifled, and upon that showing of facts his death or murder was attributed to his headache, and she was rerated and given $30 a month for life and $4,000 arrearages. I suppose she is still drawing the salary of $1,200 a year in the Pension Office.

Then there is the cart-wheel case, where a man was pensioned for a slight trouble of the heart, at $4 a month. He was found one day in his field with a cart-wheel standing upon his neck, and they called up his case, or rather his widow's case, and decided that the cart-wheel did not kill him, but that what he died of was heart disease, and so his widow was put on the roll.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to some decisions of a medical character down there. In one case it was decided that pneumonia was a pathological sequence of amputation of the arm. In another that a gunshot wound received in the big toe resulted in cerebral congestion fifteen years afterward; and so it was decided that was a pensionable case.

Mr. Chairman, I could go on and cite a number of these cases, but I have not time. I want to call attention to the statement made here by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] the other day about the railroad cases. He said that Commissioner Black set the precedent. I suppose that a full investigation would show that he was mistaken about that; but be that as it may, I asked him then, and ask him now, if under any former administration there was ever a case where any clerk of the Pension Office was allowed to pass on the medical and legal questions and to make up cases and pass them under the forty-eight-hour rule, as Thomas D. Yeager, of Pennsylvania, did in 110 cases?

Thomas D. Yeager was a $2,000 clerk in the Pension Office, and I am reliably informed that he took two hundred cases from the files, cases of George E. Lemon and Blocks-of-five Dudley, wrote the legal and medical opinions himself, though he was neither lawyer nor doctor, railroaded one hundred and ten of them through under the forty-eight-hour schedule, and would have passed the other ninety if he had not been detected by Dr. McMillan, who was appointed by Secretary of the Interior to check the robbery. Dr. McMillan wanted to meet the extraordinary doctor who prepared the medical opinions, and he found him in Yeager, the clerk, who to-day wears the belt as the champion railroad of pension cases under all administrations.

I would like to know where Thomas D. Yeager is to-day and whether he is still drawing his pay in the Pension Office.

There is not a farmer in this country who if he found the dogs set to guard the flocks killing his sheep, would have the breed on his place. He would kill the dogs and get a new breed.

No firm or individual or corporation would keep clerks or employes who had been caught increasing their salaries without the consent of their employer.

I maintain, sir, that the Government should apply the same principle, and not retain in its employ persons who took advantage of their positions in the Pension Office to renege and grant arrearsages to themselves.

When it is known that chiefs of division, clerks, members of the legal and medical boards, and all those who are appointed to protect the Treasury against unworthy and dishonest claimants have been engaged in renegeing themselves and each other, is it not time to order an investigation?

Let it be made. The honest soldiers of the country demand it. Let it be made. The tax-payers of the country demand it. Let it be made. Honesty, justice, and the facts demand it. Let it embrace the administration of the present Commissioner; and, if bad precedents and bad practices prevail, let it be known, so that they may be corrected, and not longer permit private jobbery and corruption to prey upon the Treasury under the protection and guise of generosity to the soldier. Let it embrace the administration of Commissioner Tanner, who was permitted to resign, by request, for trusting in the promises of princes.

Let it embrace Commissioner Black, who was charged by the gentleman from Kansas with being the wicked man who misled the unsophisticated Tanner. Let it embrace the administration of Blocks-of-five Dudley, who was distributing in Indiana the proceeds of contracts for the future delivery of Cabinet places, while Tanner was on the stump promising pensions to everybody, by the authority and at the request, as he alleges, of his Presidential candidate.

The country will demand this investigation into the methods of disbursing these immense appropriations which are growing and will continue to grow larger annually; and if this House refuses to order it a Democratic House will order it in the Fifty-second Congress.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, we once had a lawyer in Mississippi by the name of Joe Mullins who usually began his speeches in defending criminal cases by saying: "Gentlemen of the jury, I do not wish to militate against the majesty of the law, nor contravene the due avoirdupois of the testimony." [Laughter.] Now, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say in the outset that it is not my purpose to "militate" against the majesty of the achievements of the men who fought to save the Union, nor to "contravene the due avoirdupois" of the obligation of the Government to them.

No, sir; I am the last man to depreciate the efforts and achievements of the Union soldiery; to do so would belittle my own work, for, sir, involved in the task of putting down the Southern Confederacy was the task of putting me down [laughter], and that was a big contract of itself. [Laughter.] Of course, Mr. Chairman, I am sorry it was necessary to put me down, but I do take some pride in the fact that it required a great effort to do it. [Laughter.]

Sir, when I have listened to the figures that have been brought out in this debate, that there were 2,859,132 enlistments in the late war on the side of the Union (and I hold in my hand the estimate from the War Department that, excluding re-enlistments, there were 2,213,365 individuals who served in the war as enlisted men, and that that war cost $8,189,929,009); when I see that on the 1st day of January last there were 474,991 pensioners on the rolls growing out of the late war, besides those who have died and been dropped from the roll; and that there has been paid out in pensions $1,094,253,552.63 from July 1, 1861, to January 1, 1890, and that there are 460,370 more claims pending—when I see all this, and remember the untold resources and advantages this Government had in that war, with open communication with the rest of the world, and the valor and intrepid courage of those 2,213,365 enlisted men that must be conceded by all, and when I remember that the Confederates, cut off from the balance of the world, without the munitions of war, without a navy, without factories, with only 600,000 enlisted men all told, with no money except such as we could print, and with great difficulty to get printing-presses and paper on which to print it—considering all these things, Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me, as it must occur to you, that if we had had a "fair shake" in a clear field and a good cause we would have been a "mighty on-proper" crowd to "monkey with." [Great laughter and applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I believe it was the present Executive of this great nation who said that "in measuring out pensions to the soldiers of the late war no apothecary's scruples should be used." It is conceded, sir, that more than $100,000,000 will be paid out in pensions this fiscal year, more than $53,000,000 having been paid out the first half of the year. I do not think, sir, that any apothecary's scales are being used in this matter, but, sir, we are using the standard Fairbanks railroad-car scales [laughter], and yet we are told that we are not doing half enough; and some of my Democratic friends are vying with our Republican friends in insisting that measures shall be enacted here that shall increase this expenditure hundreds of millions of dollars.

In fact, the schemes now on foot and being urged on this Congress would involve expenditures almost without limit. It makes your head ache to calculate it. I want to say that I have no fault to find with the Republicans for any want of liberality to the soldiers. [Laughter.]

I know, Mr. Chairman, this is a great Government. It would be impossible to compute its worth in dollars and cents. Of course, sir, I feel mighty bad about having tried to destroy it [laughter]; but, sir, when I listen to the demands as made in the name of the soldiers for saving it and see the disposition to comply with those demands on the part of members on this floor, I think sometimes we had best stop and have an accounting, and see if we had best try to pay the thing out or let the Grand Army of the Republic take it. [Laughter.]

I listened with interest to-day to my friend from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] in his appeal in behalf of the soldiers. There is a bond of sympathy between brother CHEADLE and me: we were both private. [Laughter.] I believe he is honest and believes in what he says. I do not doubt that he was a good soldier, and I know something of how close a real soldier feels to his comrades; but I noticed in the morning paper that the S. x o'Clock Club met in this city last night and the distinguished personages present were required to confess on what subjects they were cranks. Now, if my friend CHEADLE had been there and had made an honest confession he would have said he was a crank on the subject of pensions. [Laughter.]

I am not going to take issue with him about our obligations to the soldiers. He and I agree perfectly about that; the difference between us is in how the obligations are to be discharged. It probably grows out of a difference in temperament. I am very sentimental, while he seems to be quite practical. I believe in paying off these obligations partly in honor, while he wants it all in cold cash. [Great laughter and applause.] I have taken occasion once before to warn you gentlemen who saved the Union, and I now repeat the warning, that if you do not hold up on this business of paying yourselves for your expenditure of patriotism during the war the first thing you know the country will not owe you anything. [Laughter.] I do not want this done; I want to reserve up some of this debt of gratitude to talk about on Fourth of July occasions. [Laughter.]

The gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW], in charge of this bill, informs us that he thinks we will reach the limit in 1894; that we may expect increases until then, but that by that time the increases will stop. Mr. Chairman, I must confess to being somewhat skeptical about these predictions. To show how unreliable they are, and how wild some of our friends have gone on this subject, I will call your attention again to the speech of the late President, General James A. Garfield, to which the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CLEMENTS] made reference in his remarks to-day. On this floor, on the 7th day of December, 1876, General Garfield, in discussing the pension appropriation bill for that session, which carried $28,533,000 said:

My idea is, if gentlemen will allow me, that we have reached and perhaps passed the summit of appropriations for this object; that it took a number of years to develop and get through with regular form of laws to admit to the rolls the persons entitled to pensions, and that the time must necessarily come when we shall pass the climax and begin to go downward. I suppose we have already reached the maximum.

Now, sir, this was the statement of a gallant Union general, high in the councils of his party; a man thoroughly conversant with the performances of the Union soldiery. You can see that at that time it had never entered into the mind of any one that this pension business would ever go to the extent to which it has already gone, and yet the clamor is louder for increases to-day than ever before.

I want to submit one suggestion just here about pensions, and that is that, aside from the hardship it imposes on those who have to pay them, and who do not receive them in return, I do not believe that indiscriminate pensions are a good thing, even for those who receive them. I have been a soldier myself, and I have gone home with my comrades, all of whom were necessarily thrown on their own resources, and I have seen them go to work—men with wounds, one arm or one leg gone—and they have made good citizens, have made a living and reared and educated their families; they are not in the poorhouses, nor have I ever seen or known of one of them begging his bread.

Gentle war in the censure to case of the but I do cess, and system.

[Here Mr. BRECKINRIDGE remains in Mississippi.]

Mr. ALLEN

[Mr. BRECKINRIDGE remains in Mississippi.]

Mr. CLEMENTS

those gentlemen come up great distress addressed will come

The Farmer in Congress the State.

"We call Kansas no 1,800 homes the hands pages is in farms and for this esp many part scenes of c people are almost aga

And ag

"The di very many less urgent families de as colored white and afford to w struggle fo been chose

I wish all is not condition for fuel, a in Kansas agricultur for the fa

Now, w They say heard of distress a

Let me get no pe in my dis last year.

many har who did n by no fan

The genti this great so, for ou

We buy t

Mr. CH

the Fiftie

ducers of this coun ton they l they have brought b has kept

gold, and cial histor not to be

Then, M

portions of them. W

Congress, give some you that c country, a mand their heed their

I have

Gentlemen tell us that there are 20,000 Union soldiers of the late war in the poor-houses. I have no criticisms to make and I do not censure them for being poor; it is no disgrace. Nor do I mention the case of the Confederate soldiers as an argument against any pension, but I do believe that the pensioning business can be carried to an excess, and to where it will not be best even for the beneficiaries of the system. We all know that self-reliance is a great thing to develop and sustain human character.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I believe I have thirteen minutes remaining. I yield five minutes more to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. I thank the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BRECKINRIDGE]. The main object I had in addressing the committee to-day was to make some suggestions in reference to the position of my Kansas friends, Messrs. PERKINS, PETERS, and FUNSTON. Mr. CLEMENTS has already read you from the Washington Post what those gentlemen have had to say in reference to the wail of woe that comes up from the oppressed farmers of Kansas. It seems there is great distress among them. I give some extracts from an open letter addressed to the Congressional delegation from that State.

WILL CONGRESS HEARKEN?—KANSAS FARMERS ASK TO BE DELIVERED FROM MORTGAGE SHARKS.

TOPEKA, KANS., March 17.

The Farmers' Alliance has addressed an open letter to the Kansas delegation in Congress demanding legislation for the relief of the agricultural interests of the State. The letter says:

"We call attention to the fact that a single law firm in one city in Southern Kansas now has the contract for the foreclosure of 1,800 mortgages. This means 1,800 homesteads transferred from the hands of so many industrious families to the hands of capitalists, either domestic or foreign. The foreclosure of the mortgages is in accordance with a preconceived purpose to gain possession of these farms and people them with a more servile tenantry imported from foreign lands for this especial purpose. Foreclosure and evictions are taking place in very many parts of the State, and we need not go all the way to Europe to witness scenes of cruelty in matters of this kind. All over the State the homes of our people are imperiled. They are struggling against adverse circumstances, and almost against hope, to sustain themselves until relief shall come.

And again:

"The distress of the people is crying aloud for relief. They believe that very many of the questions that are receiving the attention of Congress are far less urgent than those upon which the safety of their homes and welfare of their families depend. They believe that the white citizens have some rights as well as colored citizens of the South. They believe that the valiant heroes, both white and black, who fought for liberty and perpetuating our institutions, can afford to wait for one moment until the rights of our live heroes in the present struggle for American homes receive some recognition by the men who have been chosen to represent them in Congress."

I wish I could give the whole letter, but this will suffice to show that all is not lovely in Kansas. It is indeed, Mr. Chairman, a distressing condition of affairs with these people who are to-day burning their corn for fuel, and I am sorry to say these alarming conditions do not exist in Kansas alone, but they pertain to a distressing extent to almost every agricultural community in this country, and I want to say a few words for the farmers.

Now, what is the remedy prescribed by these three gentlemen named? They say the remedy is more liberal pensions. Now, sir, who ever heard of such a proposition—that pensions are to be voted to relieve distress among the farmers?

Let me ask the gentlemen what those farmers are going to do who get no pensions, but who have to help to pay them? Take the farmers in my district, where, by no fault of theirs, they had a failure of crops last year. They are taxed to pay pensions, but do not get any. Take many hard-working and deserving people, as are to be found anywhere, who did not last year make enough to pay rent and taxes, and, as I say, by no fault of theirs; what would the gentlemen do for their relief? The gentleman from Kansas should remember that we are a part of this great country, and if other sections ignore us they ought not to do so, for our people are among their best customers for their products. We buy their corn, their meat, hay, and mules.

Mr. Chairman, I took occasion in my great tariff speech [laughter] in the Fiftieth Congress to call attention to the rights of the cotton producers of the South by reason of their contributions to the wealth of this country. I can furnish the statistics to show that, besides the cotton they have furnished our own manufacturers in the United States, they have exported more than 100,000,000 bales since the war that has brought back money enough to pay the whole cost of the war. This has kept the balance of trade in our favor, filled our Treasury with gold, and enabled this Government in a most critical period of its financial history to resume specie payment. I insist that their rights are not to be ignored.

Then, Mr. Chairman, there are many poor people of Kansas and other portions of the North who will get no pensions, but will be taxed to pay them. What relief do gentlemen propose for them? I do want this Congress, if it can take the time from the other schemes before it, to give some attention to relieving agriculture of its burdens, and I warn you that the farming and laboring classes are organizing all over the country, and I do hope they will have the courage and judgment to demand their rights and then to make it warm for those who refuse to heed their demands.

I have here some extracts from the speeches of those three gentlemen

[Messrs. PERKINS, PETERS, and FUNSTON], made during the discussion of the Mills bill in the Fiftieth Congress. We were then demanding relief for the farmer, were insisting on a reduction of taxation. We wanted the money left with the people; but what did these gentlemen then tell us? Mr. PERKINS, in speaking of agricultural depression, charged it to Cleveland's Administration, and of course led us to believe that a change would remedy the evil.

Here is what he said:

We know that from Mr. Cleveland's inauguration until the present time agricultural products have declined until, as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Wilson] said the other day, there is no profit to-day to the farmer in the cultivation of the field, and, in order that this condition of affairs may continue, we now are asked to strike down a system of legislation which in the past gave the country its wonderful prosperity. We believe in contributing to the happiness and prosperity of the people rather than see the industries and trade of the country prostrated and its people made poor and miserable.

Mr. PETERS read with some pardonable pride the following resolution of a county convention in his district to show us the farmers were prosperous and happy. The same was greeted with loud applause on the Republican side:

Sixth. We look with pride upon the tariff laws of our country which have made us the greatest nation on earth; which has furnished us an industrial system which pays better wages to labor than is paid anywhere else; which furnishes a better market for the product of our farms, forests, and mines, and which are to-day the foundation of so much prosperity and happiness, and we demand such just protective laws as shall insure to our whole people a continuance of a stable and settled financial condition, and we endorse the able efforts of the Hon. S. R. PETERS who is laboring so manfully in behalf of the people to prevent the majority in the present Congress from opening the doors of commerce and forcing our laborers to compete with the poorly paid labor of Europe.

[Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PETERS said:

The idea that has been croaked from the White House and echoed by almost every Democratic throat that we have too much revenue is a false pretense and a fraud.

And these are the remarks of Mr. FUNSTON:

Why all these tears for the farmer?

Again:

I want to say to you, gentlemen, the farmers are asking none of your sympathy.

This is good reading in the light of present conditions. Here it is again:

The farmer is not dead to his interests. He knows better perhaps where they lie than the men who are assuming to champion his cause; but little, if any, complaint comes from him of the high prices alleged to have arisen by reason of the tariff. Of all the petitions that have reached my table in the last four years not one has come from a farmer asking a reduction of the tariff on wool or any other article.

Here it is again:

Thanks, gentlemen. Restrain your sympathy; bestow it where it will be more appropriate and better appreciated.

He ever denies us the privilege of sympathizing with the Kansas farmer.

Hear him again:

The farmers of my district believe that under our system they are getting a good market for their products which fully compensates them for every extra cent they may possibly have to pay for their lumber.

It seems to me this will be at this time very interesting reading for the "Kansas corn-burner" as he sits by his corn fire. I hope he will not refuse us the right to sympathize with him, for I do from the bottom of my heart. But I should think he would wonder where those compensating markets are when he can not sell his corn at 10 cents per bushel. The gentleman can no longer say the farmers are not complaining; they are not prosperous and happy as they deserve to be. They are waking up to a realization of their condition and to the tricks that have been played on them.

I hope their Representatives will wake up also. If they do not, I intend to champion the cause of the Kansas farmers as well as the rest of the farmers in this country. My platform is: Lower taxes for the farmer; more money for his use, both greenback and silver, and cheaper money to pay his debts with; and a graduated income tax, so that the rich of the country who have been the beneficiaries of so much of the legislation of Congress shall bear some of the burdens of the Government. We live under a system of Federal taxation where the rich get the benefits and the poor pay the taxes.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I believe I have eight minutes remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. Seven.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN].

The CHAIRMAN (after a pause). To whom does the gentleman from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I meant to yield to the gentleman from Indiana; but I understand he prefers to speak in the five-minute debate.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to publish in the RECORD a letter which I received from the present Commissioner of Pensions.

I have nothing to add to the general debate; I did not intend to take part in it. I am in favor, as I had occasion to say on this floor four years ago, of a liberal pension system; but I am opposed to the abuses of that system, and I am opposed to making it a great political machine. I am in favor of treating the subject of pensions as a business matter, giving to the soldier a fair pension based upon the logical ground that his service to the Republic entitles him to have made up to him or his family a money equivalent which may take the place of that which was lost in the service; that is, if the soldier was killed, his widow and children should have a sum of money which shall be somewhat an equivalent for what he would have earned for them if he had survived; that if he is disabled he shall have a fair money equivalent for the difference between the earning power if he had come out of the Army undischarged and the earning power he has under the casualties of war. All else seems to me, saying it with great respect, to be either sentimentality, which uses other people's money for its gratification, or political legislation for the purpose of buying political power with the public Treasury. And to that I am opposed.

I believe this enormous annual appropriation must increase. I believe my friend from California [Mr. MORROW] is mistaken. I do not see how it is to reach its maximum in 1894. According to my calculation it will not reach it during this century, and at the end of the half century of 1950 we will have a pension-roll of large proportions.

Mr. MORROW. Can I say a word?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Certainly.

Mr. MORROW. The gentleman's statement was quite correct, but he will bear in mind that my reply was as to the effect under existing law.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Then under existing law, if we do not pass any other law, we would have a pension-roll lasting for sixty years, for it will be remembered the widow takes the place of the pensioner, and it is demonstrated by the fact that on the present pension-roll are widows of the war of the Revolution and survivors and widows of the war of 1812; that the widows' pension-roll lasts much longer than the pensioners' pension-roll.

The letter from General Raum hereto appended shows that there have been granted pensions on account of the late war up to January 1, 1890, 730,474, and that there were then pending applications 258,325, and there had been rejected 146,752, making an aggregate of applications 1,135,751, or about one application for every two soldiers actually enlisted during that war.

We may well expect that at least 600,000 more applications will be filed, and that of those pending (258,325), those rejected (146,752) but entitled to be reopened, and when reopened adjudicated under the principles set out in the fantastic and grotesque decisions of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior (General Bussey), and of those to be filed (600,000), an aggregate of 1,005,272, perhaps 80 percent, will be granted; that is, 804,221, or more than has been issued up to January 1, 1890. So that, without any new legislation, increased rates, or giving service-pensions, we may reasonably expect the pension-roll to be augmented every year for many years.

The pension-roll is and for a half century will continue to be a mortgage on the industries of the country. We can borrow money at 3 per cent. If we were to fund the principal that at 3 per cent. would realize a hundred millions it would be $3,300,000,000; this is practically our funded "war debt" for the next quarter of a century. We will need more than one hundred millions every year for that quarter of a century. Let us look it squarely in the face. It must be borne by those who were not of the generation which fought the war and be paid by those who toil for a living.

I have nothing to say about the issue between the Administration and Corporal Tanner. Nor do I intend to say anything unkind of him or harsh of his conduct in the Pension Office. The gallantry of his service and the sad and pathetic evidence of that gallantry render it impossible for one who served on the other side to say an unkind word. Nor is there any evidence that he did not discharge his duty as best he knew how. That he did discharge it extravagantly and unwisely is probably true. It may be that he was a victim to his misplaced confidence in the professions of his own party. But I have no attack to make on him nor any criticism to offer on the management of his successor.

What has been done as to the rating of employes or others, or what favoritism may have been shown to certain pension agents, is not known with sufficient accuracy to justify any statement. And it is due to fairness to say that as to the present Commissioner, I have not heard or seen anything that is not proper. He is evidently a man of unusual administrative ability, and, I shall assume, desires to do his duty.

There ought to be a full and complete annual investigation of all its action. That there have been many fraudulent pensions all know; that there have been scandals is freely charged.

So, too, we ought to eliminate politics from our discussions of pension bills. This day may never come. If not, there will come a day of revolt.

But I do say as a representative of the people that there ought to be a stricter supervision over and more critical reviews of the Pension Office; that the sensitiveness which keeps us from investigating it, which has made it sacred, which has every time it has been under discussion made persons avoid any criticism of it, is unwise, timid, and unpatriotic. Where $100,000,000 passes under the control of a bureau, when it has examiners in every part of the country, when it is capable of being used as an immense and powerful political machine, when every dollar that is spent comes out of the labor of the productive classes who do not receive pensions nor adequate reward for their labor and are seeking relief, when every widow who receives a pension is paid out of the earnings of the widows who receive no pension, it is our bounden duty to see that the Pension Office is conducted with a clear regard to the business matters committed to it, that it is frequently examined, and that all its acts be performed in open daylight.

The following is the letter referred to in Mr. BRECKINRIDGE'S remarks:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER, BUREAU OF PENSIONS,
Washington, D. C., March 17, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 15th instant, asking for certain statistical information from the records of this bureau, and in response I have to state as follows:

Your first question asks for the entire number of pensions on account of the war of 1861 granted up to January 1, 1890, and the number of such pensioners on the rolls on that day. The total number of pensions granted from 1861 to June 30, 1889, growing out of causes which originated in the war of 1861, was 703,489. Between July 1, 1889, and December 31, 1889, 26,985 of such pensions were granted, making a total to January 1, 1890, of 730,474 allowances of all classes of late war pensions.

On the last day of January, 1890, there was a total of 474,991 late war pensioners of all classes on the pension-rolls.

Your second question asks for the aggregate sum paid to such (late war) pensioners up to January 1, 1890. Up to a comparatively recent date the amount disbursed for pensions and the cost of such disbursement were not separated in the reports made on this subject, so that it is difficult to determine the exact amount paid to pensioners as distinguished from the total amount expended out of the different pension appropriations. Up to June 30, 1889, it appears that $1,052,218,413.17 were expended from the pension appropriations from 1861 up to that date. Between July 1, 1889, and January 1, 1890, $53,063,130.73 were expended in payment of all classes of pensions. Both of these amounts, however, included the disbursements to pensioners of the war of 1812 and the war with Mexico, $38,459,593.39 having been paid between 1871 and January 1, 1890, to the war of 1812 pensioners, and $6,217,833.42 to Mexican war pensioners from January, 1887, to January 1, 1890. Eliminating the sum of these two factors, or $44,677,426.81, from the grand total of expenditures up to January 1, 1890, it will be found that as nearly as can now be determined there has been expended since July 1, 1861, for late war pensions, $1,060,694,117.09.

Your third question asks for the number of persons now on the pension-roll on account of the war of the Revolution, on account of the war of 1812, and on account of the Mexican war. On the last day of January, 1890, there were 27 persons on the pension-roll on account of the war of the Revolution; there were 9,860 pensioners on account of the war of 1812, and 23,568 Mexican war pensioners.

The number (27) of the Revolutionary war pensioners is so small that no separate accounting is kept of them. They are, however, included in the 474,991 late war pensioners reported in this letter because they are paid from the same appropriation. The grand total of pensioners on the rolls January 1, 1890, was 508,419.

Your fourth question asks for the present number of pending applications. I presume you refer to late war applications. By an actual count made December 28, 1889, it appeared that there were on that date pending in this office of late war claims, invalids, 182,955; widows and others, 75,370; total, 258,325. It is also proper to state that on the same date there were upon the rejected files of this bureau the following cases: Invalids, 99,878; widows and others, 47,074; total, 146,952.

RECAPITULATION.

Number of late war pensions granted up to January 1, 1890.....	730,474
Number of late war pensioners on the rolls January 1, 1890.....	474,991
Approximate aggregate amount paid to late war pensioners from 1861 to January 1, 1890.....	$1,060,694,117.09
Number of persons on the pension-rolls on account of the war of the Revolution.....	27
Number of pensioners of the war of 1812, January 1, 1890.....	9,860
Number of Mexican war pensioners January 1, 1890.....	23,568
Grand total of pensioners, January 1, 1890.....	508,419
Number of applications for late war pensions pending January 1, 1890.....	258,325
Number of late war claims on rejected files January 1, 1890.....	146,952

Very respectfully,

GREEN B. RAUM,
Commissioner of Pensions.

HON. W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE,
House of Representatives.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. By agreement five minutes was to be given to my friend from California [Mr. MORROW] to close the debate.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I will briefly reply to one or more suggestions made on the other side of the House.

In the first place, as to the removal of Corporal Tanner from the position of Commissioner of Pensions. When he went into that office he found a great Government machine in full operation under the law. It was impossible for him to examine into all the details of pension business and ascertain whether or not every case which was passed upon was determined exactly according to law.

He found, if he made an examination—or, whether he did or not, it was a fact—that there had been established the practice of rating employes of the office as well as others. Whether it was correct or not, the fact existed that the rating of the employes of the Pension Office was going on; and we have here a statement or list of ten names for the six months ending March 27, the date when Commissioner Black left the office and Tanner became Commissioner.

Now, how much rating went on during the preceding three and a half years of Commissioner Black's control of the office we do not know. We have not asked to know. We simply ask that there should be a report that should furnish a comparison between the six months of Mr. Tanner's administration of the office and a like time during the administration of Mr. Black.

This statement shows that during Mr. Black's tenure of office and during the six months to which reference is made there were 1,118 cases of rerating, and of this number ten were employes of the Pension Office. This statement further shows that the value of the pensions so rerated was $150,288.70, that the value of the reratings after such rerating was $191,423, and that the total amount of such rerating paid by the office at that time was $548,140.36. Against that we find that under Commissioner Tanner there were rerated 1,396 cases, of which 46 were employes of the office, a larger number, it is true, than were rerated during the previous six months; but if it was wrong at all it was wrong during General Black's term and the offense in Tanner was a question of degree. We do not say it was right. We do say that the matter was brought to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior, who sent word to Commissioner Tanner that he must call a halt; that the practice of adjudicating such claims must proceed in regular order, and the fault was that he did not obey the direction of his superior, the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman from California inform the committee how it was brought to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior and the President?

Mr. MORROW. How what was brought to the attention of the Secretary?

Mr. SAYERS. The rerating. How was this rerating of the men employed in the Pension Bureau brought to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior and the President?

Mr. MORROW. It does not appear and I do not know. I am not sure that I can answer the gentleman's question. But an appeal lies from the Commissioner of Pensions to the Secretary of the Interior, and I suppose that probably in the course of official business it reached his attention.

Mr. SAYERS. Would not the supposition be more probable that it was originally brought to the attention of the President and the Secretary of the Interior by the press of the country?

Mr. MORROW. Oh, I do not know; but I think not.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I have had, of course, the five-minute extension by the courtesy of the committee, but trust that I will have an opportunity to extend my remarks on this point in the RECORD.

Mr. McMILLIN. The gentleman can make a pro forma amendment if he desires to do so at this time and continue his remarks.

Mr. MORROW. Five minutes additional would scarcely serve my purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the first section of the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for other purposes, namely:

For Army and Navy pensions, as follows: For invalids, widows, minor children, and dependent relatives, survivors, and widows of the war of 1812 and with Mexico, $97,090,761: *Provided, That the appropriation aforesaid for Navy pensions shall be paid from the income of the Navy pension fund, so far as the same may be sufficient for that purpose: And provided further, That the amount expended under each of the above items shall be accounted for separately: And provided further, That hereafter a check or checks drawn by a pension agent in payment of pension due, and mailed by him to the address of a pensioner, shall constitute payment within the meaning of section 4765, Revised Statutes, in the event of the death of a pensioner subsequent to the mailing and before the receipt of said check; and the amount which may have accrued on the pension of any pensioner subsequent to the last quarterly payment on account thereof and prior to the death of such pensioner shall in the case of a husband be paid to his widow, or if there be no widow to his surviving minor children or the guardian thereof, and in the case of a widow to her minor children: *Provided further, That hereafter whenever a pension certificate shall have been issued and the pensioner mentioned therein dies before payment shall have been made, leaving no widow and no surviving minor children, the accrued pension due on said certificate to the date of the death of said pensioner may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be paid to the legal representatives of said pensioner.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 36 insert:

"And provided further, The Commissioner of Pensions in his report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, shall show separately the total disbursements from July 1, 1861, to June 30, 1891, to pensioners of the war of the Revolution, of the war of 1812 with Great Britain, and of the war with Mexico, and the late civil war and of the Indian wars; and also the number of pensions granted between said dates because of said wars; and also the number of pensioners of said wars respectively whose names have been stricken out from the rolls between and including the said dates because of their having fraudulently and improperly obtained pensions, together with the amounts disbursed to them during the time their names were upon the roll; and also the number of persons to whom arrears will have been paid under the acts of January 23 and March 3, 1873, to the said 20th day of June, 1891, from their dates of passage, together with the sum total of the arrears so paid."

Mr. HOLMAN. I reserve the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to state briefly the effect of the amendment, which is that it will tend only to furnish information to Congress which is desirable in the preparation of these bills. I have purposely required that this report shall only be made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, so as not to impede the current operations of the Pension Office and to give the office ample time to furnish information called for in the amendment. I think it will be beneficial to Congress and to the country.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana reserves the point of order.

Mr. BROSIUS. Mr. Chairman, to one untrained in the modes of procedure here this discussion has a strange and somewhat unique appearance. The first purpose of debate is the elucidation of the question. But I have listened in vain for some sign, some hint, however remote, of a connection between this discussion and the bill before us. The link seems to be missing and I am not Darwinian enough to find it. It is an appropriation bill and it carries the flag with it. Now, I do not know anybody that is opposed to the appropriation, and I can not explain the apparent opposition on the other side unless it is to the flag part of it. It seems very like the debate the slave had with his master, of which he said to his friend, "Massa say sunshine good for punkins, and I say so too, an' we 'sputed about it for one hour." We say this bill ought to pass, and our friends on the other side say so too, and we have "sputed about it" two days. It seems a sort of a field occasion with no enemy in sight, discipline lax, the whole army at rout step, and every man privileged to aim his musket where he pleases. My honorable friend from Texas drew from the strings the true note of the occasion when he said he had an opportunity to make a speech and he was going to embrace it. And he made a good one, an exceedingly good one. On a proper occasion it would have been grandly effective. Had there been an enemy before him and his cartridges not been mostly blank he would have produced enormous havoc. The field would have resembled that described in heroic verse:

With copious slaughter all the field was red,
Piled with growing mountains of the dead.

Still, I desire to pay my distinguished friend the tribute of my sincere admiration of the extreme pains he has taken to inform our minds upon the secrets (open ones) of the administration of the Pension Department. He has made the House his debtor for the information he has brought, which, but for the fact of its previous publication in various reports and documents, we would not have been able to obtain without his aid. He seems to be charged with the duty of finding some defects in the present administration of the Pension Department and some delinquencies in those connected therewith. He was in a measure successful. Whether the game was worth the powder he must decide, but I submit with great deference that the caliber of the gun was hardly justified by the smallness of the object shot. It is a waste to train a 30-pounder Parrott gun on a woodchuck.

Since he entered the field like a knight-errant in quest of adventures, he ought to have been more successful in finding them. Don Quixote, the valiant knight of La Mancha, greatly excelled him in this interesting and exciting field of employment. I would naturally expect in view of the magnitude of the pension business of this country, the fabulous number of applicants, the colossal piles of papers, and the legion of clerks required to handle them that some serious delinquencies might be discovered by a man with a keen eye looking close enough to the ground, due to the infirmities of human nature, which might have cropped out here and there among so large an aggregation of people, selected without the aid of the "fairy's mirror" to test their moral qualities.

I think my honorable friend from Texas ought to be chastised a little for not finding more subjects of complaint. He will excuse me for being reminded of an incident a friend told me of in military life. A soldier took offense at some act of his captain, and drawing a revolver and pointing it at the face of the officer pulled the trigger. The pistol missed fire, whereupon the superior officer, who was also a superior disciplinarian, ordered the mutinous soldier under arrest for one month for not keeping his arms in better condition. Now, my distinguished friend will pardon me for saying that his pistol missed fire. He ought to have had it in better condition.

But the greatness of his exertions and the smallness of their results make it demonstrably clear that there is not much to complain of in the pension administration. And when the little was discovered we did not cover it up and leave it to be unearthed by a succeeding administration, but we summoned it with commendable promptitude to the test of investigation and administered a prompt and effective corrective. My honorable friend has made us again his debtor for this contribution to the credit of the administration.

But now, directing attention to a portion of the remarks of my friend from Texas, I beg to suggest that no comparison of the cost of the several wars in which we have unhappily been engaged, and the number of soldiers mustered in each, and the length of the pension-rolls consequent upon each, though presented with all the effectiveness which comes with fine address and elaborate and eloquent statement, could help an argument in support of any proposition which subjects our pension system to a test as to its methods, its rectitude, or the integrity of those upon its rolls. The conditions were too dissimilar to enable a just comparison to be made. We have a large pension-roll because our friends, the Confederates, shot a great many of us. They were better marksmen than we ever thought they were, and we could not keep out of the way of their bullets. Somebody shot a great many of us several times. They were not content with making one hole apiece in us, but they made many in some of us, and we would have to be pensioned many times to keep even.

Of course they did not hit us every time and sometimes they hit us where they missed us before. It cost them a great deal of lead to kill one Yankee. It used to be said that in war it took a man's weight in lead to kill him. Only a few out of the whole number of shots fired in the heat of battle take effect.

Marshal Saxe, says an exchange, first made the assertion which forms the base of the above, when he said it would take 125 pounds of lead and 33 pounds of powder to put each of the enemy in the long trench. Wild and visionary as this may seem, it appears that there was more truth than poetry in the remark. With all the improvements which have been made in the art of war since the days of Saxe, Cassendi, the French savant, proves that the great marshal's philosophical remark still holds good.

At the battle of Solferino, according to Cassendi's carefully deduced calculations, a comparison of the number of shots fired on the Austrian side with the number of killed and wounded on the part of the enemy shows that 700 bullets were expended for each man wounded and 4,200 for each man killed. The average weight of the ball used was 30 grains; therefore it must have taken at least 126 kilograms or 227 pounds of lead for each man killed.

Yet Solferino was a most important and bloody battle. In the Franco-Prussian war the slaughter caused by the needle-gun among the French soldiers shows how much superior that gun is to the Austrian carbine; yet with that deadly weapon 1,300 shots were fired for every soldier destroyed in the enemy's ranks. Verily there was good foundation for Bogert's ungrammatical remark: "War is awful, but the noise of war is awfuller." I may say, parenthetically, that I consent to the use of this interesting data by my honorable friend from Texas in his next speech to show that there can not be so many honest pensioners when it took so much lead to make one.

I may add, I hope without offense, that the noise of the Confederate soldier was exceedingly awful. When we heard that appalling yell it caused such dismay in our ranks that we ran pell-mell onto their lines and routed them.

But our friends the enemy never missed us when they could hit us. The waste of lead was wholly unintentional on their part. They meant to kill; that was their function, and it turned out to be almost their only solace. I have heard somewhere of a Confederate soldier who derived much comfort from that consolation. He said one day to a friend that he admitted that he was whipped, but he had the consolation of knowing that he had killed as many of the Yankees as they had killed of him. Now, they ought not to complain that we are on the pension-roll, for they put us there. I stoutly maintain that there are two classes of people in this country who ought not to complain of the number of our pensioners: 1. Those who made them. 2. Those in whose service they were made. South and North should give their united assent to a liberal pension system.

There is one thing my honorable friend in his zeal for knightly adventure overlooks. He would have done himself the justice to withhold his comparison of the losses of our earlier wars with those of the last one, had he thought how much more destructive military and naval armaments are now than in former years, and how much larger a per cent. of those engaged are killed or wounded. Our losses in the late war were greater than in any other war of modern times and we have a correspondingly large pension-list.

The greatest loss of killed in battle of any one regiment during the late war fell to the lot of the First Maine Heavy Artillery, in which 423 were killed or died of wounds. In their assault on Petersburg June 18, 1864, they lost 604 in killed and wounded in twenty minutes, out of 900 engaged. The next largest number of killed is found in the Eighth New York Heavy Artillery, which lost 361 killed and died of wounds.

The infantry regiment that sustained the greatest loss in battle was the Fifth New Hampshire, which lost in killed and died of wounds 295.

The second infantry regiment in numerical loss was the Eighty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers. Its loss was 282 killed and died of wounds.

The Fifth Wisconsin Infantry lost 753 killed and wounded.

The One hundred and fortieth Pennsylvania Volunteers lost 732 killed and wounded.

If we consider the losses in certain engagements the per cent. is appalling.

The Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers at Gettysburgh lost 55 killed out of 258 present at morning roll-call.

The Fifth New York Duryea Zouaves at Manassas lost 117 killed out of 490 present for duty, and had 221 wounded besides.

The Sixth United States Colored Troops at New Market Heights lost 61 killed and 142 wounded out of 367.

The Twenty-fourth Michigan Volunteers went into the first day's fight at Gettysburgh with 496 men, and lost 79 killed and 237 wounded. But the most remarkable instance of all is that of the First Minnesota Infantry at Gettysburgh. Two hundred and fifty-two men all told went into action, and when they retired from the encounter only 47 were clustered around their colors, while 205 lay dead or wounded on the field.

These figures will be better appreciated if compared with some of the greatest losses cited in the histories of other wars. The Light Brigade at Balaklava lost 36 per cent. The heaviest loss in the Franco-Prussian war was 49 per cent. The One hundred and forty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers at Gettysburgh lost 76 per cent., while 60 per cent. was quite common both in the Union and Confederate armies.

With the energetic destructiveness of Confederate weapons of war they had that other kind of energy which Motley so finely describes "as never losing its value and which remains the same in every age, the machinery by which stout hearts act directly upon willing hands." And those hands I may add, and I do so with pleasure, were quite willing to put us on the pension-roll, if not above it. Then it must be remembered that in war death and injury sweep upon us with two wings: disease is one, the casualties of the field the other. The Union Army was composed largely of young men, many of them mere boys.

Soft and susceptible to the conditions which invite disease, subjected to every form of exposure and hardship, employed in every kind of work in every possible situation—they were wood-choppers on the southern coast, lumbermen on the St. Mary's, dock-builders at Port Royal, bridge-builders wherever water flowed, sappers on Morris Island, engineers at Hilton Head, miners at Petersburg, and soldiers everywhere—they were the constant prey of "the pestilence that walketh in the darkness," fevers generated in the malarial districts, rheumatism caused by exposure to damp and cold, and a myriad of ailments, all invited by exhaustion and exposure.

In some sections of the South there were times when one-fourth of the entire commands were under treatment. Disease killed twice as many as the bullet and the bayonet. Similarly, it may be said, it wounded a hundred times as many; wounds unseen, perhaps unfelt, for years; insidious, subtle, hiding away in nerve, muscle, brain, heart, tissue, and bone; seeds of decay planted in the constitution weakened by the stress and strain of the service, germs of infirmity sown in the system in the swamps of the Carolinas, the sands of Florida, the mud of Virginia, or in the heat and flame of the deadly encounter, when nerve and brain and heart were subjected to strains from which they never entirely recovered. And these seeds and germs, like grains of wheat preserved in an Egyptian mummy, after many years bloom and fruit in ailments, as varied as the flowers of a garden, which disable and disqualify for any of the bread-winning pursuits of life.

When that stage in the progress of growing infirmity is reached there are but three ways for the soldier to go: One leads to the bosom of private charity, one to the public almshouse or a soldiers' home, the other to a pension-roll. Which way shall he take? Let a saved nation answer.

To show how greatly disease exceeds the bullet in the destructive functions of war and to give a hint at the cost of preserving this Union, I append the following statement.

A part of the cost of preserving the Federal Union.

UNION LOSSES.
Casualties.	Officers.	Men.	Aggregate.
Killed or died of wounds.....	6,365	103,673	110,038
Died of disease.....	2,795	221,791	224,586
Drowned.....	106	4,838	4,944
Other accidental deaths.....	142	3,972	4,114
Killed after capture.....	14	85	99
Committed suicide.....	26	365	391
Executed.....		267	267
Executed by enemy.....	4	60	64
Died from sunstroke.....	6	308	314
Other known causes.....	62	1,972	2,034
Causes not stated.....	25	12,093	12,118
Total.....	9,584	349,912	359,496

This you will agree was an awful cost, yet the outcome was worth it all. It established the nationality of the Union. It made us a nation of freemen, and started us on a career of development and prosperity that enabled us to fling off our war debt, as a bird molts its feathers, without being conscious of a struggle in doing so, and to build up our resources, increase our wealth, and provide the means of extending a liberal hand to those who made it possible for the Republic to win the plaudits of the world for the incomparable splendor of its achievements.

Why do gentlemen despairingly inquire "Where is the money to come from to pay these pensions?" It seems to me like crying fire in the midst of a Noachian flood.

I submit the following picture of the health, wealth, and greatness of this nation for the comfort of the desponding souls whose fears make cowards of them when they think of the pension-roll. Here are the figures for a quarter of a century:

National debt.

Date.	President.	Principal.	Interest.
August 31, 1865.....		$2,755,995,275	$151,832,051
March 4, 1869.....	Johnson.....	2,525,463,250	126,389,550
March 4, 1877.....	Grant.....	2,088,781,142	94,408,645
March 4, 1881.....	Hayes.....	1,879,956,497	76,845,037
March 4, 1885.....	Arthur.....	1,406,923,350	47,013,949
March 4, 1889.....	Cleveland.....	865,106,020	41,000,000
January 1, 1890.....	Harrison.....	765,273,750	36,000,000
Reduction.....		1,990,721,525	125,832,051

We have done this and paid our pensioners besides.

An exchange puts it in strong and graphic terms thus: Europe, with about five times our population, about four times our wealth, and not twice our natural resources, has added to its national debts in the last twenty years $8,200,000,000, or over three times our total original debt, and their interest charge to-day is thirtyfold our own. In 1865, when our figures began, Europe owed $15,000,000,000. It owes to-day over $23,000,000,000; it pays $1,068,000,000 a year as interest, and it is loaded besides with $887,000,000 for military, war, and naval expenditures, including pensions, where our own are $130,000,000.

This is the lesson of liberty! These are the fruits of freedom; and the great Republic, without debt, without an army, without a navy, goes on in the great race of prosperity and industrial supremacy, distancing all competitors. Think on these things, my friends, and then vote cheerfully for the pension appropriation. Another pen has presented the situation so persuasively that I beg to further trespass upon your time by reading it:

In the question of pensions there is a great principle of equity which is not necessarily disturbed by the increase of pension expenses during eleven years. The survivors of the war are rapidly decreasing in numbers, it is true, but they are as rapidly advancing in age and increasing in decrepitude. Ten years ago pension expenses amounted to only $27,137,019; but since then hundreds of men who would not ask permanent aid as long as they were able to earn their own support have become helpless and dependent, and the laws have been more charitable in the recognition of cases deserving of national assistance. It may seem formidable to many that the annual pension expenses have grown to be $64,246,562. No harm is done by an intelligent discussion of the causes of this increase, even though it be demonstrated that every dollar paid out is equitably and deservedly disbursed. But harm is done when the attempt is made to cast discredit upon the Government for honoring and succoring the soldiers to whom that Government owes its very existence.

The soldier pensioners are a very slight burden upon this wonderfully rich and resourceful country. The millions that go to them are fewer than the principal countries of Europe pay for the maintenance of their standing armies; and yet these millions are an annual, yes, a constant assurance to the citizens of the United States that the Government will deal justly and liberally by them if in the hour of need they shall fling down the ax, loose the plow, or quit the desk to take up arms in defense of their country. We keep no standing army, but we know not at what hour we may need a million soldiers, and what we pay to invalid and maimed men who served us in a great crisis is cheap as a guaranty of future service from their sons or grandsons or great-grandsons.

The cheapest standing army among the powers is that of Austria-Hungary, which costs $55,116,248 per year; Italy comes next, with $62,340,900, while Germany expends $185,614,665, England $168,461,640, Russia $131,649,250, and France $111,689,400. Against these figures, extent of territory and population considered, the pension-roll of the United States, which is a bonus to the future volunteers, is a small sum to make all this bother about which gives rise to the cry of "pension-grabbers" on the one side, and the retort of "soldier-haters" on the other. The curse of the whole matter is that the pension question has been made a political issue, when in truth it is a patriotic principle, a matter of equity, or at the very worst a matter of wise provision for future safety on the part of a country that does not maintain a standing army.

These considerations present us in the light of a nation able to pay our soldiers liberal pensions, and I am fully assured that sound public policy, supported by every man's sense of justice, ratified by the patriotic instincts of the human race and applauded by the generous sentiments of mankind, requires it to do so. No duty presses with greater urgency upon this Government this hour than that of seeing that those who defended and saved it with fire and sword shall not suffer for the lack of the necessities of life because of disability.

If he is unable to maintain himself he must be maintained. If his inability is partial that part which is lacking must be supplied. The example of the Government in this matter must declare to future generations whose service may be needed in defense of their country that the patriot who volunteers to leap into the deadly breach or mount the blood-crested wave of battle in defense of the flag shall never be permitted by that nation to suffer from inability to earn his bread.

Mirabeau, writing to Frederick of Prussia, said he objected to compulsory service in the army because it seemed like forcing men to go to war like driving cattle to the slaughter-house, when it was so easy to render the public service such an object of emulation and glory to them that they would need no compulsion. What we do for the old soldiers now may largely determine the willingness and cheerfulness with which the new soldiers for the new exigencies of the future will rally to the defense of their country, inspired by the recollection of that country's gratitude to the soldiers of a previous war.

The time has come, in my judgment, when two classes of soldiers should be provided for, the actually disabled and the presumably disabled. For the actually disabled a pension rated according to the degree of their disability should be granted. The presumably disabled should consist of all soldiers over sixty years of age, on the assumption that by that time the infirmities of age have disabled them. In case of the former class, proof that their disability was contracted in the military service should no longer be required. After twenty-five years there are many soldiers who are mere wrecks of their former selves, due, doubtless, to their service, but proof of it can not be obtained. Sick-lists are destroyed, hospital records have gone the way of the hospitals themselves, witnesses are dead, evidence is impossible, unless we summon comrades from the grave or rake memory from its ashes.

These debilitated, infirm old soldiers in their declining years ought not to be suffered to linger, languish, and die in almshouses for lack of means of support. No darker reproach perhaps rests upon the country to-day than that, notwithstanding the soldier organizations are disbursing $300,000 a year in charity to needy soldiers and their dependent families, there are near 14,000 old soldiers in the charitable institutions of the country, exclusive of the 13,000 who enjoy the beneficent shelter of the soldiers' homes.

More liberal provision must now be made also for the soldier's widow and his helpless orphans. And no humane citizen could object to extending the bounty of the nation to the female nurses who wore out their strength at the bedsides of wounded and dying soldiers. These women are worthy beyond the power of language to describe. From Miss Clara Barton, whose self-sacrificing services have given her a well deserved fame, down to the humblest nurse who touched with moist finger the parched lips of death, all should be remembered now in the day of our strength and glory.

The gentle sway of their womanly scepters, their self-sacrificing devotion and care, followed the battle like the sunshine the storm, alleviating pain, assuaging the distresses of sickness, and smoothing the wrinkles on the brow of war. May some son of genius yet arise whose divinely gifted soul, kindled at the altars of patriotism and poetry, shall inspire the noblest epic of the age, which will carry on wings of immortal song to the hearts of the generations to come the story of the services and sacrifices of our "women of the war."

I am proud and happy to say that this nation has shown a generosity toward the soldier commendable in the highest degree. We have bestowed our bounty with lavish prodigality compared with any other nation on the globe. No exhibition of the nation's benevolence and gratitude, among the many which have shed unfading luster upon our history, will shine down the corridors of time with a more supernal splendor than the supreme liberality with which we have treated our loyal defenders. Let us see to it now that we do not mar the beauty of our record or dim the glory of our past by a future policy of stunted gratitude, crippled generosity, and false economy.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. HOLMAN. I reserve the point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOLMAN. The point of order is that it is new legislation; and I wish to say a word in that connection.

Mr. SAYERS. Does the gentleman from Indiana raise the point of order upon that amendment?

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Let me ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Is not the gentleman willing that the House and country shall have the information asked for in that amendment?

Mr. HOLMAN. All the information called for that applies to the pending bill. Whatever information concerns the subject-matter of the bill I will not object to. But the ground upon which I make objection is that it is new legislation, applicable to matters outside of this pending appropriation bill.

Mr. SAYERS. Does the gentleman's objection extend to the entire provision?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, but if any part of it is subject to the point of order that affects the whole.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the gentleman's objection is to that portion of the amendment which pertains to obtaining information except as to pensions resulting from the late war.

Mr. HOLMAN. Yes, that portion pertaining to the foreign wars is objected to.

Mr. SAYERS. That is not in this resolution; and I ask that the amendment be again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will again report the proposition.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. HOLMAN. I should have modified my objection somewhat. I have no objection to the proposition so far as it applies to the late war; but I shall make my point of order on getting statistics in relation to former wars.

Mr. SAYERS. Let me call the attention of the gentleman from Indiana to one thing which he has probably overlooked, and it is this: That from 1861 down to the present time we have been steadily paying pensions, not only for the late war, but also for the war of 1812, the war with Mexico, and the Indian wars.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. And the Revolutionary war.

Mr. SAYERS. And the Revolutionary war, and they are carried in this bill. My object, Mr. Chairman, was just simply to segregate these matters, so that the country might know how much was being paid to the pensioners of the different wars. That is all.

Mr. HOLMAN. I have no objection to the information so far as it affects the late war, but I object to the information respecting the old wars. I will say to my friend from Texas that the additional information called for is not with a view to legislation touching the war of 1812 or the war with Mexico. Of course my friend's purpose is to obtain information which may concern legislation touching the late war, and not former wars, and I must insist upon the point of order.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. This bill carries appropriations for the pensions of all these wars.

Mr. HOLMAN. Of course, I understand that. I say that it is obvious that this proposition intends to obtain information to affect the pension system growing out of the late war, and that the other information sought has no important bearing upon that war. Whatever information is sought for that relates to the late war I do not object to.

Mr. SAYERS. Let me relieve the apprehension of the gentleman from Indiana. I had no such intention in offering that amendment; and his construction of the provisions of that amendment is far-fetched.

Mr. HOLMAN. Well, if the gentleman, then, will strike out the Mexican war and the war of 1812 and Indian wars, I will waive the point of order.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I accept that. Of course I do this under pressure, for I do not believe it is right. I withdraw so much of that amendment as refers to obtaining information in regard to the payment of pensioners of other wars than the late civil war.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that the point of order is withdrawn, and the amendment will be so modified.

Mr. MORROW. I just want to say a word. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Texas was submitted to the majority of the committee and they saw no objection to it.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to be recognized one moment. I understood that the gentleman from California having charge of this bill does not object to this provision, and I believe that his remark was that the provision of the gentleman from Texas was submitted to the committee.

I objected to it for the reason I have stated, that the country will understand that the information called for by that provision in this bill would be of value only as bearing upon pension legislation touching the late war, and not by reason of the proposition affecting pension legislation concerning preceding wars. In its present form I have no objection to it.

[Mr. HOLMAN withholds his remarks for revision. See Appendix.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of the first paragraph, the word "pension."

Mr. Chairman, the minority on this floor have suddenly become wonderfully patriotic, and if they could only destroy the unpatriotic record which they have always made upon this floor they would be wonderfully benefited by the result. My distinguished friend from New York [Mr. SPINOLA], with great self-satisfaction, says that the Democratic party in Congress—

Mr. SPINOLA. In the field, during the war.

Mr. GROSVENOR. My distinguished friend says that the Democratic party have run up the pension appropriation bills from something like $28,000,000 to something like $100,000,000 per annum.

Mr. SPINOLA. Yes, sir.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Let me tell the gentleman that there is not one dollar of that money that is appropriated and will be paid under any general appropriation bill ever passed by the Democratic party, or by its majority on the floor of either branch of Congress, or ever signed by its President, excepting the bill to extend the amount of the pensions to the widows of dead soldiers.

Otherwise than that, every dollar of that appropriation is due to the Republican party's patriotism and love of the soldier, and nearly all of it has been put there as the result of the hardest-fought battles we have ever experienced here against filibustering and all sorts of opposition by the Democratic party.

Not only is that true, Mr. Chairman, but in the Forty-ninth Congress we passed a bill to increase the pensions of the men who had lost arms and legs in the service of the country, a handful of men, and 63 Democrats in this House and no Republicans voted against it.

Let me tell you another thing, my friend from New York: There never was recorded on the Journal of this House the vote of a single Republican (with but one exception) against any pension bill that was ever passed in this House—a general pension bill; and that was simply the protest of a distinguished gentleman from Indiana against the passage of the Mexican pension bill for a single and special reason.

Let me tell the gentleman another thing. In the Forty-ninth Congress we passed a bill, which was the best we could do. We stood here day after day and week after week appealing to gentlemen on the other side to perfect and improve that legislation, and then we passed what has been called sneeringly by the Democratic press of this country almost unanimously the "pauper pension bill." It went to Mr.

Cleveland, the President of the United States, and he vetoed it with language all redolent of insult against the Union soldier of the country. When it came back here, under the provision of the Constitution, we called it up and demanded the right to rebuke that sort of treatment of the Union soldier; and how many Democrats voted to override the veto of the President? Not many that I recollect. If they did so they are not here to-day to answer to their names on this floor.

Mr. BYNUM. Will you permit a question? You have reference to the dependent pension bill.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have—the veto of that bill.

Mr. BYNUM. There were six Democrats from Indiana—and I am one of them—who voted to pass that bill over the veto.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Six Democrats out of 170!

Mr. BYNUM. Six Democrats from Indiana alone—from that one State.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Let us see. There were enough of them from the doubtful districts who voted that way to save themselves from destruction at home. But let me tell the gentleman from Indiana that he can not escape the result of that veto. Grover Cleveland hurled that veto into the faces of the Union soldiers of this country. Afterward he was nominated for President, and no man shouted louder in his behalf than the distinguished gentleman from Indiana, who has suddenly become converted to the support of a service-pension bill that he will never vote for in a Democratic House while God allows him to live—never.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MORROW obtained the floor and yielded his time to Mr. GROSVENOR.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, will the gentleman stand up and tell me when it was that they passed a law under which, and pursuant to the terms of which, this $100,000,000 is to be appropriated? When did you do it? Your President vetoed, refused to sign, more than three hundred pension bills, and he is to-day the most popular Democrat in the United States and will drag you at his car-wheels three years hence. [Applause on the Democratic side.] That is right. I shall be glad to see you supporting him, and I shall be glad to see the distinguished Democrat from Indiana standing up in his district and protesting to the Union soldiers that he has always been in favor of every pension bill, and yet proclaiming his loyalty and allegiance to the man who vetoed, directly and indirectly, more than three hundred pension bills.

Mr. HOLMAN rose.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I cannot be interrupted in the very short time I have.

Let me tell you, you are not to be credited with any of the pension legislation which we call general pension legislation; but I will tell you what you are to be credited with. You and your Administration ought to be credited with the fact that to-day, by the report of the Grand Army of the Republic, more than 20,000 Union soldiers are in the poor-houses of this country who would have been taken out and made comfortable under the bill that your President vetoed and the veto of which you indorsed. [Applause on the Republican side.] And every night when those men go to bed they understand perfectly well that they lie there smitten by the action of the Democratic party, degraded to pauperism by your policy, placed in their present attitude because you never favor pension legislation except when the Democratic party is out of power.

You talk about having enacted this pension legislation. Gentlemen on the other side say they have increased the pension legislation. Who increased it?

Mr. SPINOLA. The Democrats.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Never. I challenge the gentleman to the proof; and it is time my distinguished friend got one fact into some speech of his and a little less of "glittering generalities." We had in the Forty-ninth Congress a gentleman who could glitter much more enthusiastically and effectively than my friend from New York, but when the pinch came he was never there. I will not refer to the personal record of my friend here upon the question of the veto by the President of the bills of which I am talking.

You will find that all the wrongs which have been done to the Union soldier you have done; and you will find that every right thing that has been done for the Union soldier has been done by the Republican side of this House. Furthermore, when we were in the minority we were able to force this question upon you; in the minority we were able to pick out in the doubtful and close Northern States the men who dare not vote against Republican legislation; but it was the body of the Democrats on the other side who always stood in the way. And now you come and say, "We have reached the 21st of March, and the pension bill has not been reported."

Not very long ago you were complaining because we had not any rules; you were complaining and wanting to know when the rules were going to come. They came at last; and you found it out [applause and laughter on the Republican side]; and among the changes which we incorporated in the rules was a provision permitting pension legislation to be reported at any time. And, my Democratic friends, you will have a chance to make good the blustering promises and protestations you have made to-day.

We have not got to have a two-thirds vote to get up pension bills; a majority can do it. Let me tell you what you are doing in addition to that. Your distinguished statesmen are pointing the country to the terrible appropriations we are going to make for the benefit of the Union soldiers. What does it mean? Your greatest leader on that side points out to the country, in a dispatch which went into the Associated Press everywhere, that we were about to bankrupt the Treasury by passing a service-pension bill; and in the name and on behalf of the Democracy of the United States elevated his potential voice against the extravagance of the Republican party in Congress on that point.

The time has not quite come, but it will come, and the gentleman from Indiana will have an opportunity to vote for a bill, a Republican bill. [Applause.] We will redeem the promises that his party made and violated, and the promises which now, for the first time, this party has had the opportunity to redeem on the floor of Congress with both branches of the national legislature in our hands. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. LAWLER. Give us that bill right away and we are with you. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. TARSNEY. Mr. Chairman, I have risen for the purpose of asking the gentleman from Ohio a question. Now that the Republican party is in control of the Executive Department and both branches of Congress, do they propose to re-enact that dependent-pension bill and take those twenty thousand out of the pauper-house?

Mr. GROSVENOR. By no means. We will enact a Republican bill, a patriotic bill, that shall not have a dependent-pauper feature in it.

Mr. TARSNEY. Was not that a good reason for vetoing it?

Mr. GROSVENOR. If it was vetoed on that ground, yes. But it was not vetoed on that ground, and no man knows it better than the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. TARSNEY. If you will leave one minute of my time I will be obliged to you.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I thought the gentleman was putting a question to me. And he did put the question to me, and now he objects to me answering it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

Here the committee informally rose; and Mr. BUCHANAN, of New Jersey, having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore a message was received from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, announcing the passage of the following resolution; in which concurrence was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to have the reports of the United States commissioners to the centennial international exhibition at Melbourne, 1890, or such of them as may be accepted by him for publication, printed and bound at the Congressional Printing Office, and that, in addition to the usual number, there shall be 600 extra copies for the use of the Senate, 1,200 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,200 for the use of the Department of State.

It further announced the concurrence in the following resolution of the House:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That there be printed 25,000 copies of the address of Chief-Justice Fuller, delivered December 11, 1889, on the occasion of the commemoration of the inauguration of George Washington, the first President of the United States; 16,000 for the use of the House; 8,000 for the use of the Senate, and 1,000 for the use of the Chief-Justice.

It further announced the passage of a bill (S. 826) for the relief of Horatio Phillips Van Cleve; in which concurrence was requested.

PENSION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session, Mr. BURROWS in the chair.

Mr. SPINOLA. I ask that the pending amendment be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "Mexico," in line 11, strike out "97,000,000" and insert "114,000,000."

Mr. SPINOLA. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the amendment is to meet the requirements of the Pension Bureau for the next fiscal year, as provided for in the bill now under consideration.

Now, my dear friend from Ohio [General GROSVENOR] has made certain suggestions or attempted to inform Congress to the effect that the Democratic party had done nothing towards providing pensions for the soldiers of this country. Let me ask him if it was not a Democratic Congress which passed the pension arrearages bill? Let me ask him how many millions of dollars that bill put into the pockets of the veteran soldiers of this country? A Democratic Congress increased the pensions of widows from $8 to $12 per month. Is that not doing something for the veterans, their widows, and the survivors of the war?

Now, the gentleman must recollect that there is a record of these facts, and that record is presumed to tell the truth, and from that record I speak to-day.

The bill to which the gentleman from Ohio referred as having been vetoed by the President of the United States, President Cleveland, was an insult to the veterans of this country. It was looked at in that light by the Democratic party. It called upon the gallant and brave soldiers of the Union Army to go forth and acknowledge publicly that they were paupers; and I tell you, sir, that a brave, gallant man will suffer death before consenting to so degrading an insult as that. And I tell you that if you undertake to do that again, during this session of Congress, and bring in a similar bill before us, we will stand here like a wall of iron against you.

A MEMBER. And go down before it.

Mr. SPINOLA. Yes, sir; we will go down, just as the Democratic soldiers went down before the fire of the Confederates.

Why, my friend from Massachusetts over there laughs. The gentleman looks as if he was too young to have known anything that went on during the war or to know much about the Army. But I will tell him that the great bulk of the Union Army was made up of the Democratic legions of the North. [Derisive laughter on the Republican side.] And I am prepared to prove that statement on the floor of the House, and gentlemen on the other side can not laugh it down.

Mr. COLEMAN. May I correct the gentleman? I want to tell him that they are not all Confederates on this side now.

Mr. SPINOLA. Well, God knows they have been trying a long time to get out of their predicament, and I hope they will persevere until they do it.

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. Will the gentleman from New York allow me to correct him in one statement, in reference, as I believe, to myself?

Mr. SPINOLA. Well, I guess not just now. I made no statement in reference to the gentleman.

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. The gentleman said—

Mr. SPINOLA. Well, I will hear you. What did you say? I will hear your question.

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. I do not desire to ask the gentleman any question; but I was smiling when he made a remark a few moments ago, and the gentleman, alluding, as I believe, to myself, said that I was too young to be in the Army.

Mr. SPINOLA. I beg your pardon, my son; I did not refer to you at all. [Great laughter and applause.] It was my friend from Massachusetts to whom I was referring, who has the Shakespearean forehead, who sits just over there. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORSE. Will the gentleman from New York give me a moment?

Mr. SPINOLA. Well, I did not know that my shot was so scattering when I fired it. [Laughter and applause.] What is the matter with my friend?

Mr. MORSE. I want to say in response to what the gentleman has just said—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MORSE. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. FLOWER. Mr. Chairman, I will take the floor and yield to my colleague from New York, if I can be recognized.

Mr. MORSE. The gentleman from New York has seen fit to refer to me in connection with service in the Army.

Mr. FLOWER. Can I not yield to my colleague?

Mr. SPINOLA. My time was all taken up by the young man standing yonder. [Laughter.]

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. I did not desire to take the time of the gentleman from New York, but simply to correct a misstatement.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that the position is this:

The gentleman from New York had exhausted his time. The gentleman from New York yielded, as the Chair supposed, to interruptions, and the time was thus occupied. Afterwards the Chair recognized the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MORSE], who moved a pro forma amendment, and after he has concluded his five minutes' time, which is at his disposal under the rules, the Chair will be at liberty to recognize other gentlemen.

Mr. MORSE. The distinguished gentleman from New York referred to me as smiling at his remarks.

Mr. SPINOLA. I beg your pardon; it was not you, sir. [Great laughter.] I did not suppose there were so many members of the House who imagined they resembled Shakespeare in looks. I do not blame him for supposing that I referred to him when I said a few moments ago, "I refer to the gentleman with the Shakespearean forehead."

Mr. FUNSTON. I rise to a question of order. I desire to know who did the "smiling" at the gentleman. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a word in reference to the amendment of the gentleman from New York, if we have disposed of the smiling question.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts has the floor.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from New York pointed to me and charged me, "the gentleman from Massachusetts" (and I was the only man from Massachusetts in this part of the House at that time)—I say he charged me with smiling at his remarks, which he avers I never would have done had I been old enough and had I served my country as a soldier. Now, I plead guilty to the charge of the gentleman from New York of smiling at the remarks of my friend on the other side, as we all did, and pray how could we help it when the Democratic party on the other side enacts upon this floor the stupendous, roaring farce of claiming, as the gentleman from New York does, that the Democratic party in Congress have enacted and the soldiers are indebted to them for every favor in the way of pension legislation that they have received at the hands of the Government, when he knows we know and the country knows that the Democratic party in Congress as a party has constantly, persistently, and consistently opposed all pension legislation, which culminated in numerous vetoes by Grover Cleveland, and his final veto of the soldiers' dependent pension bill, a bill that decreed that no Union soldier should die in the poor-house? Away with this nonsense! It will deceive nobody.

In regard to the gentleman's apology for me, that I was too young to be a soldier, I beg to assure him that I am no spring chicken, and that on the 23d of May, 1861, at the age of nineteen, I enlisted in Company A, Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, and served with General Butler in Virginia, and later I re-enlisted in the same regiment, and shoulder to shoulder with ninety-five men from my little town, under the shadow of Blue Hill, in the valley of the Neponset, under the command of Captain Hall, Lieutenants Drake and Morse, I marched away to the burning sands and the tropical sun of Louisiana.

Of those ninety-five men, who were the flower of the town in which I lived, most of them young men, a score died in the swamps of Louisiana, and were buried unknelted, unshrouded, uncoffined, and unknown, and they are sleeping there now. They are sleeping their long, last sleep. They died for the Union; the roar of no cannon, the boom of no siege gun can awaken them; and, Mr. Chairman, the object of the appropriation now under consideration is to make provision for pensioning and to redeem the pledges made to these men in the hour of the nation's deadly peril, and I shall vote for the bill now under consideration as recommended by the committee.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a word upon the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York increasing the appropriations here some fifteen millions of dollars. I desire to say to the committee that the bill was framed upon the requirements of the existing laws.

There was a careful examination made by the Commissioner of Pensions and the experts in his office and they determined that the amount provided in this bill was sufficient to pay the pensions under existing law. Now, of course, we can not anticipate the action of Congress.

Mr. BYNUM. Will the gentleman answer me a question on that point?

Mr. MORROW. Certainly.

Mr. BYNUM. Do not the two quarterly payments already made in this fiscal year amount to $53,000,000?

Mr. MORROW. Yes.

Mr. BYNUM. Then will it not require $106,000,000 this year in order to pay these pensions?

Mr. MORROW. By no means. The Democratic Congress, if the gentleman will allow me, in providing for the pensions for 1889 appropriated $81,758,700. That was the amount carried in the appropriation bill of 1888. That was soon discovered to be too small an appropriation; and thereupon, when Congress convened, there was an appropriation made of $8,000,000 as a deficiency, making the total $89,758,700; but that also was found to be too small at the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. BYNUM. The gentleman has not answered my question.

Mr. MORROW. Oh, yes; I will. I am coming to it.

Mr. BYNUM. I am glad you are getting at it.

Mr. MORROW. When we come to the end of the fiscal year 1889 we find a still further deficiency of $8,000,000; instead, therefore, of the appropriation being an eight-million deficiency it should have been for a deficiency of $16,000,000. So, when the present administration took hold of the Pension Office it had about $8,000,000 deficiency, for pensions due and unsettled, that should have been provided for before the 1st of July, 1889. Now, the result of that excessive deficiency was that we have been compelled to appropriate for the present fiscal year the sum of $103,371,709, eight millions more than necessary for the current pensions by reason of the fact that the Pension Office was compelled to take $8,000,000 out of the funds for the present fiscal year and appropriate it for the payments due in the fiscal year ending in June, 1889.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question right there?

Mr. MORROW. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Do you believe that the amount appropriated by this bill will be sufficient for the expenditures of 1891?

Mr. MORROW. I have said repeatedly that it will not be.

Mr. SAYERS. Well, that is all right.

Mr. MORROW. I have said that there will be an increase in the adjudication of claims, that there will be bills passed by Congress providing for further pensions. We have in the last few days passed a bill increasing the working force of the Pension Office, and there will be additional pensions allowed. It will be proper for Congress in the coming year to determine how much this increase has been, and then appropriate for a deficiency, as has been done heretofore. Therefore there is no necessity for this amendment.

Mr. SAYERS. You have not answered my question yet. Do you believe that, with the present legislation only, the amount carried by this bill will be sufficient to pay all the pensions growing out of legislation now upon the statute-books during the fiscal year 1891?

Mr. MORROW. No, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Very well. Then your proposition is to leave it to the Democratic Congress to make up the deficiency? [Laughter.]

Mr. MORROW. Oh, no. The Democratic Congress, if there is to be one, will not come in by next December; it will not be until after the election, any way, and probably not then. All the requirements of the law as it now stands are $98,427,461 for the year 1891.

Mr. FLOWER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MORROW. The requirements of the Pension Office in 1890 by this proper classification of appropriations are $96,371,709.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, if I can be recognized I will yield my time to the gentleman from California.

Mr. FLOWER. I would like to ask the gentleman a question, and I would like to ask unanimous consent that he may have time to answer it. I have had my attention called to a case of a soldier who had been waiting for eight years in order to get his pension adjudicated by the office. Now, have they not enough help in the Pension Office to adjudicate the claims of the soldiers?

Mr. MORROW. Application has been made for additional help.

Mr. FLOWER. Do they lack help now?

Mr. MORROW. We have provided for the examination of these cases by the appointment of thirty additional medical examiners. As I understand from the report of the Commissioner what they most require is medical examiners. We have provided those thirty additional examiners; and I understand they will expedite the adjudication of these claims.

Mr. FLOWER. This man has been waiting for eight years.

Mr. MORROW. It does not necessarily follow because he has been waiting eight years that it is the fault of the Pension Office; because it may be his own fault in not completing his evidence. When I first came here I had called to my attention a case that had been pending for fifteen years. I went to the Pension Office, overhauled the papers, and found what evidence was necessary and advised the applicant of the fact. It was presented, and his case adjudicated. It is probable in these cases that have been pending so long that the fault is in the pensioner himself not providing the proof.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on this amendment is exhausted.

Mr. FLOWER. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the proposition.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I have an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. SPINOLA. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the amendment and offer another.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "pensioner" in line 30 in the first section of the bill.

Mr. SPINOLA. I desire to say that there is no necessity for any other bill in regard to passing pension claims through the Pension Bureau, for the reason that in this very bill we make provision to increase the clerical aid. We passed a bill a short time ago that makes provision for that particular purpose, and therefore it has nothing to do with clerical hire. It is a separate item.

Now, sir, my friend from Kansas away back yonder wished to have a hand dealt to him during the mélée. [Laughter.] I did not hear exactly what he said, but as part of my remarks upon the amendment now before the House I will ask the Clerk to read the following letter which I have received within the last twenty minutes. I ask careful attention of the House to it, and especially that of my friend from Kansas.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York takes the floor and asks that this letter be read as part of his remarks.

The Clerk read as follows:

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN RESUBMISSION CLUB,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT, Wichita, Kans., March 17, 1890.

DEAR SIR: We noticed with much pleasure your reply to Representative FETTER relative to prohibition in Kansas, and if at any future time our delegation make a statement that prohibition in our State is a success you can denounce it in the strongest terms without the least fear of an honest contradiction. With nine long years of trial, backed by courts with juries selected to convict, by legislatures neglecting all the material interests of the State to invent new and questionable methods to enforce it, it is a confessed failure and farce, oppressing our people with burdensome taxes and driving capital and immigration from us, and building a wall around our fair and otherwise magnificent State, with a notice to the world that individual rights can not be tolerated here.

A few months ago the Republican business men of Kansas took hold of the matter and now Republican clubs are being organized all over the State and at present writing not less than 50,000 Republicans are favoring a resubmission of the prohibitory clause of our Constitution, and the work has scarcely commenced. In ninety days the representatives of Kansas, who go about shouting what a great success prohibition is in Kansas, will wake up and find a Western cyclone has struck them.

With resubmission and the Farmers' Alliances spreading like a mighty prairie fire over our State, revolutionizing old political methods of riding into office, it is enough to wake up even INGALLS, who is busy studying the race question of the South, instead of looking after the material interests of his constituents, and who opposes wiping out this accursed law, which is blighting and paralyzing the business interests of the people of the whole State.

Yours, very truly,

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
By WM. D. McCORMICK, Secretary.

General FRANCIS B. SPINOLA,
House of Representatives.

Mr. FUNSTON. Now, will the gentleman allow me to say that that is an old blow-hard who was kicked out of the Republican party four years ago, and he is hunting around now for a new party?

Mr. SPINOLA. But the fifty thousand Republican followers he speaks of can not all be blow-hards. [Laughter.]

Mr. FUNSTON. They would not be if what he said about their existence was true.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I move that debate upon this amendment be closed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I move to strike out the last paragraph of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not in order. That paragraph has not been reached. The Clerk will read the next paragraph.

Mr. MCCARTHY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer some amendments to the first paragraph.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, we have passed the first paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. But amendments are in order, although they are not debatable. The Clerk will read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 29, add the following words after the word "children:" "And in case there be no widow or children, then to the legal representatives of said pensioner."

Mr. MORROW. I make the point of order upon that amendment that it is new legislation.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is subject to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 39 strike out the word "hereafter."

The question was taken on the amendment; and on a division it was rejected—ayes 32, noes 77.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 34, after the word "pensioner," strike out the following: "may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior," and insert in lieu thereof the word "shall," making the provision read as follows:

"The accrued pension due on said certificate to the date of the death of said pensioner shall be paid to the legal representatives of said pensioner."

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I understood the gentleman from California to make a point of order upon that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. This is an amendment to strike out a portion of the paragraph and insert the word "shall."

Mr. CANNON. Precisely; but it involves a change of the existing law.

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, the provision in the bill is precisely the existing law, copied from the statutes; so that if you strike out one word, or more than one word, or any number of words, you make a change of existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not understand the gentleman from California to make the point of order against this amendment.

Mr. MORROW. I do make it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For fees and expenses of examining surgeons for services rendered within the fiscal year 1891, $1,000,000. And each member of each examining board shall, as now authorized by law, receive the sum of $2 for the examination of each applicant whenever five or a less number shall be examined on any one day, and $1 for the examination of each additional applicant on such day: Provided, That if twenty or more applicants appear on one day, no fewer than twenty shall, if practicable, be examined on said day, and that if fewer examinations be then made, twenty or more having appeared, then there shall be paid for the first examinations made on the next examination day the fee of $1 only until twenty examinations shall have been made.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Insert at the end of line 50 the following:

"Provided further, That not more than two of the members of each of said examining boards shall belong to the same political party in any county where it is practicable to appoint examining surgeons from different political parties."

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order upon that amendment, that it changes existing law.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I hope the gentleman will reserve the point of order. I shall not discuss it, but I trust that when I have submitted a few remarks upon the merits of the amendment the point of order will be withdrawn.

The chairman of the committee, in alluding to the subject of rerating, stated that Commissioner Tanner found when he came into office a great machine in operation. Five years ago it was rumored and suspected in this country that the Pension Bureau itself was a great political machine. Whether that rumor or suspicion was well or ill founded matters little to the purpose, but it is a fact that at that time all these examining boards, all of the examining surgeons, and ninety-nine-one-hundredths of the officers in the Pension Bureau were of one political party, although the soldiers they had to deal with were or had been nearly evenly divided in politics. When Commissioner Black took possession of the office he immediately made an order that each of these examining boards before whom the private soldiers came for examination as to their disabilities should contain a representative of both parties. He made that order and maintained that rule throughout the whole of his administration, and wherever it was practicable there was a Republican on the examining board. In my own district, in the three examining boards there, there was retained a Republican wounded soldier, and when one of them died another of like character was put upon the board. Within sixty days after the present Administration came in those boards were all reorganized.

The board in the county that I live in not only suffered the removal of the Democrats, but suffered also the removal of a wounded Republican soldier because it was suspected that possibly he might have voted for me by reason of his being on that board, a suspicion that was not well founded. In another county in the same district the board was reorganized by removing the Democratic soldier and leaving the Democrat who was not a soldier. In another county in the district the board was reorganized by sweeping out all of the incumbents, and in another county a new board was organized consisting entirely of Republicans. Now, these veterans come in there—

Mr. MORROW. Mr. Chairman, I dislike to interrupt the gentleman, but he is not talking to the point of order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I trust the gentleman will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. MORROW. I am not at liberty to do that.

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. I will ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] if it is not a fact that in the appointments made now to these boards the minority party is represented.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. In the appointments made under the present Commissioner I believe that is the case to some extent.

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. I know that I have made requests of the Commissioner of Pensions for appointments and he has stated that he desired to have these boards consist of two Republicans and one Democrat; so that he appears to be pursuing the very policy which the gentleman advocates.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Very well. If that be so, it seems to me there can be no objection to a provision of law which will establish that rule. I say it is in the interest of good government and in the interest of fair play. The soldiers that come before these boards come with no political purpose, and they should not be met with any political purpose.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would be glad to hear the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OUTHWAITE] on the point of order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have not heard on what theory the point of order is based. I suppose it is based on the proposition that the amendment is a change of existing law.

Mr. MORROW. Yes, sir.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. There is nothing in the existing law providing whether the members of these boards of surgeons shall be of different political parties or of the same political party. I consider this amendment not so much a change of existing law as a limitation upon the expenditure of this sum of $1,000,000, just as much a limitation as the proviso already in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would inquire, if the proposed amendment is not a change of existing law, why insert it?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. As I have said, it is no more a change of existing law than the proviso already in the bill, and which is not found in any existing law.

Mr. MORROW. Oh, yes; it is.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It is only found in the appropriation act of last year.

Mr. MORROW. And that is existing law, is it not?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I do not agree with the decisions rendered heretofore on that point. I want to call the attention of the Chair to the proviso now embraced in this bill as to this expenditure:

Provided, That if twenty or more applicants appear on one day, no fewer than twenty shall, if practicable, be examined on said day, and that if fewer examinations be then made, twenty or more having appeared, then there shall be paid for the first examinations made on the next examination day the fee of $1 only until twenty examinations shall have been made.

That is a limitation on the manner in which this money is to be expended, and the amendment I propose is also a limitation on the expenditure; it is a limitation as to the persons to whom the money shall be paid.

Mr. PETERS. But, Mr. Chairman, the provision in the bill to which the gentleman refers is existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the point of order well taken, and sustains it.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by striking out the last word. I have listened to the gentleman from New York while he has made his extravagant claims as to the number of Democratic soldiers in the Army. I do not think any man who looks into this matter will claim that over one-fourth of the soldiers of the Union Army were members of the Democratic party before they enlisted. I think that is perfectly clear; but I do not care to occupy time in discussing that question now.

The point is made against contemplated pension legislation that we should not throw any odium upon the soldiers by the passage of a "pauper" pension bill.

Mr. SPINOLA. I rise to a point of order, that the discussion which the gentleman is now pursuing is not germane to the bill.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I will come to the point in a moment.

Mr. SPINOLA. Never mind that. I object, unless you are willing to give me the same amount of time that you occupy. If so I am perfectly willing you shall go on.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. The gentleman has had the floor to-day five times as much as I have.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hopes that the gentleman from Iowa will confine himself to the amendment.

Mr. SPINOLA. What is the amendment?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. To strike out the last word.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in regard to this matter of "pauper" pension legislation I think there is a great deal of abuse of language. Will the gentleman from New York claim that it is any disgrace for a man to be poor?

Mr. SPINOLA. I will answer the gentleman—

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I can not yield except for a categorical answer—yes or no. Will the gentleman say it is any disgrace to a man to be poor?

Mr. SPINOLA. Now, I propose to answer that question, and if my friend—

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I yield only for a direct answer.

Mr. SPINOLA. I will give you an answer if you will permit me.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I will not yield any further time.

Mr. Chairman, if a man has been in the service of his country, and on account of that service has been made poor, has been rendered unable to obtain a livelihood, the fact is to his credit. There is no patriotic man in this country who will not honor him for such service; and that he is poor is not a disgrace, if his poverty is the result of his unselfishness and his patriotic service.

Mr. SPINOLA. That is a good way for the gentleman to get out.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Something has been said about the pledges made by the Republican party. I make the statement, Mr. Chairman, that the Republican party has redeemed all of its pledges to the soldier, in so far as it has the power. I want to read from the platform adopted in the last national convention of the Republican party, to show the pledges that it made. They are not to be enlarged by bare assertions. They declare that they are in favor of "the payment of just pensions to our soldiers." Then in another place they say:

The legislation of Congress should conform to the pledge made by a loyal people, and be so enlarged and extended as to provide against the possibility that any man who honorably wore the Federal uniform shall become an inmate of an almshouse or dependent upon private charity. In the presence of an overflowing Treasury it would be a public scandal to do less for those whose valorous services preserved the Government.

This is the extent of the pledge the Republican party has made.

I listened with a great deal of surprise to the speech of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE]. His speech was, by implication, an attack on the Government with reference to the treatment of Union soldiers. By implication it is a charge of the basest ingratitude on the part of the Government in view of the fact that the bill under consideration appropriates $98,587,252 for pensions, for payment to soldiers for pensions alone—a larger sum than any other nation in the world has ever paid for the support of its Army, including pensions, in time of peace in a single year.

The charge of the gentleman from Indiana seems to be without justification. He also finds fault with the Government because it paid its soldiers in currency. There was no other money in circulation at the time they were paid. They did not expect their pay in any other money at the time they enlisted. Those of them who were able to retain their pay, or to loan it, or to invest it, had it made as good as gold by the policy of the Government, just the same as other creditors of the Government, and that policy was resisted at every step by the Democratic party. The Government at the close of the war, in addition to the pay they had promised, gave an extra bounty of $100 to every soldier who had served over two years, and three months' extra pay was also granted above the contract. I feel impelled to make this statement as a soldier who served from 1862 to the close of the war, in justification of the Government against the charge made by the gentleman from Indiana.

The gentleman demands that the promises of the Government to the soldiers should be redeemed. He fails to point out any promises it has failed to redeem. The other gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM] calls attention to the fact that a larger proportion of the soldiers of Indiana have been granted pensions than in any other State. I am glad to hear the gentleman make that statement. He does not explain what exigencies of the Democratic party in Indiana during the last administration contributed to this result, showing how important to a soldier it is in a Democratic administration to reside in a doubtful State. He asks why we do not redeem our pledges.

It might be answered that if the Democratic President had not vetoed the bill which was passed for the relief of soldiers who were disabled and the widows and orphans of deceased soldiers the Republican party would have no pledges to redeem. They are pledged to pass the dependent-pension bill for the relief of the disabled soldiers and of widows of deceased soldiers, and they will pass it. This is the only pledge they have made, as I have shown by the quotation from their platform. The party is not pledged to any bounties or any gratuities. It is not pledged to make good the losses sustained by the Union soldiers in their heroic devotion to the Union.

These it can never repay. The nation should allow no soldier to become a charge on any community as the result of his service to the Government. It should see that no widow whose husband shortened his life in the service should be left to private or local charity in her old age; further than this the Republican party is not pledged, and, considering the burdens of taxation and the necessity for its reduction, I am of the opinion that further than this it should not go, and certainly not further than following the precedent set by a Democrat in Congress in regard to Mexican soldiers to provide that every soldier who has arrived at the age of sixty-two years shall be placed on the pension-roll and allowed enough to secure him against want in his old age.

Mr. MORROW. I move that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

Mr. FLOWER addressed the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from California [Mr. MORROW] will withhold that motion for a moment, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLOWER], and will afterward put the motion of the gentleman from California.

Mr. MORROW. Very well.

Mr. FLOWER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KERR] has been reading, I presume, from Mr. Greeley's Almanac when he states that only one-fourth of the men who fought the battles of the Union were Democrats.

A MEMBER. Is not that good authority?

Mr. FLOWER. Yes; and I want to quote from that authority on another point. You will find it stated that Abraham Lincoln in 1860 received 1,853,000 votes—all or nearly all from the Northern States. The next year he went to war; and from that time until 1864 2,500,000 soldiers were enlisted to fight in that battle line of 3,000 miles, 1,000,000 more than there were Republicans all told in 1860. Now, I say to the gentleman from Iowa that the Republican party carried every Northern State, including New Jersey—

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. Does not the gentleman know that 60 per cent. of those who enlisted were under the voting age?

Mr. FLOWER. I say that every Northern State, including New Jersey, went Republican as long as the Democratic soldiers were at the front. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

And never, Mr. Chairman, until those soldiers got back did those Democrats have a chance to carry a Northern State, and then they made a clean sweep. [Laughter and applause.]

I say the majority of the soldiers who fought in the last war were Democrats. The men who wore the epaulets were Republicans. The men who carried knapsacks were Democrats. That is one of the reasons why we on this side favor liberal pensions to the soldiers. [Laughter on the Republican side and applause on the Democratic side.] We believe, with three surgeons in every Congressional district throughout the United States, that these pensions should be honestly awarded to the soldiers. We believe in these pension laws, and are willing to make this bill $114,000,000, instead of ninety-eight millions. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

On motion of Mr. MORROW, all further debate on the pending paragraph was closed.

The next section was read, as follows:

For the salaries of eighteen agents for the payment of pensions, at $4,000 each, $72,000. In case of the sickness or unavoidable absence of any pension agent from his office he may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, authorize the chief clerk, or some other clerk employed therein, to act in his place, to sign official checks, and to discharge all the other duties required by law of such pension agent. And, with like approval, any pension agent may designate and authorize a clerk to sign the name of the pension agent to official checks. The official bond given by the principal of the office shall be held to cover and apply to the acts of the person appointed to act in his place in such cases. Such acting officer shall, moreover, for the time being, be subject to all the liabilities and penalties prescribed by law for the official misconduct, in like cases, of the pension agent for whom he acts.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I make the point of order that this is a change of existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. What portion of the paragraph?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Commencing in line 58:

And, with like approval, any pension agent may designate and authorize a clerk to sign the name of the pension agent to official checks. The official bond given by the principal of the office shall be held to cover and apply to the acts of the person appointed to act in his place in such cases. Such acting officer shall, moreover, for the time being, be subject to all the liabilities and penalties prescribed by law for the official misconduct, in like cases, of the pension agent for whom he acts.

Of course it is impossible for me to prove to the Chairman by the production of the existing law, unless I would produce the laws on pension subjects; this is not even in the general law. I assume the Chairman is acquainted with the fact it is not in the existing law.

Mr. MORROW. We can shorten this by admitting this is a new provision.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Then it goes out?

Mr. MORROW. No.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. It is obnoxious to the point I have made.

Mr. MORROW. We found on investigation that in the gentleman's own district in Ohio, where there is a large number of pensioners, the pension agent could not conveniently pay and sign checks.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I will vote for a law to correct that.

Mr. MORROW. The result was, we put in this provision authorizing the clerk to act as pension agent, and I trust the gentleman will not insist on his point of order.

Mr. McMILLIN. The law does not authorize it now.

Mr. MORROW. No, it is not in the existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on his point of order?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I think the point of order is well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on it?

Mr. MORROW. I hope the gentleman will not insist on it.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Allow me then to move my amendment against which the point was insisted upon.

Mr. CANNON. This is to relieve your pension agent in your own town.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Not at all; not more than the examining physicians; in fact, not so much, for they come immediately in contact with the pensioners themselves. These do not.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon the point of order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The point of order was insisted upon in regard to the amendment I offered and which was equally as important.

Mr. CANNON. This merely delays, if the gentleman gets this provision stricken out on the point of order, the quarterly payment of the pensions of the soldiers. In other words, if this clause remains in the bill, the pension agent may authorize another person to sign his name for him, after giving a bond. So there is no danger of loss of money. It enables the soldier in the large agencies like Columbus, Ohio, to get his pittance from the Government every three months, some days earlier than if this clause was not in the bill.

I am sure my friend from Ohio, with this explanation, will not insist upon the point of order.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. The gentleman is so seductive that it is hard to resist his appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio insist upon the point of order?

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I will withdraw it.

Mr. CUTCHEON. Mr. Chairman, I offer a formal amendment in line No. 52. Strike out "two" and insert "three."

I desire in the first place to reply in a few words, and in a few words only, to the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLOWER] when he was on the floor a few moments ago, as to the composition politically of the armies of the Republic in the late war. I do not consider this at all as an essential question. It makes no difference to me whatever whether the men who composed that army during the war of the rebellion were men who voted the Democratic or the Republican ticket. They are alike entitled to the gratitude of the nation, they are alike entitled to our honor, and they are alike entitled to the pensions which the bill now before us is designed to give to them. But in view of the debate that has occurred, and inasmuch as that question can be settled upon authority, and very briefly, I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that various Northern States had enacted laws which permitted their soldiers in the field to vote. At the Presidential election of 1864 the soldiers of the following States voted under such State regulations, namely, the soldiers from the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas, and California.

The soldiers who voted, those who could be found by the commissioners of the several States in the field, cast their votes as follows at that election: For Abraham Lincoln, the Republican candidate, 119,763, and for George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate, 34,291, or almost 4 to 1. Of course this is a very small proportion of the soldiers that were actually in the field; but it is enough to determine the ratio between the two parties; and what is true of the voters we may also assume to be true of the non-voters.

Now a word in reply to my excellent and venerable friend from New York [Mr. SPINOLA] who occupied the floor a few minutes ago, in regard to the increase of the annual pension bills from 1876 up to the present time. It is true that pension bills have increased since then and that they have been increased by virtue of new legislation adding to the pensionable classes from time to time. All this is true.

Among other things he claims that the repeal of the arrearages act, which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] said cost the country nearly $400,000,000, was a piece of Democratic legislation. I deny it. I desire to call the attention of the committee to the facts. The act repealing the arrears limitation was introduced by a member of Congress from Kansas, Mr. Cummings, a Republican. On the 19th day of June, 1873, under a suspension of the rules, it was put on its passage on motion of Mr. Haskell, a Republican from Kansas, and the vote was taken. That vote, as shown by the RECORD, is as follows: Democratic votes for the bill 43, Democratic votes against the bill 61; Republican votes for the bill 116, Republicans against the bill, not one.

If that record of the vote for the bill makes it a Democratic measure, a bill which was introduced by a Republican, the passage of which was moved by a Republican, which was carried by the votes of the Republican side, a majority of the Democrats voting against it and every Republican voting for it, then the Democrats are entitled to the credit claimed by the gentleman that it is a Democratic measure, and I am willing that you shall have all that the record entitles you to have. But I confront you with the record in the case.

Again, sir, in regard to the manner in which our pension legislation has risen from year to year. In the Fiftieth Congress I took occasion to submit some remarks on the subject, and called attention to the votes by which the various general pension measures had been passed in the House, and I found in the examination of this question that the Mexican pension bill was passed by the vote of every member of the House, Democrat and Republican, except two, no party line being drawn upon it. Upon the passage of the widows' increase bill in the Forty-ninth Congress, 80 Democrats voted in favor of the bill and 66 against it, while 118 Republicans voted for it and not one against it.

In that case, in the case of the Mexican pension bill only, the majority of the Democrats voted in favor of a general pension measure; and I challenge any man upon this floor or in this country, now and here or at any time hereafter, to show any other general pension measure since the Forty-ninth Congress in which a majority of the Democrats voted in favor of it; and I extend the challenge to show a single instance where the Republican party did not in solid phalanx cast its vote in favor of such measures. Except one case, where Mr. Bisbee, of Florida, voted against the Senate amendment to the Mexican pension bill, I challenge the production of any instance in which the majority of Republicans have not voted in favor of such legislation. When I say general pension legislation I mean legislation affecting large and general classes.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BYNUM rose.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. If I can be recognized I will yield the time to my colleague.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I trust, Mr. Chairman, I shall not need the whole of the time yielded to me by my colleague.

I wish now to pay my compliments for a moment to my friend from Indiana who just rose and whom I interrupted with a question while he was on the floor a few moments ago in regard to the matter of the service-pension bill. He says that the Republican party stands here committed to the passage of the service-pension bill. I suppose he means by that a general service-pension bill, a universal or uniform service pension. Now, I challenge the gentleman from Indiana to point to a word or line in the record of the Republican party in any national or State convention in which the Republican party pledged itself at this Congress or in any other to the passage of a general service-pension bill.

We have pledged ourselves to more liberal pensions for the soldiers. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SPINOLA] a few moments since rose to move an increase of the amount to be carried by this bill to $114,000,000. I tried to get the floor then in order that I might say that I believed that the whole amount, $114,000,000, will be required to pay the pensions for the year 1891, because I believe and trust that before this session ends, through the Republican party of this House, there will be placed upon the statute-book, with the aid of the Republican Senate, liberal pension laws which will take every poor man who is unable to support himself by manual labor out of the almshouses of this country, if any are there, and permit him to make himself respectable among his fellow-men.

Another word, Mr. Chairman. I want here and now to denounce this characterization of the dependent-pension bill as a "pauper bill" as an outrage. These men are poor, and it is no disgrace to be poor. Most of them are poor to-day because of their service to the country; they are poor because they are broken down in health; they are poor because they are unable to help themselves by the labor of their hands; they are poor because bowed down by disease contracted in the line of their duty and in the service of their country.

It is no disgrace to be poor. It is an honor that they were soldiers and wore the uniform of the Republic, and did good service to their country. I denounce the stigmatizing of these honorable men as paupers. They are not paupers. They do not come here as paupers to ask for an alms, but they come to ask that this great, rich, prosperous American Republic will make good to them the strength and the losses which they suffered by their service. I hope we shall be ready to do it. I am in favor of a pension bill that will be broad enough to cover every man who was honorably discharged and who is so disabled that he is not able to support himself honorably.

Now, Mr. Chairman, having said this much, if I have any time remaining I yield it back to the gentleman from California.

Mr. MORROW. I will now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. KELLEY].

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, I addressed the Chair to make a motion before the gentleman was recognized.

Mr. KELLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM] to reply.

Mr. BYNUM. I had no doubt when I called attention of the other side to the fact that they were derelict in performing their promises to the soldiers that several gentlemen would at once rise, and, as usual, flaunt the ensanguined garment, as they always do when the question of pensions comes. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] says that the Democratic party was not the author of any general pension legislation. It was a Democratic House that passed the bill granting arrears of pension.

In the Forty-ninth Congress, under the leadership of one of my former colleagues from Indiana [Mr. Matson], there were three or four general pension bills passed. The bill increasing the pension of widows from $8 to $12 a month; and no more meritorious bill ever did pass. The only fault I found with it was that it did not increase the pensions enough. The bill increasing the pension of another meritorious class, that of deaf soldiers, from $17 to $30 a month.

Another bill increased the pension of the one-legged and one-armed soldiers; and if my recollection serves me aright there was another general pension bill granting a hundred dollars a month to those who had lost both arms. So that, under Democratic Congresses within the last ten years bills have been passed of a general character increasing pensions of the classes that were entitled to consideration over and above any other. If the Republicans were so anxious to pass bills, why was it they did not pass something in the Forty-seventh Congress? Why was it they did not pass a bill during that Congress when they had the power, when they had control of both branches of Congress and the executive department of the Government?

Now, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CUTCHER] speaks of the number of soldiers—the number of Democratic soldiers—that were in the Army, and he cites them from the votes cast in the field for Lincoln as Republicans. Why, there was no Republican candidate for President in 1864. There was a Union candidate and a Union ticket in the field, but there was no Republican candidate.

Mr. MORROW. On what ticket was General McClellan running?

Mr. BYNUM. On both. [Laughter.]

Now, the State of Indiana, following out the line of argument made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLOWER], furnished 197,000 soldiers between 1861 and 1865. While the men were all in the field, in 1864, the Republicans carried the State by 20,000 majority; but in 1863, when they had returned, it became necessary to change the tally-sheets in order to count in a Republican governor by a slender majority. [Applause on the Democratic side.] So you may take other States, as the gentleman well said, that gave extraordinarily large Republican majorities in 1864, but gave Democratic majorities as soon as the soldiers returned home.

Now, I speak with candor; what I have said has been spoken in earnest and in good faith. I want the policy that is to be carried out by the Government and by Congress determined and settled before this House finally adjourns. If we are to grant a service pension, let the soldiers know it now. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

If we are not to pursue that policy, let it be understood now. The soldiers of the country, permit me to say, are getting tired of having "the bloody shirt" waved and pension legislation deferred.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McMILLIN was recognized and yielded to Mr. BYNUM.

Mr. BYNUM. I thank the gentleman, but I shall not trespass much longer upon the time of the committee. In my own district, a few days ago, the Grand Army of the State held their encampment and denounced the Republican party for its failure to keep its promises. Whether those promises were made by the Republican party or not, the soldiers so understood, and it was Republican papers and Republicans that denounced the dependent-pension bill as a "pauper bill," and not Democrats or Democratic papers. When the Grand Army held their encampment a few days ago in the city of Indianapolis they denounced the Republican Administration for failing to redeem its pledges, and served notice that in the future their votes would not be cast for members of that party unless this legislation was carried out.

Now, as I have already said, bills have not only been brought in here appropriating for different purposes all the money that will probably be in the Treasury during the next year, but the Committee on Ways and Means is reputed to have ready a bill to strike off some twenty-five millions of the tax on sugar, which is almost wholly a revenue tax, and to strike off the tax on tobacco, which is wholly a revenue tax. Mr. Chairman, if sixty millions of revenue is to be stricken down, where do you expect to get the money to pension the soldiers, as you have promised? You voted down the proposition which I offered to the rules making it in order to put upon general pension bills a provision to raise the revenue to meet its requirements, which would have enabled us to adopt an income tax so as to take from the wealth of the country the money to pay the soldiers the amounts justly due to them. Now is your opportunity to prove your fidelity to your pretensions.

Under the rules you can bring in a bill at any moment; under the rules you can take it up and pass it any moment; and if you do not do it you are not only failing, but you are refusing to carry out your promises, and I intend, so far as lies in my power, that you shall either bring in these measures or you shall go home and be branded by the soldiers of the country as unfaithful to your pledges. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The Clerk read as follows:

For clerk-hire, $220,000: Provided, That the amount of clerk-hire for each agency shall be apportioned as nearly as practicable in proportion to the number of pensioners paid at each agency.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the words "two hundred and" in the sixty-seventh line. I do not propose to enter at all into this political discussion that has sprung up over this appropriation bill. I want to vote for this bill, if I can conscientiously do so, upon its merits, and it is always a sorrowful thing to me to find angry discussion over an appropriation bill for pensions. I believe that the Union soldiers who deserve pensions should have them, and I am willing to vote for a bill of that sort. But, Mr. Chairman, I make this motion in good faith to elicit an opinion from the Chair and from the committee who report this bill upon the legal effect of its provisions, and I get at my point by offering this amendment, because the $20,000 that will be left is an ample amount for clerk-hire, if I am correct in my legal construction of the bill. In the first section it makes an appropriation, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, "for Army and Navy pensions as follows," and as this bill was drawn by lawyers and is to be passed into a law I say only as follows. I read from the bill:

For invalids, widows, minor children, and dependent relatives, survivors and widows of the war of 1812 and with Mexico, $97,090,761.

Mr. MORROW. If the gentleman will permit a suggestion, perhaps I can meet his point. There is defective punctuation there. There should be a semicolon after the word "relatives."

Mr. STOCKDALE. If the punctuation is defective it ought to be amended, because the punctuation is as much a part of a bill as its words. Now I insist that you shall not appropriate $98,000,000 to the soldiers of the Mexican war and the war of 1812; I insist that you shall include the soldiers of the late war between the States. [Laughter.]

Mr. MORROW. Let them be included then. I move to amend by placing a semicolon after the word "relatives."

Mr. STOCKDALE. You can alter the meaning of a paragraph by a change of punctuation as well as by a change of language, I admit, but that amendment will hardly accomplish the purpose.

A MEMBER. You can not do it so fully, though.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Not so fully.

Mr. CANNON. But my friend [Mr. STOCKDALE] will understand that this bill is in the exact form in which the pension appropriation bill has passed for many years and under which these pensions have been paid, and I suggest that it is perhaps better to follow the usual form.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Why?

Mr. CANNON. For the simple reason that it has always been found sufficient.

Mr. MORGAN. And it has received its construction.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I do not think the question has ever been raised.

Mr. MORGAN. It has received its construction in practice.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I doubt whether the question has ever been considered.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; because all these accounts where money has to be paid out are passed upon by the officers of the Treasury.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Probably it was just taken for granted.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; these payments are all passed upon by the accounting officers of the Treasury, and accounts for many hundreds of millions of dollars have been passed upon where the disbursements were made under appropriations worded in just this way.

Mr. PETERS. Let me suggest to the gentleman that any court, in construing a statute, will consider the intention of the legislature, and there can be no doubt about the intention in this case.

Mr. STOCKDALE. It is true that courts construe a statute according to the intention of the legislators; but, that being so, I do not see why this Congress should impose upon the courts the labor of construing a meaning into a law which they could make plain now by the change of a few words.

Mr. MORROW. Inserting a semicolon, instead of a comma, after the word "relatives" on line 9, page 1, will meet the point. I move that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to answer one or two observations that have fallen from gentlemen upon the other side in the course of this discussion; and, first, I want to say to my friend from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM] that the Republican party have not yet deputed him to construe their policy upon the question of pensions.

Nor is he in a position to criticize the action of the Republican party on this question. He inquires why it was that in the Forty-seventh Congress the Republican party did not pass some general pension bills. The answer is very plain: simply because the soldiers of the nation at that time were not themselves demanding that it should be done. Eight years have gone by since then; and they feel that the time has come when the American nation should begin to pay attention to their just demands. And I have no doubt that, notwithstanding the action of the gentleman with regard to that question, notwithstanding the guardian care he is going to throw around the Republican party, the Republicans of this House, backed by a Republican Senate and a Republican President, will give the country some adequate legislation on this subject that will furnish proper and needed relief to the soldiers of this nation.

Gentlemen on the other side are not in a position to voice the sentiment of the soldiers; at least the gentleman from Indiana has not been deputed as their spokesman.

Mr. BYNUM. I have been deputed by them as their spokesman.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Then why did the gentleman sit here silent during the Fiftieth Congress and, when men on this side of the House were clamoring for recognition to consider general pension legislation favorably reported and standing on the Calendar, constitute one of those who were objecting to that consideration?

Mr. BYNUM. I never stood here objecting to the consideration of pension legislation.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. The gentleman's zeal for pension legislation seems to have come into being since the opening of the Fifty-first Congress.

Mr. BYNUM. I never stood here objecting to pension legislation; and the gentleman from Ohio can not show it.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. I can show the gentleman the day and date when he and others objected when we were asking on this side of the House that consideration should be had for pension legislation—

Mr. BYNUM. No, sir.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. And I will do so in a very few minutes.

Mr. BYNUM. I have never objected to pension legislation.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. If I find I have done the gentleman injustice, I will be honest enough to say so; but it does seem to me that this zeal for pensions on the part of the gentleman from Indiana is certainly new born.

Now, a word to my friend from Ohio, who has seen fit to criticize Commissioner Tanner's method of dealing with the board of examining surgeons in his district. Let me state a little personal experience in regard to this matter. When I came here as a member of the Fiftieth Congress there were in the district which I represent two examining boards. I was intrusted with a petition signed by over five hundred soldiers of the county of Fulton, in my district, asking that an examining board should be appointed by Commissioner Black at Wauseon; for in that county, where a large number of Union soldiers resided, many of them were obliged to travel from 40 to 75 miles to be examined. With that petition in my hand, I called on General Black personally, and asked him to give us an examining board at that place.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I did the same with regard to a county in my district; and I met a similar repulse.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. That request was refused, and refused, as I believe, because I was a Republican representing that district, the district being normally Democratic. As soon as Commissioner Tanner came into office, I made application to him for three boards in that district, one of them at Wauseon, and in each case the application was granted; not only that, but he recommended that a Democrat be appointed with two Republicans on each of those boards, and that was done.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on the amendment is exhausted.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "cases," in line 63, insert "and a new bond shall be required from all pension agents."

The CHAIRMAN. The paragraph to which that amendment relates has been passed.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I ask unanimous consent that we go back in order to adopt this amendment. I think the gentleman in charge of the bill will see that the amendment is pertinent and valuable.

Mr. MORROW. Let the amendment be read again.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Mr. Chairman, I have offered this amendment because I believe it necessary to perfect the bill. Turning to line 58, we find in this bill authority given to any pension agent now in office to place an additional duty upon one of the clerks of his office—a duty of a financial character—the authority to sign official checks. The sureties on the bond heretofore given would not be liable for action taken in pursuance of this new authority; and hence I think it is necessary to require a new bond.

Mr. MORROW. I do not object to the amendment.

There being no objection, the amendment was considered and adopted.

The Clerk read as follows:

For stationery and other necessary expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $25,000.

Mr. STRUBLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by striking out the last word. My purpose is to reply further than has my friend from Ohio [Mr. BOOTHMAN] to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM], who has to-day assured the committee that he is an honest man. [Laughter.]

There is no doubt in my mind of the proposition that the gentleman is an honest man; and, for that matter, I have no doubt the gentleman is honest in whatever he proposes, whether here or elsewhere. But when he voices before this committee the attitude of the Democratic party in reference to the basis of the payment of pensions to be paid the soldiers of the country, all doubt is eliminated from the case, and I am altogether satisfied of his honesty.

What is that attitude? The Democratic party would base the payment of pensions of soldiers of the country on the liquor and tobacco tax; and, as the gentleman said, they would add to that the income tax in order to make the entire basis of these pensions as odious as possible to the people. When the gentleman talks about an income tax, however, he is simply favoring a proposition as the member of the minority party which, when in power, his party never had the candor and courage to attempt to enact into law, a proposition, in short, never favored by that party when in power.

If the payment of pensions depended on the tobacco, liquor, and income taxes what would be the result? It would arouse a sentiment throughout the country against the whole pension system which the Republican party has established and maintained. I, for one, will never consent while a member of this House to a proposition of this kind. On the contrary I would say that after the payment of the legitimate annual expenses of the Government the payment of pensions should be made with the most sacred money coming into the Treasury from whatever source of revenue, whether from the sale of public lands or customs duties or any other source, and that nothing is too sacred in the way of revenue out of which this country should pay its most binding and exalted obligations to the men who defended and preserved its life.

We should not lower the standard of pensions to tobacco, liquor, and income taxes as has been suggested by the gentleman from Indiana. I have no objection to this class of taxation, and if it is necessary to again resort to an income tax, well and good, but I do for one object with all the emphasis I possess to the Democratic theory of making the payment of these high obligations of Government depend on collections of money from the amount of tobacco chewed and smoked, and the quantity of whisky consumed by the American people. I do object most strenuously to a policy that will tend to dishonor our pension system by yoking it with filth, debauchery, and crime.

I do object to such an association of payment of pensions with disgusting practices among certain of our people as would, in the not remote future, lead to a sentiment among a new and early generation of absolute disgust with the pension system because its maintenance may depend on the taxation of such articles. I do not wish the time ever to come when any man, woman, or child in the American Republic can point the finger at the unfortunate and filthy habits of any of our people and say, "But for such as these your soldiers, their widows and orphans, would go to the poor-house or suffer want." Think of such a thing for a moment!

The noblest services of patriotism, the purest offerings of love and devotion to country, the loss of health, of limb, and of life, to be rewarded primarily and necessarily by proceeds of money from a tax on articles most disgusting to every pure mother, wife, and sister, as well as every man in the land who has not allowed himself to yield to the unfortunate vices of tobacco eating and smoking and that greater and damming evil, the use of intoxicating liquors. And yet this is the Democratic proposition, not alone of heated debate here, but of solemn party declaration made deliberately to the country.

Mr. Chairman, I hope this monstrous attempt, although it is not a new one, to degrade our noblest offerings of gratitude and justice may be fully appreciated by the soldiers of the land, as I believe it will be, and that our soldier voters will not fail to remember that a restoration of the Democratic party to complete power, legislative and executive, would mean the exact disgrace I have foreshadowed.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ALLEN, of Mississippi. I regret, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE] should be of the opinion that the income tax is odious. It may be odious to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. STRUBLE], but it is not odious to others. It is not odious to me. These pensions are to be paid. My friend from Indiana [Mr. CHEADLE] told us to-day of the enormous interest paid on the public debt since the war, a debt incurred when the soldiers were out fighting. I say, sir, it is time the incomes of those gentlemen who reaped such fortunes in speculation should be used to repay some of the expenses of the war. [Applause.]

The gentleman may say that the income tax is odious. I know it is odious to you and your party. But I say in behalf of those agriculturists whom I stand here to talk for to-day it is not odious to them. They think it is time the wealth of the country was bearing some part of the burden of taxation. [Applause.]

I warn gentlemen on this floor that the people will not pay tribute to the rich always without exacting something in return. I commend to you the great speech of Senator VOORHEES made in the Senate a day or two ago in the interest of the farmer. I may print it, or a part of it, in my remarks [laughter and applause], for he said it almost as well as I could myself. [Laughter.]

No, Mr. Chairman, I do not know but what the whisky and tobacco and income taxes should bear some part of the burdens of this Government and let some relief be afforded to the agricultural and laboring people of the country who are bearing the most of them now.

Gentlemen rise here and denounce the tax on incomes as odious. I am sorry it is odious, but it ought not to be. It is not odious to me; I do not mind it. [Laughter.] It is not odious to the people clamoring for some relief from the burdens imposed upon them. I, for one, sir, would be willing to see the expenditures of this Government drawn from the incomes. The trouble with gentlemen and the trouble with the party they represent is that they represent the incomes and they do not represent the honest toilers of the country. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BELDEN. Mr. Chairman, the history of this gray old earth of ours is full of epochs, and of these none has been of more startling import or has impressed itself upon the history of the human race and of its civilization more deeply, or with results which will continue with ever-widening circles down the ages yet to come, than that memorable spring morning, April 12, 1861, when the first shot fired by the besieging host of rebels upon the beleaguered Union garrison at Fort Sumter aroused the loyal North and East and West to arms. The echoes of that gun had scarcely died away before the loyal States became transformed, as if by magic, into one vast recruiting ground.

Since the days of 1812 the sentiment of loyalty, although still present in every breast, was, in a measure, slumbering; but as the reverberating thunder from the Stevens rebel battery in Charleston Harbor rolled sullenly away it called to life a living flame of patriotism like the flaming tongues that descended upon the disciples in the olden time. Every city, town, and village, nay, every hamlet and group of houses by the wayside, became a center of intense excitement, a recruiting ground whence issued the hardy son of toil who dropped the handles of the plow, the artisan who left his tools and trade, the clerk who swung outward the counting-house door, never again to re-enter it; and all these, cheered upon their Southern journey toward the dread unknown of pangs and wounds and death by tears and blessings, by garlands and kisses and hand-shakings, went forth by tens and hundreds of thousands, to return no more forever.

As the weary months and years rolled on fathers, mothers, sisters, the principals of schools and colleges, constituted themselves as earnest but unpaid recruiting officers to fill the depleted rosters of the regiments at the front; nay, the very pastors, neglecting for the nonce the spiritual necessities of their flocks, enrolled themselves as members of the church militant, and, making a rostrum of the pulpit, opened wide the church doors for soldiers of their own recruitment, who in darker hours were carried through those doors again to fill the sick bed or the burial vault beneath the sacred roof.

But the footsteps of the trampling hosts who went forth eager for the fray had more substantial cheer than the speech, the blessing, or the farewell kiss of fond, approving kindred, for the farmer was promised, with all the sad solemnity of that awful time, the place once more behind the plow, to the artisan his anvil or his loom, to the clerk his ledger or his counter. To every one of these it was told that they should lose nothing by reason of their patriotism; their places should be kept sacred and inviolable, subject to their occupancy on their return home. Nay; for these young men, who went forth to save our country as true patriots, there was a far grander, and, in fact, an all-powerful sponsor.

For them the great Government which they sought to save stood forward promising many wonderful things in their behalf. Nor was this all; for the separate States which formed integral parts of the loyal portion of this great Union each severally for itself stood committed and pledged, not only by the general law, but in its own behoof, to cherish, care for, and reward its sons who left its boundaries in the sacred cause of truth and right.

In September, 1861, the great war governor of Pennsylvania in addressing the celebrated Pennsylvania Reserve Corps used the following language, which was in substance echoed throughout the loyal States:

All our material wealth and the life of every man in Pennsylvania stand pledged to vindicate the right, to sustain the Government, and to restore the ascendancy of law and order. Should the wrong prevail, should treason and rebellion succeed, we have no government. Progress is stopped, civilization stands still, and Christianity in the world, for the time, must cease—cease forever. Liberty, civilization, and Christianity hang upon the result of this great contest. God is for the truth and right. Stand by your colors, my friends, and the right will prevail. Thousands of your fellow-citizens at home look to you to vindicate the honor of your great State. If you fail, hearts and homes will be made desolate. If you succeed, on your return you will be hailed as heroes who have gone forth to battle for the right.

As the war progressed and its cruel maw seemed still to demand a larger number of victims, the population of the loyal States began to stagger under the stupendous burden, and the filling up of the depleted regiments in the front and the constant formation of new ones began to drain the human resources of the time, but still the patriotism of the American freeman rose equal to the occasion. As the women of despairing Carthage in the olden time brought their gold, silver, and jewels to fill the empty treasury—nay, even cut off their flowing tresses to make bow-strings for the legionaries—so the General Government, the State, the county, and the towns contributed without stint and gave many pledges for the future.

It seems to me that it would be well at this time to recall some of the sufferings we propose to recompense by this bill and the nature of the services rendered and the terrible character of the sufferings undergone by the patriots who thus went forth to save from destruction the Government, nay, the very homes which they left.

In a letter published in the New York Tribune, and written by an accomplished and eminent physician of the West, whose opportunities for observation in this country and Europe entitle him to speak with authority, occurs the following concerning the military hospitals of Missouri in January, 1862:

Eighteen thousand men in camp at Otterville and 300 sick scattered in thirteen small, miserable hovels. They were in a most pitiable condition. Everything wanting—food, raiment, beds, medicines.

It would be impossible to describe the wretchedness of that place and of our poor soldiers. The mail train took us to Syracuse; eight houses, among them two hotels, filled with sick. I thought Otterville exhibited an unrivaled picture of misery, but it was greatly surpassed by Syracuse. The houses, the beds, the patients, filthy in the extreme, the stench in the rooms absolutely intolerable. No pig-sty I ever saw looked more disorderly and filthy. No healthy nurse visible, but the hardly convalescent—with difficulty unambulating—invaluable, the only nurse, unacquainted with his duty and wholly unable to perform it when he learns it.

It sickens me as I recall it to my recollection; it will nauseate you as you read this. Is it necessary that our soldiers should suffer thus? A large number of those I saw are men well-to-do in this world, men of means and position, but in camp and in these hospitals merged and lost in a mire of filth.

Another letter in the same paper states that—

One of the medical officers of the Fort Royal expedition urged the necessity of suitable hospital accommodations, at least the legal amount of hospital tent room, and was replied to that hospital tents were scarce and must be given out farther north; that in the warm climate of South Carolina hospital accommodations would not be needed.

The letter further stated that "the thermometer at that time would rise to 85° in the day-time and ice would form at night." The editor in commenting on this condition of our sick soldiers said:

Is the nation willing that its volunteer soldiers, its elect who came forward in this hour of national peril to give their lives for the life of the country, should perish at Hilton Head for want of such shelter from the weather as humanity would give a sick dog; and should be rotting in Missouri hospitals like the jailbirds of Newgate before Howard came to their rescue? Any civil hospital or almshouse or county jail thus murderously mismanaged would be indicted as a nuisance and the managers punished as criminals.

But there is a sterner and darker side to the picture than even the foregoing. In an interesting and graphic volume entitled Battle-Field and Prison Pen, the author of which wrote from his own experience, occurs the following:

Comparatively little is known of the terrible sufferings of the inmates of these Southern hell-holes, the Southern prisons; and with all you may glean from those who endured their horrors and relate their sufferings, yet will it be far short of the whole truth, for no human tongue or pen can describe the agony, wretchedness, and misery the poor soldier endured who fell into the hands of the rebels. In Andersonville alone 13,269 Union prisoners, who were in the prime of life, strong, robust, and healthy, perished. In all the Southern prisons, as nearly as could be ascertained, about 65,000 men fell victims to rebel brutality.

Nor must it be forgotten that a far larger number of those imprisoned escaped death only to linger, for the rest of their lives, the miserable victims of loathsome and horrible maladies begotten of their cruel and barbarous treatment in these same Southern prison pens. Of the vast "grand army" of patriots who went forth conquering and to conquer, quite a large percentage sleep "the sleep that knows no breaking" upon Southern battle-fields or in unknown graves, while a larger percentage returned home maimed for life or disabled by wounds or disease. As a fact but very few, if any, who survived returned home in perfect health.

Does it appear to the dispassionate mind that we have wholly kept our promises to these heroes who for their part most nobly fulfilled their pledge to save the Union? Let us see. Upon their return to their homes in city, town, and village, the ablest oratorical talent was employed to welcome them. They were received as heroes, with bands of music and processions. The streets were decorated for the occasion and the civic dignitaries wine, dined, and feted them. They were conveyed in carriages drawn by white horses from the railroad depot to the banquet hall through streets filled with men, women, and children who had come forth to welcome the veterans who had saved their country, their homes, their firesides. We then realized most thoroughly that these self-same patriots had saved the nation for us. But I wonder, as the years grow on, whether our gratitude is still as great and heartfelt, whether the knowledge of their services is still as much before us, or if perchance the lapse of years has left us measurably lukewarm.

The first general pension law which fixed the ratings for disabled survivors of the late war was adopted in 1862 at a time when the Treasury was depleted and when no man was able to tell what would be required of it before peace should once more reign within our borders. The measure in question was necessarily a somewhat meager one, but even at that period a feeling was abroad in the national Legislature that we should still more thoroughly redeem the pledges which we had already made to our gallant soldiers. On the occasion of the discussion of the measure ref of this House

I want to see country, where majors or captains had enough to apply to the country, the land defense of their country, of war, you would have no of the nation, be no President, flag at Norfolk of victories by the flag of the one extremity, our citizen soldiers

You talk about ferings and pr would have n of the nation, be no President, flag at Norfolk of victories by the flag of the one extremity, our citizen soldiers

From time isolation which ratings for a left dependence of Pensions, his superior system pursu and hinders by the pensi his way; he establish, no his witness; criminals with Over one h should, as a immediately the Pension advertise for giving of inf claim.

Indeed, I tice prevails ever the king a decision or whole medic fixing the ra that comes a them off jus ings; while, of affairs mos

While the Bureau may the promises the widows, a no better tha may be broad should its ch pledges given

When the sion in 1879 the measure of fact, the p the commerce

These paym money so p ders; and, wi countless th which to-day The long a who wore th fast

Never has any people a With granar can surely be more wise t promises wh bounties we holder was a preciated car paid, paid bo As for mys promises, co Mr. MORE to the House The motion The commi chair, Mr. B measure referred to a prominent Representative who is now a member of this House said:

I want to see the men who have left their homes to fight the battles of their country, whether they be citizen soldiers in the ranks or generals or colonels or majors or captains, placed on the same common level. The discrimination is had enough in time of war as the result of necessity, but it is intolerable when applied to the bounty of the nation. And when the gentleman tells me that the country can not bear the expense of this bounty toward the brave and gallant defenders of the Union, I reply to him that had they not rallied at the call of their country in the hour of impending danger, and met the deadly perils of war, you would have had no country to-day.

You talk about not being able to remunerate your people for their toils and sufferings and provide for their widows and children. Sir, but for them, I repeat, you would have no country, no Capitol standing here to-day to gladden the hearts of the nation, no ships now moored in your magnificent river; there would be no President of the United States to gladden his eye with the fall of the rebel flag at Norfolk; there would be no great people rejoicing this day at the tidings of victories by which the rebellion is being crushed and rebellion falling before the flag of the Republic, with the just hope that that flag shall soon wave from one extremity of the land to the other. It is to those brave soldiers alone—to our citizen soldiers—that we are indebted for all this.

From time to time this act has been supplemented by additional legislation which has mostly been in the direction of increased and specific ratings for specific conditions. Still, however, the soldier is largely left dependent upon the sweet will and pleasure of the Commissioner of Pensions, who administers the law subject only to the review of his superior officer, the Secretary of the Interior. In fact, the whole system pursued by the Pension Office seems to be one which prevents and hinders the soldier from availing himself of the benefits conferred by the pension laws. It seems as though every obstacle is thrown in his way; he is required, in order to obtain a status in the office, to establish, not only his own honesty and truthfulness, but that also of his witness; he is treated per se as a fraud and his agent as particeps criminis with him in the perpetration of a fraud.

Over one hundred thousand certificates of disability, the facts in which should, as a mere act of common honesty, be conveyed to the soldiers immediately interested, are carefully guarded in the secret archives of the Pension Bureau. Unlike our English cousins across the water, who advertise for such claimants as have not come forward, we forbid the giving of information which may lead to the filing or prosecution of a claim.

Indeed, I understand that in the Pension Office that common practice prevails which is so aptly illustrated by the old adage that "Whenever the king takes snuff the court sneezes," for if the Secretary makes a decision or the Commissioner a ruling unfavorable to a claimant the whole medical branch, which has charge of the important question of fixing the rates, immediately proceeds to reject or reduce everything that comes along until a decision or ruling in favor of a claimant sets them off just as irrationally in the opposite direction of generous ratings; while, unfortunately for our gallant soldiers, the former condition of affairs most frequently prevails.

While the late Commissioner Tanner's administration of the Pension Bureau may possibly have erred in degree, it was at least in the line of the promises made to the soldiers from 1861 to 1865. As a matter of fact, the widows, orphans, and dependent relatives of the soldier have fared no better than himself. As regards the future of the pension system, it may be broadly and succinctly stated that at no time since April, 1861, should its chances for improvement or for the fullest redemption of all pledges given be better than at present.

When the question of the payment of arrears was under discussion in 1879 the claim was made here and throughout the country that the measure would bankrupt the United States Treasury. As a matter of fact, the payment of the arrears proved to be a powerful factor in the commercial prosperity of the year 1880 and several successive years. These payments, indeed, averted a threatened financial panic. The money so paid, instead of going abroad, was spent within our own borders; and, widely distributed, after bestowing relief and blessings upon countless thousands, found its way back into the national Treasury, which to-day is gorged to repletion.

The long and wavering line of these maimed and scarred veterans, who wore the blue that we might continue to be a nation, is narrowing fast.

Never has a kind and bounteous Providence so benignly smiled upon any people as He has done upon our own during the past few years. With granaries well filled and with an overflowing Treasury there can surely be no time more suitable, no act more graceful, no policy more wise than to keep to the spirit as well as to the letter those promises which we made to the saviors of the nation whose pay and bounties we gave them in sorely depreciated currency, while the bondholder was allowed to purchase, at a heavy discount, in the same depreciated currency, those national obligations which we subsequently paid, paid both principal and interest, in minted gold.

As for myself I am in favor of redeeming the letter and spirit of our promises, cost what it may.

Mr. MORROW. I move that the committee rise and report the bill to the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having taken the chair, Mr. BURROWS reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7160) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for other purposes, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

The amendments of the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MORROW moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. WISE. I rise to a question of privilege. On yesterday I offered two petitions or memorials of my constituents with my name and reference to the Committee on Claims indorsed on their back. They were handed by myself to the clerk now in front of the Chair. There is no mention of it in the RECORD. I wish to say in addition that after the most diligent search to-day I have been unable to find them. I wish to have them appear in the RECORD. They were offered by me in accordance with the rules of the House.

The petitions, I will say, Mr. Speaker, are from Messrs. A. S. Lee and Yale & Co., of Richmond, Va., and relate to the renting of quarters from these gentlemen subsequent to the war by the Army of the United States.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the petitions to which the gentleman refers were placed in the petition-box.

Mr. WISE. They were, sir, placed in the box by the gentleman who stands immediately to the left of the Chair. I have no censure whatever to pass upon him or complaint. I saw him put them in the box, where they belong, myself. I only desired to call attention to the fact, so that they may be traced.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SPINOLA. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the unfinished business coming over from the last private-bill day, this day being set apart under the rules for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar. The Clerk will report the first bill reported from the Committee of the Whole.

ALBERT H. EMERY.

The bill (H. R. 3538) for the relief of Albert H. Emery, reported from the Committee of the Whole with an amendment, to strike out "$200,000" and insert "$50,000," was considered, the amendment concurred in, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GENERAL JOHN C. FRÉMONT.

The next business reported from the Committee of the Whole was the bill (H. R. 2849) authorizing the President to appoint and retire John C. Frémont as a major-general in the United States Army.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BRITISH BARK CHANCE.

The next business reported from the Committee of the Whole was the bill (S. 1296) for the relief of the owners, officers, and crew of the British bark Chance.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

DENISON AND WASHITA VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Chair will also lay before the House the Senate amendments to the bill (H. R. 856) to amend section 1 and section 9 of an act entitled "An act to authorize the Denison and Washita Valley Railroad Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes."

The amendments of the Senate were read at length.

Mr. PERKINS. I move that the House non-concur in the Senate amendments and ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes thereon. The motion was agreed to.

TENTS FOR OVERFLOWED DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back the following bill (H. R. 8458) authorizing the purchase of tents by the Secretary of War, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to purchase twenty-five hundred tents, or so many thereof as may be necessary, for the use of the people driven from their homes in the States of Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana by the present floods prevailing in said States.

Sec. 2. That said tents shall be loaned to the authorities of said States for the purposes aforesaid, at the discretion of the Secretary of War.

Sec. 3. That $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise approprinted, to pay for the said tents herein authorized to be purchased; and this appropriation shall be available upon the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I think some explanation ought to be made about this bill.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker, I will state for the information of the gentleman from Illinois and for the House that this bill has been introduced at the urgent request of and on consultation with a large number of planters and persons affected by the present floods of the Mississippi River at or near Vicksburg, Miss.

The bill has been submitted to the Secretary of War and is approved by him. On application to him several days ago for the loan of certain tents to protect the people who had been driven from their homes in that region by the floods, he informed us that they could not be furnished because there were not enough tents in the War Department or any tents whatever at their disposal; and therefore it would be necessary, before the tents could be furnished by the Department, for Congress to pass an appropriation bill authorizing their purchase.

The people to be protected are poor colored people generally, who have recently gone into that portion of the country from North Carolina and the other Atlantic States. They have been driven from their humble homes—the homes they have occupied—by the high waters, and large numbers of them are at present in the open air, with neither protection nor shelter. It is impossible to find house room for the large number of people who have thus been driven from their homes by the high water, and as a measure of humanity I hope there will be no objection to the passage of this bill. It is in the interest of very poor people who are unable to provide for themselves.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Louisiana what information has he—I mean what official information—as to the number of persons who are thus destitute?

Mr. BOATNER. I have no official information, except a dispatch received from the sheriff of Madison Parish on the day before yesterday, who stated that at that time five hundred of these people were needing protection.

The bill has been drawn for a much larger number of tents than is required to provide for this particular case, because we anticipated that there might be needs of the same kind at other points on the Mississippi, in the State of Arkansas, and at other places. It was not expected, however, that the Secretary of War would purchase more tents with the appropriation proposed than would be actually necessary to meet the difficulties of the present situation, but that he should have enough funds to meet any demand that might be made upon him to supply these homeless people.

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will allow me, I would like to ask him if there is a report from the Committee on Military Affairs accompanying this bill?

Mr. BOATNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman says that the Secretary of War recommends the enactment of this legislation?

Mr. BOATNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CANNON. Does he make that recommendation in a communication?

Mr. BOATNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes, it is here.

Mr. CANNON. I think the House should be placed in possession of all the facts.

Mr. BOATNER. I will send it to the Clerk's desk and have it read. The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., March 20, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to state that should the inclosed bill become a law it is believed that in ten days or two weeks' time the number of tents named therein, or tents of equal accommodating power, can be purchased for delivery where needed.

These tents, when no longer required, if preserved and returned to the Department, would be useful in similar future emergencies. Not having any tents on hand available in the Quartermaster's Department, the appropriation is recommended.

Very respectfully,

S. B. HOLABIRD,
Quartermaster-General, United States Army.

The Hon. SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, March 20, 1890.

SIR: At the request of Hon. Mr. BOATNER, I transmit herewith a draught of a bill "authorizing the purchase of tents for certain purposes and making appropriations therefor," left with me by him, and inclose a report of the Quartermaster-General of this date upon the subject. I concur in his recommendation.

Very respectfully,

REDFIELD PROCTOR, Secretary of War.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BOATNER. I will state for the information of the House that it is not intended that these tents should be donated or given to the authorities of these States or to these people, but only a temporary loan, only for this emergency.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I would like to say that I was not present when this bill was considered, and from the reading of it I do not understand whether any bond or other requirement is to be given for the return of the tents.

Mr. MORGAN. The colored people could not give bond.

Mr. CANNON. I will state to my friend that I do not object to the consideration of the bill, nor do I want to object to its passage, provided the House be in possession of information that this flood or misfortune is so great in the localities mentioned that it is not practicable for the local authorities of the township, county, or State to afford the necessary relief; in other words, that the misfortune of the flood is so great that unless the General Government intervenes there is to be suffering among the people there.

If that is the case, following the precedents, not so frequent, maybe, in late years as in former years, but following the precedents, and from a standpoint of humanity, I think that it might be, and indeed would be, in such a case proper that the relief be afforded.

Mr. BOATNER. I will state, in reply to the remarks of the gentleman and for the information of the House and the gentleman, that during the last four or five years a very large area of country has been opened up to cultivation in the back portion of the river parishes—those portions of Madison and East Carroll which ever since the war have been abandoned as being so subject to overflow as to be unfit for cultivation until the construction of levees of the Mississippi.

Within the last few years a large number of plantations have been opened and the people there employed are where the country is overflowed and the water up to the eaves of the houses. Of course the people who have been living in those houses had to get out. They have had to come out to the front plantations.

There is an immense mass of people crowded on the front plantations. The planters have no house room for them and the authorities have been strained to the last point in protecting the overflowed country.

Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman also state that the States of Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana are, under existing conditions, unable to relieve that distress? If they are, it ought to be relieved.

Mr. BOATNER. I am satisfied, Mr. Speaker, so far as the State of Louisiana is concerned, they can not be relieved by the State authorities, because the governor of the State has sent telegrams here asking for this legislation. I have telegrams from the local authorities asking us to obtain this relief, and a telegram from the planters that they are willing and able to feed these people, but that it is impossible for them to shelter them.

Mr. CUTCHEON. What is the probable duration of the overflow, judging from past experience?

Mr. BOATNER. Probably from one month to six weeks; but anywhere from one to two months.

Mr. CUTCHEON. I suppose it would be at least two weeks or fifteen days before the tents could get down there.

Mr. BOATNER. We think they should get down there in ten days.

Mr. COLEMAN. I hope that this bill will pass. I hold in my hand a telegram from my people, which reads as follows:

CONVENT, LA., March 21, 1890.

H. D. COLEMAN, Representative, Washington, D. C.:
Crevasse in our parish 500 feet wide. People in distress. Could you not get a part of the $100,000 appropriation for us? Act at once.

F. WAGNER SPACK,
President Police Jury, St. James Parish, Louisiana.

Now, gentlemen, you do not know what that means until you see part of the Mississippi River rolling through a gap 500 feet wide and about 8 feet deep.

A letter from J. L. Gaudet, dated Convent Post-Office, March 18, contains the following information:

This community has lately been visited by a terrible calamity, which you have no doubt seen by the New Orleans papers. The Nita crevasse, which occurred on the property of Mr. Amant Bourgeois, has already spread ruin and desolation throughout a large portion of this parish, the people of which will soon be in great distress. The water has already invaded the Grand Point, a settlement of Perique tobacco growers, situated in the interior about 4 miles from the river, and the inhabitants have to abandon house and home to seek a place of safety from the floods. The first, second, and third wards of this parish and portions of Ascension and St. John the Baptist will also suffer.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when people are living on the roofs of their houses they have not much time to stand upon the order of how they are to get protection from the elements. This bill provides for $25,000 to be paid for tents if they are called for by the authorities of the States. If they are not needed they will not call for them; and as my colleague has stated, it is simply to be a loan, and not a donation. They will be loaned on such conditions as will secure their return. I hope the bill will pass and pass quickly.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, very briefly I wish to say that so far as Arkansas is concerned I am not a representative of that portion of the State which is subject to overflow, and I am not therefore in a position to give any advice with reference to this matter. But I do know that during the past six or eight months it is represented that 8,000 colored people have gone into the eastern portion of the State, along the Mississippi River front, from the two Carolinas, Georgia, and perhaps other States.

I know all these people and when they are without food they are in a wretched condition who represent recently sea-tlemen from formation in any district State and p

Mr. BOA Arkansas w made from

The bill ing engross

Mr. COL was passed; table.

The latte

Mr. RUS following r

Resolved by printed and Coast and G

the usual ne shall be for t representatives, a survey.

The resol

Mr. RUS was adopte

the table.

The latte

Mr. SPR

printed and the Union,

the Commi

tee with re

state that know it w views of th

The SPI

tee?

Mr. SPE

views of th

There w

Mr. MC

instruct m

(Miscellan

the accom

The reso

read, as fo

Resolved,

furnish the mitted to b

ment of the requested i

taken to re

renated: th of the Pens and to info

the Govern their partic

The cor

Resolved,

furnish to

I know also from representations in the public press that many of these people were induced to go there perhaps on misrepresentations, and when they reached their destination they were without bread, without food, without shelter, and without clothes. What condition they are in in case of an overflow no one can estimate or form any idea of unless we get some explanation from that quarter. The gentleman who represents the great Mississippi River front is the gentleman recently seated by the House in the place from which we think the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Cate] was improperly removed. What information he may have I do not know; but it seems to me that if there is any distress there he ought to know it, as he is recently from the State and perhaps in possession of information on that subject.

Mr. BOATNER. I will state for the information of the gentleman, Arkansas was included only in anticipation that demands might be made from there and in order to obviate the necessity of another bill. The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. Mr. COLEMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REPORT OF COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Mr. RUSSELL, from the Committee on Printing, reported back the following resolution with the recommendation that it be adopted:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 5,000 extra copies of the report of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, together with the usual necessary progress sketches and illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for the use of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. RUSSELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WYOMING.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, together with the report heretofore made on that subject by the Committee on Territories, the views of the minority of the committee with reference to the admission of Wyoming into the Union. I will state that at the time the report of the committee was made I did not know it was to be submitted and had no opportunity to present the views of the minority.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman permission from the committee?

Mr. SPRINGER. Yes, sir; it was stated in the committee that the views of the minority would be submitted.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE PENSION OFFICE.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Invalid Pensions instruct me to report back the resolution which I send to the desk (Miscellaneous Document No. 51) and to recommend the adoption of the accompanying substitute.

The resolution and substitute as reported from the committee were read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish the House of Representatives the evidence taken and the report submitted to him by the committee which he appointed to investigate the management of the Pension Office under the late Commissioner Tanner. That he also be requested to inform the House of Representatives what steps, if any, have been taken to recover the money paid to persons who were illegally and improperly rated; that he also be requested to furnish a list of the names of the employees of the Pension Office who were engaged in rating themselves and each other, and to inform the House of Representatives who of those on said list are still in the Government employ, and who have been discharged, if any, on account of their participation in such frauds on the Government.

The committee report the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish to the House of Representatives the evidence taken and the report submitted by him to the committee which he appointed to investigate the management of the Pension Office under the late Commissioner Tanner; and that he also be requested to inform the House what cases have been rated in the Pension Office during the past two years, and what, if any, have been illegally or improperly so rated; and, if any cases have been rated illegally, whether action has been taken to recover the money wrongfully paid; that he also be requested to inform the House of Representatives whether any employees of the Pension Office were directly or indirectly engaged in rating themselves, and, if so, to give the names of such persons, and also to inform the House who of those thus engaged are still continued in Government employ, and the reasons why, and who, if any, have been discharged on account of their participation in said rating.

The substitute was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was adopted.

Mr. MORRILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DENISON AND WASHITA VALLEY.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. PERKINS, Mr. McCORD, and Mr. HARE as conferees on the part of the House upon the bill (H. R. 856) to amend section 1 and section 9 of an act entitled "An act to authorize the Denison and Washita Valley Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1889.

BRIDGE OVER BAYOU BERNARD, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the joint resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk, being the joint resolution (H. Res. 105) "to continue in force an act authorizing the construction of a bridge over Bayou Bernard, in the State of Mississippi."

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over Bayou Bernard, in the State of Mississippi," approved February 23, 1887, be, and the same is hereby, revived and continued in force and effect; and that the time for the completion of the bridge therein provided for be extended three years from February 23, 1890, and that said act be so revived and extended with all its provisions in full force the same as though the time in the original bill for the completion of said bridge had been six years instead of three years.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. STOCKDALE moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted, as follows:

To Mr. HENDERSON, of North Carolina, indefinitely, from and after the 22d instant, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. COWLES, for ten days from and after Saturday the 22d, on account of important business.

To Mr. BROSIUS, indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. CANDLER, of Georgia, for ten days, on account of important business.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, the House, under the rule, took a recess until 8 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House, at 8 o'clock p. m., resumed its session, and was called to order by Mr. MORROW, as Speaker pro tempore.

The Clerk read the following:

SPEAKER'S ROOM, Washington, March 21, 1890.

Mr. MORROW, of California, is hereby appointed Speaker pro tempore for this evening.

T. B. REED, Speaker.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORRILL. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of business on the Private Calendar under the special order for Friday evening.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. There were two bills reported from the Committee of the Whole last Friday evening and pending at the adjournment. I wish to ask whether those bills ought not to be disposed of now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. They can be disposed of now or after the Committee of the Whole rises this evening.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. It is immaterial to me.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. MORRILL, it was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, in the chair.

EDWARD HAYNES.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4694) for the relief of Edward Haynes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward Haynes, late a private of Company K, One hundred and forty-first Regiment New York Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. BELKNAP) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4694) granting a pension to Edward Haynes, submit the following report:

This claim was rejected by the Department on the ground that there was no record in the War Department showing origin of rheumatism or resulting disability from measles and exposure, and from claimant's inability to furnish such evidence.

The records of the War Department show that claimant enlisted August 22, 1862, and served until June, 1865, showing a service of two years nine months and seventeen days as a member of Company K, One hundred and forty-first New York Infantry, and that while on duty with his regiment near Kingston, Ga., contracted measles and rheumatism, and on account of exposure in field and camp hospitals, from which he has never recovered. The records also show that he was sent to hospital at Chattanooga; from there to Nashville, Tenn., and later to Jeffersonville, Ind.

The evidence of several witnesses shows that he was a sound man when he enlisted. It is also shown that claimant participated in several battles. Also that he was present and treated in the hospitals above noted for measles and rheumatism, and that he was returned to his regiment August 30, 1864.

It is also shown that he was first made sick with the measles while on picket duty, and was carried in the morning from said picket line sick and thoroughly wet by a heavy rain that had fallen during the night, and was moved to Chattanooga while so sick in a common box-car.

The claimant makes the following statement: After release from hospital started for the front to join regiment at Chattanooga; was placed on detached duty at Chattanooga; later was sent with other troops to Nashville, where he was engaged in the battle with Hood and in the pursuit of his defeated army, where many streams had to be forded and where all the forces were very much exposed, and again he was troubled with rheumatism. It seems that much of this sickness was while he was absent from his company and with strangers, who could not be found after his discharge. Claim was filed for pension in 1883, not until he was so completely disabled that he could no longer earn a living for himself and wife, and since that time he has been in an almost dependent position, and is now utterly destitute and an object of charity.

There is plenty of evidence to show him a good and faithful soldier; to show that he was in several hospitals for treatment and that he has been treated for these troubles since 1867. The report of medical board at Grand Rapids, Mich., February 3, 1890, gives a three-fourths rating of total disability. The testimony of Dr. O. A. Jakway, of Breeseport, N. Y., who treated claimant from January, 1867, to November, 1879, is conclusive and very full as to claimant's condition during that period. The only missing links in the testimony is between the periods June, 1865, and January, 1867, and between 1879 and 1883. The death of physicians and others knowing to these periods of his life seems to be the main reason for insufficient proof.

The claimant is now in a very destitute condition and totally disabled, and I therefore recommend that his name be placed on the pension-roll, subject to the rules and regulations of the Department.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I have looked over the papers in this case, and will state some facts as I have gathered them from the investigation I have made.

In 1887 C. J. Darling, a special examiner, examined this case at Howard City, Mich., where the claimant resides. He took depositions, among others that of the claimant himself. From the claimant's affidavit it appears that he was employed in what he designated as a "temperate restaurant," receiving an irregular and uncertain compensation. The testimony of the claimant shows that he is in bad health and unable to do much work. The cause of his ill health he attributes to rheumatism contracted in the service; and the question before the Department was whether that claim was well founded. I quote from the claimant's affidavit:

I claim a pension for rheumatism and its results. I make no claim for anything else. I never contracted any other disease in the Army that I know of. The results of rheumatism in my case are pain in my breast, difficulty of breathing, disease of heart, disease of the spine, disease of kidneys, and disease of stomach.

Again:

Of course I had pains; but the first I ever had what I call rheumatism was the summer when I was discharged, after I got home.

Again:

I do not think I ever had any medical treatment in the service for rheumatism.

This is the testimony of the claimant himself at an examination before an officer of the Pension Department.

In his report the special examiner says:

He (claimant) was present in person and represented by an attorney throughout my examination of the case. It is quite clear that what he terms the results of rheumatism are diseases of recent origin and in no way due to rheumatism nor to his military service.

That is what the examiner says.

Much is said in the report made by the Committee on Invalid Pensions about claimant having had measles during his service; but it is clear from evidence in the case that he entirely recovered from that disease after it had run the usual course. Special Examiner Darling, in his report, from which I have already quoted, says:

Nor can any connection between measles and his present disability be traced. To my mind the fact that he had entirely recovered from measles before resuming his duties as a soldier and undergoing the exposures incident thereto, effectually disposes of that disease.

Besides, Mr. Chairman, the claimant himself states that he does not predicate his claim upon the results of measles or any other disease than that of rheumatism itself.

The conclusion of the Department is thus expressed:

Rejected on the ground that there is no record at the War Department of rheumatism, and the inability of claimant to furnish evidence to show the origin of same in service, although afforded the facilities of a special examination. He does not claim any disability from measles.

E. BURTWELL, Legal Reviewer.
CURTIS, Re-reviewer.

Now, Mr. Darling is not the only special examiner who has had this case in charge and reported on it. It was also specially examined by two or three others, and its rejection was recommended in each instance.

There was exposure in the Army, no doubt, but that was incident to the service of all soldiers. The point I make in this case is that there is an absence of proof to show that the disease from which the soldier is suffering was the result of his military service. He is poor and he is diseased. If we are purposing to allow him a pension for these reasons, why, let it be done, but let us not do it under the pretense that it is allowed for disability incurred while in the service of the United States.

Now, sir, I am through. I wish to say only this, that I have no disposition to consume the time—I have not consumed more than four or five minutes on this—but simply desire to put upon the record what I regard as some of the facts of the case, and then leave it to the committee.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Let me ask the gentleman on what grounds was the claim rejected at the Pension Office; what ground was officially set forth on the wrapper?

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I have already stated that fully, but I can repeat it if desired.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I did not know that the gentleman was reading it. I thought he was reading the conclusion of the examiner.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I quote from the report:

Rejected on the ground that there is no record at the War Department of rheumatism, and the inability of claimant to furnish evidence to show the origin of the same in the service, although afforded facilities by special examinations. He does not claim any disability from measles.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside to be reported to the House with favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

The bill was accordingly laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY WELCH.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5309) to place the name of Mary Welch upon the pension-roll.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll, at the rate of $12 per month, the name of Mary Welch, widow of Andrew E. Welch, late of Company F, Eleventh Michigan Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. BELKNAP) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5309) to place the name of Mary Welch upon the pension-roll, submit the following report:

Mary Welch is the widow of Andrew J. Welch, who served as private and corporal in Company F, Eleventh Regiment Michigan Volunteers, from September 11, 1861, to September 30, 1864, and died of disease of the heart March 24, 1883. The soldier applied for pension on account of injury of head from concussion of a shell, causing impaired vision and nearly total deafness of left ear. This application was allowed after soldier's death, and pension from discharge paid to the widow. Her claim for pension has been rejected because the evidence is not deemed sufficient to connect the fatal disease with the service.

Claimant states that soldier suffered from disease of heart at time of her marriage to him in February, 1865; that he had frequent fainting spells, and as early as May, 1866, came under treatment of Dr. Ayers, now dead.

O. S. Barrett, late lieutenant of Company B, Fourth Michigan Volunteers, testifies that he saw the soldier at time of his return from the Army in 1864, and was intimately acquainted with him until his death. When he first saw the soldier he was badly broken down physically from disease of heart and impaired vision and hearing. From that time until death he was gradually failing, and much of the time under treatment of Dr. Ayers. Remembers that soldier on many occasions had to quit work on account of fainting spells.

During the last few years of his life he was almost entirely disabled by rashes of the head and heart troubles. Others also testify to soldier's fainting spells from discharge to death. Dr. D. Todd, late president board of examining surgeons, Adrian, Mich., who had considerable knowledge of soldier's condition and who was the attending physician during last illness, gives it as his opinion that the concussion from shell in service may have been the exciting cause of the fatal disease.

Soldier was sound at enlistment, as it is clearly shown by the evidence on file. He served faithfully three years, during some of the most arduous campaigns of the war, and came home with a broken-down constitution, and suffered from disease of heart and an affection of the head until he died of the former.

By the certificate of the adjutant of the Woodbury Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Adrian, Mich., it is shown that the widow is in destitute circumstances.

Your committee are of opinion that the evidence clearly establishes a connection between the soldier's death cause and his service, and therefore report favorably on the accompanying bill, and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HENRIETTA JUDD.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4808) granting a pension to Henrietta Judd.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be placed on the pension-roll of the United States the name of Henrietta Judd, foster-mother of Willard B. Judd, late adjutant Company F, Ninety-seventh New York Volunteers, at the rate prescribed by existing provisions of law.

The report (by Mr. BELKNAP) was read, as follows:

The application in this claim was rejected by the Pension Bureau on the ground that she was not the mother of the soldier. The evidence shows that the soldier died from the effects of wounds on the 20th of February, 1865. He served as lieutenant in the Ninety-seventh New York Volunteers. The mother of the soldier died May 27, 1843, and the claimant married the father June 6, 1844; she raised the boy and cared for him through childhood, and was a mother to the child. The evidence shows that the boy aided in the support of the family before the war. Letters are on file from the soldier addressed to the claimant, including money for her support, these letters being written from the Army. The father died March 17, 1874. The soldier never married and the soldier left no widow.

In view of these facts, well established, the passage of the bill is recommended.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I simply desire to say in reference to this case that I have not been able to examine the papers in connection with it. They are not at the Pension Office. I learned on inquiry there that they had been sent over to the Committee on Invalid Pensions and not returned. I have made inquiry and some effort to get them from that committee, but have not been able to do so.

This bill proposes to grant a pension to a stepmother. I would have been very glad if I could have had the opportunity to examine the facts as they appear on the record, but I have not been able.

Mr. LANE. This is the case of a foster-mother, I think, and there are no papers.

Mr. BELKNAP. Mr. Chairman, this bill was introduced by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. O'DONNELL]. On yesterday the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] called at my desk and said he wanted to see the papers. I supposed at that time they had been returned to the Department, but he assured me that they had not. I told him he would then find them in the room of the Committee on Invalid Pensions this morning. I went to the secretary of the committee, who told me the papers would be there and at Mr. STONE's disposal.

Since the report was written by Mr. O'DONNELL I called for the papers, knowing that Mr. STONE intended to look into them. I have examined them carefully myself. I find that the claimant married the soldier's father in 1844, when this soldier was four years of age, the soldier's mother having died in 1841, I believe. The soldier died in 1865, while in the service, from wounds in action.

The evidence shows that the soldier contributed to and did support his mother before his enlistment. Two letters written by the soldier in 1862 and 1863, respectively, and addressed "Dear Mother," show that he remitted to her the sums of $10 and $25 on these occasions. The husband died in 1874. As shown, his property did not exceed $100 in value.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not understand that there is objection to the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it be passed.

ALLEN COONS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5328) granting a pension to Allen Coons.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Allen Coons, late private Company F, Fifty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. BELKNAP) was read as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5328) granting a pension to Allen Coons, submit the following report:

This claim was rejected by the Pension Office for the reason that claimant was unable to prove origin of disability.

According to claimant's affidavit he was run over by a wagon or ambulance on the night of July 2, 1862, on the retreat from Malvern Hill. He was captured the next day, and never saw his regiment again, being paroled and sent to hospital at Lookout, Md., and discharged March 1, 1863, for rheumatism in hip-joints and injury to back.

The records of the War Department show the fact of capture and surgeon's certificate of discharge. From the nature of the case, claimant was unable to secure evidence or origin of disability. Evidence of friends and neighbors and attending physicians is filed to show that the soldier was a strong, healthy man prior to enlistment, but unable to do full duty since discharge from the Army. The case appears to be meritorious, and your committee recommend that the bill pass, subject to the rate prescribed for such cases.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard briefly on this bill. I have examined the papers in this case and am satisfied this is a bill which ought not to be passed. I find this claimant has a long hospital record, unusually long. From the examination of the papers this hospital record is discovered as coming from the Surgeon-General. The claimant had been in and out of the hospital at different times running through a period of months; but that record shows that in every instance but one he was in there for a disgusting disease, which I can not name in the presence of the galleries; that one exception was diarrhea. This man has been several times examined by medical boards. On July 11, 1863, the board at Saginaw, Mich., reported:

Claimant is a healthy looking man; muscles firm and well developed. Hands show hard labor. He claims pain on pressure of sacroiliac junction, most marked on left side. There are at this point no signs of injury or disease. He stoops easily and recovers quickly. The heart, lungs, and abdominal viscera are all healthy. After careful examination, we fail to find any physical signs of injury or disease.

On October 20, 1866, the medical board at Bay City, Mich., examined the claimant and reported that the skin on his back had the appearance of having been blistered; that the muscles were sensitive to pressure, and they concluded there was some trouble with his back.

Now, here is testimony I desire to call attention to—that of a comrade of the claimant by the name of Charles Reed, whose good character is vouched for by Special Examiner Hanback, who took his deposition. I have Mr. Reed's statement—

Mr. BELKNAP. The report presented to the committee by myself was prepared by a gentleman who stated that he had not fully examined it. That case was fully examined by myself. It was made by Colonel BLISS, who is not present, and I ask now that the case may be referred back to the Committee on Invalid Pensions for further investigation. I ask unanimous consent that that order be made.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. If the case is to go back that is all I ask for, and I have no desire to oppose it, for I should have blushed to read the affidavits before the House.

The bill was laid aside with the recommendation that it be referred back to the Committee on Invalid Pensions for further investigation.

ASHER POST.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6350) for the relief of Asher Post.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Asher Post, late a private in Company G, Fifteenth Regiment Ohio Infantry Volunteers, upon the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. BELKNAP) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6350) granting a pension to Asher Post, submit the following report:

Claimant was a member of Company G, Fifteenth Ohio Infantry, in which company he served three years, and bases claim for a pension on the ground of dislocation of knee, which has caused a disability. The facts are amply proven; there is ample evidence that such disability was incurred, but claim was rejected on the ground that claimant was injured while on furlough, and therefore not in line of duty.

The evidence on file in this claim shows that the claimant's regiment, the Fifteenth Ohio Infantry, when near the end of their first three years' service, re-enlisted and received a veteran's furlough; claimant did not re-enlist, but in view of his long service was given a furlough, and went home to his State with his regiment. While on his way to the railway station, returning to the front from his home, his horse became frightened and ran away, he was thrown from the carriage, and his knee dislocated, an injury from which he has never recovered.

Your committee are of the opinion that claimant was in line of duty while returning to his regiment for duty, that he was acting under orders of the proper authorities, and therefore recommend the claimant be placed on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the law.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I feel that inasmuch as I have opposed some of these bills I ought to say in justification of what I have done that I have examined the papers in this case carefully, and I fully agree with the gentleman who makes this report that this man has not only a good case here, but in my judgment a case which ought to have been allowed by the Pension Office.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SARAH MEADER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1871) granting a pension to Sarah Meader.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah Meader, widow of Gilderoy Meader, late of Company M, Fourth Regiment Illinois Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. FLICK) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1871) granting a pension to Sarah Meader, widow of Gilderoy Meader, late of Company M, Fourth Regiment Illinois Cavalry, having examined and considered the same, report it back to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

In this case there has been quite considerable testimony taken by two different examiners, and in shape of affidavits; and while the claim was rejected because it was not shown that death resulted from disabilities incurred in the Army in the line of service, it is reported by these examiners that this is the only question standing in the way of the granting of the pension. The claim is that he died in 1866, at Memphis, Tenn., from lung trouble contracted in army service, and the testimony shows that the examiners were able to find but very little testimony in regard to the actual cause of his death, and it is further shown that upon behalf of his widow very thorough examinations were made as to evidence in this regard, but, from deaths and other reasons which are fully explained, it was, and is, impossible to obtain any such testimony.

It is shown very conclusively that this soldier was a strong, healthy man up to the time of his enlistment, and that while in the Army he contracted lung troubles, and that he was in the hospital suffering therewith at Benton Barracks, St. Louis, for twenty-seven days in April, 1863, and there is also a certificate of disability for discharge dated April 27, 1863, showing that he had not been fit for service since February 10, 1863, and that he had been troubled with heart and back ailments, and that his lungs were also affected, and that this was caused by exposure at Fort Donaldson, Tenn.

It is also shown by various witnesses, and very conclusively, that when he returned from the Army after his discharge he was in a very bad physical condition, looking like a consumptive, coughing and spitting blood, and was in this condition when he went South, and was not seen again by his friends before his death, the time elapsing being some two years.

He was found by the keeper of a boarding-house at Memphis, who took him to his house, finding him sick upon the street, and where he died within a few days.

Meader himself had at the time of his death an application for pension pending, in which he alleged that he had disease of the lungs, contracted at Fort Donelson, Tennessee, in 1862, and that one lung was almost entirely destroyed, and the records of the Surgeon-General's Office show that following this he had pleuro-pneumonia at Benton Barracks, as above stated.

As before stated, the report of the special examiners shows that the only question in the case is cause of death, and when his previous robustness and good health are considered and taken in connection with the fact, which is clearly established, that he did acquire lung trouble in the Army, which was followed by pneumonia, spitting of blood, and consumptive appearance, and that it was so stated by one witness that he looked like a walking skeleton, and that he was taken in from the street by his boarding-house-keeper in such a condition that he died within a few days, would seem to justify the reasonable conclusion that his death was the direct result of this lung trouble, so contracted as above said.

The committee therefore conclude that there is no evidence adduced in this case contradicting the reasonable and logical conclusion that death resulted to said soldier from lung trouble contracted in his country's service and in line of duty, and therefore recommend that this bill do pass.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. The papers in this case are in the hands of the gentleman who reported the bill, and I have not been able to get them. I have no objection to it, but I know nothing about it.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOSEPH K. HAMILTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5452) granting a pension to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Sec. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, the pension granted to said John E. Hamilton by certificate No. 201299.

The report (by Mr. CRAIG) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5452) granting a pension to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers, submit the following report:

The records of the War Department and evidence before your committee show that Joseph K. Hamilton, the father, was captain of Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers, in which company he had two sons; that the father served until, broken down in health, he was compelled to resign; that his son, Samuel S. Hamilton, died in the service, June 1, 1862. The father took him home and buried him.

About June 23, 1862, John E. Hamilton contracted disease in the service; was discharged from Mount Pleasant Hospital a physical wreck. His father had to procure medical care and treatment for his son before he was able to travel; that he took him, after some several weeks, when he recovered somewhat, to Philadelphia for medical treatment, where he remained for a year; that he was removed to his home in Putneyville, Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, where he lingered on until August 17, 1881, when he died; that a pension was granted this son, John E. Hamilton, January 23, 1882, by certificate No. 201299, at $6 per month from June 24, 1862, amounting to $1,378.80, which reverted to the Government; that said John E. Hamilton never was married, leaving no widow or minor child; that the father, Joseph K. Hamilton, expended in caring for his sons in their sickness and burial over $1,500, the greater part of his means; that he is seventy-three years old, not able to perform any manual labor, and is in very needy circumstances.

Your committee under the circumstances think it best to recommend the passage of this bill, amended by striking out the second section.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I desire simply to say about this bill that there is no theory in accord with our system of pension laws upon which this bill can be passed. The father was not dependent upon the son. If it is passed at all, as I suppose it will be, it will be out of deference to the sentiment expressed in the last clause of the report, that he is seventy-three years of age, not able to perform any manual labor, and is in very needy circumstances.

Now, Mr. Chairman, if that is a good cause for granting pensions I imagine that a vast number of people in this country would be entitled to receive them. It seems to me that it is bad policy to allow pensions in special instances by special legislation or which are not covered by the general pension laws, and which do not come within the scope and purview of our pension system. It is an enlargement in a special case of the general policy which is unjust to those who do not receive the benefits of it and creates a demand from those who do not receive the benefits of it for larger legislation in this behalf.

Mr. LANE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Yes, sir.

Mr. LANE. We passed a general law on this question in the House about three weeks ago, but it has not yet gone through the Senate, that everybody in similar circumstances should be entitled to a pension.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. That may be, but it is not the general law to-day.

Mr. LANE. But it will be in a few days.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. If that is going to be the law in a few days there is no necessity for passing this bill if this man will come under its provisions. I am simply opposing allowing special legislation for the benefit of particular individuals no more deserving than thousands and tens of thousands of others situated in like circumstances. I am opposed to the bill.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I wish to say a word about this bill.

Mr. MORRILL. In reply to what the gentleman from Missouri has said—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan has the floor.

Mr. CHIPMAN. I hardly like to sit here and vote upon these cases and have our action criticised and have the RECORD show what I believe is erroneous; for if any class of cases is meritorious it is the class to which this special case belongs. It is true that we have no general law upon the subject, but it is equally true that we ought to have a general law.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I understand that the decision in the Pension Office applicable to such cases will cover this case entirely on the question of dependency.

Mr. CHIPMAN. You are mistaken.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. I read the decision a few days ago.

Mr. CHIPMAN. Yes; I think I am familiar with it. These cases are not novel here at all, and this is the first time during my experience in the House—and I was formerly a member of the Committee on Pensions, and therefore had my attention attracted to this class of cases—this, I say, is the first time that I have ever heard a case of this character objected to.

The case is founded upon a principle which is recognized in the law everywhere else, or at least is recognized by the statutes of most of the States, the principle that a parent has an interest in the life of his child; that the presumption is that that life is of value to him, and that the child will be a comfort and support to him in his old age and in his poverty. There can be no reason why a rule of this kind should be applied to a railroad accident, or to other accidents, as it is applied by the laws of those States with which I am familiar—there can be, I say, no reason why it should be applied in those cases and why it should not be applied by a general law to the pension system.

It is true that the parent in this case—and here is where the Pension Department makes a distinction—the parent in this case was not dependent upon the child while the child was living. If he had been so dependent for support there would have been no difficulty about allowing the claim in the Pension Office. But his poverty has fallen upon him, as his old age has fallen upon him, since the death of the child. He is now without that child to appeal to, as he reasonably might have expected to do in the course of nature, and although he does not come within the strict rule of the Pension Office of having been dependent upon the child while the child was living he is in exactly the same position practically he would have been in if the child had supported him while living and had died and left him without support.

Now, it seems to me that there ought to be no difficulty whatever about a case of this kind. The fact that such cases are not provided for in the general law appeals to us to pass every case of the kind which comes before us. Instead of being a reason why we should not pass this bill, it is a reason why we should pass it. It is true that the other day, in answer to a demand from all parts of the country and to the recognition by the common conscience of all men of the propriety of such legislation, we attempted to pass a law of this kind and the bill went to the Senate some time ago. Why it lingers there so long I do not know. What its fate will be there I do not know. It may never become a law, but it ought to become one. This House has declared that it ought to be placed on the statute-book, but it may never be so fortunate.

At any rate, it is not the law now and this man comes to us with his claim in his old age and his poverty, stripped of the natural support of his declining years and of his hours of trouble and affliction, asking us to grant him a pension. I can not for the life of me see what is the objection to it. I can not see what there is special in providing in such case for a man, nearly eighty years of age, in his poverty and childlessness, and I can see no danger to this great Republic and no danger to any proper principle, in any precedent which will be set by doing a kindly thing, and what I think is a just thing, for this poor old man who is tottering into the grave. [Applause.]

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Chairman, I feel very unwilling to take up the time of the House, because I realize that every five minutes expended in talking is depriving some poor widow or some poor soldier of a pension; but I want to say in regard to this matter that three years ago both Houses of Congress by a large majority passed a bill providing for cases of this kind. It was the first section of what is known as the dependent pension bill. Mr. Cleveland vetoed that bill, not on account of that section, because he declared plainly his hearty approval of it, but on account of the other provisions of the bill.

For six years this House has made it a rule to grant pensions in cases of this kind. In the committee no question is ever made when these facts are shown: First, death in the Army and, second, present dependence. In all such cases the bill is passed by the committee and by the House. That has been the rule for six years.

Mr. TRACEY. If the gentleman will permit me to interrupt him, I will say that in the Fifth Congress I introduced a bill covering a case almost identical with this and the bill was passed and Mr. Cleveland signed it without hesitation.

Mr. MORRILL. I think that he signed ninety-seven such bills in the Fifth Congress.

Now, Mr. Chairman, while I have the floor I want to say a word in defense of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, as it has apparently been attacked in the remarks that have been made by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. As gentlemen all know, we have nearly three thousand private bills before us which have been referred to that committee since the opening of this session of Congress.

It is utterly impossible for the whole committee to examine all of those cases, so we have continued the arrangement which began in the Forty-eighth Congress, of having each member of the committee act as a subcommittee to examine cases, and all bills introduced by Members or Senators from certain States are referred to certain members of the committee for examination. The members of the committee are expected to examine the cases and make reports upon them, which are submitted to the full committee, and the full committee pass upon them without examining the papers. Of course weak cases will sometimes go through. The committee is crowded with work. Members are pressing us all the time to make reports in their particular cases, and, to aid the committee, members of the House sometimes offer them reports ready made. It is inevitable, therefore, as I have said, that some weak cases shall go through, but I am confident that the committee at this session have been as careful and as thorough in their investigations as any committee that has ever sat in this House.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that, while my friend from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN] undoubtedly states the law correctly, I know from personal experience in the Pension Office that they are now construing the law quite liberally, and in fact within the last twelve months I have obtained a pension for an old man in my district under circumstances almost identical with those of the beneficiary of the bill under consideration.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, it does seem to me that when an old man has taken his boy home from the camp a physical wreck and has spent what little money he had in attempting to restore his boy's health, and that boy dies from disease incurred in the Army—it seems to me it is straining at a gnat when a gentleman attempts to criticize the Pension Committee for reporting favorably a bill under those circumstances.

I venture to say, in defense of the committee, that this bill would be approved, as has been stated by a Democratic colleague of the gentleman from Missouri, by President Cleveland, and what he would approve it seems to me the gentleman from Missouri ought not to question. I hope, Mr. Chairman, this bill will be reported favorably to the House.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not understand that in regard to these bills the gentleman from Missouri is doing anything further than presenting the facts of the cases as they come to his notice. A week ago to-night we took up the whole evening in general discussion. I suggest to our friends here to-night that they allow the gentleman from Missouri to exercise what is the right of any gentleman in presenting opposition to the passage of these bills; but let us pass some of them. We can not do it by talking the bills to death every night. [Laughter.] Let us put through some of these bills.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio. The gentleman from Illinois is right in his suggestions; but the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN] was correct in the position he took in defense of the committee.

Mr. LAWLER. The committee is all right.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri has already addressed the committee once on this bill.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Under the rule I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri desires unanimous consent to address the committee again. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I supposed, Mr. Chairman, that I had the right to address the committee; and I propose to make an amendment, at any rate.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman will be in order at the proper time; we have not yet reached that stage.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I am not disposed to quibble about a matter of that kind. I make no pretension to a familiarity with parliamentary law.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIAMS] says that under the law as it now exists and as it is construed at the Pension Office this application would be allowed there. If that be true there is absolutely no reason for bringing it here. I supposed it was brought here either because it had been rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions or because it presented a case which was not authorized in the first instance by the general law.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHIPMAN], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WILLIAMS], and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL] have talked about this case after the fashion that is always adopted when pension legislation of a private character is before the House. They address themselves exclusively to the tender and sympathetic side of our natures. Here is a man who is old, seventy-three years of age, who is poor, whose son, it is claimed, contracted disease in the service and died from its effects; and now, years afterward, the father comes and asks to be pensioned, not because he was dependent upon that son for a living, not because the son had contributed during his lifetime to his support, but because possibly if that boy had not entered the Army he might be alive to-day and stand between his father and want.

It is upon suppositions of this kind that we are asked to pension men who are not entitled to receive these public bounties under the provisions of existing law. The laws as they stand to-day are ample. We have the most generous system of pension laws ever known to the history of the world. Yet thousands and tens of thousands of private pension bills are brought here in the course of every year. My friend from Kansas—and there is no man in this House or outside of it for whom I feel a higher regard—has stated that the committee over which he presides are so burdened with this work that they have not time to give attention to the business brought before them; that their labors, onerous and exhaustive as they are, are not sufficient to compass more than a small fraction of the vast work imposed upon them.

The cause of all this, Mr. Chairman, in my judgment, is that we are carrying this system of special legislation to an unnecessary extreme. If the general laws are insufficient, amend them, make them what they ought to be. But special legislation has become an odious thing in this House, not only as it refers to pensions, but with regard to claims of almost every character. Their number and their nature are simply indescribable. The Calendars are burdened with business of that character, and the committees as well.

As to what President Cleveland did or might do or did not do or would not do, it is neither here nor there. I take it that gentlemen on the floor of the American House of Representatives are not expected to gauge their judgments or their conduct by that of any other man living, however high or exalted.

I believe that this system is wrong. I am as open to appeals of a sympathetic character as any other gentleman on this floor, but I ask my friend from Kansas and others, when they are appealing to the House and to the country in behalf of old men and poor men, old women and poor women—such cases as I called attention to in the remarks I had the honor to make here on last Friday night, in illustrating the character of the legislation passed here night after night at these Friday evening sessions—while my friend from Kansas and others appeal to the House and the country in behalf of these old men and old women I ask them to remember that there are other poor people in this country. Out in the great State of Kansas, from which the gentleman hails, there are to-day many thousands of men, old and poor and wretched, men with mortgages piled mountain high upon their homes, men who are burning their corn for lack of a market and for want of the means with which to purchase other fuel.

I think, sir, it is time for the American Congress to take into consideration somewhat the great industrial classes of the country who bear the enormous burdens imposed upon them by our legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I have nothing more to urge touching this bill. I have no doubt it will pass. I have no doubt that every bill brought before this committee will pass. I am only astonished that the gentleman from New York withdrew one bill when the case was about to be confronted with the evidence. I have no doubt that bill would have passed notwithstanding the character of the testimony I had in my hand ready to present. You may pass any of them; nevertheless I feel it to be my duty to enter my humble protest.

Mr. TRACEY. The gentleman referred to by my friend from Missouri was not from New York, but from Michigan.

The question being taken on the amendment proposed by the committee, it was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably to the House.

MARGARET STEWART.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4134) granting a pension to Margaret Stewart.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-rolls the name of Margaret Stewart, dependent daughter of William Stewart, deceased, late a private in Company E, One hundred and nineteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $18 per month.

The report (by Mr. CRAIG) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4134) granting a pension to Margaret Stewart, submit the following report:

The beneficiary named in the bill is the daughter of William Stewart, who died of wounds received in the battle of Rappahannock Station, November 7, 1863, while serving as private in Company E, One hundred and nineteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers. His widow drew a pension until her remarriage, and finally died November 7, 1877, since which time no pension has been paid to any one on account of the death of said soldier.

Margaret Stewart was born August 1, 1848, and has been a confirmed cripple since early childhood, having incurred paralysis of the left side of the body, rendering her left arm totally useless. At the age of six years she was placed in the Foster Home at Philadelphia, Pa., where she has been ever since, as testified by the attending physicians. The soldier, although always poor, contributed regularly to her support at said institution, and after his death his widow aided the child to the best of her ability. Since the death of her parents she has been entirely dependent upon the charity of the Home, as she is unable to earn anything by labor and has no one living who is legally bound in her support.

Congress having at all times liberally responded to the calls of the helpless and dependent children of those who lost their lives in the defense of the country, your committee, being fully impressed with the merits of the case under consideration, return the accompanying bill with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HELEN A. MOORE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5081) to pension Helen A. Moore and minor children of John S. Moore.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen A. Moore, widow of John S. Moore, formerly Lieutenant of Company E, Second Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, war of 1861.

Sec. 2. That the minor children of the said John S. Moore shall also be placed on the pension-roll by the Secretary of the Interior, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. CRAIG) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5081) granting a pension to Helen A. Moore and minor children of John S. Moore, submit the following report:

Helen A. Moore is the widow of John S. Moore, who served as corporal, second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and captain, respectively, of Company E, Second Regiment Michigan Volunteers, from May 23, 1861, to September 20, 1864. He was allowed pension for gunshot wound of left shoulder and right thigh, and died December 2, 1885. The widow's claim has been rejected by the Pension Office on the ground that in the opinion of the medical referee the soldier's fatal disease of liver and kidneys was not a result of the wounds for which he was pensioned, nor is the same otherwise shown to have been due to his military service.

In addition to the wounds heretofore mentioned, it is shown by the records of the War Department that the soldier received a wound of breast in action at Petersburg July 30, 1864. It is claimed that this wound was the principal factor in the fatal disease. In support of this allegation the affidavits of the attending physicians have been filed, as follows:

Dr. William W. Ives testifies that he knew Moore during the last five years of his life and in conjunction with his partner, Dr. Leet, attending him professionally. When first called to render treatment an examination revealed a well marked cicatrix in the right breast, to which he referred a great part of his trouble.

There was a decidedly yellow tinge to the countenance and conjunctive, attended with depression of the circulation and high-colored urine. The history of the case showed that he had been wounded in the breast while in the military service, and that the bullet was lodged in the liver. About three months before death the kidneys became involved and the icterus became more decided. In affiant's opinion the immediate cause of death was liver and kidney disease caused by the long-continued presence and irritation of a bullet in the substance of the liver.

Dr. Leet testifies in corroboration of the above.

The several medical examinations show that soldier suffered much from neuralgia caused by his wounds.

The above-named physicians are gentlemen of the highest character and eminent in their profession.

Their opinions are of value in the consideration of this claim, in particular when it is based upon facts shown by the records of the War Department, and should govern in determining the merits of the case.

There being children of the soldier by a former marriage not in the care and custody of the widow, the same are provided for by the second section of the bill.

Your committee report favorably on the accompanying bill and ask that it do pass, amended, however, by striking out the word "lieutenant" in line 7 and inserting therein instead the word "captain."

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I have examined the papers in this case. The report of the Adjutant-General on file in the Pension Office shows that this soldier was wounded in the right leg at the battle of Bethesda Church on June 3, 1864, and that he was wounded in the left shoulder at an engagement in front of Petersburg on the 30th of July, 1864, the second wound having been received something like two months after the receipt of the first.

The report of the Surgeon-General shows that the soldier received a flesh wound in the left breast or shoulder at Petersburg, July 30, 1864. The Surgeon-General says in the report that the name of this soldier does not appear on the lists in his office of those wounded before Bethesda Church at any time between June 1 and June 10, 1864.

The original application made by the soldier in 1870 was predicated alone on the ground that he was disabled from a wound in the left shoulder. That was the basis of his application—a gunshot wound in the left shoulder. That claim was allowed in 1871, I believe, at $15 per month. In 1877 this was reduced to $10 per month on the usual biennial examination made before the medical board.

In January, 1885, he filed an application for an increase of pension, first, on account of the wound in the shoulder, and, second, because of an additional disability resulting from a gunshot wound in his right leg. No increase was allowed on account of the shoulder wounds. He died December 9, 1885, the same year during which he had filed this application for increase for a new disability. The claim for the wound in the leg was allowed and paid to the widow after the decease of the soldier.

When the original claim made by the soldier was pending the examining surgeons in 1871 reported:

That the soldier was disabled by a ball entering near the sternum extremity of the left clavicle—

I understand that is somewhere in front—passing underneath the skin outwardly and through the shoulder-joint. The coracoid process of the scapula appears to have been fractured and the deltoid muscles seriously deranged. The consequences are a stiffening of the joint and a great functional derangement of the left arm.

In 1877 a similar report was made by the medical examining board. The board in that report state that the ball did not enter the thorax or cavity, but passed out at the shoulder; and on this report the pension was reduced from $15 to $10 per month. The medical board of Scranton, Pa., reported as follows in 1875; and perhaps my friend from Ohio, Mr. YODER, can interpret the medical terms used, if he is disposed to do so:

The ball entered near the articulation of sternum with clavicle, right side, passed to the left, and came out in front of the left shoulder joint—

And the point I wish to impress upon the House and call your attention to is the fact that the ball came out.

Fracture and loss of portion of the sternum, sloughing of soft parts, and loss of power in left arm; pain in rotating the left limb and in moving head from side to side.

In 1879 he was again examined, and the report shows that the soldier—was wounded by a ball which entered just left of the sternum and below the clavicle, passing in a lateral direction, made its exit at the shoulder 4 inches from the point of entrance. The wound is well healed, with but trifling loss of soft parts and no tenderness. He is a large and muscular man, the muscles of the left being about as well developed as of the right arm. He claims that he has not much strength in the arm, especially to raise anything directly up, and that using the arm gives him constant pain. He had a wound of the thigh and ankle, from which he claims no disability. He is rated equal to one-half, entitling him to $10 per month.

It seems from the last report, from which I have just quoted, that the soldier had been three times wounded, once in the shoulder, once in the thigh, and once in the ankle. Only one wound was considered serious, that in the shoulder. There is no hospital record of the wounds in the thigh and ankle. I find a letter of the soldier on file, of date July 18, 1879, in which he says that he was wounded three times during the war, but that he claimed pension only for the wound in his shoulder. He was complaining that his pension had been reduced from $15 to $10 per month.

He did not state upon what part of his body the other two wounds were, but they are evidently the thigh and ankle referred to in the medical report made in 1879. He claims nothing on account of the thigh wound until 1885, and has never claimed anything on account of the ankle wound. Now, after the application for pension was made on the ground of this thigh wound, he was examined by a medical board at Scranton, Pa., on the 22d of April, 1885, and the report then made describes the shoulder wound about as in the previous reports to which I have referred. As to the thigh wound it is stated that—

The ball struck the upper third right thigh directly in front, was embedded in the muscles of the leg, and was removed from the point of entrance.

The report concludes with this language:

There is no atrophy of muscle of thigh or leg, no injury of bone, disability from this cause may be one-fourth degree.

As stated, the pension for this thigh wound was allowed after the soldier's death, and paid to his widow. Now, this is how the case stood at the death of the soldier. He had been allowed a pension for the shoulder wound at the rate of $15 per month, which was reduced in 1877 to $10 per month.

The application for an increase of pension made in 1885 on this account was denied the same year. In 1885 he made his first claim for a thigh wound, which was pending at his death. He never claimed any disability on account of the ankle wound; and it was evidently very slight. These are the only wounds shown anywhere or by any one during the life-time of the soldier so far as I can find in the record as made out in the Pension Office.

Now, afterwards, on April 15, 1887, a year and a half after the soldier's death, the widow files her claim, alleging that the soldier's death was caused by a long-continued pressure or irritation of a bullet received while in the service in the substance of the liver. Mrs. Moore married her husband February 22, 1885, about ten months before his death.

The claim was rejected on the ground that the disease of the liver and kidneys of which the soldier died was not the result of his wounds or connected with his service. After it was denied by the Commissioner of Pensions it was appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and the finding and judgment of the Pension Office was there approved after full consideration. There was no post mortem examination of the soldier: The theory of the widow depended upon the statement of Drs. Ives and Leet, as set forth in the report of this committee, who attended the soldier in his last sickness.

These doctors expressed an opinion that he died of liver and kidney disease superinduced by a foreign substance—they supposed a bullet—lodged in the liver. It was an opinion of these doctors who did not profess to know the facts about the case; a mere opinion, expressed without a physical examination after the death of the soldier, that there was a bullet or some foreign substance lodged in his liver, which had brought about diseases resulting in his death.

Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, this soldier was repeatedly examined, while his own claim was pending and after it had been allowed, by half a dozen medical boards. Not one of them ever heard a word of any wound he had received except the one in the ankle, that in the thigh, and that in the shoulder, but this claim, presented by the widow, was predicated upon the theory that the soldier had been shot in the right breast, that the bullet had entered the cavity and lodged in his liver. This would be a fourth wound, another and different one. The soldier himself made no such claim during his life. He predicated his claim for pension in 1871 upon the wound he had received in his left shoulder, entering somewhere near the front and making its exit at the shoulder.

In 1885 he filed an application alleging an entirely new disability, namely, a wound in his right thigh; but never once did he refer to the fact that he had received a wound in his right breast; that the bullet had entered his cavity and lodged in his liver, and that he was suffering on account of it. The only question before the Department was (as it ought to be here) whether in fact the death of this man was due to his military service. He lived for more than twenty years after the war had closed, and never through all these years had he been heard or had it been alleged in the Department as the basis of any claim for other wounds or been urged that a bullet had been received in his right breast in battle and was still in his body.

It seems to me indisputable that if that were the fact the soldier would have known it, and, knowing it, would have included that and made it the basis for a pension claim when he was alleging other wounds, that in the shoulder or that in the thigh, as the reason for granting him a pension on two different occasions. There is no proof that the soldier was wounded as claimed upon the theory of the widow's application. It is a vague opinion of men who had known him for a short time, had attended him during his last sickness, that he had been wounded in the right breast, that the bullet making that wound was still lodged in his body, and his death was traceable to it. It is contradicted by a judgment on the facts. No proof of it was made during both of his applications; and it is contradicted by the fact that he never urged it himself, and contradicted by the logic of necessity.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I sincerely sympathize with my Brother STONE's anxiety to protect the national Treasury, but I do not understand exactly by what "apothecary's scales" he measures the number of bullets which a man can hold without their interfering with his natural existence. [Laughter.] I am like him; I am no doctor, but I noticed awhile ago that he said something about this man having his deltoid muscle, or something of that kind, seriously damaged. [Laughter.] Now, I fear that my friend from Missouri [Mr. STONE] has some muscle, the deltoid or some other, seriously damaged and extra-sensitive about this whole matter, and I would like to find out from Brother STONE about how many bullets he thinks a man ought to hold before he is entitled to die by reason of them. [Laughter.]

I see that he was too young to be in the last war, but I hope he will get into the next one, as some of us were in the last, and will find out how many bullets he can hold before his widow or his children will be entitled to have a pension. [Laughter.] I do not know, Mr. Chairman, but it seems to me that there is too much of the apothecary's scale business about this. I do not think myself that a man ought to hold more than five or six or seven bullets, no matter what part of him they went into, without raising a reasonable supposition that he died on account of them, and it seems to me that this method of reasoning on the subject which my friend adopts is drawing it a little too fine. [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I will state to the gentleman that this man did not have a bullet at all in him.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. Why, you admitted three or four yourself. [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I did not, sir.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. You admitted all except the one in the liver. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. With all due respect to the gentleman, I never admitted that this man had a bullet in him at all at the time of his death.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. Well, they went through him, and that will do just as well.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. On the contrary, I stated that two bullets evidently had wounded him: one in the shoulder, which had made its exit at the time, while the other one struck him in the right side and was taken out at the time by the surgeon.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. Well, how many more do you want to go through one man? [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Of course this levity means nothing. How many bullets do I want in a man! I do not want any in a man.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. I just wanted to find out how many you thought was the proper allowance.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I hope my friend from Ohio will never have occasion to have one in his valuable anatomy.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. I have been where I have had a chance to get them, and I hope you will get there if we have another war. [Laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I hope not; of course I am frank to admit that. [Laughter.]

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. When you get three or four in you, you will want your widow to have a pension. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. But, Mr. Chairman, this is not a question as to how many bullets this man had in him or did not have in him, how many struck him or did not strike him. The Pension Department, organized by this Government to consider these claims and to pass upon them, liberally construing the laws, as has been admitted, denied this claim, after full investigation, upon the ground that the fact alleged as the basis of the application, namely, that this man had a bullet in him, was not sustained by the evidence, and upon an appeal to the Secretary of the Interior that finding was approved.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Yes, sir.

Mr. COOPER, of Indiana. I make the point of order that one member can not make more than one speech under the rule of general debate.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Well, sir, I have made my speech. I am through.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. I would like to ask the gentleman whether any claim can come here until it has been rejected by the Department?

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Claims do come here that have not been rejected by the Department.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. I think not.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. And I am simply seeking in a proper case to sustain the finding of the Department.

Mr. YODER. Mr. Chairman, it is evident that our time this evening is to be consumed in discussion, and if nobody else talks it will be all on one side. Now, we have heard a splendid lecture on the anatomy of the thorax, and the shoulder joint, and the ankle joint, and the thigh, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] says that the bullet did not penetrate the thorax, and consequently did not penetrate the liver, as though the liver was in the thorax! [Laughter.] Why, sir, the liver is away below the thorax. I want to call attention to another statement which the gentleman makes, that the sternum was sloughed from a bullet wound.

The doctor said the bullet went this way [illustrating]; but there is no evidence that it did not go down that way [illustrating]. Now, the sternum and the liver are not 3 inches apart, and who knows that that bullet did not go into the liver? President Garfield was shot, and the doctors thought the bullet had gone down, and while he lived no one made any claim to the contrary; but afterward it was found away back in the spinal column.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. YODER. Certainly.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. As a physician, if you saw a wound, saw where the bullet had entered and saw where it had gone out, if it had struck at one place here upon the breast [indicating] and had gone out at the shoulder, would you still suppose that that bullet was in the liver?

Mr. YODER. That would depend upon whether I knew, and it depends in this case upon whether the doctors knew which course the bullet had taken. The bullet was gone.

They supposed it went in one direction, but it might easily have gone in another. Why, sir, if a man were on trial in the police court for shooting another we could not have had the evidence described with more minuteness than has been done in the dissertation we have heard on these wounds. This man was shot in the thigh; he was shot in the ankle; he was shot in the shoulder; the sternum was sloughed off; the muscles were torn. Why, great God, it would be an honor to be the widow of such a hero as that! Any woman might be proud to be the widow of such a man.

Mr. O'DONNELL. Mr. Chairman, let us pass this bill giving the widow and children a pension; let it not be said, they "asked for bread" and we "gave them a Stone."

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to hear read again the section of the bill which provides for pensioning the minor children.

The Clerk read the second section of the bill.

Mr. KILGORE. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not know what the rule is on this subject or what practice has been followed heretofore; but I know what common sense dictates in this connection, that the names of these minor children and their ages ought to be inserted in the bill.

A MEMBER. That is a matter of proof.

Mr. KILGORE. I know it is a matter of proof; but they might prove that half the children in the neighborhood were the children of this soldier.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. KILGORE. I have no objection if it relates to this argument.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Does not the gentleman really think that according to the proof this soldier underwent enough to warrant this House in giving to his widow and his children (no matter how many) under the age of sixteen years the ordinary pension?

Mr. KILGORE. I am not raising any question about the facts. I am not going to undertake to enter into the history of these wounds; for perhaps I would locate the thorax and the liver as far apart as my friend from Missouri did. I do not want any doctor to get at me.

But assuming that I answer the gentleman's question in the affirmative, I say that the names and ages of the minor children ought to be given in the bill.

Mr. YODER. That is a matter the evidence of which is on file in the Pension Office, sworn to, a matter of record, absolute, positive, and definite, so that there can be no question about it.

Mr. KILGORE. Could they not supplement that with another statement putting in other children?

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

Mr. KILGORE. Well, I say it is common sense that a bill of this character should at least recite the names of the minor children.

Mr. SHIVELY. Mr. Chairman, I want to interrupt the gentleman [Mr. KILGORE] to observe that his argument might with some reason be made before the Bureau of Pensions on an application, were there no law requiring express proof of identity. But this bill provides a pension for minor children, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws. These laws require proof of identity, and under this bill these parties are put upon proof.

Mr. KILGORE. That may be true; but it is so easy to prevent fraud or irregularity by giving the names of the children and their ages. I shall be inclined to prevent the passage of this bill unless that is done or unless the section be struck out.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. The gentleman will allow me to suggest that it might require some search among the papers to ascertain those names, and that possibly we might not be able to do it to-night.

Mr. KILGORE. Then let the bill go over; let it be amended and come up another evening.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. The question as to minor children is a matter of proof, just as in any other case.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Let me say to my friend from Texas so this point that there is a minor child; according to my recollection her name is Helen—at any rate, a girl, born, if I remember correctly, shortly after the death of the father. There is but one minor child, and, according to my remembrance, the name is either Henrietta or Helen.

A MEMBER. That is a matter of proof at the Department.

Mr. KILGORE. I know it is a matter of proof, but it is so easy to make the matter specific now by inserting the name in the bill and saving any trouble or irregularity that might otherwise arise.

Mr. LANE. The effect would be the same if that section were not in the bill at all.

Mr. KILGORE. Would the children be entitled in that case to a pension?

Mr. LANE. Certainly they would.

Mr. KILGORE. Then why not strike out the section?

Mr. LANE. We might just as well do so.

Mr. MORRILL. I understand—perhaps the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. STONE] can tell us whether it is a fact—that this child was the child of Helen A. Moore.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Yes, sir; the child of Helen A. Moore; and that child has a guardian, and the application of the child through the guardian is on file among these papers.

Mr. MORRILL. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LANE] is correct. It is entirely unnecessary to name the children in the bill, because the pension is paid to the mother. There is no pension paid to the minor children; the pension is paid to the mother for the support of the children.

Mr. KILGORE. If the minor children will be provided for under the law, without any special provision in the bill, then I insist that the section ought to be stricken out.

Mr. SWENEY. I can hardly realize that the children will be placed on the pension-roll under a special act unless they are named or in some other way specially provided for.

Mr. MORRILL. If the bill provides for the widow, all the children who are under sixteen years of age are provided for without any express language in the bill.

Mr. PERKINS. That is the effect of the clause "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."

Mr. KILGORE. Let that section be stricken out.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I move to amend by striking out the second section.

Mr. BLISS. I hope that motion will not prevail. As my friend from Missouri [Mr. STONE] has stated that this child was born after the soldier died, the child must be less than four years old; and there is so much the more need why the widow should receive the extra $3 to assist her in taking care of her child.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion to strike out the second section.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. She will get it, anyway.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. On that motion, Mr. Chairman, I wish to be heard for a few moments.

My friend from Ohio [Mr. YODER] has taken me a little to task on my knowledge of anatomy being very limited. I did not undertake on my own judgment to determine the distance between the liver and the thorax.

Mr. COOPER, of Indiana. I rise to a point of order.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I am speaking to a motion I have made.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I propose to take but a moment or two, Mr. Chairman.

I say I did not undertake to measure the distance from the throat to the liver. I simply read the reports made by this medical board, which show that the wound, the only one received by this soldier which could possibly have resulted in injury to the liver, was from the bullet which struck him in the breast, making the wound in his shoulder.

Now, I ask my friend from Ohio, who is a surgeon, if he does not think he would be a poor surgeon indeed who could not tell upon examining a wound inflicted by a musket ball what was the point of entrance and the point of exit, particularly when the soldier had stated the point of entrance and exit himself.

But, sir, I desired simply that it should be made known to the House that this man was shot with one ball and that that passed out through the shoulder. Hence the claim that he was wounded at another time—and he must have been if there was a ball in his liver—was not well founded. There is a discrepancy in the testimony to that extent. I desired simply that these facts should go on record, in order that they may be known when this bill is passed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri to strike out the second section.

The question was taken; and the Chairman decided that the motion was rejected.

Mr. KILGORE. I demand a division. I will say to the gentleman that it will facilitate the passage of this bill to accept the amendment.

Mr. MORRILL. I see no objection to the section going out.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I am asked to withdraw the motion. I made it on the statement that it made no difference in the bill. I will withdraw it.

Mr. KILGORE. I renew the motion. If it does not make any difference to the bill it ought not to go in at all.

The motion of Mr. KILGORE was agreed to.

The amendment of the committee was adopted.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

POLLY ROBINSON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5082) to pension Polly Robinson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Polly Robinson, mother of Hamilton W. Robinson, late a sergeant in Company B, Fifty-second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. CRAIG) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5082) to pension Polly Robinson, submit the following report:

Polly Robinson is the mother of Hamilton W. Robinson, who served in Company B, Fifty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, from September 25, 1861, to July 12, 1865, and died October 22, 1873, of disease of lungs contracted in the service.

These facts are established by the evidence in the case. The claim of the mother has been rejected, however, on the ground that soldier left surviving him a widow. The widow died in August, 1878, and there is no one now drawing pension on account of said soldier's services and death.

It further appears in evidence that claimant was a widow at time of the son's enlistment and has so remained ever since. She is not possessed of any property, never owned any from which she could derive an income, and is now supported by a married daughter. Letters on file written by the soldier during his army service show contributions towards claimant's support.

Although not admissible under the general law, the claim is meritorious and of a class in which Congress has often afforded relief. Your committee, therefore, report favorably on the accompanying bill, and ask that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SOPHIA SCHIMMELFENNIG.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5739) increasing pension of Sophia Schimmelfennig, widow of Alexander Schimmelfennig, late brigadier-general and major-general by brevet.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the pension of Sophia Schimmelfennig, widow of Alexander Schimmelfennig, deceased, late brigadier-general of the Army of the United States and major-general by brevet, be, and the same is hereby, increased to $50 a month.

The Clerk proceeded to read the report (by Mr. CRAIG).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would inquire if the gentleman from Texas proposes to make the same objection to this bill that he has made to other bills carrying the same amount? If so, it would seem hardly necessary to take up the time of the committee in reading the report to-night.

Mr. KILGORE. I think it would be a proper course for the bill to take to be reported for consideration in a full House, although I have no objection to the report being read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thought, if the bill went to the House on the objection of the gentleman from Texas, that the report would have to be read there, and that it would be a saving of time to dispense with the reading now.

Mr. KILGORE. I have no objection to that. Let the bill go over to a full House.

The CHAIRMAN. What day would the gentleman suggest? Monday?

Mr. MORROW. There is an objection to laying bills aside and having them called up any day except the following morning or the Friday following.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Texas desires to do so, this bill can come up to-morrow morning, at 1 o'clock, the previous question to be considered as ordered, with fifteen minutes' debate on each side.

Mr. KILGORE. And the right of amendment.

Mr. O'DONNELL. There is a special order at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

The CHAIRMAN. The order proposed here is for 1 o'clock.

Mr. MORROW. If the bill is laid aside with the previous question ordered upon it, it will come up immediately after the reading of the Journal to-morrow. That will be the effect of the previous question.

The CHAIRMAN. Then, without objection, the order will be made that this bill shall be reported to the House with the recommendation that the previous question be ordered upon its passage; that it go over until to-morrow morning immediately after the reading of the Journal, with the right of fifteen minutes' debate on each side and the right of amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

NAPOLÉON B. M'KAY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 6871) for the relief of Napoleon B. McKay.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Napoleon B. McKay, formerly a member of unassigned company, Thirteenth Regiment Kansas State Infantry Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6871) granting a pension to Napoleon B. McKay, submit the following report:

Dr. McKay claims a pension for sunstroke received in line of duty as second lieutenant in the Thirteenth Kansas Infantry.

The claim was rejected at the Pension Office on the ground that claimant had not been mustered into the service at the time he alleges the disability occurred.

The claimant alleges that he was mustered into the United States service at Leavenworth, Kans., as second lieutenant in the Thirteenth Infantry of that State, and on or about the 16th of August, 1862, he started to Nemaha County with Lieut. Levi Hensel and John N. Cline, who were both officers of the same regiment, for the purpose of enlisting men for said regiment, and while en route at or near a place called Grasshopper Falls, now called Valley Falls, on or about August 16, 1862, he was overcome with heat and received a sunstroke and has suffered therefrom ever since, and that prior to that time he was a sound and able-bodied man.

That he was confined to his bed for about one month after incurring said sunstroke. His occupation prior to enlisting was that of a physician, and he treated himself for said disability. That during the summer months he is afflicted so severely as to be unable to attend to his profession. That he can not furnish the testimony of regimental surgeon because he was not with the regiment and was never treated by regimental doctors.

J. W. Cline, second lieutenant of Thirteenth Kansas Infantry, and a recruiting officer for the regiment, testifies that he was well acquainted with claimant. He went with him and with Lieutenant Hensel at the urgent request of Judge A. H. Horton and James H. Lane, and when they reached Grasshopper Falls the claimant received a sunstroke, became overheated, and was prostrated by the heat. They took him home and left him in care of his family. That he was very much prostrated when they left him, and did not again join the regiment. That claimant sent seven recruits to and turned them over to Lieutenant Hensel and himself at Seneca, Nemaha County, Kansas.

Claimant can not furnish evidence of treatment since his discharge, because he was never treated. That he has consulted with Dr. Hidden, and as soon as he was able to leave the house Dr. Hidden knew of his condition, while he lived in the neighborhood.

Dr. Isaac S. Hidden testifies to having known claimant in October, 1858; that he was a strong and healthy man prior to engaging in the service of the United States in the summer of 1862; that claimant came to him and said he had received a sunstroke; that his diagnosis of the case indicated that such was the case. I agreed with him in his statement of the treatment he had given himself. That he has seen him on an average of once a month, except about six years, from 1872 to 1878; that he was and has been unfitted for labor, and he (Dr. H.) thinks his disability is chronic and incurable.

Joseph Harman, a neighbor of claimant, says under oath that he has been personally acquainted with him ever since 1860, and lived near neighbor to him, except from 1872 to 1878; that prior to about August 15, 1862, when he enlisted, he was a stout, able-bodied man; that about August 20, 1862, he called to see claimant on business, and found him sick in bed and prostrated. Claimant was confined to his house several months, and has suffered ever since.

This witness is corroborated by Sally and Luella Chapin, who say that they are personally acquainted with claimant.

Your committee believe that he was in the service of the United States as second lieutenant Kansas Infantry, and that he received his injury in the line of duty, and ought to receive a pension.

That the regimental records, though they do not show that claimant was mustered into the service, the muster-out is shown by the testimony of D. R. Anthony, who swears to the publication of a notice of the muster-out of one M. B. McKay in a paper published in Leavenworth, and your committee believe that the claimant was the person intended, although the name was M. B. McKay instead of N. B. McKay, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, this report is made by my friend from Kansas [Mr. MORRILL], the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, generally a very safe, conservative, and prudent legislator. I have not been able to understand how a man of his caliber and general conservatism could have reported this bill. To start in with I find this letter among the files of the Pension Office:

AMERICAN CITY, KANS., June 20, 1864.

SIR: By direction of Hon. W. W. Dudley, I hereby apply for certificate of discharge as second lieutenant, appointed at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in July or August, 1862, to assist in recruiting for the Thirteenth Regiment, Kansas Volunteers, but was soon after prevented by sunstroke from joining the regiment or going farther in the service. I never received a certificate, but had notice by publication in a Leavenworth paper the following autumn of an honorable discharge.

Respectfully,

N. B. MCKAY.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL, Washington, D. C.

There he states in this letter to the Adjutant-General that he was enlisted as a recruiting officer for the Thirteenth Kansas Volunteers. The reply of the Adjutant-General is as follows:

Respectfully returned. The name of N. B. McKay is not borne as a commissioned officer of the Thirteenth Kansas Infantry during the late war.

Now, as I understand the testimony in this case, and there is not much of it, this man claims to have been mustered in as second lieutenant of the Thirteenth Kansas Infantry, on the 16th day of August, 1862, at Fort Leavenworth, and on the same day while returning to his home he had sunstroke, which twenty-five years afterwards he makes the basis for this pension claim. Lieutenant Cline, the most important witness, testifies:

Claimant, Lieutenant Hensel, and myself had been to Fort Leavenworth at the urgent request of Judge Horton and James H. Lane, and were returning, and when we reached a place called Grasshopper Falls the claimant received a sunstroke, or became overheated, or became prostrated by the heat.

Now, here is a man who does not appear on the rolls of the company, who was enlisted simply as a recruiting officer, as appears from his own letter to the Adjutant-General. He had been to Fort Leavenworth at the urgent request of Judge Horton and James H. Lane, on what business does not appear, and while returning home on the very day of his enlistment was overcome by excessive heat, and thereafter did no service. He was enlisted as a recruiting officer while at Fort Leavenworth, having gone there on a visit, and while returning to his home, before he had rendered an hour's service, even as a recruiting officer, he was overcome by the intense heat shining down upon him as he rode across the prairies of Kansas—was prostrated and taken home, and says that he has been suffering from year to year since that time. Now, that is the whole case. I shall oppose the passage of this bill.

Mr. SWENEY. Mr. Chairman, I am not one disposed to object to the passage of any legitimate pension bill; but it appears to me from the record in this case that it is not a legitimate one. I must say that, differing from the statement that my friend from Missouri [Mr. STONE] makes, I understand that there never was such a case as enlistment as a recruiting officer—that there never was such a thing as enlistment as a recruiting officer, as this gentleman has stated in his letter. There never was such a thing as a recruiting officer enlisted.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. That is what he stated in his letter.

Mr. MORRILL. If the gentleman will allow me a moment I will explain the whole thing. President Lincoln authorized General James H. Lane to raise a brigade. He went to Kansas and appointed these recruiting officers and they went to Fort Leavenworth and were mustered in. Judge Horton, who is now the chief-justice of our State, was very active in the matter, and that is why his name appears. Under the authority of President Lincoln General James H. Lane, then a brigadier-general in the service, appointed these men to recruit, and they went to Fort Leavenworth and mustered in and then they were discharged by a general order afterwards.

The whole thing was abandoned and a general order was issued discharging them from service. I do not imagine that it makes any difference whether the injury was received or disease contracted in twelve months after a man was in the service or on the first day. There is no question whatever about the incurrance of the disability. There is no question about the high character of the man. No man in Missouri or Kansas either stands any higher than Dr. N. B. McKay.

The witnesses Cline and Hensel I am both acquainted with, and I know they are of a very intelligent character. The reason why it does not appear of record in the office that these men were mustered is because the regiment was abandoned; the efforts to get up a brigade were abandoned; but they were mustered into the service.

Mr. SWENEY. Was he mustered in?

Mr. MORRILL. He was mustered in at Fort Leavenworth in the United States service by the United States mustering officer.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Where does the gentleman get evidence for that statement?

Mr. MORRILL. The evidence is on file there in Kansas. The report states it, and I was familiar with all the men and the facts; so that I know the facts are as stated.

Mr. SWENEY. I do not understand that from the report.

Mr. HILL. I would ask the gentleman from Kansas whether or not an application has been made in the Pension Office.

Mr. MORRILL. There was, and it was rejected.

Mr. TARSNEY. What rank did he hold?

Mr. MORRILL. Lieutenant.

Mr. TARSNEY. Would not the War Office records show that fact?

Mr. MORRILL. For the reason I have explained they do not show it.

Mr. TARSNEY. Let me ask the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions if this was not the case: in those days commissions were often promised to men provided they would enlist so many men; and was it not the fact that he was appointed without any commission until afterwards?

Mr. MORRILL. He was appointed by General Lane, under the authority of President Lincoln. A full appointment was given to him, and he was discharged by a general order afterwards.

Mr. TARSNEY. Was he mustered in?

Mr. MORRILL. He was mustered in.

Mr. KILGORE. But he did no service, I understand.

Mr. MORRILL. He did no service, because on his way back to recruit he was prostrated by sunstroke.

Mr. KILGORE. Was he discharged at the time, on the same day?

Mr. MORRILL. No; some time afterwards.

Mr. STONE, of Kentucky. He was on his way back home?

Mr. MORRILL. He was on his way going up to recruit.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. And this case was before the Pension Office and rejected, I understand?

Mr. MORRILL. Yes; it was rejected on the ground that the records of the War Office did not show that the regiment was ever organized.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon laying this bill aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

The question was taken; and the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I ask for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that if the committee finds itself without a quorum it will be the duty of the Chair to order a call of the roll.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. Not unless the point of no quorum is made,

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 30, noes 7.
The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

HELEN E. DEWEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2861) for the relief of Helen E. Dewey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to restore to the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen E. Dewey, formerly Helen E. Converse, and the widow of Maj. Joseph H. Converse, late of the Eleventh Connecticut Volunteers, who was killed in action at Cold Harbor, Virginia, June 3, 1864.

The report (by Mr. NUTE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2861) for the relief of Helen E. Dewey, submit the following report:

A bill for the relief of this claimant was favorably reported by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, House of Representatives, Fiftieth Congress, but was not reached for action in the House.

The grounds upon which the claim is based are set forth in the following report of said committee:

"Helen E. Converse was the widow of Maj. Joseph Converse, of the Eleventh Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, who was killed in battle of Cold Harbor, Virginia, in June, 1864. She drew a pension until September 16, 1884, when she married one Charles B. Dewey. This marriage was not a happy one, and at the January (1886) term of the superior court in and for Hartford County, Conn., she obtained a divorce from said Dewey on the ground of adultery.

"Since the granting of the divorce information has reached the proposed beneficiary tending to show that Dewey at the time of his marriage with her had a wife living from whom he had not been divorced. The claimant has no means to make a thorough investigation of the matter, and even should this information prove correct it would not aid her in obtaining relief at the Pension Office, because of the divorce already obtained. Had the same not been granted, and the nullity of the marriage with Dewey fully established, her name could be restored to the pension-roll without the interference of Congress. But as it is she is compelled to seek legislative aid.

"This as well as former Congresses has liberally responded to the call for relief of widows whose husbands were killed in battle and who after having forfeited their pension by reason of remarriage have again become widows and dependent.

"The case under consideration comes clearly within established precedents, and therefore your committee recommend the passage of the accompanying bill."

Your committee fully concur in the conclusions reached in said report, and likewise recommend the passage of the accompanying bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee now rise. The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. MORROW having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration business upon the Private Calendar, and had directed him to report back sundry bills with the recommendation that they do pass; also that they had had under consideration a bill (H. R. 5278) and had directed him to report it back with the recommendation that it be recommitted to the Committee on Invalid Pensions; also that they had had under consideration a bill (H. R. 5739) and had directed him to report the same back with the recommendation that it be made a special order for to-morrow immediately after the reading of the Journal, the previous question being considered as ordered, with debate limited to fifteen minutes on each side and with the right of amendment.

HOUSE BILLS PASSED.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report first the bills that were pending at the time of the adjournment of the House on last Friday evening.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 552) granting a pension to Frank Deming, Company F, Ninth Michigan Infantry.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5617) granting a pension to Henry Bloomfield.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

House bills of the following titles, reported from the Committee of the Whole House without amendment, were severally ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and they were accordingly read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 4694) for the relief of Edward Haynes;

A bill (H. R. 5309) to place the name of Mary Welch upon the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. 4868) granting a pension to Henrietta Judd;

A bill (H. R. 6350) for the relief of Asher Post;

A bill (H. R. 1871) for the relief of Sarah Mender;

A bill (H. R. 4134) granting a pension to Margaret Stewart;

A bill (H. R. 5082) to pension Polly Robinson;

A bill (H. R. 6371) for the relief of Napoleon B. McKay; and

A bill (H. R. 2861) for the relief of Helen E. Dewey.

The bill (H. R. 5452) granting a pension to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers, reported from the Committee of the Whole with an amendment, was taken up, the amendment agreed to, and the bill as amended ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HELEN A. MOORE.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole House was the bill (H. R. 5081) to pension Helen A. Moore and the minor children of John S. Moore.

The question was on agreeing to the amendment to strike out the second section, as follows:

Sec. 2. That the minor children of the said John S. Moore shall also be placed on the pension-roll by the Secretary of the Interior, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

Mr. KILGORE. I think there should be an amendment of the title so as to conform to the change made in the bill by this amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The title may be amended after the bill has passed.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I understand that there are children of this soldier by another wife. Will not the effect of this amendment be to cut them out entirely? If so, I think the amendment ought not to be adopted.

Mr. OWENS, of Ohio. I think that under the terms of the bill all minor children will be provided for.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KILGORE. I move to amend the title by striking out the words "and minor children of John S. Moore."

The motion was agreed to.

ALLEN COONS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 5238) granting a pension to Allen Coons, reported from the Committee of the Whole House with the recommendation that it be recommitted to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The bill was recommitted.

SOPHIA SCHIMMELFENNING.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole House was the bill (H. R. 5739) increasing pension of Sophia Schimmelfenning, widow of Alexander Schimmelfenning, late brigadier-general and major-general by brevet.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill has been reported from the Committee of the Whole House with the recommendation that the previous question be considered as ordered, by force of which action it will come up to-morrow morning after the reading of the Journal. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

Mr. PETERS. I object to that order. All bills going over in this manner should be fixed to come up on the next private-bill day. Objection is made by a number of members to the making of these orders so as to take effect on other days than private-bill day. I ask that the order reported from the Committee of the Whole be modified so that this bill go over until next Friday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] asks unanimous consent that this bill go over until Friday next, after the reading of the Journal, the previous question to be considered as ordered. If there be no objection, that order will be made. The Chair hears no objection.

SAMUEL STERLING.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee of the Whole House be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3983) granting a pension to Samuel Sterling, and that the same be considered now.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Samuel Sterling, son of David Sterling, late private in Company F, Thirty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, now deceased, upon the pension-roll of the United States, and to pay to said Samuel Sterling a pension from and after the approval of this act, at the rate of $18 per month.

The report (by Mr. YODER) is as follows:

This claimant, and the beneficiary of this bill (H. R. 3983), is the physically helpless son of David Sterling, who was a private in Company F, Thirty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteers, war of 1861-1865. Claimant was born December 8, 1868. His father died in 1874, leaving a widow and four young children (of which claimant is the eldest), and no estate of any consequence for their support. The soldier's death, it is believed, was occasioned by disability contracted in the service.

The records of the War Department show that he served from September 23, 1861, to July 20, 1865. That during his service he was treated for phthisis pulmonalis in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., from May 23, 1863, to June 23, 1863, and at Chattanooga, Tenn., for chronic rheumatism from May 13, 1864, to May 25, 1864. It appears that he applied for pension, but died before it was granted. After his death his widow, the mother of claimant, also applied for pension, but before the completion of the claim she remarried, and the claim, as to the children or widow has not been completed. However, in the affidavit filed in the widow's claim the following evidence as to the cause of the soldier's death appears, viz:

"The widow swears that—
"David Sterling (the father) was discharged July 20, 1865, and died on account of heart disease and blind staggers on the 8th day of October, 1874."

C. P. Clark, a neighbor, swears that—

"He was acquainted with David Sterling from 1855 up to the time he died, and that he was afflicted with heart disease from 1865; that said disease caused blind staggers, which nearly disabled said David Sterling from any manual labor whatever."

Harrison Sargeant swears that—"I worked for David Sterling . . . about the year 1868 or 1869. I drove his team, and knew him to be afflicted at that time with heart disease and blind staggers, and have seen him frequently when he was at work have attacks of heart trouble, and he would have to sit down, and would almost smother; that he told me at the time that he contracted his disease in the service."

In the soldier's claim for pension appears the following evidence:

John Turner, a comrade, swears that—"I was a comrade in the same regiment and company with claimant, David Sterling, and recollect that in the spring or summer of 1864 that said claimant was troubled with dizziness and blindness, which I understood at the time from the regimental surgeon to be heart disease; knew claimant a short time after discharge from Army, and knew him to be an unsound man."

Again, in the widow's claim for pension appears the following evidence:

John J. Darling swears:

"I was a private of Company E, Thirty-first Regiment. . . . Said David Sterling was a member also. On the march from Ringgold to Rosaca, Ga., we stopped a few moments to rest; he was complaining of blind spells, and he was so bad at times that he had to be helped to bear his burden. He very often attended sick call, and on one occasion he asked me to put my hand on his breast, and I think I never felt anything beat so in my life."

The evidence of the widow in her claim for pension is also to the effect that medical evidence of cause of death is not to be had, because of the death of the attending physician. This is corroborated by the affidavit of the family doctor's administrator. The beneficiary of this bill is shown to be permanently helpless. His limbs from the hips down are perfectly paralyzed and the size of those of a child of eight or ten years, while the rest of his person is of normal size. He has lived on charity ever since his father's death, a portion of the time in the county poor-house.

His mother's remarriage was to a man too poor to support the children, and they were placed with such charitably disposed persons as would take them. But Samuel being so helpless, his only means of locomotion being on his outstretched palms, such a place was hard to find for him, and he had to go to the poor-house until some of the comrades of the father made up a small fund for him and placed him in school. He is of a bright, intelligent mind, and of good character.

Your committee deem this a case which appeals most strongly to a sense of right and of duty on the part of the nation toward the helpless orphan of a worthy deceased Union soldier. We therefore report the bill favorably.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, the report in this case is somewhat long; I think I can state the circumstances briefly so that they may be understood by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, the beneficiary in this case is the son of a deceased soldier. The testimony filed in the case of the father shows that he died from disease contracted in the service. This son is helpless. I have seen him myself. His lower limbs are the size of those of a child six or seven years old, while the rest of his person is that of a man. The only way in which he can walk is by swinging his body along by the aid of his outstretched hands placed upon the ground. For a number of years after his father's death he was an inmate of the poorhouse.

This bill proposes to place him on the pension-roll at the rate of $18 a month. He is entirely helpless. Some soldiers in his neighborhood who knew him, men of poor circumstances themselves, contributed for a number of months to the support of the child and sent him to school; and any one meeting him could not help being impressed with the intelligence of this youth, showing the fact that he has a brain in healthy condition, although his body is deformed. And in time I believe and hope that he will be an ornament to society on account of his intelligence and learning.

In his present condition, however, he is absolutely helpless. He has no means, and it is utterly impossible that he can receive an education unless he depends upon charity, and charitable contributions of men who are themselves unable to aid him very much, and upon whom he has no legal claim for support.

Mr. KILGORE. How old is he?

Mr. BOOTHMAN. He is now about twenty-one years of age. He has been going to school on the charity of his father's comrades. This is a case that appeals to everybody here.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I want to say just this much, Mr. Speaker, that in a town in my district there is a duplicate of the young man referred to by my friend from Ohio in so far as his physical deformity is concerned. This is another instance where we are about to pension a man who is deformed and crippled purely out of sentiment.

I shall vote against it.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PETERS. I ask leave to have the report printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That will be done.

The report is printed above.

AGNES VETTER.

Mr. CARUTH. I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee of the Whole House from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 4028) granting a pension to Agnes Vetter, and put it upon its passage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Agnes Vetter, dependent mother of John M. Vetter, captain of Company F, Ninth Kentucky Infantry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I insist upon the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. WILSON, of Kentucky) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4028) granting a pension to Agnes Vetter, submit the following report:

The records of the War Department show that John M. Vetter served as first lieutenant and also as captain of Company F, Ninth Kentucky Volunteers, from November 26, 1861, to June 1, 1862, when his resignation was accepted, tendered by reason of his inability to discharge his duties ever since the battle of Shiloh and the fatigues and exposures incident thereto.

His mother, Agnes Vetter, filed a claim in the Pension Office on August 30, 1895, based upon her dependence upon the soldier, who was her only son and sole support, her husband having died in 1844, and, in support of her claim, filed testimony showing that while in the service the soldier was attacked with typhoid fever and chronic diarrhea, upon which pulmonary consumption supervened, causing the soldier's death on September 11, 1870. Her dependence upon the soldier is fully shown, and her own patriotic feeling was exhibited by going with the Louisville, Ky., sanitary boat, as a volunteer nurse, to the battle-field of Shiloh.

Her claim would have to be admitted by the Pension Office were it not for the fact that the soldier left a widow surviving him, who, however, it is shown, remarried a year subsequent to the soldier's death.

As here indicated, her claim was rejected by the Pension Office in November, 1887, on the ground that the soldier left a widow surviving him.

Mrs. Vetter is now seventy-eight years of age. Her case is one which certainly deserves relief at the hands of Congress, and there being no one now drawing pension on account of the death of said soldier your committee return the bill with the recommendation that it pass.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CARUTH moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BAKER. I ask my friend from Missouri to withhold that motion a moment and allow me to pass a pension bill here.

Mr. LANE. I demand the regular order. I am getting tired of this thing. Let us go on regularly if we are to go any further to-night.

Mr. BAKER. Let me get this bill through.

Mr. LANE. The Committee on Pensions have agreed that this should not be done. I shall insist upon the regular order in future.

Mr. STONE, of Missouri. I made a motion to adjourn, but the Speaker did not put it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not understand the gentleman as pressing the motion, but thought it was withdrawn.

Pending that motion, the Chair thinks it would be well for a motion to be entered to reconsider the various bills passed to-night.

Mr. O'DONNELL. I move to reconsider the votes by which the several bills were passed to-night, and also move to lay that motion on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. STONE, of Missouri, it was rejected.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. LANE. I demand the regular order.

Mr. BAKER. Let me call up this bill now.

Mr. LANE. You can not take up a bill in the House without unanimous consent.

Mr. BAKER. Will you object?

Mr. LANE. I will. The Committee on Invalid Pensions have again and again agreed that the Calendar shall be regularly called. I ask the regular order.

Mr. YODER. We have violated it to-night.

Mr. LANE. You did this evening, and I was loath to object. I thought it likely that some objection would be made, and I did not like to seem to obstruct pension matters; but I feel under obligations to carry out the agreement of the committee.

Mr. BAKER. I ask that this bill be stated, and then if the gentleman objects—

Mr. LANE. I do object.

Mr. PETERS. Then I move that the House now adjourn.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan. Did the two bills which passed the committee last week pass to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. They did.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. PETERS, the House divided; and there were—ayes 10, noes 11.

So the House refused to adjourn.

And then (the hour of 10.30 p. m. having arrived) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following communication was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

PURCHASE OF TENTS.

Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting the draught of a bill "authorizing the purchase of tents for certain purposes and making appropriations therefor," with report of the Quartermaster-General of the Army in relation thereto—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, the following resolution was introduced and referred as follows:

By Mr. RICHARDSON:

Resolved, That the third paragraph of clause 1 of Rule XIII be amended by adding thereto the following proviso:

"Provided, That reports from the Court of Claims, transmitted to Congress by the Court of Claims under the acts of March 3, 1893, and March 3, 1897, shall have precedence on the Private Calendar when reported by a committee of the House."

to the Committee on Rules.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, reports of committees on bills of the following titles were delivered to the Clerk, ordered to be printed, and referred as follows:

Mr. MANSUR, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 2978) granting jurisdiction and authority to the Court of Claims in the case of scow Rowena—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LAWS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 6905) granting a pension to Byron R. McIntyre;
- A bill (H. R. 7586) granting a pension to James O'Donnell; and
- A bill (S. 218) granting a pension to George W. Padgett.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 7193) for removal of charge of desertion from Alfred Lane; and
- A bill (H. R. 1271) for the relief of Sanford A. Pingan.

Mr. WILLIAMS also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 887) authorizing the erection of a hotel upon the Government reservation at Fortress Monroe—to the House Calendar.

Mr. WALKER, of Missouri, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the bill (S. 2026) authorizing the construction of a free bridge across the Arkansas River, connecting Little Rock and Argenta, Ark.—to the House Calendar.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 4635) granting certain privileges to the Union Railway Company of Chattanooga, Tenn.—to the House Calendar.

Mr. LAWS, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 7914) granting a pension to Jay Marvin; and
- A bill (H. R. 7588) granting a pension to David Rose.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 3886) to authorize the construction of a bridge and approaches at New York City, across the Hudson River, to regulate commerce in and over such bridge between the States of New York and New Jersey, and to establish such bridge a military and post road—to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on the Library, reported favorably the joint resolution (H. Res. 112) appropriating $3,000 to inclose and beautify monument at Moore's Creek, North Carolina—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CARLTON, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (S. 242) for the relief of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Halroyd, widow and administratrix of the estate of John Halroyd, deceased; and
- A bill (S. 680) for the relief of Alice E. Robertson.

Mr. YODER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 5050) granting a pension to Dolly Blazer;
- A bill (H. R. 6280) granting a pension to Lawrence Dougherty;
- A bill (H. R. 4968) granting a pension to Elizabeth A. Jones;
- A bill (H. R. 5709) granting a pension to Sarah A. Harrison;
- A bill (H. R. 4967) granting a pension to Mrs. Catherine Reed;
- A bill (H. R. 3218) to place the name of Pauline Bichweiler on the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. 1783) granting a pension to Mrs. Alice A. Cunningham;

- A bill (H. R. 3261) granting a pension to Sarah Connally;
- A bill (H. R. 3259) granting a pension to Simon Beakler;
- A bill (H. R. 6153) granting a pension to Elizabeth Bennett;
- A bill (H. R. 1110) granting a pension to William J. Bryan;
- A bill (H. R. 2318) granting a pension to Malinda Foreman;
- A bill (H. R. 2317) granting a pension to Anna McCreary;
- A bill (H. R. 4355) for the relief of Emeline Beam, mother of Isaac W. Beam;

- A bill (H. R. 3065) granting a pension to Mary Donohue;
- A bill (S. 511) granting a pension to Anna A. Probert; and
- A bill (S. 2064) placing the name of Bridget White on the pension-roll.

Mr. YODER also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 3034) granting a pension to George W. Pitner—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 4522) granting a pension to J. N. Jordan;
- A bill (H. R. 3242) granting a pension to Sarah Devine, mother of Jesse Chapman;
- A bill (H. R. 7816) granting a pension to Harriet E. Cooper;
- A bill (H. R. 7829) granting arrears of pension to Hermann F. A. Rovelle;

- A bill (H. R. 6388) granting a pension to Peter Peterson;
- A bill (H. R. 4246) granting a pension to Bridget Lynch;
- A bill (H. R. 3224) granting a pension to Sally Powell;
- A bill (H. R. 7076) to increase the pension of Cornelius J. Wiley;
- A bill (H. R. 4306) to pension Rebecca Bolerjack;
- A bill (H. R. 6606) granting a pension to William F. Reed;
- A bill (H. R. 7958) granting a pension to Christopher C. Funk;
- A bill (H. R. 7659) granting a pension to Warner M. Ellis;
- A bill (H. R. 5719) for the relief of Harrison Tryson;
- A bill (H. R. 7959) granting a pension to Frederick B. Sells;
- A bill (H. R. 5434) granting a pension to William Edwards;
- A bill (H. R. 7953) granting a pension to Barbara Langstaff;
- A bill (S. 1371) granting a pension to John C. Abbott; and
- A bill (S. 333) granting a pension to Sarah E. Stewart.

Mr. LANE also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendment the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 7330) granting a pension to William R. Avery; and
- A bill (H. R. 6622) granting a pension to Ella Harrison.

Mr. BROSIUS, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 283) defining "lard," also imposing a tax upon and regulating the manufacture, sale, importation, and exportation of compound lard—to the House Calendar.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the bill (S. 1873) authorizing the Brazos Terminal Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Brazos River, in the State of Texas—to the House Calendar.

Mr. TURNER, of New York, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 2503) for the relief of Sarah D. Duke; and
- A bill (H. R. 6391) granting a pension to Mrs. Margaret A. Jacoby.

Mr. TURNER, of New York, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendment the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 4372) granting a pension to John Dean; and
- A bill (H. R. 6078) granting an increase of pension to Frank Traynor.

Mr. MARTIN, of Indiana, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 6211) granting a pension to John S. Lozier;
- A bill (H. R. 4167) granting a pension to Lorenzo D. Whiteford;
- A bill (H. R. 7367) for the relief of Sarah M. Williams;
- A bill (H. R. 6913) granting a pension to Alexander G. Davis;
- A bill (H. R. 5014) for the relief of Ernest Barth;
- A bill (H. R. 2481) granting a pension to Bridget Tole;
- A bill (H. R. 4851) granting a pension to Eliza J. Glass;
- A bill (H. R. 7529) granting a pension to Belle Morrison, of Dillsborough, Ind.;

- A bill (H. R. 1155) granting a pension to Francis M. Hull; and
- A bill (H. R. 2469) increasing the pension of Thomas Ward.

Mr. MARTIN, of Indiana, also, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendment the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

- A bill (H. R. 5108) for the relief of George W. Hutchinson;
- A bill (H. R. 2864) for the relief of Elizabeth Earp;
- A bill (H. R. 5107) for the relief of David L. Truex;
- A bill (H. R. 6089) granting an increase of pension to George Uhl;
- A bill (H. R. 5098) for the relief of William A. Bange; and
- A bill (H. R. 4190) granting a pension to Mrs. Susan Clark.

Mr. SPRINGER, on behalf of the minority of the Committee on the Territories, to which was recommitted the bill (H. R. 982) to provide for the admission of the State of Wyoming into the Union, and for other purposes, submitted their views in writing; and it was ordered that said views be printed and referred to the said Committee on the Territories.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, adverse reports on bills of the following titles were delivered to the Clerk and laid on the table:

By Mr. GEST, from the Committee on Claims, on the bill (H. R. 3233) for the relief of Michael A. Dace.

Also, from the same committee, on a petition of William H. Blade, relative to claim for services rendered by him in the capture of steamer W. B. Terry, in 1861.

By Mr. BELKNAP, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, the bill (H. R. 7065) granting an increase of pension to Ira C. Alger, jr.

By Mr. KELLEY, from the Committee on Accounts, on a resolution to appoint Thomas G. Ingram, assistant janitor.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Ohio, from the Committee on Military Affairs, on the bill (H. R. 1918) for the relief of F. W. Zickendrach.

Also, from the same committee, on the bill (H. R. 2836) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John J. Schmidt.

Also, from the same committee, on the bill (H. R. 1261) for the relief of William T. Edwards.

Also, from the same committee, on the joint resolution (H. Res. 92) authorizing the Secretary of War to grant a permit to Harry Libby and Philip T. Woodfin to erect a hotel upon the lands of the United States at Old Point Comfort, Va.

By Mr. BELKNAP, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, on the bill (H. R. 6247) granting a pension to James Shaw.

By Mr. MASON, from the Committee on Commerce, on the bill (S. 89) to authorize the Oregon and Washington Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Columbia River between the State of Oregon and the State of Washington, and to establish it as a post-road.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. CARTER: A bill (H. R. 8491) to provide for the examination and classification of certain mineral lands, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8492) to provide for the construction of a public building at Butte City, Mont.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8493) authorizing a sale of part of a certain lot in the city of Washington—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BROWNE, of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 8494) authorizing the Secretary of War to grant a permit to Harry Libby to erect a hotel upon the lands of the United States at Old Point Comfort, Virginia—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CONNELL: A bill (H. R. 8495) providing for the extension of the coal laws of the United States to the district of Alaska—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. CARUTH: A bill (H. R. 8496) providing for the purchase of a portrait of General James Wilkinson—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. LEE: A bill (H. R. 8497) to authorize the Washington and Western Railroad Company to extend its line into and within the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. O'NEILL, of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 8498) for the relief of captains, pilots, engineers, and mates of steam-vessels—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. PICKLER: A bill (H. R. 8520) for an act to authorize the Pierre and Fort Pierre Ponton Bridge Company to construct a ponton bridge across the Missouri River at Pierre, S. Dak.—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. RUSSELL: A joint resolution (H. Res. 132) to print 10,000 copies of a compilation of the inaugural addresses of the Presidents of the United States, from George Washington to Benjamin Harrison, for the first century of Presidential inaugurations, with authenticated incidents connected therewith, biographical sketches of the Presidents from official sources, together with steel-plate portraits of the Presidents and steel-plate illustrations of the Capitol and White House—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. LODGE: A joint resolution (H. Res. 133) providing for the distribution of certain publications of the Government to depositories of public documents—to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. BELDEN: A bill (H. R. 8499) for the removal of a charge of desertion from record of Frank A. R. Gray—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BLISS: A bill (H. R. 8500) to correct the military record of Erastus Confer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8501) granting a pension to Joshua Dodge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTTERWORTH: A bill (H. R. 8502) for the relief of the estate of John H. Piatt, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CRAIN: A bill (H. R. 8503) for the relief of Adams & Wickes—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DORSEY: A bill (H. R. 8504) granting a pension to Oscar S. Crabtree—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8505) granting an increase of pension to Chris. Steiger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DUNNELL: A bill (H. R. 8506) for the relief of John W. McCaun—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HATCH: A bill (H. R. 8507) for the relief of John H. Morgan—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HOLMAN: A bill (H. R. 8508) granting a pension to Ann Carr, of Vevay, Ind.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNAPP: A bill (H. R. 8509) to relieve Daniel E. Thompson of the charge of desertion—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MCCARTHY: A bill (H. R. 8510) for the payment of arrears of pension to Thomas Snowden Hamblin, late a first lieutenant in Thirty-eighth Regiment of New York Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MCCREARY: A bill (H. R. 8511) for the relief of S. S. Deering, dependent father of George Deering, late adjutant Seventeenth Kentucky Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MCRAE: A bill (H. R. 8512) making an appropriation for the benefit of the estate of William Moss, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MOORE, of New Hampshire (by request): A bill (H. R. 8513) granting a pension to Thomas F. Leahey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PRICE: A bill (H. R. 8514) for the relief of Pierre Breaux, of Terre Bonne Parish, Louisiana—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 8515) granting a pension to Louisa Bailey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIMONDS: A bill (H. R. 8516) for the relief of James B. McCubbin—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. STEWART, of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 8517) for the relief of the heirs or legal representatives of David L. Duffley, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 8518) to grant a pension to Thomas Stewart—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WICKHAM: A bill (H. R. 8519) granting a pension to John Frohlin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the following changes of reference were made:

A bill (S. 1362) for the relief of Mary B. Hook—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 1545) for the relief of Edwin De Leon—Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 2258) granting a pension to Hannah Cummins—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5106) for the relief of Squire West—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BAKER: Petition of Rev. B. T. Roberts and others, of Chili, Monroe County, New York, in favor of the repeal of all duties on sugar, refined and raw—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BARNES: Petition of Subordinate Union, No. 2, of the city of Augusta, Ga., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BECKWITH: Four petitions of citizens of New Jersey, against alien labor on public works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: Petition of citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against the employment of aliens upon public works of the Government—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CARTER: Resolution and protest of the Helena (Mont.) Board of Trade, relating to H. R. 304, entitled "A bill for raising revenues from the use of public lands," etc.—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CARUTH: Resolutions of the Trades and Labor Assembly of Louisville, Ky., favoring the enforcement of the eight-hour law—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CHEADLE: Petition of Merriman Thompson, for reimbursement for property worth $405.80—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CONGER: Petition of Ellsworth Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Ames, Iowa, in favor of pensions for widows and children of all late soldiers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of J. W. Lundy and others, of the Seventh district of Iowa, in favor of remonetization of silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, memorial of Farmers' Alliance, Ellwell, Iowa, in favor of Butterworth bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of Wareland Monthly Meeting of Friends, Warren County, Iowa, against proposed expenditures for Navy and coast defenses—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, joint resolution of the Iowa Legislature, asking for the passage of a pure-lard bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CULBERTSON, of Pennsylvania: Petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, in reference to duty on hops—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CUMMINGS: Petition of stenographers and others on behalf of the Lawler resolution, as to the short-hand method of spelling—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Petition of 471 citizens of Michigan, asking for a national Sunday-rest law—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. DINGLEY: Memorial of officers of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia, for passage of House bill 6971 to prohibit manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. DORSEY: Memorial from Congregational churches in Nebraska, for appointment of additional chaplains in the United States Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FEATHERSTON: Petition of Jeremiah Pascull, of Phillips County, Arkansas, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims under provisions of the Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FLOWER: Petition of Robert Englander, president, and John Ruff, secretary of Subordinate Union No. 35 of New York Bricklayers and Masons' Union, against employing aliens on public works of the United States—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. GEISENHAINER: Petition for improvement of the South Shrewsbury River in Monmouth County, New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GREENHALGE: Petition of Subordinate Union No. 13, city of Lowell, Mass., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, for the amendment of the laws of the United States so as to prevent the employment of any other than citizens of the United States upon Government works, etc.—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of Emeline M. Butler, widow of Andrew J. Butler, Company C, Sixth Regiment Vermont Volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of clerks in second-class post-offices of Vermont—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HANSBROUGH: Poetic appeal in behalf of the survivors of the war—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HATCH: Petition of 155 citizens of Knox County, Missouri, in favor of the remonetization of silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

Also, petition and papers to accompany a bill for the relief of John H. Morgan—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of John J. Rohlf and 84 others, members of Turner Society, at Davenport, Iowa, protesting against the passage of any law materially changing the present naturalization or immigration laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, joint resolution of Iowa Legislature, praying for the repeal of the limitation contained in pension act of 1879—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, joint resolution of same body, praying for the immediate construction of the Hennepin Canal—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HAYNES: Petition of Bricklayers and Masons' Union, Subordinate Union No. 3, city of Toledo, Ohio, against the employment of aliens instead of citizens on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa: Resolutions by the postal force in the post-office at Dubuque, Iowa, in favor of House bills 6448 and 6449—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, resolutions by James Butler Post, No. 220, Grand Army of the Republic, Iowa, Clarksville, Iowa, and Charles Payne Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Iowa, No. 141, Iowa Falls, Iowa, urging the passage of the service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HERMANN: Petition from citizens of Oregon, for forfeiture of Northern Pacific Railroad land grant between Walla Walla and Portland, Oregon—to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

Also, of citizens of Wasco County, Oregon, for same purpose—to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. HOLMAN: Affidavits in support of bill granting a pension to Ann Carr, of Vevay, Ind.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KELLEY: Petition of Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, No. 2564, membership 287, State of Kansas, asking for free coinage of silver, for abolition of national banks, and election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Lydia Harris, representing 250 of the Society of Friends, and signed by her as clerk of said organization, Emporia, Kans., protesting against the passage of the Senate Naval Committee measure and all other measures which propose large expenditures for the Navy and so-called coast defenses, all of which is a menace to the peace of the nation in the judgment of said society—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. LACEY: Resolutions favoring service-pension bill, from Lynnville (Iowa) Post, Grand Army of the Republic—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McRAE: Petition of farmers of Tennessee, against compound lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MORRILL: Resolutions of the Farmers and Industrial Union of Saline County, Kansas, asking for legislation—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. NORTON: Petition of E. D. Shea and others, citizens of Anderson County, Missouri, praying for a service pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of W. H. Cameron and 76 others, praying that pensions may be granted all soldiers and marines who served in the Federal Army in the war of the rebellion who are in any respect or any degree unable to perform manual labor—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Petition of Nelson B. Gardner, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'NEIL, of Massachusetts: Remonstrance of W. K. Lewis & Brother and many others, against imposing any duty on canned lobsters—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania: Resolutions of the Philadelphia Board of Trade urging Congress to pass without delay Senate bill 3971, to pension Mrs. Caroline Huddell White, widow of Commodore George B. White, United States Navy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PUGSLEY: Petition from 394 Friends of Newburgh, Clinton County, Ohio, against expenditures for warlike purposes—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RAY: Petitions of Subordinate Lodge No. 8, of Connellsville, Pa., Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, and of Subordinate Lodge No. 26, Washington, Pa., of same organization, praying that the laws be so amended that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Petition of Miss Musadora Wasson, Ella Wasson, and Frank Wasson, praying for payment of their claim of $30,237, or its reference to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of S. C. Hampton, administrator, for reference of claim to the Court of Claims under provisions of the Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RUSSELL: Petition of Louisa Bailey, for pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SENEY: Petition of Bricklayers and Masons' Union at Tiffin, Ohio, against the employment of aliens instead of citizens on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SNIDER: Petition of Board of Trade of Minneapolis, Minn., favoring the improvement of the Mississippi River between St. Paul and Minneapolis—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of the Society of Friends of Minneapolis, Minn., against expenditures for coast defenses and for naval affairs—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, petition of the Nationalist Club of Minneapolis, Minn., against proposed settlement of the Pacific railway debt to the Government—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. STEPHENSON: Petition of the citizens of Menominee, Mich., relative to the position of the North American Turnerbund on immigration and naturalization laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions of Farmers' Alliance No. 1281, Maple Landing, Iowa, Sac City, Iowa; Washington Alliance, Storm Lake, Iowa; Leonic, Iowa, urging the passage of House bill 5353, defining "options," "futures," and imposing penalties to lessen and prevent gambling in farm products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SWENEY: Protest of George Muegge and 23 others, members of the North American Turnerbund, protesting against the enactment of laws restricting immigration—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. VAN SCHAICK: Petition of members of North Side Turners' Society of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against proposed changes of immigration and naturalization laws—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. VENABLE: Petition of Farmers' Alliance, Greensville County, Virginia, asking that national banks be allowed to loan money on real estate—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. Madison of Claims
By Mr. claim of
Also,
and John

Prayer
The Jo

Mr. W. Masons' U
a law pro which wa
Mr. CU
Belleville,
ing that work; wh
Mr. SA
Union of reference Committee
Mr. PA
Internatio but Amer was refer
Mr. ST Masons' In
tion of the of Saginaw favor citize and exclud
Education

Mr. HIS York, pray
sion be ext
He also Friends, ci creased exp menace to the Commi

He also the State
Masons' In be so ame played on on Educati
He also praying for compensati on Post-Off
Mr. SHE of East Liv
Union of Cleveland, of America
ernment wa and Labor.

Mr. TUR
Bricklayers apolis, Ind. aliens and public worl Labor.

Mr. ING and the pet ing for the on Finance.

He also p
of the Repr service-pen
He also p
89, of Nebr
66, of Nebr
17, of Nebr
No. 95, of move the li referred to

By Mr. WHEELER, of Alabama: Petition of William Hamaker, of Madison County, Alabama, praying for reference of his claim to Court of Claims under act of March 3, 1883—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WILLIAMS, of Illinois: Additional evidence in support of claim of Thomas Ridenour—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, affidavits for relief of Allen Anderson, Harrison Thurmond, and John Garrett—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, March 22, 1890.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union No. 2, of Des Moines, Iowa, praying for the passage of a law prohibiting the employment of aliens on Government works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. CULLOM presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 2, of Belleville, Ill., of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union of America, praying that none but American citizens be employed on all Government work; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SAWYER presented a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union of La Crosse, Wis., praying that Americans be employed in preference to aliens on Government works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PADDOCK presented a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Omaha, Nebr., praying that none but American citizens be employed upon Government works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Detroit, Mich., and a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Saginaw, Mich., praying for such amendment of the laws as will favor citizens of the United States as employés on Government works and exclude aliens therefrom; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HISCOCK presented six petitions of citizens of the State of New York, praying that the time for making application for arrears of pension be extended; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a memorial of 238 members of the Society of Friends, citizens of the State of New York, remonstrating against increased expenditures for the Navy and other warlike preparations as a menace to the peace and security of the nation; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented sundry petitions signed by numerous citizens of the State of New York, representing ten subordinate unions of the Masons' International Union of America, praying that the present laws be so amended that only citizens of the United States shall be employed on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of 74 citizens of the State of New York, praying for the passage of House bill 3863, providing for an increase of compensation to letter-carriers; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 10, of East Liverpool, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, and a memorial of Subordinate Union No. 5, of Cleveland, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, remonstrating against the employment of aliens on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of Subordinate Union, No. 3, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Indianapolis, Ind., praying for legislation making a discrimination against aliens and in favor of citizens of the United States as employés on public works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. INGALLS presented a petition of 39 citizens of Dennis, Kans., and the petition of Eugene B. Bisbee, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of Anderson Post, No. 45, Grand Army of the Republic, of Smith Center, Kans., praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 89, of Nebraska; a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 66, of Nebraska; a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 17, of Nebraska, and a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 95, of Nebraska, praying for the passage of Senate bill 496, to remove the limitation in the payment of arrears of pensions; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PIERCE presented a petition of 136 residents of Titusville, Pa., praying for the passage of Senate bill 2607, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the causes of agricultural depression; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Farmers' Alliance of Hunter, N. Dak., praying for the passage of Senate bill 2607, creating a commission to investigate the causes of agricultural depression, and also praying for the passage of a bill authorizing the Government to loan money to the people at a low rate of interest; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. REAGAN presented resolutions adopted by the Galveston (Tex.) Cotton Exchange in favor of an appropriation to secure a deep-water harbor at Galveston; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. ALLISON presented a petition of 110 citizens of the Seventh Congressional district of Iowa, and a petition of 140 citizens of Winnechick County, Iowa, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the John Dillon Post, No. 233, Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic, of Marengo, Iowa, and a resolution adopted by the W. A. Morse Post, No. 190, Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic, of Manchester, Iowa, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of W. A. Elliott and other citizens of Grundy Centre, Iowa, praying for legislation to prohibit boards of trade, bucket-shops, and mercantile bodies and individuals from fixing the value on the raw or manufactured produce of American farms by sales of promises of future deliveries; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented the petition of W. A. Elliott and other citizens of Grundy Centre, Iowa, praying for the passage of such laws as will prohibit the selling of promises of future deliveries of farm produce or stock products by those who are not the owners thereof, thereby depressing their value; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. ALLEN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF WASHINGTON,
Office of the Secretary of State.

I, Allen Weir, secretary of state of the State of Washington and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the attached instrument of writing, i. e., Senate joint memorial No. 23, asking that surviving soldiers of the Indian war be granted lands in the State of Washington, with the original now on file in my office, and that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said State, at Olympia, this 17th day of February, A. D. 1890.
[SEAL.] ALLEN WEIR, Secretary of State.

[Senate joint memorial No. 23.]

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Washington, respectfully represents:

Whereas it has ever been the custom of governments, from time immemorial, to reward those who served their country in times of peril and danger and risking their lives for the common welfare; and

Whereas in the year of 1855 an Indian war broke out in the Territory of Washington, and participated in by all the Indian tribes of the Territory; and

Whereas it was imperatively necessary that all able-bodied men of the settlers then in the Territory enroll themselves in military companies and go out and meet, fight, and put the Indians to rout, in order that this grand Territory be saved to the United States and to the millions that will yet find here happy and prosperous homes; and

Whereas the early pioneer soldiers, who ventured their all in the putting down of said war, were out of their pay for many years, and when paid it was only the pay of regulars, and this in a depreciated currency worth 40 cents on the dollar;

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress are requested to secure the passage of a bill that will give to every man who served in the aforementioned war, and who has an honorable discharge, and to their families, if the soldier be dead, a land warrant for 160 acres of land in the State of Washington.

Hoping and trusting that the subject will commend itself to the favorable consideration of Congress, we pray that this act of justice be done these pioneer soldiers, and as in duty bound, we will ever pray.

Passed the senate January 21, 1890.

CHAS. E. LAUGHTON,
President of the Senate.

Passed the house January 22, 1890.

J. W. FEIGHAN,
Speaker of the House.

Mr. ALLEN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Washington; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF WASHINGTON,
Office of the Secretary of State.

I, Allen Weir, secretary of state of the State of Washington and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the attached instrument of writing, i. e., House memorial No. 14, for the relief of settlers under the timber-culture law, with the original now on file in my office, and that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said State, at Olympia, this 17th day of February, A. D. 1890.
[SEAL.] ALLEN WEIR, Secretary of State.

[House memorial No. 14.]

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Washington, would respectfully represent: That there are many settlers in the eastern part of the State of Washington who have made entry of Government lands under the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western prairies,'" approved June 14, 1878, and the acts of which said act is amendatory. That in many localities in Eastern Washington the summer months are very dry and hot; that the rainfall is insufficient to supply the necessary moisture for the growth of trees; that the country is so broken and rolling that it is impossible to irrigate the land in any way; that on account of the extreme heat and dryness of the summers the trees planted on such timber-culture claims have failed to grow; that in many cases where the trees have withstood the drought of summer they have succumbed to the frosts and cold weather of the winters; that many settlers have expended from $500 to $1,000 in the attempt to make timber grow on their timber-culture claims, and they are now no nearer securing title to their claims than they were five or six years ago; that many settlers have made valuable improvements on their timber-culture claims, and that on account of the failure of their trees to grow on such claims they are frequently subjected to tedious and expensive contests on account of alleged failure to comply with the provisions of the timber-culture law; that the money and labor expended in the attempt to comply with the timber-culture law have been absolutely lost to the settler on land under the timber-culture law in a great majority of the cases where entries have been made thereunder. That but little of the prairie land of Eastern Washington is adapted to the growth of timber; that the varieties of timber that can be grown on the land in that portion of this State are such as have but little value for domestic or manufacturing purposes. Therefore your memorialists pray that such laws be enacted by the Congress of the United States as will provide for the settlers on lands under the provisions of the timber-culture law to acquire title to their land by paying to the United States the sum of $1.25 per acre for the land included in their entries under this law, and upon proof that they have complied with the provisions of law as to breaking the land and planting and cultivating trees thereon from the time of making entry thereof up to the time of offering to make final payment therefor, as prayed for in this memorial; and your memorialists will ever pray.

Passed the house January 22, 1890.

J. W. FEIGHAN, Speaker.

Passed the senate January 31, 1890.

CHARLES E. LAUGHTON, President.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of the Commercial Exchange and the packers of Kansas City, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called Edmunds inspection bill; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of 31 citizens of Hannibal, Mo., and a petition of 21 citizens of Polk County, Missouri, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Department of Sabbath Observance, signed by 104 citizens of Missouri, praying for legislation in regard to the observance of the Sabbath; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PAYNE presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 3, of Toledo, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 20, of Tiffin, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 23, of Warren, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union; a petition of Subordinate Union No. 5, of Cleveland, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union; and petitions of Subordinate Unions Nos. 15 and 18, of Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union, praying for the enactment of laws that will secure to citizens of the United States the right to labor on Government works in preference to aliens; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PLATT presented a petition of Bricklayers and Masons' Union No. 9, of Meriden, Conn., praying that none but citizens of the United States be employed in the erection of United States public buildings, navy-yards, fortifications, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, presented a memorial of the Pine Bluff (Ark.) Board of Trade, remonstrating against the passage of certain bills relating to compound lard; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a memorial signed by the president and secretary of Subordinate Union No. 2 of Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Little Rock, Ark., remonstrating against the employment of foreign labor in the construction of public buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PASCO presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 1 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Pensacola, Fla., praying that the law be so amended that none but American citizens shall be employed on Government works, and that such law be enforced by appropriate penalties; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition of the Farmers' Union, of Saline County, Kansas, praying for such legislation as will protect the farming portion of the people against the beef combines and other trust companies; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of Fort Scott, Kans., remonstrating against any changes in the duties on lead and silver ores from Old Mexico which will increase the impediments now met with in the transportation of said ores; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of Post No. 464, Grand Army of the Republic, of Emporia, Kans., praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented the petition of John Sargent Alliance, No. 626, of Sylvia, Reno County, Kansas, praying for the accomplishment of the subtreasury plan for the free circulation of money; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of certain citizens of Cass County, Kansas, praying for an appropriation by Congress for the purpose of continuing the experiment in the manufacture of sugar from sorghum and beets; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. PLATT presented a petition of the North American Turnerbund (Gymnastic Union), of Meriden, Conn., protesting against the passage of any and all of the measures designed to materially change the present national laws on immigration and naturalization; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3331) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the purchase of a site and the erection of a suitable building for a post-office and other Government offices in the city of Scranton, Pa.," approved July 27, 1882, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2163) for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of Gerard Wood, deceased, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on Revolutionary Claims; which was agreed to.

He also, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4652) for a public building at Ashland, Wis., reported it with an amendment.

Mr. PLUMB, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 751) to promote the storage of water in the Gila River, Arizona Territory, for the purpose of reclamation and cultivation of desert lands, milling, mining, mechanical, domestic, or for any other purpose that water is or can be used, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Select Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands; which was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3025) to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to gather full and authentic information as to the present condition and preservation of the fur-seal interests of the Government in the region of Alaska, as compared with its condition in 1870; also full information as to the impending extinction of the sea-otter industry, and kindred lines of inquiry, etc., to report it with an amendment.

Mr. HOAR. I would like to inquire from what committee that bill came, what Senator reported it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill was reported from the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee whether that would not be a case where the Senate might be asked to pass the bill at once. I understand that it is necessary that the information should be obtained quite early in April.

Mr. MORRILL. It is important that it should be considered early.

Mr. INGALLS. Let the bill be read for information.

Mr. HOAR. I think there can be no objection to considering it now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. COCKRELL. There was a unanimous agreement yesterday, and I shall insist upon its enforcement.

Mr. MORRILL. Perhaps the bill had better be printed and lie over till Monday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be printed and placed on the Calendar.

Mr. PADDOCK. I am directed by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom were referred the bill (S. 941) for the encouragement of the cultivation of the sugar-beet and the manufacture of sugar therefrom, and for other purposes and the bill (S. 942) providing for an appropriation for the purchase of sugar-beet seed from abroad, and to exempt the importation of beet-sugar machinery and such seed from duty, and for other purposes, to report them back with a recommendation that they be indefinitely postponed, and I report a substitute for both bills embracing the subject contained in both bills. I also submit a written report.

Senate bills Nos. 941 and 942 were postponed indefinitely. The bill (S. 3242) for the encouragement of the cultivation of the sugar-beet and the manufacture of sugar therefrom, and for other purposes was read twice by its title.

Mr. PADDOCK. As there is a question of tariff involved in this bill, I move the reference of it, with the report, to the Committee on Finance for its consideration.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to ask my colleague, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, whether the two bills indefinitely postponed by the action of the committee have been considered by the committee with a view of framing the idea in the new bill.

Mr. L. have be
Mr. A. poneme
Mr. I. kansa
ure an
The tee on

Mr. S. tion for read tw ings an
Mr. L.

bert L. compan

He a bounty

by its ttee e

Mr. L. Draine

mittee

Mr. A. M. God

panying

Mr. S. represen

and ref

Mr. L. R. Redd

panying

He al

berlin; papers,

He al

Hamilt

mittee

Mr. S. hann

panying

Mr. J. sion to referred

Mr. I. Doroth

the Cor

He al

ing in t

and ref

Mr. T. Klatt;

on Pen

Mr. I. minors

referred

Mr. I. and ter its title

Mr. I. Andrev

and, w

tary A

A me

its Cler joint re

A bil

F, Nin

A bil

A bil

A bil

Mr. PADDOCK. Exactly. The provisions of the two bills which have been postponed are embraced in the new bill reported.

Mr. MANDERSON. Then I have no objection to the indefinite postponement of the bills.

Mr. PADDOCK. I am requested to state by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] that this report from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry is not a unanimous report. It is a majority report.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 3226) to increase the appropriation for the erection of a public building at Dayton, Ohio; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. INGALLS introduced a bill (S. 3227) granting a pension to Herbert L. Grigsby; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3228) to grant additional bounty to the soldiers and sailors of the late war; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HISCOCK introduced a bill (S. 3229) granting a pension to Annie Draine; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. ALLISON introduced a bill (S. 3230) for the relief of Margaret M. Goddard; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SAWYER introduced a bill (S. 3231) for the relief of the legal representatives of George K. Otis; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 3232) granting a pension to Abbie R. Reddington; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3233) granting a pension to John Chamberlin; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3234) granting a pension to Harriet B. Hamilton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 3235) granting a pension to Johanna Sheld; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, introduced a bill (S. 3236) granting a pension to Christiana Schneider; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BATE introduced a bill (S. 3237) increasing the pension of Mrs. Dorothea D. Yates; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3238) for the erection of a public building in the city of Clarksville, Tenn.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 3239) granting a pension to John Klatt; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 3240) to reduce the pay proper of minors enlisting in the Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 3241) to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. GEORGE introduced a bill (S. 3243) appropriating $8,000 to St. Andrew's Church, Jackson, Miss.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. MCPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 5620) granting a pension to Frank Deming, Company F, Ninth Michigan Infantry;

A bill (H. R. 1871) granting a pension to Sarah Meader;

A bill (H. R. 2861) for the relief of Helen E. Dewey;

A bill (H. R. 3538) for the relief of Albert H. Emery;

A bill (H. R. 3983) granting a pension to Samuel Sterling;

A bill (H. R. 4028) granting a pension to Agnes Vetter;

A bill (H. R. 4134) granting a pension to Margaret Stewart;

A bill (H. R. 4694) for the relief of Edward Haynes;

A bill (H. R. 4868) granting a pension to Henrietta Judd;

A bill (H. R. 5081) to pension Helen A. Moore;

A bill (H. R. 5082) to pension Polly Robinson;

A bill (H. R. 5309) to place the name of Mary Welch upon the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. 5452) granting a pension to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. 5617) granting a pension to Henry Bloomfield;

A bill (H. R. 6350) for the relief of Asher Post;

A bill (H. R. 6871) for the relief of Napoleon B. McKay;

A bill (H. R. 2849) authorizing the President to appoint and retire John C. Frémont as a major-general in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 7160) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 8458) authorizing the purchase of tents by the Secretary of War, and for other purposes; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 105) to continue in force an act authorizing the construction of a bridge over Bayou Bernard, in the State of Mississippi.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1296) for the relief of the owners, officers, and crew of the British bark Chance.

The message further announced that the House had passed the concurrent resolution of the Senate of the 12th instant for the printing and binding of 5,000 extra copies of the report of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889.

The message also announced that the House had non-concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 856) to amend section 1 and section 9 of an act entitled "An act to authorize the Denison and Washita Valley Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1889, asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. PERKINS, Mr. McCORD, and Mr. HARE the managers at the conference on the part of the House.

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4975) providing for the appointment of an assistant general superintendent and a chief clerk, railway mail service, now on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. INGALLS. Let it be read at length for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read at length.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster-General may appoint, and assign to duty, one assistant general superintendent, railway mail service, who shall be paid a salary of $3,000 per year, and one chief clerk of railway mail service, to be employed in the Post-Office Department, who shall be paid $2,000 per year, said assistant general superintendent and chief clerk to be also paid their necessary and actual expenses while traveling on the business of the Department. The salaries and expenses of these officers shall be paid out of the appropriation for the transportation of mail on railways.

Mr. SAWYER. I will state to the Senate that the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads have reported a bill verbatim with this, which is on the Calendar, and is Calendar No. 600.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there any report?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no written report.

Mr. SAWYER. The railway mail service has really become outgrown. There has been no enlargement of the force since 1892, and it is really necessary to have this additional assistance to make the service efficient.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there any estimate from the head of the Post-Office Department?

Mr. SAWYER. Yes, sir; there is an estimate here.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear it read.

Mr. SAWYER. It will cost $5,000.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no estimate among the papers with the bill.

Mr. SAWYER. The estimate is with Senate bill 2424, which is Order of Business No. 600. It should be in the report of the committee on that bill.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask that the communication may be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be read as soon as the clerks can obtain it.

Mr. SAWYER. The Calendar number of the bill is 600 and the estimate is with the report from the committee on that bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. The bill does not seem to have any report accompanying it.

Mr. SAWYER. There was a letter from the Department.

Mr. SHERMAN. Without displacing this bill at all, and I do not wish to interfere with it, I hope the Calendar will be proceeded with, and when the papers come in this can be called up.

Mr. SAWYER. Very well; I have no objection to that course.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask that the Calendar be proceeded with in regular order under the eighth rule.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The first bill on the Calendar will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 1264) to provide for the erection of a public building at San Diego, Cal.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States custom-house, post-office, and other Government offices, in the city of San Diego and State of California, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $300,000, which said sum of $300,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plans, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plans, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States nor until the State of California shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the committee.

MR. INGALLS. What is the amount appropriated in the amendment?

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Three hundred thousand dollars.

The amendment was agreed to.

MR. SHERMAN. It seems to me that San Diego, when I was there, was quite a small place. I suppose it has grown somewhat since then, but I think that that amount is rather out of proportion to the sums allowed for such buildings in most of the cities in which they have been appropriated for.

MR. SPOONER. If the Senator from Ohio will permit me a moment, I call the attention of the Senator from California [Mr. STANFORD] to the fact that the Senator from Ohio is submitting some observations concerning the public-building bill for San Diego, Cal., which perhaps he ought to hear.

MR. SHERMAN. I call for an explanation of the necessity for so large an appropriation as $300,000 for San Diego. As I said, I was in San Diego at one time, and while it is an important port it did not appear to me to be a place where a very large and expensive public building would necessarily be required to be constructed. However, the circumstances may have changed. The usual appropriation for the modern class of public buildings where post-offices, etc., are provided for is $100,000. If there is any special reason why the amount in this case should be $300,000, I should like to know it.

MR. STANFORD. San Diego is a rapidly growing place, with now, I think, about 40,000 inhabitants. It is a port of entry; and this building is designed to accommodate not only the post-office, but the custom-house and internal-revenue offices. The appropriation, I think, is no larger, in fact hardly as large as is generally made to accommodate that amount of business. I think it is entirely in harmony with the general appropriations for this purpose.

MR. INGALLS. Can the Senator from California inform us how many other public buildings have been provided for in California at this session of Congress and the amount appropriated?

MR. STANFORD. No, sir; I do not know that I can. None have been provided for except where they were needed.

MR. INGALLS. I should like to be able to ascertain myself whether they are needed in my judgment; and if the Senator can inform us what appropriations have been made and for what towns, we should then be able to ascertain whether they were needed or not, and vote intelligently.

MR. STANFORD. I suppose that in each particular case the reports show the business to be accommodated, and from that the Senator and the Senate can judge the appropriation that is required.

MR. INGALLS. The Senator is chairman, as I understand, of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. There is a general complaint in the press of the country that the appropriations provided by that committee have been exorbitant, that they have been extravagant, that buildings have been provided for where they were not needed. We are here to-day for the purpose of considering the bills upon the Calendar. I address an interrogatory to the Senator, who is the chairman of that committee, and he very curtly replies that by consulting the reports I shall be able to satisfy myself. I respectfully submit that as the chairman of the committee we are entitled to have him give information upon matters of public importance before we are called upon to vote so large a sum as $300,000 for a place no larger than San Diego. I therefore repeat my request for information as to the number of places in California for which public buildings have been provided at this session of Congress and the amount appropriated for each.

MR. STANFORD. I have given the Senator the best information in my power. I am not able to carry in my mind what appropriations have been made, and therefore I referred him to the reports. If he wants a detailed statement, I can get it in a little time by calling on the clerk of the committee; but I can not give it from my recollection.

MR. BATE. Will the Senator talk a little louder? We can not hear him on this side.

MR. STANFORD. I have nothing further to say.

MR. SHERMAN. All I desired was to have some general rule applied to these cases. We are erecting three or four public buildings in the State of Ohio, but I believe $100,000 is the largest sum allowed in those cases, and for towns of greater population than San Diego. It may be that local reasons can be given why a larger building ought to be erected at San Diego than in the city of Dayton, the city of Springfield, and many large cities in the State of Ohio, with fifty, sixty, or seventy thousand inhabitants. All I want is that there should be what would be called in common parlance a fair divide, the same consideration under the same circumstances, and that the same rule should be applied by the committee to other towns. I do not want to interfere with local matters in California.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

MR. STANFORD. I suggest that the bill lie over until Monday, when I shall be prepared to give general information on the subject.

MR. HOAR. Before it goes over I should like to put an interrogatory to the Senator from California, which is suggested by the last remark of the Senator from Ohio.

MR. PLATT. I should like to say a word on the bill before it goes over.

MR. HOAR. I ask whether the committee do not proceed in all these matters upon a general rule, having regard to the kind of business done at the place, the amount of that business, and the population of the town, and whether there has been any favoritism in that committee to one section over another or one place over another, so far as the Senator knows.

MR. STANFORD. None at all, to my knowledge.

MR. SPOONER. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I desire to say a few words in regard to this matter. Whether the appropriation proposed for San Diego is too large or not, it is manifestly not affected by the amount which has been appropriated for other public buildings in California. The Senator from California, who is entirely familiar with the situation, brought to the attention of the committee facts which, in detail, I do not now recall, which satisfied the committee, in connection with the report of the Treasury Department, that this appropriation was none too large. The place is one of consequence, rapidly growing in importance. The price which would necessarily be paid for a site there, we were told by the Senator from California, who is chairman of the committee, and we had reason to believe from the present prices of real estate, would absorb a considerable portion of this appropriation. There is there not only the post-office business, but there is the business of the collector of customs, and I believe of internal revenue also, and land offices. San Diego is within 15 miles of the Mexican border, and is a place in its relation to the customs collection of considerable importance.

We were also informed by the chairman of the committee that the cost of construction of a building in that region, built of the material necessary to be used in the construction of a building like this, is greater than in most other parts of the country.

The committee endeavored to make the appropriation only adequate to the necessities of the Government, having reference to the situation, and whatever may be said of the appropriations recommended by the committee generally (and we have not left Kansas out) it will be found that in no case have we recommended a larger sum than the Treasury Department estimated to be necessary in order to construct a proper building for the necessities of the Government, present and prospective.

It may be that the newspapers have called attention to the fact that many appropriations were being made for public buildings, and have expressed the opinion that some of them were somewhat extravagant; but we have, I think, in no event reported any larger appropriation than the Senators from the State urgently asked the committee to appropriate, and where their judgment coincided with the judgment of the Treasury Department and with the general information which the committee could obtain upon the subject we have felt that it was proper to report the appropriations. We have given to each case careful examination and have reduced the sum in many cases. It is a hard committee to serve on.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, having been in San Diego within the past four or five months, I think it perhaps not entirely inappropriate that I should say a few words upon this subject.

One of the difficulties which we meet with in doing justice by places in the matter of public buildings is that this country is getting so large that no man can comprehend it or the needs of its various sections. When we speak of San Diego or Los Angeles it has little more significance as being a part of the country to people who live upon the Atlantic coast than if we talked about the Cape of Good Hope or Panama; we scarcely realize that it is in our country. A very remarkable and somewhat suggestive illustration of that came to my notice within the past week. A gentleman from Brunswick, Ga., came to see me with reference to the great needs of that place in respect to river and harbor improvements, and made out a very strong case. I suggested to him that other portions of the country made out as good cases as he did, and asked him if he knew anything about the Sault Ste. Marie and the Hay Lake Channel. "Why," said he, "Sault Ste. Marie! Where is that?" I suppose the citizens living in the section of the country about Sault Ste. Marie and tributary to that would have asked the same question about Brunswick. We may as well understand that we have got a great country and that it has great needs.

With reference to San Diego it has been said that it is a very important place. It is an important harbor. The business there is rapidly increasing and is going rapidly to increase. The place is growing rapidly. The universal experience has been that when public buildings have been appropriated for in the rapidly growing Western towns before they are completed it is found that the amount appropriated is entirely inadequate. We went from San Diego up to Los Angeles, and we found there a building partially constructed for a post-office and I do not know what other uses of the Government, and the work upon it had been stopped because it was so utterly inadequate for the city as it then was that it was better not to complete the construction of it than to complete it.

The southern district of California, since the last apportionment of Representatives in Congress, has so increased in population that General VANDEVER represents now a population of about 500,000, possibly exceeding 500,000 people. While it may seem that $300,000 is quite a sum to appropriate for a city the size of San Diego, with 35,000 or 40,000 inhabitants, if the past is to be repeated during the next ten years the appropriation will not be large enough by the time the building is completed.

I felt perhaps that as an Eastern man, having been in that section recently, it was only right that I should speak of this as it struck my observation at the time.

Mr. HAWLEY. I should like to be informed by the chairman of the committee whether I am correct in supposing that this building is to be for the use of the custom-house, the collector of internal revenue, and the land office as well.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator from California will permit me to answer that question, I should like to say in regard to this bill that it was first introduced appropriating $200,000 for a public building at San Diego. As I said, there are there a land office, a custom-house, also a collector of internal revenue, and the committee sent in this case, as it does in all others, the bill to the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department for his report first as to the necessity for the erection of a public building at San Diego, and next his estimate as to the cost of it. I hold in my hand his letter.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 5, 1890.

Sir: In response to letter dated December 24, from your committee, which requested such information as I may have and my opinion in regard to the advisability of Senate bill 1264, introduced December 16, 1889, by you, to provide for the acquisition of a site and the erection thereon of a public building for the accommodation of the "post-office, custom-house, internal-revenue office, and other Government offices" in San Diego, Cal., at a cost not to exceed $200,000, I have the honor to submit the following:

Copy of a report dated January 4, 1890, addressed to this office by the honorable Postmaster-General.

Copy of a report dated January 16, 1890, addressed to this office by the postmaster at San Diego, Cal.

Copy of a report dated December 24, 1889, addressed to this office by the Commissioner of Customs.

Copy of a report, with inclosure, dated January 8, 1890, addressed to this office by the collector of customs of San Diego, Cal.

Copy of a statement dated December 26, 1889, made to this office by the Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Copy of a report dated December 26, 1889, addressed to this office by the deputy collector of internal revenue at San Francisco, Cal., in regard to the internal-revenue business in San Diego, Cal.

Copies of all these reports were sent to and considered by the committee.

After considering the statements contained in the papers above cited, in connection with computations made in this office based upon the data received, I am of the opinion that a suitable site can be procured and a public building about 100 feet by 150 feet in dimensions, three stories high, with basement, of fire-proof construction, with heating apparatus, elevator service, vaults, and approaches, can be erected thereon for $500,000, or $300,000 in excess of the limit of cost of site and building proposed by said bill, namely, $200,000, and that such a building is required to afford proper accommodations for the present and prospective needs of the Government offices to be located therein, and that said bill should become a law after being modified so as to fix the limit of cost at $500,000 instead of $200,000.

By reference to office letter dated March 22, 1888, addressed to you in connection with Senate bill 1264, introduced during the last session of Congress, it will be observed that the question of the necessity for a public building at San Diego, Cal., has heretofore received the consideration of Congress and the attention of this office.

Respectfully, yours,

JAS. H. WINDRIM, Supervising Architect.

So that the Treasury Department recommended that the appropriation be increased from $200,000 to $500,000, and the committee, looking the ground all over, concluded to add only $100,000 to the bill, so that it falls $200,000 short of the recommendation of the Treasury Department.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Mr. President, it is entirely unnecessary to add anything to what we have heard from the reading of the letter just presented by the Senator from Wisconsin, but I desire to add a word in behalf of this committee, of which I am not a member. I am not a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, but I have had occasion now and then to represent to the members of that committee the necessity of bills providing for the erection of public buildings in the State of Iowa. I never have been able to get favorable action on those bills from that committee without showing them good reasons for a report in favor of the building proposed. In all my intercourse with the committee in respect to such bills I have found them particularly careful not to exceed the demands of the public service in recommending appropriations, and therefore I am quite content as a member of the Senate to take their recommendation in this case, and give San Diego $300,000, being $200,000 less than the Treasury Department seems to think will be necessary for a proper building for the accommodation of the public business there.

I hope the request of the Senator from California that the bill may go over until Monday may be withdrawn and that we may have action on it now, being satisfied, as I have already intimated, that the recommendation of the committee is not in excess of the demands of the public service.

Mr. MORGAN. I unfortunately have heard but very little of the debate about this bill, and I may restate something that some other Senator has already laid before the body; but it occurs to me that if there is any criticism to be made upon this appropriation at all it is that it is not adequate.

San Diego about six years ago had probably 3,000 inhabitants, or perhaps not exceeding 4,000. It is estimated now that it has 35,000 or 40,000 inhabitants. Whoever goes there and observes the amount of money invested in San Diego within this limited period will be utterly surprised at the extension of American enterprise and industry. The houses are built on a magnificent scale. The city surrounding that beautiful harbor is something to excite the pride of an American citizen.

It is the southwestern outpost of the United States. The harbor itself is one not only of great convenience and sufficient depth of water to admit, I think, the very largest draught of steamers or ships that are in the Pacific Ocean freely, but it is perfectly landlocked. The promontory lying just north of the entrance of that bay is the highest and has upon it the highest light-house, except one, in the world, and navigators of the Pacific Ocean are more indebted to the United States for keeping a light there than perhaps at any other point on that long trend of coast, about 900 miles in length, that belongs to the State of California.

I have observed it very recently. A company have brought a large tide I may say of water from the mountains along to the southeast of San Diego about 30 or 35 miles in what are called flumes in California, and some of the structures over which they bring that water are 700 or 800 feet long and 80 feet high on trestles, and they are irrigating the country as they go and making it to have a degree of fertility and productive power which is almost inconceivable.

The country in the vicinity of San Diego when irrigated as it is being irrigated by the unparalleled enterprise of the people of California—for their enterprise is really unparalleled—will be one of the finest wine-growing regions in the United States and one of the finest regions for the production of all the tropical and semi-tropical fruits.

Besides, there are large mining industries in that vicinity in gold and silver. But beyond and above and better than all there is being manufactured in San Diego a large amount of very excellent iron and iron products wrought up into various articles of commerce; and not more than 7 or 8 miles below San Diego, lying upon the Pacific coast and within our territory, there are vast bluffs of real Bessemer ore that are waiting there to be developed, and I received a letter from a friend of mine in San Diego within a few days, informing me of the establishment of a large iron industry in connection with these ores.

I say it is our southwestern outpost. It lies at the head of the Gulf of California, and the relations between the people of Southwestern California and those of Mexico in the peninsula of Lower California and along down the Gulf of California are to be not only intimate, but extremely profitable.

It is a wonderful country from the head of the Gulf of California down to Guaymas, on the eastern side of that coast, and we can not be too alert or too active in making preparation for the accommodation of a large amount of commerce and a great population in that region.

As a Southern man, I feel a very decided interest in it because that is the true Pacific port of the Southern States. From Arizona clear on to the east railroads already run there, and there are two large systems of railroads centering at San Diego. To my mind it is one of the most promising of all the American situations for future enterprise and strength, and we do not know how soon we may need it in a good many particulars. It is a mighty good place at which to put up fortifications, a good place to look to, and we ought not to neglect it. It is quite as important upon that southwestern border, perhaps, as the great State of Washington on the northwest and its sea-port towns in that direction, which we have so joyfully welcomed into the United States within a recent date.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President—

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will allow me a moment, I wish to state the growth of the customs business at San Diego in ten years. In 1878 there was collected in customs there $16,913.25, and in 1888, $311,937.

Mr. STANFORD. I ask the Senator from Oregon to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. DOLPH. Very well.

Mr. STANFORD. I only wish to withdraw the suggestion I made to have the bill lie over. The explanations which have been made seem to be so full and complete that I do not think it necessary that the bill should lie over, and I hope it will be acted upon now.

Mr. DOLPH. Mr. President, it ought to be understood by the Senate and by the people of the United States that the Pacific coast is becoming an important part of the United States, an important factor in our prosperity. If you will look at the map you will see that the State of California has a coast-line on the Pacific Ocean of over 1,000 miles. It contains an area of over 158,000 square miles. Aside from the Bay of San Francisco, San Pedro Harbor and San Diego Harbor are the principal harbors on the California coast.

Mr. FRYE. Let me call the attention of the Senator to this: The only two natural harbors on the whole Pacific coast are San Diego and San Francisco.

Mr. DOLPH. That is correct.

Mr. FRYE. They are the only two natural harbors.

Mr. DOLPH. San Pedro is an open roadstead and unprotected. The commerce of the Pacific coast, or I should say of California, will be mainly carried on through San Francisco Harbor and the harbor at San Diego.

As has been said, this bill provides for a building for the accommodation of a custom-house as well as a post-office and an office for the collector of internal revenue. I can not speak from my own knowledge as to the number of inhabitants, but I do know, from the location of the city and the nature of the country and from what I have learned from others, that San Diego is a place of great prospective commercial importance.

Now, it seems to me that it is a bad time to call a halt in regard to these public-building bills upon this measure. A number have been passed here without opposition upon the recommendation of the committee, and others are to follow. The money is in the Treasury, and there is no way in which it can be better expended in the interest of the public than for necessary public buildings; nor ought that question of necessity for a public building to be determined by the population of the town. If this matter of appropriating money for public buildings is a mere process of dividing the surplus in the Treasury among the States and the towns, then it would be; but the question ought to be what is the present and prospective public business of the place where it is proposed to erect a public building.

We seem to be as sensitive to newspaper criticism about what we are to do as the mercury is to the changes of the weather. The newspapers have never undertaken to discuss, so far as I know, any particular public building, and, if they did, perhaps they could give us no better information in regard to it than the Secretary of the Treasury or the Supervising Architect. Take the case of Portland, where a public building is needed. At four different Congresses the Senate has passed a bill providing for an additional public building at Portland, and in other quarters the same objection has been made as to the population of that city. The city of Portland is the principal port of entry between San Francisco and Puget Sound, a distance of nearly a thousand miles. To-day the United States are paying $12,000 annual rent for public offices outside of the present public building; and the business of the post-office and the business of the custom-house are crowded into insufficient space, which has been a matter of complaint for years. Before the new public building can possibly be erected the Government will be compelled to pay annually more for office rent than the interest would amount to upon the sum asked for the construction of a building.

Then, as a matter of economy, in the interest of the public welfare, wherever these buildings are needed they should be erected. In some towns where only a post-office is needed it may be cheaper to rent, but even there, in my judgment, it would be better for the United States to own its own building. I know of cases where the United States is offered—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The time of the Senator from Oregon has expired.

Mr. DOLPH. I hope I may be allowed to finish my remarks. I shall conclude in a moment.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator's time may be extended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. DOLPH. I know of cases on the Pacific coast where the Government ought to erect buildings to-day, where the Department can secure one rent free for a post-office, but how? To satisfy some faction of the patrons the post-office is dragged away from the center of the town to some inconvenient location to create a boom in real estate or in business, and there is often a controversy when a postmaster is to be appointed, before the Department and before the committees of the Senate, which is over the location of the office rather than the candidates, and the postmaster is appointed sometimes with reference to the site where the post-office is to be located rather than in regard to his fitness for the position.

I am glad that this subject has come up. I think this matter in regard to public buildings ought to be discussed, and it ought to be understood by the American people that the appropriations which are being proposed by the two Houses of Congress are proposed in the interest of economy, in the interest of the public welfare. It is proposed to construct the buildings now when there is money in the Treasury, but only where they are needed; at least, so far I know, on the Pacific coast none have been authorized except where they are absolutely needed.

Mr. TELLER. A few days since I sent to the Supervising Architect for a list of the various towns which have been favored with public buildings, with the population of each and the cost of the respective buildings. In the few minutes allotted to me, I shall not go into that statement except to say that I have discovered by going over the list that the section of the country called the West has been very largely neglected.

Mr. INGALLS. That is a very important document, and I hope that the Senator from Colorado will be allowed sufficient time to have it properly presented.

Mr. TELLER. I could not analyze it in a few minutes, but if Senators desire I will have it printed when I get through with my remarks.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be printed as a separate document.

Mr. INGALLS. Why not print it in the RECORD?

Mr. TELLER. It might be printed as a separate document, if that be proper.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the better way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The order to print will be made. The paper will be printed as a separate document, if there be no objection.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to remark, Mr. President, in regard to what the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] said about the growth of this country that we do not realize its rapid growth. For instance, in the statement before me, I find the population of Minneapolis put down in 1890 at 46,887, and I am assured by the Senator from Minnesota who sits nearest me [Mr. WASHBURN] that it is practically now 200,000. I take the population of Denver, which in 1870 was 4,759, and in 1880 35,629, and the people there claim that they now have 150,000 population. I do not know whether that is accurate or not, but it is probably a large estimate. Certain it is, however, that the population of Denver largely exceeds 100,000, and probably it will reach to the neighborhood of what is claimed.

Now, I just want to detail to the Senate our experience with the public building in that city. The first bill limited the cost of the building to $300,000. Subsequently I obtained on two different occasions increased appropriations, until the whole amount stands now $635,000. Recently the Post-Office Department was compelled to abandon the building they were occupying and to get another. A few days before I left home to attend this session of Congress the postmaster took me through this building, which contained an area on the floor, if I recollect aright, of some 10,000 square feet, and showed me the crowded condition of the post-office, so that it was impossible to do business, all portions of it cluttered up with a crowd of men and mail matter, etc.

On examination, I find that the area in the new building, which is not yet completed and will not be for a year or two, is a trifle less than the present office; so that by the time the public are able to get in to the new building it will be so small that it will be of no value for post-office purposes. It is not wise for us to erect public buildings of that class in growing communities. I introduced a bill a few years ago to erect a public building in a town called Pueblo in my State, which then had a population of about five thousand or perhaps six or seven thousand. There was also a court held there, as well as a United States land office and an internal revenue office. It was necessary to have a public building there, and a bill has passed the Senate twice and gone to the other House and failed. The limit was then put at $200,000. I find the Architect says it will take $450,000. Instead of there being five or six thousand people there, the population now is about twenty or twenty-five thousand, and the town is rapidly growing, so that in a few years there will be 50,000 people there. If we proceed upon the idea that we are appropriating for towns of 25,000 now and get a building ample for them, in five years in that Western country you will need double the amount of room. Probably in Denver when the new public building shall be accepted, we shall be looking for other buildings, and the actual condition of affairs will necessitate eventually and very soon an appropriation for a post-office separate and distinct from the public buildings we have provided for.

That is all I desire to say now. I submit the statement to which I have alluded, so that it may be printed.

Mr. HEARST. Mr. President, I am sorry that any one objects to this bill.

No doubt it appears a little strange to some to see Senators standing up here and claiming something for California.

I desire to inform the Senate that my State has been sadly neglected in the past, perhaps more on account of the neglect of our representatives in making known our wants than from any intention on the part of the General Government to do us an injustice.

I say this because in my conversation with the representatives from the various States of this nation I find a disposition on their part to grant us anything we may ask within reason. This is not strange, for our State is made up in part from every State and Territory of this Union, and is destined to be the health and pleasure-seeking resort of America.

Mr. President, we have been a State for nearly forty years, and we have only one post-office building and that is in San Francisco. It has to be propped up to keep it from falling. It is built on piles near the water front, is entirely outside the center of population, totally unfit and wholly inadequate to the wants of our present population, which is now about 400,000.

Mr. President, I feel this is a disgrace to the Government and to the city of San Francisco, where I have the honor to reside. You can pardon me for feeling thus when you reflect or call to mind the fact that California has contributed to the national Treasury from its various sources of revenue from twelve to fourteen million dollars annually during our existence as a State. We have done more than all this. We have dug out of the earth by our energy and enterprise twelve hundred millions of gold, thereby creating that much additional wealth that went into circulation as money, increasing property values from 100 to 300 per cent., and, further, we enabled the Government to pay its balances in gold by furnishing them forty or fifty millions a year at a time when it was most needed.

Mr. President, I am very glad indeed to know that so many distinguished Senators have visited my State within the last year, which in part accounts for their friendly assistance to this bill.

All the Senators who have spoken have visited California within the last year, except the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, Senator SPOONER. He is a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and is well informed on this bill, as he is upon all subjects he discusses in the Senate.

I traveled with these distinguished Senators all over my State. We rode together on the beautiful bay of San Diego, and were thus afforded an opportunity of seeing its magnificent harbor, also the beautiful and growing city of San Diego, with its population of 30,000.

I found upon examination that the postal receipts of San Diego, within the last ten years, had grown from practically nothing to the handsome sum of $60,000 annually, the customs receipts reaching up into hundreds of thousands yearly, and the population steadily increasing. It is also rapidly becoming a great railroad center.

Mr. President, the Senate will remember that there are but two harbors where ships can be safely loaded in bad weather in Central and Lower California, San Francisco and San Diego, San Francisco being 500 or 600 miles north. Of course you can unload ships along the coast in many places if the weather is pleasant and the water calm.

This beautiful harbor from which at least 500,000 people get their coal and supplies—

Mr. MORGAN. Where does this coal come from?

Mr. HEARST. From Australia, and is landed there in great quantities.

It is on the border near Mexico, and it therefore becomes important as a military post.

Mr. President, we only ask the modest sum of $300,000 to purchase a site and erect a building for a post-office, custom-house, and other public uses for a city destined to become one of the largest cities on the Pacific coast.

Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] said the other day that he was the silent man of the Senate. Sir, I am the silent man, and I do not intend that he shall take my place. [Laughter.] While I am up I want to say that we intend to present our claims to the Senate for public buildings at this session, and to present them for cities all over my State that are justly entitled to them. We intend to do it honestly. We do not intend to ask for $300,000 and expect but $100,000. We expect to get every dollar we ask. We will show in every case that we are entitled to it.

We shall prove the amount asked for in every instance is not exorbitant by every Senator who honored our State by his presence, and thank goodness there are a goodly number, among whom are several of the oldest and ablest men in this body.

Mr. President, I shall ask for a post-office building for San Francisco, to take the place of the dilapidated old rookery you have there now. I expect a good one, and want a large sum of money for it.

I shall ask one for the beautiful city of San José, called the Garden City, situated in the heart of the magnificent Santa Clara Valley.

I have asked you to increase the appropriation heretofore made for Los Angeles, the metropolis of Southern California, a city we are all proud of.

I have asked that a public building be given to the city of Oakland, the Brooklyn of California.

I have asked an increase in the appropriation for a public building in Sacramento, the capital of our State, a railroad center, situated in the heart of the Sacramento Valley.

I have asked that Stockton, situated in the midst of as fine an agricultural country as you will find in the world, be given a public building.

I ask that these appropriations be made because of the importance of these cities, and because their receipts to the Government and their rapidly increasing business and population justly entitle them to it.

We have other cities that may claim your attention hereafter.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senator from California will allow me to interrupt him.

Mr. HEARST. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL. I can vouch for everything he says in relation to the San Francisco post-office. I think that post-office is a disgrace to the city.

Mr. HEARST. I thank the Senator from Oregon for his interruption and for his very truthful remarks; everybody who has seen it will agree with us.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the Senator from California will be allowed to proceed by unanimous consent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from California has unanimous consent to proceed.

Mr. HEARST. Never mind. Let us pass the bill. I will have ample opportunity to speak on other appropriations that I shall ask for California.

Mr. DAWES. Mr. President, it is quite unfortunate that this debate has sprung up over this particular bill—

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator yield to me a moment? The Senator from Ohio has called to my attention the fact that the list I submitted has been already published in another document, and therefore I ask consent to withdraw the statement.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The order to print will be withdrawn.

Mr. DAWES. If the debate were confined to the propriety of a public building at this place, I do not think any Senator who has any knowledge of the locality and of the present condition of the city of San Diego would have a moment's doubt. I think of all the appropriations for public buildings that have come before the Senate there is hardly one that is more justified than this one. San Diego is one of three most important, if not the only, harbors upon the Pacific coast. There may be others, smaller ones of minor importance, but there are three great points on the Pacific coast, one at the extreme southwest, which is San Diego, one at San Francisco, and the third on Puget Sound.

Mr. MITCHELL. And Portland, Oregon.

Mr. DAWES. Portland, Oregon, unfortunately, is not on the coast, although it is quite important. Our justification for a public building at that place will be readily seen by any one who has been there. But the debate has taken a wider range and I think that there is occasion for us to consider more carefully how far we shall extend these public buildings; that they have got to go more largely West and less to the East. Those of us who live in the East are compelled to admit that nothing so amazes an Eastern man as traveling West and seeing the immense development there which carries along with it all these appropriations. But the difficulty of action on public-building bills is that they appear to go more largely upon the idea of partition than anything else. I am not chiding this committee. It is like all the committees that have preceded it and all committees of appropriations of every kind. It is a most difficult thing for a committee of appropriations to lose sight of the idea of partition and confine itself to the absolute merits of each item submitted, without regard to anything else.

I remember when I was upon the Committee on Appropriations in the other House I met an appropriation of $300,000 put upon a bill by the Senate, by a Senator whose only support of it was that that was his share, that he had not had anything during the session, and if he could have that he would consider it his share. I do not speak of that as anything particular, anything special as to that Senator, but that idea seems to run through all our appropriations and is the element of all others the most difficult to deal with.

If a certain amount, considering the receipts and expenditures of this Government, should be set apart for public buildings as the proper amount to be appropriated, and then this committee, understanding that they could not go beyond that limit, must determine the merits of particular cases, rather than a distribution in the light of a partition, they would accomplish a great good, they would do what no other committee before them have every been able to do; but it is what the country needs and it is what we must have or else there will be just ground for criticism upon our appropriations.

The same remark applies to the river and harbor bill, and it applies to the sundry civil appropriation bill, and especially to these appropriations for public buildings, more than all others. Every member in the House and every Senator feels as if he has not done his duty to those whom he specially represents unless he has had his share. I have that feeling as much as any other Senator or any Member perhaps, and I do not speak with any view of undertaking to lecture the committee upon which I have been a member myself, and on other committees of like duties where I have experienced the difficulty as well as the temptation. I wish it were possible for us to distribute so much of the receipts of this Government as can be appropriated to public buildings just where they are most needed. I think of all the localities that have this session been brought before us for a public building, that is as much needed as any other one.

Mr. STANFORD. Mr. President, as the good faith of the committee, I think, has been brought in question, I want to say that so far as my knowledge goes I have never seen or heard a single member attempt to obtain anything for his locality, excepting he based it upon the public needs. The committee always makes that the prominent and controlling consideration in determining what they shall appropriate, and not whether the location is in this State or in that, and the history of the committee will bear me out in this statement.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, I believe I have forfeited my right to speak, but for the purpose of saying one additional word I will move to indefinitely postpone the bill, and I will subsequently withdraw that motion.

In what I said about this appropriation there was no question of the good faith of the committee, nor of its industry or its devotion to the public welfare, but there is a vague impression in the public mind—the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] says “not very vague, either,” and I will accept that amended suggestion—there is a very decided impression in the public mind, and one that I have derived, notwithstanding the anathemas of the Senator from Oregon, by reading the newspapers, that appropriations in the river and harbor bill and appropriations for public buildings, like osculation, go by favor, and that in various instances large appropriations have been made for which there was no apparent reason or justification. Public attention has been repeatedly called to the fact that after the formal business of our sessions has been accomplished, when there was far less than a quorum of Senators present on this floor, bills have been taken up sem. con., read informally, hastily considered without reports being read or without the slightest discussion, which piled up millions upon millions without any explanation or without any reason being given why they should have been passed. Therefore, Mr. President, I say that this debate has been instructive, it has been advantageous. It justifies the action of the committee upon this particular bill that is now before us, and that without the explanations which have been vouchsafed would have gone into the same category as those that have preceded it.

I say without hesitation that there has been no public-building bill passed at this or any other session for which greater reason has been shown or where the public necessity has been more thoroughly established; and I am also one of those who believe that the Government of the United States ought never to be a tenant. The Government of the United States never ought to pay rent for the premises it occupies. Wherever there is necessity for Government occupation there should be Government ownership; and it would be an object-lesson in patriotism if in every town and village in this Republic, from ocean to ocean, there were a place, large or small, from which every day the flag of the Republic should float as an indication that there was the visible presence and majesty and power of the Government. Therefore, sir, I have always been in favor of liberal appropriations for public buildings, and should be glad to support a measure which would provide for the erection of a post-office wherever the Government has occasion to hire a building.

But there is one other suggestion which ought to be made in this connection, and that is that the appropriations for these buildings have been largely in the direction of extravagance. There has been a tendency to costliness, to imported stone, to architectural decoration, to hammered brass, to Turkey carpets, to plate glass, and to all the ostentation and splendor of architectural decoration. That is one of the grounds of public complaint.

Take the Bureau of Printing and Engraving over on the Mall, a great structure, affording ample accommodations for any public building in any city in this Union. That was erected at an expense, I believe, of about $300,000. The same accommodations put into any one of our large cities under the methods which now obtain would have cost a million and a half. Take the Army and Navy Museum—

Mr. SHERMAN. Or the Agricultural Department.

Mr. INGALLS. Take the Agricultural Department; take the new Smithsonian building where the National Museum is held; take the much derided and decried Pension Bureau building, which it is the fashion of the alleged wits of the press and elsewhere to decry as if it were a factory or a brewery, a building that accommodates amply 2,000 people, with the most magnificent interior room that there is on this continent. That was erected, I am told, at an expense short of $600,000.

Mr. TELLER. Eight hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. INGALLS. Eight hundred thousand dollars, and with that same space and that same accommodation, if the present scheme of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury is carried out, we should have been called upon to expend two million or two million and a half. Therefore, I say, Mr. President, that while the people justify and demand and expect liberal appropriations for the accommodation of the Government and believe that it ought never to be a tenant, and while we do not complain of the action of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds per se, we claim that there ought to be a revival of public sentiment in favor of economy in this direction, and have space and shelter and security obtained at a vastly less expense than that which has been the policy for the last few years in this connection.

Brick, iron, plain stone, are susceptible of all necessary decoration, and if we can depart from this idea of ostentation and the splendor of oriental luxury there will be money enough in the annual appropriations made for this purpose within the next twenty years to make the Government owner of every place where governmental functions are required to be carried on within the confines of the Republic.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL.

Mr. HAMPTON. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 1805) for the relief of William W. Webb be recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That order will be made, if there be no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. As the order was made by unanimous consent to take up bills on the Calendar in their order to-day, I shall feel bound to resist any motion to take up any bill out of order. I do not know what the Senator from South Carolina desired.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The request of the Senator from South Carolina was to recommit a bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. All right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Calendar will be proceeded with.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS.

The bill (S. 2542) further to provide for the administration of oaths was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that, in addition to the persons now authorized by law, the Chief Justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, the circuit and district judges of the United States, and the clerks of the United States courts, and the commissioners of the circuit courts of the United States shall be respectively authorized to administer all oaths authorized or required by the laws of the United States, excepting in cases in which any such oaths are required to be taken before a particular officer.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House requested the Senate to return to the House the bill (H. R. 2239) for the relief of the heirs of John H. Jones and of the heirs of Thomas D. Harris.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 977) for the erection of a public building at New London, Conn., with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 526) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to procure and submit to Congress a proposal for the sale to the United States of the western part of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana;

A bill (H. R. 571) extending the limit of cost for public building at Hoboken, N. J., to meet the requirements of site;

A bill (H. R. 2041) for the relief of C. C. Roberts;

A bill (H. R. 935) to amend section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to fees of registers and receivers;

A bill (H. R. 6034) for the relief of Mary Alice White Ogden; and

A bill (H. R. 7254) to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

The bill (S. 2543) to promote the efficiency of the General Land Office was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The first section proposes to make the salary of the Commissioner of the General Land Office $5,000 per annum and the salary of the Assistant Commissioner $3,500 per annum.

The Committee on Public Lands proposed to amend the bill by striking out section 2 and inserting:

Sec. 2. That there shall be in the General Land Office eleven chiefs of divisions, who shall receive a salary of $2,000 each per annum. The several chiefs of divisions herein mentioned shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, except those whose manner of appointment is provided for by existing law.

Mr. PADDOCK. On behalf of the committee I propose the amendment which I send to the desk as a substitute for the amended section 2, reported by the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I desire to offer an amendment to section 1. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Nebraska will first be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out section 2 and in lieu thereof to insert:

Sec. 2. That there shall be in the General Land Office eleven chiefs of divisions, who shall receive a salary of $2,000 each per annum. The several chiefs of divisions herein mentioned shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, except those whose manner of appointment is provided for by existing law: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to consolidate two or more such divisions into one; but this shall not apply to divisions the chiefs of which are appointed by the President.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there a report?

Mr. PADDOCK. There is a printed report, which I shall be glad to have read.

Mr. INGALLS. Let us hear it read.

Mr. PADDOCK. I send the report to the desk.

Mr. COCKRELL. When was that report made?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report was made February 21, 1890.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the number of it?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Report No. 346.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Public Lands, February 21, 1890:

Your committee, to whom were referred Senate bills 1606, 1328, and 2220, report the same back with the recommendation that they be indefinitely postponed, and present an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The committee are of the opinion that the bills herewith reported will greatly promote the efficiency of the General Land Office.

In the opinion of your committee the salary of the Commissioner of the General Land Office is disproportionate to the great importance and responsibility of the position and the difficult and laborious character of the duties imposed upon that officer. This salary is smaller than that of the heads of bureaus of like importance in the several Executive Departments. It is an absolute prerequisite to efficient service that the head of the General Land Office shall be learned in the law and possess as well a high order of administrative ability. Five thousand dollars per annum would be a very moderate remuneration for the services of such a man. Your committee therefore recommend that the salary, which is now $4,000 for such officer, be increased to $5,000.

The position of Assistant Commissioner is only second in importance to that of the Commissioner. He has, in the absence of the Commissioner, to perform the duties of that officer as well as his own. He should therefore be equally well equipped as to his knowledge of the law and otherwise, and should receive a larger salary than is at present paid. Your committee therefore recommend that the salary of such officer, which is now $3,500, be increased to $4,000.

AS TO ITS CHIEFS OF DIVISIONS.

The judgment of the committee is that this bureau should be placed upon the same footing as to organization that all the other bureaus in the various Departments of the Government are at present.

The law as it now stands, after providing for a corps of clerks for the proper equipment of the Land Office, has a very peculiar method of supplying chiefs of divisions in that office. In all other bureaus the law provides for a corps of clerks and then provides for a definite number of chiefs of divisions and their salary, while in the Land Office the only method of getting chiefs for divisions is by taking clerks of class 4 from under the civil-service regulations and detailing them as chiefs of divisions. This method reduces the number of clerks in the Land Office of class 4 by just such a number as there are chiefs of divisions to provide. And there have been instances where a division was without a chief, and none could be supplied until a vacancy might occur among the clerks of class 4 within the civil-service regulations; so that while the men now occupying the positions of chiefs of divisions of the Land Office are not within the civil-service rules, yet the manner by which they are procured not only depends upon vacancies to occur among the clerks of class 4, but constantly keeps that class of clerks below the number contemplated by law.

The bill reported by the committee provides for chiefs of divisions as is done in other bureaus. This will require an addition to the force of clerks within the civil service regulations of class 4 of just the number that there will be chiefs provided for by this act and which are withheld from the effective force of the Land Office by the existing law.

AS TO SALARY.

The number of divisions in the Land Office is a matter left by Congress to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, as he shall find the exigencies of the service require. That the Land Office should be an exception as to the method of supplying chiefs of divisions is not founded on any reason, but appears to have arisen from the fact that the Land Office has grown in importance and the recommendations of the various Commissioners and Secretaries have not resulted in legal enactments.

Recommendations upon the salary of the chiefs of the Land Office have been made from time to time as the different Commissioners have attempted to remedy the defects in the law upon this subject. Between the years 1850 and 1887 the following recommendations upon this subject have been made: Hon. J. A. Williamson, Commissioner in 1880, recommended that there should be created three chiefs of divisions at $3,000, five chiefs at $2,400, and three assistant chiefs at $2,000. In 1881 Commissioner McFarland recommended three principal clerks and six chiefs of divisions at $2,000 per annum. In 1882 the same Commissioner recommended three principal clerks and seven chiefs of divisions at $2,400 per annum. In 1884 the same Commissioner recommended eleven chiefs of divisions at $2,250 per annum. In 1885 Commissioner Sparks recommended two chiefs of divisions at $2,250 and nine chiefs of divisions at $2,000 per annum, and in his recommendation to Congress used this language:

"In all other bureaus of the Government chiefs of divisions are paid from $2,000 to $3,500 per year. The magnitude and importance of the public business for which the chiefs in the Land Office are responsible is exceptional in the Department service."

An examination shows that all other bureaus are provided by law with chiefs of divisions whose pay ranges from $2,000 to $3,500 per annum, while in the Land Office the duties of chief of divisions are performed by detailed $1,800 clerks. This is a discrimination without justification, and a discrimination against the Land Office which, in the language of Commissioner McFarland, seems "unreasonable and unjust."

Eleven chiefs of divisions have been provided for by the committee bill in accordance with the recommendations above referred to, but the salary of each of these is placed at $2,000 per annum only.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I desire to move an amendment in section 1 of this bill by striking out, in line 5, after the word "be," the words "thirty-five hundred," and inserting "four thousand;" so that it will then read:

And the salary of the Assistant Commissioner shall be $4,000 per annum.

I will state, in connection with the amendment, that I concur in the opinion of the committee that these salaries should be increased. For the reason stated by the committee in the report which has just been read, I think that the difference now existing between the salary of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and of the Assistant Commissioner should not be enlarged, but should remain at the one thousand dollars, because, as the committee say, we must have a person competent for the discharge of all the duties of the head of that bureau in the position of assistant. The difference now between the salaries of these two officers is $1,000. My amendment will preserve that difference, giving to the Commissioner, as the bill proposes, $5,000, and to the Assistant Commissioner $4,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLAIR in the chair). The first question is on the amendment, submitted by the Senator from Nebraska, from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I wish to say that as a member of the Committee on Public Lands I did not agree to the report in favor of this bill. It proposes to increase the salary of the Commissioner of Public Lands and various chiefs of divisions. There are other heads of bureaus who are receiving a less salary than that which it is proposed now to give this Commissioner. If I remember correctly the Assistant Secretary of the Interior receives only $4,000 a year.

This bill also proposes to increase the salary of certain chiefs of divisions over that which they receive at present. I think I was the only member of the committee, however, who was not in favor of the bill. I stand upon the platform where I have always stood since I have been here, that the salaries of these officers are already sufficient; that there is no reason why they should be increased; that these places are sought for by individuals all over the country who are eminently qualified to fill them, and it is not pretended that the salaries are not sufficient to procure such talent as will do the work efficiently.

There can be no reason why these particular individuals should be selected out, save and except that it is favoritism to those who happen to occupy the offices they do. I can see no reason why the salaries should be increased. I think they are already sufficient, and I think that they are enough to obtain the talent which is required, and not only that, but the salaries paid now cause thousands to seek offices who are unable to procure them.

I am opposed to this continual cry for more money for the officers of this Government, whose salaries are already, in my opinion, beyond what they should be.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I wish to make an additional suggestion to that made by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] why I think this bill ought not to pass.

The salaries of officers of the United States are, as a rule, greatly disproportioned to the salaries of the officers of the State governments who perform as important service. Very many of the States give their governors less salary than the Commissioner of the General Land Office now receives. The governor of the State which I have the honor in part to represent gets $4,000 a year, and many other States, prominent and important States, give even less salary than this.

The judges of our supreme court get $4,000 apiece. Their duties certainly are much more important and much more onerous than those of any bureau officer here.

Is it because we are so far removed from the people here that we do not feel responsible to them as the Legislatures feel responsible to their constituents in providing the salaries of their State officers? What can be the reason of it? Is it that we are to build up a more splendid fabric here upon the idea of European splendor, a great central, overshadowing Government? I think, sir, it would be much more appropriate if a bill were brought forward to reduce a great many salaries. What do we witness now all over the country? At every change of Administration the Executive is overburdened with the tens of thousands of applications for every sort of Government office. Why is it? It is because they are made to pay more and better than employments in the State Governments or in private life, except it may be with a few of the great railroads and other corporations. The ordinary business of private life does not pay as much, and therefore persons seek employment under the Government. The States do not pay so much, and therefore these applicants come here, and it seems to me now that hardly any one thinks he is in office unless he is in an office under the Government of the United States and getting an extravagant salary.

Furthermore, Mr. President, while I am speaking on this subject I desire to say that there is not, as far as I know, a single class of public officers as a class but what is now organized and making efforts to induce the Government to increase their pay; postmasters, railway postal clerks, and every class of officers, as a class, organize, pass resolutions and send them here to manifest to Senators and Representatives the political influence which they intend to exercise against members who have the temerity to protect the Government against their exorbitant demands for pay.

Mr. PADDOCK. Mr. President, the aim of this bill is simply to place one of the most important if not the most important bureau of the Government upon the same footing as the other great bureaus in respect to the salary paid its chief and other subordinate officers. The Commissioner of Pensions receives a salary of $5,000 a year; the Commissioner of Patents receives $5,000, and the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries also receives the same. The Commissioner of the General Land Office has most onerous, important, and responsible duties to perform, where legal attainments of a high order are required. And these attainments are possessed in an eminent degree by the present incumbent.

Mr. PLATT. Will the Senator allow me to make one slight correction?

Mr. PADDOCK. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT. The Commissioner of Patents does receive $5,000 a year, but the Revised Statutes give him but $4,500. The Committee on Appropriations, recognizing the character and services of a man who is fit to fill the position, has been in the habit of appropriating $5,000, although the statute only makes the salary $4,500.

Mr. PADDOCK. I get my information from the Blue Book, and that is the amount of salary stated in that record for the present year.

Mr. PLATT. By the appropriation bill it is $5,000.

Mr. MANDERSON. The statement of my colleague is correct as to the amount of salary received.

Mr. PADDOCK. The present head of the General Land Office, if he were at home in the practice of his profession, would have no difficulty in making a revenue therefrom of from $7,000 to $10,000 a year. He is an able lawyer, a man of the highest proficiency and competency for this service. He was not an applicant for the office at all. He did not seek it nor want it. He was prevailed upon to accept it finally, weeks after it had been tendered him. And he did so because he believed that he could render important service to the great country of the West, the public-land country, which had suffered badly under the last administration of that office during the last administration.

As to the remainder of the bill, I will say that the Bureau of Public Lands is the only bureau in the Government in which there are no chiefs of divisions provided for by law. The chiefs of divisions are detailed from clerks of class 4 for that service, and it is to the interest of the public service that this change should be made. The bill was originally draughted upon the theory that there was to be a classification of these chiefs of divisions, commencing with the highest class, and I think $2,700 a year was to be paid the chiefs of that class, and the others were to be graduated down through three classes to $2,000. The committee refused to recommend such classification and such salaries as it would require, but concluded to put the chiefs of division upon the same footing and to pay them $2,000, the lowest salary paid to chiefs of divisions in any Department.

I desire to say that the amendment which I have offered is a substitute for section 2 of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK] from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear that read again.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, this is a very bad time to be increasing salaries. In the midst of profound peace and plenty a fatal blight seems to have fallen upon the industries of the country. The prices of all agricultural products are low to a degree seldom known in our economic history.

There is want, distress, discontent; thousands of men are out of employment; depreciated values exist, and there is a sentiment of apprehension about the future.

Mr. President, recognizing these facts, I again say it is a very bad time to be increasing salaries. I notice that in the report of the committee the latest recommendation for the increase suggested was in 1885, and I should be very glad indeed to know if in the latest reports of the Secretary of the Interior or of the President of the United States there is any suggestion that there is any want of efficiency in the Land Department on account of deficient appropriations for salaries. Until something is shown which indicates that unless this appropriation is made the interests of those who have business before that Department are to suffer, I shall protest against it.

The statement of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADDOCK] is incorrect with regard to the equalization of the salaries by the proposal of this bill. Officers of the Government of equal and, in many instances, of greatly larger duties and responsibilities are receiving a salary less than that which is now received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. PADDOCK. The Senator from Nebraska is not incorrect as to those he named.

Mr. INGALLS. I think the Senator from Nebraska is incorrect with regard to those that he named. The appropriation for the additional salary to the Commissioner of Patents was in violation of the established provisions of law. I think I can not be mistaken in that. If I am, I shall be glad to have the eminent authority of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, who sits at my left, assure me of my error. He does not respond, Mr. President. Therefore I assume that when the Senator from Nebraska states that the recognized salary of the Commissioner of Patents by law is $5,000, he is in error.

Mr. PADDOCK. The Senator from Nebraska is not in error in this, that the Commissioner of Patents receives a salary of $5,000 a year, payable quarterly.

Mr. INGALLS. By law the salary of the Commissioner of Patents is $4,500 per annum, and if the Committee on Appropriations from time to time have violated the provisions of existing law by appropriating an increased amount, that does not change the fact I have stated that the salary to which he is entitled, in the absence of a special provision inserted in the appropriation bill, is $4,500 per annum.

Now, Mr. President, it is not claimed in any quarter, it has never been suggested by indirection, that there was the slightest difficulty in obtaining ample talent, experience, and qualifications for the discharge of these duties for the compensation allowed by law; and in the absence of complaints, in the absence of failure to discharge the duties of the place, in the absence of any necessity for this addition to the amounts now appropriated for salaries that come from the people, who are already overburdened, I say again that it is a very bad time to increase salaries.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I think that it might be economy to increase this salary of the Commissioner to $5,000, and perhaps to double that and make it $10,000, or even $20,000, if we could curtail some of the notoriously unnecessary expenses in the administration of the General Land Office. Between $200,000 and $300,000 is annually appropriated for special agents of that Department. They are sent from distant sections of the country into the West, they get up large numbers of lawsuits, involving the Government in vast expense, and most of them are failures because they ought to fail. They must do something to keep up the system. When they fail, the Law Department, claiming to be attorneys of the Land Department, collects the fees. Many honest people are worn out with litigation and there is great suffering throughout the country on account of the lavish appropriations for this special-agent system.

I should be perfectly willing to increase this salary to $5,000, but I should hope, if that were done, that the Commissioner would look into this matter of the extravagance in making appropriations for these special agents and devise some method whereby the expense in that direction or a portion of it, at least, may be avoided. If that were done we could afford to pay the Commissioner a large sum of money for accomplishing such a reform. The $500 extra added to his salary is a mere bagatelle compared to the two or three hundred thousand dollars annually expended over which there is very little control and with regard to which there is no investigation. The Commissioner of the General Land Office in his own auditor and comptroller. He audits the accounts himself.

There is a secret division, called Division B, in that department, which directs and manages the whole thing, and the litigation and investigation are so extensive that the head of the bureau can not know what is going on, much less the Secretary of the Interior. When called upon to investigate a particular case where there is litigation pending, with a view of determining whether litigation should proceed, the Secretary of the Interior is unable even to give it partial attention. It is impossible to get the opinion of the Attorney-General whether these cases shall be prosecuted or not. They are turned over to the Land Department, of which he is the attorney, and the clerks in the Land Department determine the whole question. This has grown into a great abuse, and it needs reform.

Mr. BERRY. The salary of the Commissioner of Pensions is fixed by the Revised Statutes at $4,000 a year. My recollection is that there was a bill passed by the Senate increasing that to $4,500, but I do not know that there is any such law.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to say to the Senator that while General Black was Commissioner of Pensions we increased the salary to $5,000.

Mr. BERRY. My recollection is that it was $4,500, and I will continue in that belief until I see the statute to the contrary. It may be that the Committee on Appropriations gave him $5,000, but the statute, as I remember it now, is $4,500, and, as I stated awhile ago, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior only receives $4,500 as salary.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], as I understood him, said that $5,000 a year was a very small sum. The governor of the State in which I reside receives $3,000 a year only, and the chief-justice and the other justices of the supreme court receive the same amount, $3,000.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. PADOCK] said this Commissioner could make more money if engaged in some other business. It seems, however, that he was anxious to receive this particular office at the salary fixed, knowing what the salary was at the time. As the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] so well said, unless it can come from some official authority that men can not be obtained with sufficient talent to occupy these offices for the salaries now provided by law, I can see no reason, when there are thousands of people all over the country suffering for the absolute necessities of life, why we should continue to appropriate money simply to gratify a man who is already in office, who knew what the salary attached to it was at the time he was appointed to it.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I myself do not believe in extravagant salaries, but I believe in salaries for public offices sufficient to induce men who are not capitalists to become public officers. It is notorious now that no poor man can afford to accept very many of the public places. No poor man can afford to be a member of the Cabinet any more, and there is no man who is fit to be a member of the Cabinet but what can earn more money outside than he gets as a member of the Cabinet.

Mr. BERRY. I suggest to the Senator from Colorado that no poor man has any chance under this Administration.

Mr. TELLER. Well, Mr. President, the suggestion that no poor man under this Administration has any chance is simply a gratuitous suggestion of the Senator from Arkansas. I will not make any contrast between the millionaires in the last Cabinet under the last Administration of public affairs and the gentlemen who are in public life to-day. I think myself there is a great disposition for rich men to shove themselves forward and to be shoved forward into public places. I recognize that as one of the growing evils in this Republic, that there is a tendency to fill places with men of wealth to the exclusion of a class of men in many instances much better qualified than they.

There is not a man, as I was saying, who is a member of the Cabinet in any Department of this Government but who could earn more money outside of it than he can in it, to say nothing about the great expense which attaches to holding such a position.

I do not know whether the present Commissioner of the General Land Office sought the position which he holds or not and I do not mean to intimate that he is not entirely competent to fill it. I do know, however, in my own experience under this Administration, that I applied to a gentleman who I thought was eminently fitted, just before this appointment was made, a man of position and character as a lawyer, and asked him to allow me to present his name to the President for the place, telling him the salary was $5,000 a year, which I thought it was at the time, and he stated to me frankly and freely that he could not afford to leave his practice to take such an office. Why, Mr. President, the man who is Commissioner of the General Land Office ought to be an eminent lawyer. He ought not only to be a good lawyer, but he ought to be a good executive officer; and so it should be with other officers in that Department.

To the men who are now getting $1,800 a year it is proposed to give $2,000 as chiefs of divisions. Some are now getting $2,000 and some $1,800, and it is proposed to put them all on the same plane. These men pass upon questions of the utmost importance to the people of the United States; they adjudicate and determine the rights between the Government and the people who are making applications to secure homes on the public lands; they settle controversies between contestants for public lands; they do what the courts do. The Senator from Arkansas talks about the judges in his State. Why, there are $1,800 clerks in the Interior Department, nay, $1,600 clerks, who pass upon more values every year than the entire supreme court of the State of Arkansas. I am not mistaken when I say that, and there is one man in the Interior Department, the Secretary of it, who passes either actually or nominally upon more values, from which there is no appeal, than the Supreme Court of the United States adjudicates in twelve months. A Senator near me says ten times in value. I speak advisedly when I say that the interests intrusted to the Secretary of the Interior, upon which he passes judicially and from which there is no appeal and no revision, are greater than all the interests passed on by the Supreme Court, with its nine judges, and yet he gets a less salary than any member of that court.

Mr. President, the United States ought to pay salaries commensurate with the talent that they employ. What do the great railroad companies pay? They pay three times as much. Twenty-five thousand dollars a year is not an unusual salary for the president of a great railroad corporation. I know that men who have occupied important Cabinet positions under the Government at $3,000 a year have had offers of more than twice that amount made to them if they would decline those positions and act as private attorneys to some of these great corporations. We ought to be able to call to our assistance the best talent in the country and we ought to pay for it, so that we can get it irrespective of a man's bank account. The people of the United States are not complaining of salaries, provided the men who fill the offices are earning the money we pay them. The dearest salaries we pay are those we pay to the incompetent men and the cheap men we employ. Millions and millions of dollars are paid every year to men who receive not more than $1,200 a year, who are totally incompetent to pass upon these questions, and no better men can be had, because we do not pay a sufficient salary. We can not employ a good lawyer at $1,200 a year, when in every section of the country any kind of a lawyer who attends to his business can make that amount of money.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] says that there is a rush for these offices. No doubt that is true, but the better class of men, the men who ought to be in these offices, are not the men who are especially rushing after them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I dislike to detain the Senate a moment, but I do want to say another word.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas has already spoken once upon this question.

Mr. REAGAN. The Senator from Colorado—

Mr. CULLOM. I hope by unanimous consent the Senator from Texas may be allowed to say a few words further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is unanimous consent given that the Senator from Texas may again speak? The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator will proceed.

Mr. REAGAN. I am obliged to the Senate.

Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado suggests that men can not afford to hold the offices here in Washington. Why is it? Is it the fault of the salaries or is it because a condition of things has been produced by custom that we are required to appropriate money to enable officials to live as gentlemen instead of public officers? Is it that we must appropriate money enough to enable them to give costly entertainments, buy fine carriages and horses, and live in splendor and extravagance? Is that not the reason why gentlemen can not afford to hold the offices here?

I heard something said the other day by two or three Senators about persons having to preserve their rank and position in society by high pay. It is a new doctrine, and it is rather a new practice, that we are to recognize the rank and habits in life of people in fixing their pay or that we are to recognize the customs of society in its extravagances in the expenditure of money.

The salaries allowed by law are respectable. They are sufficient to pay men who come here to perform their duties properly. They may not be sufficient to pay men to come here and give costly entertainments and furnish splendid equipages. There, it seems to me, the fault lies, and if the customs here were so reformed as that the public officers came to perform their duties, and not to illustrate their wealth, the salaries would do very well.

The Senator from Colorado contrasts the salaries of the Government officers with the salaries paid by the railroad corporations. Instead of raising the salaries of Government officers up to twenty-five and fifty thousand dollars a year, as the lawyers and presidents of railroads get, let us make such honest regulations of railroads as will limit them to honest and fair earnings, and then they will pay the salaries that will pay for their work without the enormous salaries that are now paid to beat the Government and to enable one railroad to beat another and to beat the people.

The better way to get at what should be paid here would be to contrast the salaries of Government officers with the condition of the people who are taxed to pay those salaries, and to look at the shrinkage of the value of all property and of all production from 1873 to now of 33 per cent. without change of salaries; the shrinkage of the volume of the currency; the fact that the farming interests of this country, which are its great support, are going into bankruptcy and distress; the fact that there are thousands and millions of people who are hardly able in this country to meet by honest industry the yearly expenses of their families. That is the class that we had better contrast the salaries of officers with, rather than to contrast them with the salaries of railroad magnates who only have to raise the tax upon transportation a fraction of a cent to pay men $50,000 or $100,000 if they want to, not out of the pockets of the stockholders, but out of the earnings derived from the people who produce the merchandise which is transported over the roads.

Mr. TELLER. I move the indefinite postponement of the bill that I may say a word.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to make one remark.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado has moved the indefinite postponement of the bill.

Mr. TELLER. I will withdraw the motion when I get through, if the Senator will just wait a moment.

Mr. President, I will join the Senator from Texas in any legitimate effort to control railroads and keep them within their proper province. I will join him in any measure that promises relief to the suffering industries of this country. I am quite as anxious to see prosperity in this country as he is, and I do not know that he and I would disagree as to some things needed to be done; very likely we would not. That has nothing to do with the question whether the Government of the United States shall call to its aid the best talent in the country or whether it shall employ inferior talent. I admit that in this body there will always be found men, irrespective of their ability to live on the salary, who will accept a seat. The great honor of sitting in this body is sufficient, and it ought to be, to make any man willing to accept the place, although he may be compelled to economize in order to live on his salary. Yet I suppose it is a notorious fact that very few men filling this place live on their salaries and very few can do so.

The Senator complains that we have taught the people to live like gentlemen. Mr. President, everybody holding a public office ought to be a gentleman and ought to live with decency.

Mr. REAGAN. At his own expense.

Mr. TELLER. While he is not bound, of course, and ought not, to live in an ostentatious way and to display his wealth, and all that, he has to live in a manner befitting his station, and nobody can expect that he will not do that. We do not expect men who are justices of the Supreme Court of the United States and members of the Cabinet to live as the village lawyer lives or as the farmer lives or as we ourselves have lived when we were occupying other positions. If we have the means beyond our salaries we put it into the cost of living, and if we have not we manage by economy to live on our salaries.

I am not complaining of this body, but I say that the Government of the United States has suffered in the past because it was not able to employ the highest talent in this country at the salary paid. When Mr. Chandler came into the Interior Department as Secretary he could not find to suit him a man of sufficient ability, as he supposed, to occupy the position of Assistant Attorney-General to his Department without paying an extra salary. The Government allowed $5,000, and he employed an eminent attorney and gave him $5,000 more. It is not every man who becomes Secretary of the Interior who can afford to do that, yet that was done to secure an efficient and valuable officer, and I think any man who will look over the records of that period upon the questions of law submitted will say that the money was well earned by that officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado withdraw the motion to indefinitely postpone the bill?

Mr. TELLER. I withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I desire the attention of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] to what I am going to say.

I approve very much the remarks made by that Senator. They are exactly in the line on which I have been acting all the time. I think the salaries are too high, and I have been voting all along against increasing them. Some two or three weeks ago we had a bill up here by which all the little, inferior district judges of the United States had their salaries raised from $3,500 to $5,000, and I noticed on that occasion that the Senator from Texas did not go with us. He seems to have these economical fits by starts. I just want to call his attention to that lapse he made from the general tone of virtue which he maintains in the Senate.

Mr. FRYE. It is entirely evident that this bill will occupy, if allowed to remain where it is, the rest of the day and that a vote will be demanded when it is time for demanding a vote. Therefore I will tender an objection to its further consideration, not meaning that it shall lose its place on the Calendar.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. Let us try a vote on it.

Mr. FRYE. I propose to pass it over informally.

Mr. PADDOCK. I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection and let us have a division on the question.

Mr. FRYE. We can not get a vote on it. If we do, we shall not do anything else to-day.

Mr. PADDOCK. If the yeas and nays shall be demanded, I will consent that it may go over.

Mr. FRYE. Of course if Senators who have been speaking are in earnest the yeas and nays will be demanded. If it is simply a display of economy, they may not be.

Mr. COCKRELL. It had better be passed over.

Mr. BERRY. The yeas and nays will be asked for upon the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine objects to the further consideration of the bill. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

FUNDING ACT OF ARIZONA.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1372) approving, with amendments, the funding act of Arizona.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I ask that the bill be passed over informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas objects.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas. I object by reason of the fact that there was a mistake made in the printing of the bill, which was my fault, on account of some erroneous instructions given to the printing clerk by me, and I ask that a reprint of the bill be had.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas asks that a reprint of the bill be had, which will be ordered, if there be no objection.

AVERY D. BABCOCK AND WIFE.

The bill (S. 73) for the relief of Avery D. Babcock and wife, of Oregon, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "three thousand" and insert "two thousand;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to Avery D. Babcock, of Polk County, Oregon, and to Margaret I. Babcock, his wife, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000, to be equally divided between them, in full payment of their claim against the Government of the United States for the use and military occupation by the United States of their donation claim numbered 58, in section 8, township 6 south, range 7 west of the Willamette meridian, in the State of Oregon.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NAPOLEON B. GIDDINGS.

The bill (S. 2492) for the relief of Napoleon B. Giddings was announced as the next bill on the Calendar.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that that bill may be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Shall the bill be passed over to the Calendar under Rule IX or informally?

Mr. ALLISON. Informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

JOHN S. NEET, JR.

The bill (S. 2262) for the relief of John S. Neet, jr., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to John S. Neet, jr., late a private in Company C, Third Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, afterwards Company L, Sixth Missouri State Militia Cavalry, $100, in full payment of the sum allowed him in October, 1878, by the Third Auditor of the Treasury Department.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH W. CARMACK.

The bill (S. 2412) for the relief of Joseph W. Carmack was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, in line 6, after the words "allowances of a," to strike out "second lieutenant" and insert "first sergeant," and in line 9, at the end of the bill, to insert "less any pay received by him during such period;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, directed to pay to Joseph W. Carmack, late of Company A, Sixth Missouri Cavalry, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the pay and allowances of a first sergeant of cavalry from the 1st day of May, 1862, to the 30th day of September, 1862, less any pay received by him during such period.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT TAUNTON, MASS.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to withdraw a motion I entered several days ago to reconsider the vote of the Senate whereby Senate bill 1548, for the erection of a public building at Taunton, Mass., was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts withdraws the motion to reconsider, and the bill stands passed.

AQUILLA JONES.

The bill (S. 393) for the relief of Aquilla Jones, late postmaster at Indianapolis, Ind., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Postmaster-General to credit Aquilla Jones, postmaster at Indianapolis, Ind., in the settlement of his accounts as such postmaster, with $2,438, being the amount stolen from the money-order department of that office on the 31st of December, 1888.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DR. A. SIDNEY TEBBS.

The bill (S. 877) for the relief of Dr. A. Sidney Tebbs was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to relieve Dr. A. Sidney Tebbs, of Leesburgh, Va., from the operation of section 1218 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, being in chapter 1, Title XIV, of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. DAWES. What is the statute from which this gentleman is to be relieved?

Mr. COCKRELL. It is the statute which prohibits the appointment of any one who was in the Confederate army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a report, which will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. BATE, February 11, 1890:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 877) for the relief of Dr. A. Sidney Tebbis, having considered the same, report as follows: Dr. Tebbis has been an applicant for several years past for appointment in the Army, but by reason of the restriction contained in section 1218, Revised Statutes, against the appointment in the Army of persons who were in the Confederate service, his application can not be considered. He entered the Confederate service at the age of fifteen, and is a native of Virginia. Your committee are of the opinion that it would be unwise to longer enforce the above section of the statutes against worthy citizens who are now loyal, and recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to inquire whether there have been any other instances of relief from that disability? We had a case which was very much discussed, that of the grandson of President Monroe, whose name I have now forgotten.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think probably there have been two other cases. There was the case of the gentleman to whom the Senator refers, the grandson of President Monroe, Monroe Heiskell, and very probably there was another case, that of a gentleman who is now a surgeon in the Army. It was done by special act.

Mr. HOAR. Those acts were passed and became laws?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes. Those are the only cases that I remember anything of.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK KIDWILER.

The bill (S. 1082) granting a pension to Frederick Kidwiler was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Frederick Kidwiler.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY J. DORR.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRYE in the chair). The two next bills in order on the Calendar, being the bill (S. 958) for the relief of Mary J. Dorr and the bill (S. 1295) for the relief of Mary J. Dorr, widow of Joseph B. Dorr, deceased, late colonel of the Eighth Regiment, Iowa Cavalry Volunteers, are adverse reports, and therefore will be passed over.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let them take their places under Rule IX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They will go over under Rule IX.

JOHN E. WALTON.

The bill (S. 2076) granting an increase of pension to John E. Walton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of John E. Walton, late of Company C, One hundredth Pennsylvania Volunteers, at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KING THEOLOGICAL HALL.

The bill (S. 884) to incorporate the King Theological Hall was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, line 10, after the word "competent," to insert the words "for the purposes of this act only," so as to read:

That Thomas Underwood Dudley, William Paret, J. Houston Eccleston, John A. King, Henry E. Fellow, and J. C. Bancroft Davis be, and they are hereby, declared to be a body politic and corporate, with perpetual succession in deed or in law to all intents and purposes whatsoever by the name, style, and title of The King Theological Hall, by which name and title said body politic and corporate shall be competent, for the purposes of this act only, at law and in equity, to take to itself any estate whatsoever in any messuage, lands, tenements, hereditaments, goods, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 4, in the following words:

SEC. 4. That the trustees may contract with the said Howard University (and for that purpose the requisite power is hereby also conferred upon the said university) for the enjoyment by the students in the hall of the educational advantages afforded by the university, and, et cetera, for the enjoyment by the students in the university of the educational advantages afforded by the hall, in each case under such regulations by the university or by the hall as may be agreed upon; and, further, that the university shall, upon the request of said trustees, and upon certificates of qualification signed by the warden, confer the degrees upon graduating students and grant the diplomas to them hereinbefore provided for.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 5, in the following words:

SEC. 5. That so long as the agreements hereinbefore provided for shall remain in force The King Theological Hall shall become an annex to Howard University, but with the independent corporate existence and powers conferred by these acts. During that time the power of the trustees of the hall to confer degrees and diplomas upon graduating students shall be suspended. The board of trustees of the hall shall publish an annual report; and the board of trustees of the university shall incorporate into the annual report which they are required to make by section 8 of the act of March 2, 1887, entitled "An act to incorporate the Howard University in the District of Columbia," similar facts connected with the hall.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 6, in the following words:

SEC. 6. That no misnomer of the said corporation of The King Theological Hall shall defeat or annul any donation, gift, grant, devise, or bequest to or from the said corporation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA F. WEBSTER.

The bill (S. 763) granting a pension to Martha F. Webster was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Martha F. Webster, widow of Lewis Webster, late lieutenant of Company K, Sixteenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JEREMIAH WHITE.

The bill (S. 762) granting a pension to Jeremiah White was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Jeremiah White, late private Capt. Hart Fellow's company, Second Regiment Illinois Cavalry, Black Hawk war.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEVI MOSER.

The bill (S. 840) granting an increase of pension to Levi Moser was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty-four;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Levi Moser, late sergeant Company I, One hundred and fifty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELMER A. SNOW.

The bill (S. 2391) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 3, after the words "Secretary of the," to strike out "Treasury" and insert "Interior," and in line 7, after the word "month," to strike out "said pension to be allowed from February 12, 1889, which was the date increasing the pension to $100 per month for the loss of both hands," and insert "in lieu of the pension he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Elmer A. Snow, late a trumpeter in M Troop, Third United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension of $100 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES A. MYERS.

The bill (S. 1256) granting a pension to James A. Myers was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James A. Myers, late of Company F, One hundred and forty-ninth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. MCKINNEY.

The bill (S. 1269) granting a pension to James M. McKinney was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James M. McKinney, late second lieutenant of Company A, North Cumberland Battery, Kentucky State Militia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT H. MILROY.

The bill (S. 2389) granting an increase of pension to Robert H. Milroy, major-general United States Volunteers, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-rolls the name of Robert H. Milroy, late a major-general United States Volunteers and a soldier in the Mexican war, at the rate of $100 per month, in lieu of his present pension of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SCHOOL LANDS IN BUFFALO, WYO.

The bill (S. 2618) to confirm to the city of Buffalo, Wyo., certain lands occupied for school purposes was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. MORGAN. I offer an amendment which I have submitted to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], and I believe he agrees to it. I move to add to the bill the following proviso:

Provided, That this act shall not be construed to convey to the city of Buffalo any right to so much of the land herein granted as is occupied by any canal or water ditch heretofore constructed on the banks thereof, nor to any coal beneath the surface of said land, nor any tunnel or shaft for raising such coal that is now constructed or may be necessary for that purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SAWYER. I ask unanimous consent that we now go through the Calendar and take up private pension bills subject to objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, no; we must enforce the unanimous agreement.

Mr. HOAR. It would be a departure from another unanimous consent to do what is now suggested.

Mr. COCKRELL. There was unanimous consent given to a certain order. We must follow that; we must enforce it or do nothing, I think.

Mr. SAWYER. I withdraw the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next bill on the Calendar will be stated.

JAMES E. KABLER.

The bill (S. 773) granting a pension to James E. Kabler was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James E. Kabler, late a private in Company I, Tenth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT FOSS.

The bill (S. 1151) granting a pension to Robert Foss was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Robert Foss, late a private in Company A, First Battalion Maine Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MICHAEL SHONG.

The bill (S. 1247) granting a pension to Michael Shong was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Michael Shong, late of Company I, Fourteenth New York Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY MURPHY.

The bill (S. 1047) granting a pension to Mary Murphy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Murphy, widow of Jeremiah Murphy, late of Company D, One hundred and fifty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES ADAMS.

The bill (S. 1616) for the relief of Charles Adams was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and instructed to pay Charles Adams, late Indian agent at the Los Pinos Indian agency, Colorado, $237.30, which sum is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Committee on Claims report to strike out the preamble. Without objection, the preamble will be stricken out.

JAMES W. HARVEY.

The bill (S. 555) for the relief of James W. Harvey as assignee of Joseph Parkins was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That there be, and is hereby, appropriated to James W. Harvey and the legal representative of Samuel Klauber, deceased, sureties upon bond executed by Joseph Parkins to the United States to secure performance of contract entered into by the Government with said Parkins November 19, 1863, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $4,925, the said sum having been expended by said Harvey and Klauber in performing said contract and in furnishing material thereunder, and never having been paid either to the contractor or said sureties.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PHILIP C. JOHNSON.

The bill (S. 727) to provide for the issue of the commission of Philip C. Johnson as a rear-admiral of the United States Navy was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. GORMAN. Let that be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Informally?

Mr. GORMAN. Informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be informally passed over. UNITED STATES STEAMER TALLAPOOSA.

The bill (S. 724) for the relief of the sufferers by the wreck of the United States steamer Tallapoosa was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EUNICE TRIPLER.

The bill (S. 562) for the relief of Eunice Tripler, widow of Charles S. Tripler, was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. GORMAN. Let that go over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

CHARLES B. NEWTON.

The bill (S. 229) for the relief of Charles B. Newton was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. GORMAN. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Missouri what that bill is.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill was before the Committee on Military Affairs, was very fully considered, and was reported favorably by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON]. The illegal arrest and confinement of Newton was outrageous treatment on the part of the officers of the Army. There is no question about that; it is almost inexcusable. I was opposed to the bill on account of the principle involved, as making the Government liable for wrongful acts of officers. The military officers treated the man very badly: arrested him and detained him and put him under guard, when they had sufficient proof to show that he was not the deserter they supposed he was. It was a question of identity. His parents were put to a good deal of expense, and the committee finally decided to report the bill favorably.

Mr. MORGAN. Let the bill go over. I object to its further consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Formally or informally?

Mr. MORGAN. Informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

COMMISSIONER OF FISH AND FISHERIES.

The bill (S. 718) to make the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries an officer of the Navy Department was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. That bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over at any rate, it having been reported adversely.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it go over under Rule IX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

PROTECTION OF FISH IN THE POTOMAC RIVER.

The bill (S. 682) to continue in force the provisions of an act approved March 2, 1885, and entitled "An act to protect the fish in the Potomac River, in the District of Columbia, and to provide a spawning-ground for shad and herring in the said Potomac River" was announced as the next bill in order on the Calendar.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust that will go over to the Calendar under Rule IX. I object to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland asks that the bill may go over to the Calendar under Rule IX.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered.

INDIAN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL IN MICHIGAN.

The bill (S. 2435) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of an Indian industrial school in the State of Michigan was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. GORMAN. I think we had better let the bill go over without prejudice. The Senate is too thin to consider it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over informally.

LIGHT-HOUSE ON ST. MARY'S ISLAND, ALASKA.

The bill (S. 463) making an appropriation for the construction of a light-house on St. Mary's Island, Alaska, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, in line 3, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "eighty;" in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert "or so much thereof as may be necessary;" in line 7, after the word "light-house," to insert "and steam fog-signal;" and in line 8, after the word "light-house," to insert "and steam fog-signal;" so as to make the bill read:

That the sum of $80,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purchase of a site and the construction of a light-house and steam fog-signal on St. Mary's Island, in the Territory of Alaska, said light-house and steam fog-signal to be erected under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill (S. 462) making an appropriation for the construction of a light-house and steam fog-signals on St. Mary's Island, Alaska."

INDIAN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

The bill (S. 2167) to provide for building and maintaining an Indian industrial school at Flandreau, in the State of South Dakota, was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I rather think that bill had better lie over until we can have some report upon it. I see there is no committee report accompanying it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri objects, and the bill goes over.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it retain its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be informally passed over.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, without prejudice.

EDWIN R. PARKS.

The bill (S. 1020) to authorize the President to restore Edwin R. Parks to his former rank in the Army, and place him on the retired-list was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let that bill take its place under Rule IX, as it is adversely reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

LIEUT. COL. CHARLES G. SAWTELLE.

The bill (S. 1350) for the relief of Lieut. Col. Charles G. Sawtelle, deputy quartermaster-general, United States Army, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officers, in settling and adjusting the accounts of Lieut. Col. Charles G. Sawtelle, deputy quartermaster-general, United States Army, to credit him with $126.40, being the amount of internal-revenue tax due from employees of the United States, employed by Maj. Gen. E. R. S. Canby, at the city of New Orleans, La., in the secret service, in the year 1865, and paid by Lieutenant-Colonel Sawtelle, the same amount appearing to have been withheld from the employees, but no receipt of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue being presented for the amount as required by law, and which amount is now suspended against Sawtelle by the accounting officers of the Treasury in the settlement of his accounts.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT H. MONTGOMERY.

The bill (S. 231) for the relief of Robert H. Montgomery was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to credit Robert H. Montgomery, captain in the Fifth Regiment of Cavalry, for all purposes of pay and allowances, for the period of time from the 19th of November, 1863, to the 16th of February, 1865, during which time he was a prisoner of war in the hands of the enemy, the same as though he had actually been in the military service of the United States as a second lieutenant of cavalry during that period.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR S. COLLINS.

The bill (S. 2369) granting an increase of pension to Oscar S. Collins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Oscar S. Collins, late of Company F, First Regiment of Rhode Island Light Artillery Volunteers, at $36 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY O. HALL.

The bill (S. 1152) granting a pension to Mary O. Hall was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mary O. Hall, widow of Augustus J. Hall, late of Company D, Twelfth Maine Volunteers, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

T. A. KENDIG.

The bill (S. 2634) for the relief of T. A. Kendig was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay $3,538.59 to Theodore A. Kendig, surviving partner of T. A. Kendig and J. C. McManus, for one month's extra pay on mail routes numbered 8166 and 8167, on which the service of carrying the mail was discontinued by order of the Postmaster-General on May 31, 1861.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PLATT. What is the title of that bill as it stands?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A bill for the relief of T. A. Kendig.

Mr. PLATT. As it caught my ear it was a bill for the relief of some other person, and the title ought to be amended.

Mr. COCKRELL. The body of the bill says Theodore A. Kendig. That is the only difference. He is the surviving partner and he is the only one named.

Mr. PLATT. I supposed the bill was in favor of some heirs or something of that kind.

Mr. COCKRELL. No; Theodore A. Kendig, surviving partner.

Mr. PLATT. I make no further question.

PORT OF TAMPA, FLA.

The bill (S. 2447) to extend to Tampa, Fla., the privilege of immediate transportation of unappraised merchandise was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, in line 7, after the word "the," to strike out "ports" and insert "port," and in the same line, after the word "Tampa," to strike out "and St. Augustine;" so as to make the bill read:

That the provisions of the first section of the act entitled "An act to amend the statutes in relation to immediate transportation of dutiable goods, and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1890, be, and the same are hereby, extended to the port of Tampa, Fla.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETIRED-LIST FOR PRIVATES, ETC.

The bill (S. 83) to amend the act approved February 25, 1885, entitled "An act to authorize a retired-list for privates and non-commissioned officers of the United States Army who have served for a period of thirty years or upward" was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. That I object to. Let that go over under Rule IX. It is an adverse report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

Mr. PADDOCK. What is the order made?

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill goes over to the Calendar under Rule IX, where all adverse reports go. The bill is reported adversely.

Mr. PADDOCK. My colleague [Mr. MANDERSON] is not present, and I was about to suggest that the bill be passed over.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator's colleague reported it adversely, and it has been placed on the adverse Calendar.

Mr. PADDOCK. All right.

TRANSFER OF REVENUE MARINE.

The bill (S. 305) to transfer the revenue marine to the naval establishment was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that that may be passed over without losing its place on the Calendar. I object to it now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

MRS. ADELAIDE H. WOODALL.

The bill (S. 2245) granting increase of pension to Mrs. Adelaide H. Woodall was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase to $50 per month the pension of Adelaide H. Woodall, widow of French B. Woodall, late colonel of the One hundred and fifty-first Regiment of Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COAST DEFENSE LANDS.

The bill (S. 2673) to acquire title to lands for purposes of public defense was announced as next in order.

Mr. GORMAN. That had better go over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered.

INDEBTEDNESS OF PACIFIC RAILROADS.

The bill (S. 2680) to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862; also to amend an act approved July 2, 1864, and also an act approved May 7, 1878, both in amendment of said first-mentioned act; and to provide for a settlement of claims growing out of the issue of bonds to aid in the construction of certain of the railroads, and to secure to the United States payment of all indebtedness of certain of the companies therein mentioned was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This bill may go over informally.
Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, that is right.

ARIZONA SCHOOL LANDS.

The bill (S. 2678) to authorize the leasing of the school and university lands in the Territory of Arizona, and for other purposes was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. PLATT. With the consent of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who reported the bill, it may lie over until I can have an opportunity to examine it, and I shall call it up the next day when the Calendar is under consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over informally.

LAND OFFICES IN MONTANA.

The bill (H. R. 525) to establish two additional land offices in the State of Montana was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COCKRELL. There ought to be a word inserted in the last line of section 2. There is evidently a word left out—either a misprint in the bill or it was not in the original bill. I move to insert, after the word "the," in line 15, the word "town;" so as to read: "shall be located at the town of Lewistown."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PRISON BUREAU.

The bill (S. 1491) to establish a prison bureau was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I object to the consideration of that bill and ask that it be placed on the Calendar under Rule IX. I think we can get along without a prison bureau for awhile.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is so ordered, if there be no objection.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, subsequently said: When the bill (S. 1491) to establish a prison bureau was reached on the Calendar, I was absent from the Chamber, attending a session of a committee of the Senate. An objection was made and the bill was carried to the Calendar under Rule IX. I ask that that order may be revoked, and that the bill be passed over, preserving its place on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have no objection to that, except that I want to enter my protest against the bill, as it increases the number of offices and would build up an independent bureau in the Government whose province would be simply to overlook the penitentiaries.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa. I now ask merely that the bill be placed on the Calendar as having been passed over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the former order will be reconsidered, and the bill will be passed over without prejudice.

HARBOR AT GALVESTON.

The bill (S. 2716) to provide for the completion of the improvement of the entrance to Galveston Harbor, Texas, was announced as the next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COKE. I wish that the bill be passed over informally, without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is so ordered, if there be no objection.

HANNAH LEO.

The bill (S. 2285) granting a pension to the widow of John Leary, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 5, to strike out the word "the" and insert "Hannah Leo," and in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out the word "twenty" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Hannah Leo, widow of John Leary, late a first sergeant in Battery F, Third Artillery, United States Army, in the war of the rebellion, and pay her at the rate of $12 per month from and after the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend the title of that bill, so that it will be more consonant with the body of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee reports to amend the title.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Hannah Leo."

SARAH A. WOODBRIDGE.

The bill (S. 1665) granting restoration of pension to Sarah A. Woodbridge was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to restore to the pension-roll the name of Sarah A. Woodbridge, widow of Anson L. Brewer, major and paymaster, United States Army, her pension having been suspended by reason of her remarriage.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT NATCHEZ.

The bill (S. 2415) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Mississippi and Louisiana Bridge and Railroad Company of Natchez, Miss., to construct a bridge over the Mississippi at or near Natchez, Miss.," was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in line 6, before the word "years," to strike out "five" and insert "three;" so as to make the bill read:

That section 12 of the above-recited act be amended so as to read, "That if the construction of said bridge is not commenced by the 1st day of January, 1892, and completed in three years thereafter, all rights hereby conferred shall cease and determine."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act authorizing the Mississippi and Louisiana Bridge and Railroad Company, of Natchez, Miss., to construct a bridge over the Mississippi River at or near Natchez, Miss.,' approved July 19, 1888."

PORT OF DELIVERY AT SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

The bill (S. 897) to establish a port of delivery at Sioux City, Iowa, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 1, line 7, after the word "States," to strike out the following:

And all the privileges and facilities afforded by the act approved March 2, 1891, entitled "An act allowing the duties on foreign merchandise imported into Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, and Natchez to be secured and paid at those places;"

So as to make the section read:

That the city of Sioux City, in the State of Iowa, shall be, and is hereby, constituted a port of delivery, annexed to and made a part of the collection district of New Orleans, and shall be subject to the same regulations and restrictions as other ports of delivery in the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARINE HOSPITAL AT VINEYARD HAVEN, MASS.

The bill (S. 2481) to improve the marine hospital at Vineyard Haven, Mass., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "hospital," to insert the words "and its approaches;" so as to make the bill read:

That there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $25,000, which shall be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose of alterations and improvements to the marine hospital and its approaches at Vineyard Haven, Mass. The sum herein appropriated shall be made immediately available from and after the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

E. S. TYNER.

The next bill on the Calendar was the bill (S. 1764) for the relief of E. S. Tyner, of Plant City, Fla.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is an adverse report.

Mr. PASCO. The bill was placed upon the Calendar at my request. I know no reason why the recommendation of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads should not be carried out, and I suggest that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the bill will be indefinitely postponed. It is so ordered.

MRS. CAROLINE G. SEYFFORTH.

The bill (S. 2103) granting a pension to Mrs. Caroline G. Seyfforth was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-rolls the name of Caroline G. Seyfforth, widow of the late Edmund Seyfforth, a contract surgeon in the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH DOMM.

The bill (S. 2066) placing the name Elizabeth Domm on the pension-rolls was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension-rolls the name of Elizabeth Domm, widow of John L. Domm, deceased, late member of the Eleventh Ohio Battery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ELLEN FITZGERALD.

The bill (S. 1502) granting a pension to Mary Ellen Fitzgerald was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Ellen Fitzgerald, invalid daughter of Michael Fitzgerald, late a soldier in Company G, Sixth United States Infantry, at the rate of $30 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES JOHNSTON.

The bill (S. 1154) to increase the pension of James Johnston was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James Johnston, late first sergeant of Company C, Fifteenth Maine Volunteers, at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of the present pension which he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT GRAND FORKS, N. DAK.

The bill (S. 1571) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Grand Forks, N. Dak., was announced as the next in order.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that the bill may go over without losing its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered. The bill will be informally passed over.

JULIET OPIE H. AYERS.

The bill (S. 2451) granting a pension to Juliet Opie H. Ayers was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments: In line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five," and in the same line, after the word "month," to insert "in lieu of that which she is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay Juliet Opie H. Ayers, widow of Romeyn Beck Ayres, late colonel of the Second Regiment Artillery, United States Army, a pension, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $75 per month, in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. In line 6, after the word "Army," I move to insert "and brigadier-general of United States Volunteers;" so as to read: Late colonel of the Second Regiment Artillery, United States Army, and brigadier-general of United States volunteers, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. CULLOM. What is the amount of the pension granted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-five dollars per month.

Mr. CULLOM. That is a pretty good pension. I would inquire who knows anything about this case.

Mr. GORMAN. It is all right.

Mr. CULLOM. I inquire of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] if he knows about it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am going entirely by the record in the case. It has not been usual to increase the pension of any officer below the rank of brigadier-general above $50. I discover from the report that General Ayers was a brigadier-general of volunteers and brevet brigadier-general and brevet major-general in the Regular Army. I therefore moved to insert the words "and brigadier-general of United States volunteers" as a part justification at least for the increase of this pension above $50.

Mr. CULLOM. The question of amount is what I was inquiring about.

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill as introduced provided for only $50.

Mr. MORGAN. The amount ought to be $100 a month.

Mr. CULLOM. I merely wanted to know something about the case.

Mr. MORGAN. General Ayers was one of the most accomplished and one of the most heroic of all the generals in the Federal Army during the war.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WALTER P. HARRISON.

The bill (S. 2598) increasing the pension of Walter P. Harrison was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of $8 per month now received by Walter P. Harrison, late private Company B, First Regiment Louisiana Volunteers, Mexican war, to $72 per month.

Mr. CULLOM. What about this case?

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to know upon what principle the bill is based.

Mr. CULLOM. I think these bills providing pensions of $50 and $75 and $100 a month, or anything above the ordinary rates of pension, ought to have a report with them so as to show what the facts are upon which they are based.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a report upon this bill.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the report. The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. DAVIS February 18, 1890, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2598) granting increase of pension to Walter P. Harrison, have examined the same, and report:

A favorable report in this case was made by the Committee on Invalid Pensions in the House of Representatives in the last Congress which fully sets forth the facts as appears by the evidence. The said report is herewith adopted and the passage of the bill is recommended.

HOUSE REPORT.

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10477) granting an increase of pension to Walter P. Harrison, have considered the same, and report as follows:

Walter P. Harrison was a private in Company B, First Louisiana Volunteers, Mexican war, and is now a pensioner at the rate of $8 per month under the Mexican pension act of January 29, 1887. He also served as midshipman in the United States Navy from October 19, 1841, until June 10, 1843, when he resigned. In 1886 he applied for pension for total blindness, declaring that while in the Mexican war he contracted measles, which settled in his eyes, and caused disease of the same, resulting in total blindness about the year 1860. He was unable in his pension claim to furnish the evidence of comrades to show the incurrence of his disability in his military service, and hence his claim for pension for his disability has never been adjudicated. As above stated, he has been allowed a service pension of $8 per month.

Notwithstanding his infirmity, the claimant has for twenty-five years earned his subsistence by acting as a traveling agent, being always attended by another person. He is now sixty-five years of age, his health has failed him, he has no property to afford him a living, and being no longer able to continue business he is entirely dependent upon his small pension.

Dr. Flavel B. Tiffany, a leading physician of Kansas City, Mo., certifies that the claimant is totally blind from the disease known as choroid retinitis pigmentosa, with secondary cataract following in each eye. There is no history of any disease, other than measles, which might be the cause of Mr. Harrison's blindness.

Many prominent citizens of Kansas City, Mo., certify to his helpless condition.

A prominent citizen, Henry N. Ess, esq., of Kansas City, Mo., states:

"I have known W. P. Harrison seven or eight years. He desires an act passed for a pension to him. He served in the Mexican war. He took measles, from which he has wholly lost his eyesight. There are no records of the disease of the men in service then. The physician, although now living, does not personally recollect this particular disease of Mr. Harrison. Without such outside testimony he can not get any increase of pension under the law as it stands. He is now totally blind and has been blind for more than twenty-five years. There is just a little failure of evidence that defeats him before the Department. I know Mr. Harrison well and his character is beyond dispute."

J. V. C. Karnes, of Kansas City, Mo., a prominent lawyer, and late United States attorney, states:

Mr. Harrison is a very remarkable man, and, although entirely blind, makes a brave fight to do business as far as he can. He is a man of excellent character, honorable in every respect and entitled to the fullest confidence and consideration. Of course I know nothing of the cause of his blindness, but among those who know him his own statement is all that is required on this or any other subject.

Morrison Munford, editor Kansas City Times, Charles E. Hosbrook, Sanford B. Ladd, and James S. Botsford, all leading citizens of Kansas City, certify to the same effect.

Other testimony before your committee shows the claimant's present condition and that the eye disease existed for many years before he became blind.

In several similar cases, where pensioners of the Mexican war were totally blind, notably the cases of Titus Wilder and Martin Kellogg, Congress has increased the pension to $72 per month.

Your committee believe the bill one of merit, and therefore recommend its passage, amended by inserting after the word "volunteers," in line 5, the words "Mexican war."

Mr. CULLOM. The disclosure of the fact that this soldier is entirely blind, and has been for some time, it seems to me is sufficient to justify the allowance of a pension of $72 a month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCES McNEIL POTTER.

The bill (S. 2505) for the relief of Frances McNeil Potter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to increase the pension of Frances McNeil Potter, dependent daughter of the late General John McNeil, United States Army, from $30 to $50 per month.

Mr. ALLISON. Let the report in that case be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, February 18, 1890:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2505) granting a pension to Frances McNeil Potter, have examined the same, and report: The appended report, made by your committee in the Fiftyeth Congress, is adopted and the bill is reported with a favorable recommendation.

REPORT.

The facts of this case were fairly stated in the report of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House of Representatives during the Forty-ninth Congress, and which is herewith submitted.

Frances McNeil Potter is a daughter of General John McNeil, United States Army; that John McNeil, of New Hampshire, was appointed a captain of infantry March 12, 1812, and had charge of the troops at Concord, and subsequently at Plattsburgh, where he was charged also with the supervision of the drilling of the new soldiers. In August, 1813, he was promoted to the rank of major and marched to Burlington in command of a regiment.

In July, 1814, he served in Brown's division, at Sackett's Harbor, until he was ordered with his regiment, in July, to the frontier at Niagara. During an attack by the enemy Colonel Campbell, of the Eleventh Regiment, fell, and the command of the regiment devolved upon Major McNeil.

The action of this officer at this battle, known in history as the battle of Chippewa, was supposed by his superior officers to have had a determining influence in securing the success of the American Army.

General Scott, in his report, said, "The self-possession of Major McNeill under fire was unequalled," and "the flank movement of the gallant McNeill in this important battle turned the fortunes of the day and gave victory to the American troops."

General Jesup declares: "I followed the Eleventh Regiment with my command over the bridge. I had ample opportunity of witnessing the conduct of Major McNeill. He formed his regiment under fire of the enemy with the accuracy of a parade. He promptly availed himself of every advantage presented, and he wielded his force with great coolness and judgment, and on his own responsibility and without orders made the decisive movement at Chippewa."

General Scott, in his report to General Brown, said: "Major McNeill deserves everything which conspicuous skill and gallantry can win from a grateful country."

He subsequently commanded the Eleventh Regiment at the battle of Lundy's Lane, and in this engagement he exhibited not only the military tact, judgment, and bravery that had been exhibited at the battle of Chippewa, but was severely wounded and rendered a cripple for life. He subsequently served in 1824 on the Indian frontier.

His death, which occurred in Washington, February, 1850, was commemorated appropriately by the action of both Houses of Congress, which were then in session, eulogies being delivered upon him by Mr. Hibbard, of the House, and Mr. Hale, in the Senate.

This officer was, for merit and gallantry in the service, promoted from a captaincy to the rank of brevet brigadier-general, and not only devoted his time to the service of the country through a long series of years, but finally succumbed to the effect of wounds received and diseases contracted in the service. And your committee are of the opinion that the gallant service of the father to his country entitles his daughter to consideration from his grateful countrymen.

Mr. CULLOM. What is the amount of the pension proposed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty dollars a month.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is this a daughter of a Revolutionary soldier, or a granddaughter, or great granddaughter? I have not the report before me and I could not exactly make out which was the case. Was General McNeill a soldier of the Revolutionary war?

Mr. MORGAN. He was a soldier of the war of 1812.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is she a daughter of the soldier?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. She is a daughter of the soldier.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is the widow dead, and are all the other children dead?

Mr. CULLOM. She is getting a pension of $30 a month now.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am inclined to believe that we had better let the bill be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over informally.

BENJAMIN T. BAKER.

The bill (S. 2531) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin T. Baker was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Benjamin T. Baker, late a quartermaster on the United States steamer Spuyten Duyvil, in the Navy, at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of that which he is now receiving.

Mr. ALLISON. Let us hear the report read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading of the report is called for. The Secretary will read the report.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, February 18, 1890:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2531) granting a pension to Benjamin T. Baker, have examined the same and report:

The appended report, made by your committee in the last Congress, is adopted, and the bill is reported with a favorable recommendation.

REPORT.

The distressing facts in this case are fully set forth in the sworn evidence filed with your committee. The statement by Mrs. Saville is especially full and made so at the request of the member of the committee to whom the case was referred for special examination. It is indeed seldom that the tragic records of suffering occasioned by patriotic service have so strongly appealed to the justice and sympathy of the country.

We append the evidence in the case supporting the application for increase of pension.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Benjamin T. Baker, being sworn according to law, certifies as follows: I enlisted in Colonel Sewell's First New York Volunteer Engineers, Company H, Capt. F. Crusoe, January 22, 1862; served one year and six months; was honorably discharged for paralysis of the legs and other disabilities.

In June, 1864, I enlisted in the Navy as quartermaster; was with Capt. John Lay at Dutch Gap, on board the torpedo-boat Spuyten Duyvil. During the winter of 1864 and 1865 we lived on board the torpedo-boat, the Government failing to send the tender for us to sleep on, as they had promised to do. I was in charge of the boat during Captain Lay's absence, and for five long weary months had no berth to lie in. To keep the iron under water we filled bags of sand and put on the deck, being obliged to keep them wet all the time. From these and the donkey-pumps the water was constantly dripping below on the torpedo-box on which I was obliged to lie. We could not stand on the top of the torpedo-boat for many minutes at a time, the weather being bitterly cold, and the frost and ice preventing our keeping a foot-hold. We were obliged to crouch down or stand the best we could, between the wet bags. Our clothing was constantly saturated with water, and we had no place to go to in order to change, as everything we had was below and wet before we put it on. We took our meals on the Onondaga, a double-turreted monitor, which lay about 50 yards from us; we had no further privileges on the monitor. Our lives at this time were in great peril and we suffered more than words can describe.

During this winter I contracted bronchitis and was very ill for two months, my only resting place being the wet sand-bags and the torpedo-box below, with no spot to crawl into to escape the dripping water from above. In the spring I was sent to the hospital, at this time entirely helpless; I was two months in the hospital when the surgeon brought me my discharge, and my health was entirely broken, and at that time they did not think I would live to reach New York City, my home.

I have suffered ever since with chronic bronchitis, and my life has been one long period of suffering. I have been unable to support myself or family for long years, and have been dependent upon my daughter, who is now a widow, and is obliged to provide for us all by her own exertions. My family have to attend to me personally, my constitution has become so weakened by frequent paroxysms of coughing which completely prostrates me. I desire to secure the highest grade of pension, $72 per month, as my sufferings have been severe, and I am unable to care for myself financially or physically, but a pensioner on others.

BENJAMIN T. BAKER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of April, A. D. 1888.

[SEAL.] M. M. ROHRER, Notary Public.

This certifies that I am the daughter of Benjamin T. Baker, and personally cognizant of his condition in the past and at the present time. He has been an invalid since the war, having contracted chronic bronchitis while in the service of the United States Navy, through neglect of the Government to provide proper accommodations while on board the torpedo-boat Spuyten Duyvil (Capt. John Lay) at Dutch Gap. No sleeping accommodation was provided him, and he was constantly saturated with the water which dripped from the deck above. He is a great sufferer; reduced to a skeleton from years of pain and torture, of which to give a copious account would make the heart of adamant turn in pity.

He has had very severe hemorrhages from the lungs, in every instance leaving him near death. He can not bear the least atmospheric change without a violent fit of coughing, which lasts many minutes or an hour, as the case may be; in the latter event he becomes so exhausted he faints away, and lies unconscious until restoratives are administered, then he is unable to leave his couch for hours after. At such times we have to give him stimulants frequently, and by this artificial means keep him alive. He has not been able to bathe himself for several years.

He never lies down at night or rises in the morning without a long paroxysm of coughing, usually lasting an hour, and often longer. His medicine and a stimulant are always brought to his room and prepared for use, to relieve him if possible. These spells must be endured; he expects them upon rising and retiring, and the anticipation is such agony he often wishes himself dead. A poor, weak, emaciated body seems but to imprison a soul to torture and harass. The unseen particles floating in the air irritate his throat so constantly that an incessant hacking and expectoration is kept up night and day.

No interval from pain marks the day, no respite of a few moments for the lungs in their efforts to clear the air passages. These convulsions are incessant, in a greater or less degree, month in and month out, while these drag long years, for his life is one long period of pain and suffering and fighting with disease. Four or five of these fearful paroxysms of coughing have to be gone through every day; hence his strength is gone and he is rendered entirely helpless.

He is now past seventy years old, with no hope of ever again being able to know a month's freedom from suffering. He served a double record during the late rebellion, having been in both the Army and the Navy, remaining in the Army until totally unfit for duty by sickness from exposure, only giving up when he could no longer stand on his feet, and then by order of the surgeon, who absolutely drove him from duty to the hospital, he being a friend and fearing he would die on his feet. He left the hospital for his home, accompanied by two friends from New York, who went to fetch him, the surgeon quietly telling these friends he would die on the way home. This was the belief of every one. But he recovered sufficiently to go out, and immediately entered the Navy and again took up the cause of his country's honor. Surely his record as a soldier deserves some recognition, and his present condition a great deal of sympathy and the proper reward.

His wife is sixty-two years of age; entirely broken down in health, and terribly emaciated by constant anxiety and attendance upon her invalid husband. Her sight is so very defective from a cataract, and her other physical weakness, that she is no longer able to attend to his personal wants, as it is dangerous, even if her health would permit, for her to do so. In a moment of fright, when the said Benjamin T. Baker was in a violent paroxysm of coughing, she was hastening to him with a restorative, and supposing she had reached his room, she stepped off the stairs, falling down nineteen winding steps, escaping death by a miracle, but injuring herself very seriously. She was terribly bruised and ill for three weeks; from this shock she probably never will recover.

The care of both parents now devolves upon me, which I am quite inadequate to, both financially and physically. I struggle through, but am fearful with the constant strain I shall give out completely. I am not able to employ a nurse; thus every little detail which makes up so much of an invalid's life depends on me. I must be in constant attendance. The proper care of one alone would be deemed sufficient for one person.

Aside from this my young sister is in a very precarious state of health. She is the only other living child of my parents, and her condition is another sorrow added to my life. She can not endure the severity of our Northern winters. Hitherto she has gone South, accompanied by mother or myself. Having met with severe financial losses two years ago, I could not go away with her or send her away with another. My means would not permit me to move my family, and I could not leave two invalids to preserve the life of another. My physician constantly warns me of my sister's danger, and I am saddened by the thought that I am chained by poverty, unable to raise my hand to save her. The money which I now employ to render my parents comfortable would permit me to make a provision for her, but at the present time we must keep together to live.

A consultation with our physician, Dr. T. H. Yarrow, of Philadelphia, a few days since, resulted in the same warning words: "Your sister should go South in the early fall and remain until the late spring." This is ominous for me, and I can simply clasp my hands in despair.

My parents and sister as well, are dependent upon me for everything—home, clothing, food, etc. Having no other income than the $24 a month awarded Benjamin T. Baker a few months ago, this amount hardly pays for the medicines and tonics which are constantly required, and as often changed in the hope of some new drug which may bring relief. The physician's bill is also another of the cares which rest entirely upon me, and this expenditure is not trifling.

My sister being obliged from my inability to go away with her or send her away has caused me more expense in this direction for several years, as her condition is very much aggravated by the severity of this winter. She, too, is so weak I have to give her great care and be very watchful. It is a very distressing state of affairs for me to see her becoming more frail every day, and to feel that she is fading away like a flower simply because I can not give her the proper attention.

This case is all the more sad from the fact that in his enthusiasm Benjamin T. Baker, to preserve the honor and glory of his country, closed out a flourishing business, leaving his wife and young family a small competency to answer their wants during his absence, thereby changing their living from one of luxury and happiness to that of extreme economy, loneliness, and sorrow. He can only sit now and dwell upon the impoverishment of his family—everything gone and he a dependent upon a widowed daughter. I am obliged to earn my living by my pen, which is often very embarrassing and in my case not remunerative. I barely make enough to provide for my dependent ones and myself. I am sadly retarded by the incessant care demanded of me, and I find my strength weakening.

I therefore make this statement of the true facts and the infirm and helpless condition of the said Benjamin T. Baker, hoping Congress will give him an increase of pension from $24 to $72 a month, his dependent and painful condition making his case worthy of this reward.

WILHELMINA A. SAVILLE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me 26th day of April, A. D. 1888.

[SEAL.]

M. M. ROHRER, Notary Public.

This certifies that I have known Benjamin T. Baker personally and am thoroughly cognizant of his condition. He has long been a sufferer from chronic bronchitis and hemorrhages. To my personal knowledge he is totally unable to aid himself, being a confirmed invalid, and being in such an enfeebled condition he requires the attendance of his wife or daughter constantly. He has severe coughing spells, which render him insensible and prostrate him for hours at a time. He is reduced to a skeleton through disease contracted while in the Navy during the rebellion.

He is entirely dependent upon his daughter (a widow), who is also dependent upon her own exertions for a livelihood, and who also has others dependent upon her. His wife is now in failing health, her sight being very defective and her physical condition generally giving way, rendering her unable to give personal attention to her invalid husband, thereby throwing the entire care upon her daughter, who can not afford to hire an attendant to relieve her.

O. S. DAVIS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of April, A. D. 1888, at Washington City, District of Columbia.

[SEAL.]

JOHN T. C. CLARK, Notary Public.

This certifies that I have known Benjamin T. Baker, formerly residing in Philadelphia, for several years. His physical condition renders him unable to support himself and family, he having suffered with chronic bronchitis very severely, at times having severe hemorrhages. I attended him for several years during his residence in this city.

THOMAS J. YARROW, M. D.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14, 1888.

Sworn and subscribed to before me the 14th day of April, A. D. 1888. Witness my hand and notarial seal.

[SEAL.]

F. T. CLARK, Notary Public.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

City and county of Philadelphia, ss:

Personally came B. T. Fisher, residing in the city of Philadelphia, who, being duly affirmed according to law, affirms and says that he is acquainted with Benjamin T. Baker, formerly residing in the city of Philadelphia, now a resident of Washington City. From my knowledge of him and his family he has been for some time past wholly dependent upon the love and care of his daughter, Mrs. Wilhelmina Saville, herself a widow dependent upon her own exertions to provide for herself and her father and mother. The said Benjamin T. Baker is in infirm health, now over seventy years of age, very deaf, and in my judgment will, during all his future years, be dependent upon others and not able to earn anything, by reason of his general physical debility; and I understand he requires an attendant nearly all the time to perform the ordinary things of life, such as washing himself, etc.

B. F. FISHER.

Affirmed and subscribed to before me, a notary public, this 13th day of April, 1888.

[SEAL.]

WILLIAM E. KNOWLES, Notary Public.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

City and county of Philadelphia, ss:

Personally came Seth W. Wilson, residing in the city of Philadelphia, who, being duly sworn according to law, says that he is and has long been acquainted with Benjamin T. Baker, formerly residing in the city of Philadelphia, now a resident of Washington City. From my knowledge of him he has been for some time past wholly dependent upon his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Saville, herself a widow, supporting her father and mother by her own labor.

Mr. Baker, now over seventy years old, is, and has long been, in infirm health, is very deaf, and in my opinion will never be able to exercise any care or provision for himself, as he now requires a personal attendant in the ordinary exercise of daily life.

SETH W. WILSON.

Subscribed and sworn to this 13th day of April, A. D. 1888, before me,

[SEAL.]

H. F. REARDON, Notary Public.

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

City and county of Philadelphia, ss:

Personally came A. L. Farrand, residing at Ardmore, Pa., who, being duly sworn according to law, says that he has been long acquainted with Benjamin T. Baker, formerly of Philadelphia, but now residing in Washington, D. C.; that the said Benjamin T. Baker, now past seventy years of age, is now, and has for several years past been, totally unfit to perform either mental or physical labor. The sole dependence of himself and wife rests upon his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Saville (widow), who is obliged to labor for their support.

A. L. FARRAND.

Sworn and subscribed to the 14th of April, A. D. 1888, before me,

[SEAL.]

ISRAEL HECHT, Notary Public.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES ANDERSON.

The bill (S. 2611) granting a pension to James Anderson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of James Anderson, late a private in Company B, Fourth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BETSEY A. MOWER.

The bill (S. 1468) granting a pension to Betsey A. Mower was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have read over the report in that case, which states that she was pensioned at $30 per month; that this was increased to $50 per month by special act of Congress; and subsequently by act of the Fiftieth Congress her pension was again increased to $75 per month. Judging from the report, the only merit the case has is the persistent application of the claimant to have special legislation in her behalf. I therefore object to the consideration of the bill and ask that it be placed on the Calendar under Rule IX.

Mr. CULLOM. This is the third time the case has come before Congress. I think we ought to have a rest for at least one term of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the bill will be placed on the Calendar under Rule IX.

ADMISSION OF IDAHO.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 658) to provide for the admission of the State of Idaho into the Union.

Mr. PLATT. With regard to that bill I should be very glad to have it passed this afternoon.

Mr. COCKRELL. It can not be passed this afternoon.

Mr. PLATT. I apprehend some Senator will feel it is a bill that ought not to be passed this afternoon, and under the five-minute rule; I therefore ask that it be passed over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so ordered, without objection.

THE CAPRON COLLECTION OF JAPANESE ART.

The bill (S. 321) providing for the purchase of "The Capron collection of Japanese works of art" was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not think, in view of everything in the country, the condition of the agricultural interests, and everything of the kind, that there is any pressing necessity for spending $14,000 to buy that collection. So we will let the bill pass over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri objects, and the bill will be passed over informally.

NANCY E. DAY.

The bill (S. 1034) for the relief of Nancy E. Day, administratrix of the estate of James L. Day, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay Nancy E. Day, administratrix of the estate of James L. Day, deceased, late of Norwich, Conn., $3,041.66, in payment and satisfaction of the amount found due from the United States to her by the Court of Claims, upon a reference of her claim to that court by the Postmaster-General, under the provisions of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator postpone that motion for a few moments while the Chair lays before the Senate certain House bills?

Mr. INGALLS. With pleasure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate bills from the House of Representatives for reference.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills, received from the House of Representatives, were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (H. R. 5620) granting a pension to Frank Deming, Company F, Ninth Michigan Infantry;

A bill (H. R. 1871) granting a pension to Sarah Meader;

A bill (H. R. 2861) for the relief of Helen E. Dewey;

A bill (H. R. 4028) granting a pension to Agnes Vetter;

A bill (H. R. 4134) granting a pension to Margaret Stewart;

A bill (H. R. 4694) for the relief of Edward Haynes;

A bill (H. R. 4868) granting a pension to Henrietta Judd;

A bill (H. R. 5081) to pension Helen A. Moore and the minor children of John S. Moore;

A bill (H. R. 5082) to pension Polly Robinson;

A bill (H. R. 5309) to place the name of Mary Welch upon the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. 5452) granting a pension to Joseph K. Hamilton, dependent father of John E. Hamilton, late private Company D, One hundred and third Pennsylvania Volunteers;

A bill (H. R. 5617) granting a pension to Henry Bloomfield;

A bill (H. R. 6350) for the relief of Asher Post; and

A bill (H. R. 6871) for the relief of Napoleon B. McKay.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 2849) authorizing the President to appoint and retire John C. Frémont as a major-general in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 8458) authorizing the purchase of tents by the Secretary of War, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 2041) for the relief of C. C. Roberts.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands:

A bill (H. R. 935) to amend section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to fees of registers and receivers;

A bill (H. R. 6034) for the relief of Mary Alice White Ogden; and
A bill (H. R. 7254) to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes.

The bill (H. R. 526) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to procure and submit to Congress a proposal for the sale to the United States of the western part of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 571) extending the limit of cost for public building at Hoboken, N. J., to meet requirements of site, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The bill (H. R. 7160) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 105) "to continue in force an act authorizing the construction of a bridge over Bayou Bernard, in the State of Mississippi," was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The bill (H. R. 3538) for the relief of Albert H. Emery was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will lie on the table at the request of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER].

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEW LONDON, CONN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 977) for the erection of a public building at New London, Conn.; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

HEIRS OF JOHN H. JONES AND THOMAS D. HARRIS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the message of the House of Representatives requesting the return of the bill (H. R. 2239) for the relief of the heirs of John H. Jones and of the heirs of Thomas D. Harris, which was read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request will be agreed to.

Mr. PASCO. My impression is that the bill is now before the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL. It will be returned any way, wherever it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the order will be made, and the Committee on Claims will be discharged from further consideration of the bill.

DENISON AND WASHITA VALLEY RAILWAY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives non-concurring in the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 856) to amend section 1 and section 9 of an act entitled "An act to authorize the Denison and Washita Valley Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1886, and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. BERRY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments to the bill and agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. STOCKBRIDGE were appointed.

ESTATE OF JAMES W. SCHAUMBURG.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that Order of Business 161 on the Calendar, being the bill (S. 986) for the relief of the legal representatives and devisees of James W. Schaumburg, may be placed back on the Calendar in the position it had when I objected to it. It is now under Rule IX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made, if there be no objection.

EMMA S. CAMERON.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask the Senator from Kansas to yield to me for a moment that I may ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 670, being Senate bill 1127.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the bill for which the Senator from Wisconsin asks present consideration.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1127) to pay Emma S. Cameron, widow of James Cameron, for property taken and used by the Army during the late war.

Mr. PASCO. I think the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] desires to be heard on that bill when it comes up.

Mr. SPOONER. If that is so, I withdraw the request for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request for immediate consideration is withdrawn, and the bill takes its place on the Calendar.

Mr. REAGAN. I request the Senator from Kansas to withhold his motion and allow me to call up for present consideration Senate bill 2860. It is a bill making a small appropriation to complete a public building which is in progress, and which is recommended as necessary by the Supervising Architect.

Mr. HARRIS. I did not understand the Senator from Florida as objecting to the consideration of the bill the Senator from Wisconsin asked to have considered. Did the Senator intend to be so understood?

Mr. PASCO. I merely stated that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] desired to be heard when the bill was brought up, and upon that suggestion the Senator from Wisconsin withdrew his request.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Arkansas is a member of the Committee on Claims, and I could not think of asking the Senate to take up the bill if he desires to be heard against it.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, entered the Chamber.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Arkansas is now here.

Mr. SPOONER. Then I would like to call up the bill, if there be no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] has since been recognized to ask unanimous consent of the Senate for the consideration of a bill.

Mr. HARRIS. Inasmuch as the bill was not objected to and the Chair had recognized another Senator, I think the Senator from Wisconsin is entitled to have his bill considered at this time, and the Senator from Texas may be heard afterwards.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senator from Wisconsin withdrew his request, and the Chair announced that the bill took its place again on the Calendar.

Mr. SPOONER. I think—

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest that we pass the bill the Senator from Texas wishes to call up, and then proceed to the consideration of the bill moved by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. All right.

ADDITION TO PUBLIC BUILDING AT HOUSTON, TEX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent that the bill (S. 2860) to authorize the construction of an addition to the public building in Houston, Tex., and to provide a cistern, heating apparatus, etc., for said building may be now considered. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARTFORD COLLECTION DISTRICT.

Mr. DAWES. I ask unanimous consent to call up a bill to transfer—

Mr. COCKRELL. I think we have been here long enough.

Mr. DAWES. It is simply to transfer several towns to another collection district.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then I give notice that after this bill is disposed of, if the Senator from Kansas does not renew his motion for an executive session, I shall move an adjournment.

Mr. DAWES. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2837) to amend an act approved March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to amend sections 2533 and 2534 of the Revised Statutes, and making Hartford, in the State of Connecticut, a port of entry in place of Middletown."

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 24, 1890, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, March 22, 1890.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by Rev. GEORGE ELLIOTT, of Washington, D. C.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

COTTON-SEED OIL.

Mr. MORGAN. I have a communication from the farmers of three States that I will be glad to have read and printed in the RECORD.

The Clerk read as follows:

FARMERS' EXCHANGE,
Memphis, Tenn., March 11, 1890.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Exchange, held this day, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas the Agricultural Committee of Congress have under consideration a bill to tax compound lard; and

Whereas cotton-seed oil, pressed from cotton seed, an important and a valuable product of the soil, is largely used in the making up of compound lard, and a tax on compound lard is an indirect tax on cotton seed, and is well calculated to reduce the price of the same in the hands of the producer; and

Whereas the price of farm products, not only of the South, but of the whole country, is now barely above the cost of production: Therefore,

Be it resolved,
cotton seed, an ject, but could be branded as sold upon its o
Be it further members of Co kansas, this a copy be also be requested

The SPEA
in the RECO RECORD and

Mr. LODG
tion of Presi offer the follo ent time.

The Clerk
Resolved,
use of the Hou

The SPEA
the resolution
The resolu

Mr. LAW
ent considera
The bill w

Be it enacted, to be paid to C
unteers, from services rende Regiment of U tenant in the 4 per cent, on shall be in for muster-out rol
Sec. 2 That above-named Treasury not

The follow
In line 5, aft
Strike out, c
"With inter
the day when

The SPEA
[After a pau
The amen
The bill a and being en
Mr. LAW passed; and table.
The latter

Mr. BOO privilege.
proprietor had, with during the
that Mr. B is true that sion at the tion of an make this s

Mr. OUT the North A material res naturalizati
The mem

To the honor
The "North comprising does hereby and all of th rially change
As some o lowing:
First, The
breathes the rebellion ag
"He has en pose obstru others to ene appropriatio
All such le stitutions, an interest.

Be it resolved, That we consider a tax on compound lard equivalent to a tax on cotton seed, and, as producers, we are opposed to said tax; but we do not object, but consider it fair and just to all parties in interest, that compound lard be branded as such, and that pure lard be branded as such, so that each can be sold upon its own merits.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the members of Congress and of the Senate, from Tennessee, Mississippi, and Arkansas, this exchange having members in each one of these States, and that a copy be also sent to the Hon. J. M. Rusk, Commissioner of Agriculture, and they be requested to use all fair and legitimate means to defeat said bill.

R. D. GOODWYN, President.
J. H. ALLEN, Secretary.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the printing of the memorial in the RECORD. The Chair hears none, and it will be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

FEDERAL ELECTIONS BILL.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress to offer the following resolution and ask for its consideration at the present time.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That 2,500 copies additional of the bill (H. R. 8242) be printed for the use of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The resolution was adopted.

C. C. ROBERTS.

Mr. LAWLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2041) for the relief of C. C. Roberts. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., that the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, directed to cause to be paid to C. C. Roberts the pay and emoluments of a first lieutenant of volunteers, from the 4th day of April, 1863, to the 1st day of November, 1863, for services rendered as first lieutenant in what was then designated as the Fourth Regiment of Ullman's Brigade, Colored United States Volunteers, as first lieutenant in the company commanded by Capt. Thomas S. Cates, with interest at 4 per cent. on the amount due from November 1, 1863, to the day when this act shall be in force and become approved, and that he be granted muster-in and muster-out rolls in accordance with provisions of this act.

Sec. 2. That the amount of money necessary to pay for the services of the above-named claimant be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The following amendments were reported by the committee:

In line 5, after the word "volunteers" insert the word "infantry."

Strike out, commencing in line 11, the following words:

"With interest at 4 per cent. on the amount due from November 1, 1863, to the day when this act shall be in force and become approved."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LAWLER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. BOOTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege. In the course of discussion on yesterday on the pension appropriation bill I stated that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BYNUM] had, with others, objected to the consideration of pension legislation during the Fiftieth Congress. I find upon examination of the RECORD that Mr. BYNUM was not one of those who objected; but that while it is true that others did so he did not, although I was under the impression at the time that he had objected. I would not misstate the position of any gentleman upon the floor of the House, and I, therefore, make this statement in justice to him.

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I ask unanimous consent that the memorial of the North American Turnerbund and citizens of Columbus, Ohio, against material restrictive changes in the national laws on immigration and naturalization be printed in the RECORD without the names.

The memorial is as follows:

NORTH AMERICAN TURNERBUND (GYMNASTIC UNION),
OFFICE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
St. Louis, Mo., February 23, 1890.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The "North American Turnerbund" (Gymnastic Union), an organization comprising some 40,000 citizens of this country, both native and naturalized, does hereby respectfully, but most earnestly, protest against the passage of any and all of the measures now before your honorable body designed to materially change the present national laws on immigration and naturalization.

As some of the reasons (among many) for our protest we mention the following:

First. These proposed measures are fraught with the same mischief and breathe the same spirit which caused the founders of this Republic to rise in rebellion against a British tyrant and to hurl at him the following indictment: "He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands."

All such legislation is therefore directly opposed to the very spirit of our institutions, and can not be defended upon any mere plea of expediency or self-interest.

Second. The industry, thrift, and honest intelligence of the immigrant has, for more than a hundred years past, been a chief factor in developing the mineral, agricultural, commercial, and industrial resources of this country and in raising it to its present proud position among the nations of the world.

There is room in this broad land for many millions more of human beings. By maintaining the liberal policy of our forefathers, who extended to every new-comer the warm hand of welcome, we may and will continue to multiply our national wealth and the comforts and happiness of our people. By surrounding ourselves with a Chinese wall of intolerance we will as surely invite stagnation and retrogression.

Third. The patriotic devotion of those who have in the last century emigrated to our land and acquired a right of citizenship among us has been such as to win a proud place in its history, and not least among them are the members of our own organization. What right have we to assume that the character of those to come under a continued liberal policy of immigration will be one particle lower than of those who came before? In truth, the very proposal of these liberal measures is an affront to the hearer of every non-English name, no matter how long the line of his ancestry that helped to build up this nation!

Fourth. Any material change of our present naturalization laws, looking to the discouragement of naturalization, must be regarded as uncalled for and mischievous. Not merely should we encourage those who have cast their fortunes among us to soon become loyal members of our body politic, but the very existence of large bodies of unnaturalized residents would seem to constitute a menace to our institutions. Love of a free country can best be bred in men by securing to them the full and early enjoyment of its privileges and blessings.

Fifth. The scheme proposed, of emigrant inquisition through our consular and governmental representatives abroad, is impracticable and unjust. It will aid the wicked merely and deter the good. No European government will assist in retaining its bad elements and in forwarding the desirable. Besides, a system of espionage like this is odious and degrading to all concerned.

Sixth. Our existing laws, if rigidly and justly enforced, afford ample protection against all undesirable and criminal immigration; but no such system of laws as now proposed can be enacted without violating the fundamental principles of our national compact and darkening the brightest pages of our national history.

In the sentiments of this protest the mighty host of men who sought this land for the freedom and enlightenment which it promised, we feel assured, will heartily join. They must regret, as they will resent, the apparent spirit of race prejudice and nativism which these proposed laws so liberally display, and for them all, as well as the members of our own particular organization, we do most earnestly petition you not to lend your voice and vote to their enactment.

The SPEAKER. The memorial will be referred to the Committee on Immigration.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEW LONDON, CONN.

Mr. RUSSELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 977) for the erection of a public building at New London, Conn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, custom-house, and other Government offices, in the city of New London and State of Connecticut, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000, which said sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Connecticut shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. I could not hear what change was recommended by the committee.

The amendments were read, as follows:

The committee recommends to strike out the words "one hundred thousand" and insert in lieu thereof the words "seventy-five thousand."

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Is there an appropriation clause?

Mr. KERR, of Iowa. I believe it is understood that the appropriation clauses should be stricken out of all these bills; and I therefore move that it be stricken out of this bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I think that the report ought to be read.

The report of the House Committee was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 159) for the erection of a public building at New London, Conn., submit the following report:

The erection of a public building at New London, Conn., for the uses of the post-office, custom-house, naval station, signal station, and United States steamboat inspection office for Connecticut and Rhode Island, was considered in the Fifteenth Congress. A bill for such a public building was favorably reported from the committees of the Senate and the House and passed in the Senate.

The harbor of New London, Conn., is one of the finest in the world, and is the most important port of refuge on the New England coast. The number of registered and enrolled vessels entered at the custom-house is 182, with a net tonnage of 51,073.60 tons. The customs receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, were $15,468.66, an increase of about $5,000 over the preceding year. The total value of imports of merchandise for year ending June 30, 1888, was $112,445. The population, according to the census of 1880, was 10,537, and the present population is estimated to be not less than 15,000.

Since 1880 new manufacturing enterprises, employing in the aggregate over 1,500 hands, have been established. Among the most important of these are two silk-mills, the product of one of which, in 1877, was $1,214,000; manufacturing of printing presses, gray iron castings, hot-water heaters, marine engines and boilers, electric machinery, and bushings.

There are eleven passenger trains daily between New London and New York during the summer season, and eight in the winter, and about the same number between New London and Boston.

The number of summer residents, not included in above estimate, is not less than twenty-five hundred, and is steadily increasing every year.

The present post-office is entirely inadequate in proper accommodation for the transaction of the postal business. The inside dimensions of the office are 34 by 32 feet, and the lobby for the use of the public is only 6 feet in width. The city has a free delivery, which is embarrassed by the limited post-office accommodations.

During the past year there were on file at one time with the postmaster three hundred applications for lock-boxes and one hundred for call-boxes that could not be filled. The office is the supply office for all points on the New London Northern Railroad as far north as Palmer, Mass., all points on the Shore Line east of New Haven, all points on the New York, Providence and Boston west of Providence. It also supplies Eastern Connecticut and the entire State of Rhode Island, excepting only the city of Providence, with registered mail. There are daily made up at the office ninety-six mails. The gross receipts of the office for the last fiscal year were $24,140.02, and the net receipts $13,889.50. The rent paid by the Government for the present post-office accommodations is $2,437.50.

It is reported from official sources that the space required for the present needs of the office is three times as great as can be had in the present quarters.

Your committee recommend that the bill be amended as follows: In line 13, strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the words "seventy-five"; in line 14, strike out the word "one" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy"; also, in line 15, strike out the word "hundred" and insert the word "five."

Your committee recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on the amendment presented by the gentleman from Iowa, to strike out the appropriation clause.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. RUSSELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the bill (H. R. 159) relating to the same subject will be considered as laid upon the table.

There was no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT HOBOKEN, N. J.

Mr. MCADOO. I ask to take from the Calendar and place upon its passage the bill (H. R. 571) extending the limit of cost for public building at Hoboken, N. J., to meet requirements of site.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the additional sum of $15,000 is hereby appropriated for the securing a proper foundation, building, and completing the post-office building at Hoboken, N. J., to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the requirements of an act for that purpose approved June 15, 1888. The limit of cost prescribed in said act is hereby extended as aforesaid, and no plan shall be approved which will involve an expenditure for site and building complete, including approaches, greater than the limit herein fixed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the report be read, though, Mr. Speaker.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 571) providing for the erection of a public building for the use of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Hoboken, N. J., submit the following report:

Hoboken, Hudson County, New Jersey, is situated on the west bank of the Hudson River, directly opposite the center of the city of New York. It has been an incorporated city for many years. In area it is about 2 miles long by about 1½ miles wide.

It has a population of about 50,000, 25 per cent. of which has been added within ten years. Four lines of transatlantic steamers have their American termini at Hoboken. They are well known European lines. It is a great coaling depot and the home place of one of the leading express companies. It has numerous great manufacturing industries, such as paper, silk, machines, iron, steel, lead pencils, scientific instruments, and very many others.

At the first session of the last Congress the sum of $60,000 was appropriated to buy a site and erect a post-office building at this place. After careful investigation an eligible site was selected. This site cost $30,000, leaving only $30,000 to pay for a building. The building contemplated, an exceedingly small and plain affair for a city of this size and importance, can not be built for that sum. The Supervising Architect of the Treasury has communicated with the committee on this subject, stating that the sum of $15,000 additional is necessary to construct this building.

The committee recommend that the bill do pass.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MCADOO moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SALE OF WESTERN PART OF CROW RESERVATION.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 526) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to procure and submit to Congress a proposal for the sale to the United States of the western part of the Crow Indian reservation, in Montana.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to proceed forthwith, by such agents or commissioners as he may appoint, not to exceed three in number, at a reasonable compensation to be fixed by him, to negotiate with the Crow tribe of Indians, in the State of Montana, for the purchase from them by the United States of all that portion of their reservation lying south of the Yellowstone River and west of the Clarke's Fork River, in said State, and to procure the most favorable proposition at which the said Crow Indians will sell the lands aforesaid to the United States, and to submit the same to Congress at the earliest practicable moment in the form of an agreement, subject to ratification by Congress.

Sec. 2. That such sum of money as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, not to exceed $5,000, is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and the same shall be disbursed upon the order of the Secretary of the Interior for the purposes aforesaid.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Has that bill been reported by a committee?

Mr. CARTER. It has been reported favorably.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky. Subject to the right to object, I would like to have the report read in explanation of the necessity for the bill.

Mr. HOLMAN. I would like to have the report read.

The report was read, as follows:

The Crow Indian reservation in Montana embraces an area of about 6,000,000 acres.

That upon this vast tract of land about 2,500 Indians are located, according to the best testimony we have been able to procure, including the statement of Colonel Howard, who has spent considerable time in surveying lands on the reservation and making allotments to the Indians in severalty. The tribe is located entirely east of the divide between the Clarke's Fork River and Pryor's Creek. These streams run nearly parallel from the south into the Yellowstone River. West of this divide the approximate area is about 670,000 acres. Within that area no lands have been allotted to Indians, nor are the Indians now settled upon or in the habit of camping upon or traveling over any portion of this ground.

That heretofore allotments have been made to the Crow Indians to the extent of 234,080 acres, and the acreage yet to be allotted will aggregate about 500,000 acres. All these allotments have been made east of the divide between Clarke's Fork River and Pryor's Creek, and east of that divide there will still remain over three and a half million acres of land after all allotments shall have been made to all the Indians in the tribe. It is therefore evident to your committee that the Indians have no use whatever for the unoccupied portion of the reservation lying west of the divide, between Pryor's Creek and Clarke's Fork.

That portion of the reservation thus unoccupied is composed of rich valley lands, well watered and suited for agriculture, together with certain mountainous portions, in which minerals have been discovered and developed to a considerable extent by prospectors. It is known that in the easterly part of said strip, along the banks of Clarke's Fork River, there are splendid deposits of bituminous coal, while on the westerly edge of the reservation the deposit of copper, gold, lead, and silver ores is known to be extensive. The Northern Pacific Railroad extends along and to some extent through this westerly portion of the reservation along the Yellowstone River, and prosperous settlements have grown up along the line of that road. The same is true as to the westerly end of the reservation, while on the south of this westerly portion of the reservation the mining camp of Cooke City has been developed to a very considerable extent and with great promise of future prosperity.

There is likewise developed just south of this strip, west of the divide aforesaid, the flourishing town of Red Lodge, containing a population of about 1,000 souls, and dependent upon the development of the vast coal deposit upon what is known as the Rocky Fork River, a stream running parallel to and west of Clarke's Fork.

It will thus be seen that on the north, the west, and the south, this unoccupied portion of the Crow reservation is surrounded by thrifty settlements of people devoted to the development of the resources of the contiguous country. This portion of the reservation constitutes a barrier, separating the people of the Yellowstone Valley from the settlements south of the reservation, and is, therefore, not only unproductive, but in its present condition, under the jurisdiction of the General Government and not subject to settlement, under the jurisdiction of the Crow reservation is a positive detriment to the people of Montana, while of no value whatever to the Crow Indian tribe.

Your committee therefore recommends that the bill providing for the opening of negotiations with the Crow Indians looking to the purchase of the westerly portion of the said reservation by the United States be passed, with an amendment fixing the summit of the divide between Pryor's Creek and Clarke's Fork River as the westerly limit to the Crow reservation, and that the Secretary of the Interior be authorized to appoint three commissioners instead of five; that the word "five" be stricken out of line 5 of said bill and "three" inserted in lieu thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. PEEL. I hope there will be no objection to its consideration, but I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. HOLMAN. Do I understand that this body of land proposed to be acquired is 675,000 acres?

Mr. CARTER. That is about the acreage.

Mr. HOLMAN. Along east of Cooke City.

Mr. CARTER. It is to the north and east of Cooke City.

Mr. HOLMAN. And it comprises about 675,000 acres.

Mr. CARTER. About 675,000 acres.

Mr. HOLMAN. And embraces, in the main, the better portion of the Crow reservation.

Mr. CARTER. That is the understanding. The mineral contained there is iron, and gold and silver as well, I believe.

Mr. HOLMAN. And this is the land through which the right of way has heretofore been granted to two railroad companies.

Mr. CARTER. I think the Rocky Fork Railway Company has heretofore secured the right of way through this portion of the reservation. That road is now being operated across the reservation.

Mr. HOLMAN. I wish to suggest an amendment, but I will not suggest it at this moment.

Mr. PEEL. Mr. Speaker, I discover from the reading of the bill that it provides for five commissioners. I desire to move to strike out "five" and substitute "three."

Mr. CARTER. The committee suggest that amendment.

The SPEAKER. The amendments reported by the committee will be read.

The amendments were read, as follows:

Amend by striking out, in line 5 the word "five" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "three;" also, in line 10, after the word "the," insert the following: "summit of the divide between Pryor's Creek and."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. CARTER] that there is no limit fixed in the bill to the amount of compensation that may be paid by the Secretary of the Interior to these commissioners, and I think the bill ought to be amended by fixing a limit, not to exceed $7 or $8 a day.

Mr. CARTER. There is no objection to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to amend by inserting, in line 6, after the word "him," the words "not to exceed $7 per day."

Mr. CARTER. I move to amend the amendment by adding the words "and necessary traveling expenses."

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Indiana accept the amendment?

Mr. HOLMAN. I shall not object to it, but I thought that perhaps $7 a day was enough to cover all.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CARTER moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE NUTTING.

Mr. PAYNE, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was considered, and adopted:

Resolved, That Saturday, April 5, beginning at 3 o'clock p. m., be set apart for paying tribute to the memory of Hon. Newton W. Nutting, late a member of the House of Representatives from the Twenty-seventh district of the State of New York.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour begins at 12 o'clock and 45 minutes, and the call rests with the Committee on Public Lands. The pending question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill (H. R. 7254) to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains to me?

The SPEAKER. Fifteen minutes.

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was up for consideration a few days ago I submitted some remarks in opposition to its passage. I stated that my objection was chiefly based upon the fact that there was pending in this House a bill for the reservation and preservation of public lands in the interest of forestry, and I insisted that this bill should rest with the committee until they had taken some action upon the bill upon that subject that I had had the honor to introduce.

That bill was prepared in the Department of Agriculture, under the more especial care of the chief of the division of forestry. So far the Committee on Public Lands has not indicated any time for the consideration of that bill. We have asked for the appointment of a subcommittee for its consideration. The chairman of the committee the other day stated very frankly, and I accepted the statement, that the Committee on Public Lands was not averse to legislation upon the subject of forestry. The American Forestry Association, whose principal offices are in the city of Philadelphia, has taken a good deal of interest in the bill that was introduced by me upon that subject, and which is now in the Committee on Public Lands.

I have not purposed at any time to prolong debate upon the pending bill, and I do not desire now to consume any considerable time, because the Committee on Public Lands has its rights and its privileges. I desire to submit as a part of my remarks a memorial which has been prepared in Philadelphia upon the question of forestry and which is reflected in the bill which I introduced upon that subject. Under the existing law one quarter-section in each section of the public lands may be taken up for cultivation and the culture of trees.

I regret to have to confess that the original bill, which I had the honor to have passed in the Forty-second Congress, was defective, and also that the amendments which have been made to it since then have not wholly removed the defects in the original bill. My objection to the passage of this bill has been largely that it turns back into the public domain, to be entered upon under the pre-emption and homestead laws, this large volume of land that was sacredly set apart for the encouragement of the cultivation of timber. But for the desire of men in Dakota, Kansas, and Nebraska who have been anxious to get hold of the largest possible amount of public land at the lowest possible expense, I believe that we should now see that treeless country studded with well grown or growing forests.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PAYSON], the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, stated the other day that those quarter-sections had fallen into the hands of "land-sharks," or speculators in public lands. Now, if it be true, Mr. Speaker, that all these lands are now thus held, this legislation only goes to the extent of confirming those lands in their possession. If any man of that character is now on a quarter-section of this land, faithlessly holding it against the public weal, this legislation will allow him to perfect his seizure of this much of the public land. It says to him that, although the quarter-section may be worth $10 an acre and although he has been holding it under mere color of law, he shall be allowed to perfect the wrong, the bad faith with which he entered upon that land, and obtain the land now for $1.25 an acre.

I respectfully insist, Mr. Speaker, that this bill ought to be recommended to the Committee on Public Lands with instructions to report it back in connection with pending bills on the subject of forestry. I do not claim that I have been recognized for the purpose of entering the motion to recommit.

My opposition to this measure has been a natural one. I took a great deal of interest in the question of tree-culture some years ago. My interest has not abated, and under the influence of the legislation of 1873 there are forestry associations now in almost every State of the Union, and the forestry department of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and many of the older States date their birth from the action in this House on the matter of tree-culture. The repeal of that law at the present time and under present circumstances will be hostile to the legislation which we desire upon this very important subject.

I ask that this memorial from the American Forestry Association may be printed as part of my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection.

The memorial is as follows:

Memorial of the American Forestry Association.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America: At the eighth annual meeting of this association, held in Philadelphia October 15 to 18, 1889, the following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That we respectfully petition the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States to pass an act withdrawing temporarily from sale all distinctively forest lands belonging to the Government of the United States, as recommended by the Secretaries of the Interior during the past three Administrations, and providing for their protection, and authorizing the employment of the Army, if necessary, for this purpose, until a commission, to be appointed by the President, shall have made such examination of the forests on the public domain as shall be necessary for determining what regions should be kept permanently in forest, and shall have presented a plan for a national forest administration.

"Resolved, That we also petition the Senate and House of Representatives to authorize the President of the United States to appoint a commission for the purpose of examining the forests on the public domain and reporting to Congress a plan for their permanent management, and that Congress make the necessary appropriations for such commission."

The reasons for our urgent petition for the passage of these measures is briefly this: that, in the opinion of all those who have investigated and considered the matter, these measures, or others equally radical, can alone secure the magnificent forests upon these lands from destruction by ax and flame within a comparatively short period.

What the result of such destruction would be may in some measure be realized by considering these forests from three points of view.

First. They are valuable parts of the property of the nation. Though far less extensive than formerly, they still cover from 50,000,000 to 70,000,000 acres. They are too valuable, merely as present property, to be neglected, left to the timber thief to carry off or the chance fire to burn down.

Second. They will be needed as an important source of timber supply for the Western States for all time to come. If the population of this country is to continue what it is now, to say nothing of its probable great increase, these forests must always be looked to to supply the people of a vast region with timber for buildings, railroads, mining, and many manufacturing industries. Any serious diminution of this supply, owing to deforestation on a large scale, would prove a serious check to the prosperity of the Western States.

Third. The greatest value of these forests to the present and future inhabitants of the Western States is in the assistance they render to agriculture through their influences on the water supply and the climate. The mere loss of national property, though measured by millions, can be endured; the absence of a timber supply at home can in a measure be made up for by purchases from more prudent foreigners and by the substitution of other materials in the place of wood products; but there is absolutely nothing, natural or artificial, that will take the place of the mountain forest as a regulator of rain-fall and water supply. Every inland region without forests is a region of long droughts, varied by destructive storms. Every mountain region without forests is a region whose streams, instead of watering the valleys below with a constant and adequate flow, alternately dwindle into insignificance and swell into raging torrents, not only flooding the country, but covering it with rocks and sand from the mountain sides. Great as is the damage caused by the loss of mountain forests to a region naturally well watered, it would render agriculture impossible in that extensive district which has so recently begun to be rendered fertile by the use of irrigation. No system of reservoirs, even the most costly and ingenious, can take the place of the forests on any large scale. The most that it can do is to co-operate with them.

It is respectfully suggested that the true value and use of these mountain forests has never been properly considered by this Government. It has apparently never realized that mountain forest land differs from all other land in this important respect, that its condition can not substantially be changed without disastrous results; that it must, for the sake of the properly agricultural land, always remain in forest. On the contrary, it has been sold and given away like other land without any restrictions whatever upon its use in private hands, although the experience of every nation shows that the National Government alone has the power and the means for the best forest management, and that its power must be exerted even over private forest property in order to prevent disaster to the community from the action of individuals.

Timber cutting has been permitted on the lands yet unsold, but under impractical restrictions as to use, without any regard to proper methods, and with no compensation to the Government. The necessity of timber as an article of merchandise and the impossibility of obtaining it legally from the public lands for that purpose have inevitably led to enormous thefts of timber and fraudulent acquisition by a few individuals and corporations of large tracts of land to which actual settlers only were legally entitled. While millions upon millions of dollars' worth of timber have been stolen, both for home and export trade, the pitiful sum recovered barely covers the cost of prosecution. Lastly, the utter absence of protection from fire has led to the destruction of enormous tracts which will very slowly, if ever, be covered again by a forest growth of any value.

The time has come when a change in these methods is absolutely necessary, and it is urgently called for by thousands of people whose future depends on a regular water supply.

While the immediate withdrawal of the public forest lands from sale and entry is absolutely essential as a first step to their preservation as forests, it will not of itself secure this end. The destructive fires and extensive thefts will go on as before. Still less will the mere reservation of the land enable the timber to be properly utilized. These lands must be administered—protected from fire, and the timber cut only when ripe and with a view to a constant new growth. Temporarily some portion of the Army can be employed to guard these lands until a practical system of administration, a common-sense application of scientific knowledge and the experience of other progressive nations to the needs of the place and the time, can be successfully inaugurated. The organization of such an administration can best and soonest be effected by a commission of competent men appointed for the purpose.

That the evils above referred to are not imaginary, but real, present, and constantly increasing, the memorials from the Pacific Slope and the investigation of the Senate Committee on Irrigation abundantly prove. It is impossible to overestimate the importance of right action and prompt action in this matter, and that the Congress of the United States will permanently close its ears to the ever louder and louder cry of the people for forest preservation this association refuses to believe. With all hope, as well as earnestness, it prays your honorable body to enact such laws as the practical needs of the hour and a wise foresight of the future may dictate.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES A. BEAVER,

President of the Association,

WILLIAM ALVORD, of California,

ABBOT KINNEY, of California,

EDGAR T. ENSIGN, of Colorado,

JAMES E. HOBBS, of Maine,

J. STERLING MORTON, of Nebraska,

WARREN HIGLEY, of New York,

CHARLES C. BINNEY, of Pennsylvania,

HERBERT WELSH, of Pennsylvania,

Committee.

PHILADELPHIA, January, 1890.

Mr. PAYSON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON.]

Mr. WILSON, of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say but a single word in support of the pending bill. I have had some considerable experience in reference to the operation of the timber-culture act; and in my judgment it is, in the portion of the country I have the honor to represent, a most colossal failure. In the Spokane Falls land district there had been up to June 30, 1888, two thousand eight hundred timber-culture entries and twenty-six final proofs; and but three of those final proofs have been passed to patent.

In my judgment, the act in question, instead of being regarded as an act for encouraging the growth of timber upon the plains of the West, ought more properly to be called "An act to encourage contests and litigations of every kind and character to harass, worry, and bedevil the men who are building signal stations of civilization upon the plains of the great West." You can ride for three days in the great agricultural basin of Eastern Washington and not see a single timber-culture entry of any value whatever. Men have expended large sums of money—in single instances $200, $300, $500, or $1,000—in efforts to secure the growth of timber, those efforts being frustrated by reason of climatic conditions.

In my judgment, the bill now pending should be passed, and men who have expended their time, their labor, and their scanty means in the endeavor to encourage the growth of timber should now be allowed an opportunity to acquire title to the lands on which such expenditures have been made.

As part of my remarks, I desire that a memorial adopted by the Legislature of the State of Washington be read from the Clerk's desk. I hope that the pending measure, which is just to the people whom I have the honor to represent, will pass.

The Clerk read as follows:

House memorial.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled: Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Washington, would respectfully represent—

That there are many settlers in the eastern part of the State of Washington who have made entry of Government lands under the provisions of an act of Congress entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to encourage the growth of timber on the Western prairies,'" approved June 14, 1878, and the acts of which said act is amendatory; that in many localities in Eastern Washington the summer months are very dry and hot; that the rainfall is insufficient to supply the necessary moisture for the growth of trees; that the country is so broken and rolling that it is impossible to irrigate the land in any way; that on account of the extreme heat and dryness of the summers the trees planted on such timber-culture claims have failed to grow; that in many cases where the trees have withstood the drought of summer they have succumbed to the frosts and cold weather of the winters; that many settlers have expended from $500 to $1,000 in the attempt to make timber grow on their timber-culture claims, and they are now no nearer securing title to their claims than they were five or six years ago; that many settlers have made valuable improvements on their timber-culture claims, and that on account of the failure of their trees to grow on such claims they are frequently subjected to tedious and expensive contests on account of alleged failure to comply with the provisions of the timber-culture law; that the money and labor expended in the attempt to comply with the timber-culture law has been absolutely lost to the settler on land under the timber-culture law in a great majority of the cases where entries have been made thereunder; that but little of the prairie land of Eastern Washington is adapted to the growth of timber; that the varieties of timber that can be grown on the land in that portion of this State are such as have but little value for domestic or manufacturing purposes. Therefore your memorialists pray that such laws be enacted by the Congress of the United States as will provide for the settler on lands under the provisions of the timber-culture law to acquire title to his land by paying to the United States the sum of $1.25 per acre for the land included in their entries under this law, and upon proof that they have complied with the provisions of law as to breaking the land and planting and cultivating trees thereon from the time of making entry thereof up to the time of offering to make final payment therefor, as prayed for in this memorial. And your memorialists will ever pray.

Passed the House January 22, 1890.

J. W. FEIGHAN, Speaker.

Passed the Senate January 31, 1890.

CHAS. E. LAUGHTON, President.

Mr. PAYSON. Mr. Speaker, as no member of the House seems desirous to continue this debate—

Mr. DUNNELL. I would like to call the attention of the House—

Mr. PAYSON. How much time does the gentleman desire? The hour is passing pretty rapidly. I will yield the gentleman two minutes.

Mr. DUNNELL. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to call the attention of the House to the argument of the memorial just read. It is a plea on the part of the men who have made these entries to come in and buy up these lands at $1.25 an acre. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. WILSON] concedes and the memorial concedes just what I have said.

Mr. PAYSON. If the statement made in that memorial is true, that owing to climatic conditions it is impossible to comply with the provisions of the timber-culture law, what objection can the gentleman from Minnesota urge against allowing citizens to buy that land at $1.25 an acre?

Mr. DUNNELL. I am not willing to accept the statement as true. Washington is notorious as a forest State. The climatic plea is not a good one. Trees may be grown, too, in South Dakota and North Dakota, if properly planted and cultivated. I am sorry that a Representative from the Dakotas should admit here on the floor of this House that henceforth and forever those States are to remain treeless. It is the hardest argument that a Representative can make against the State he represents. When you admit that the Dakotas are henceforth to be treeless you take from them the honor they have to-day and the great prospect which is held out as within their grasp. I am unwilling to admit that those States are to be treeless henceforth and forever. If their Representatives are willing to admit it I will not.

Mr. PAYSON. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER] such time, not exceeding five minutes, as he may require.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota seems to be jealous of his bill before the Committee on Forestry. That seems to be the burden of his song.

Mr. DUNNELL. Oh, no.

Mr. PICKLER. Why, you talk more about that than anything else.

Now, the fact is that it is altogether possible the Legislature of the State of Washington knows about as much of what they want out there as the gentleman from Minnesota does. The Representatives from the two Dakotas, from Washington, and Montana have not claimed and do not claim that trees will not grow in their States. But what they do claim, and the gentleman from Minnesota knows it, if he knows anything about the matter at all, is that under the timber-culture act, with a man's land 5, 10, or 30 miles, as is the case in some instances, away from where he lives, it makes it difficult if not impossible for him to attend to the tree-culture.

Looking after the matter of cultivating his lands, he can not and does not and never will, under this law, raise timber. Now, that is the practical statement of this whole question; and why the gentleman should object, why there should be any objection from any quarter where this timber-culture law, that has been discussed here universally and as to which there have been efforts made year after year to repeal, and as has been recommended by Commissioner after Commissioner of the Land Department to be repealed—why now the objection should come to its repeal on the part of the gentleman from Minnesota, whose State it does not concern in the least, is a matter beyond my comprehension.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that in behalf of the settlers of the West and of the Northwest this bill will come to a vote and will pass. Our people very earnestly desire it, and, I submit, in a few years, by planting trees around their houses and barns where they live, we will have a good growth of timber in that region.

Mr. PAYSON. I now move the previous question upon the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The previous question was ordered; under the operation of which the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PAYSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

FEES OF REGISTERS AND RECEIVERS.

Mr. PAYSON. I now yield to the gentleman from Iowa to present a bill.

Mr. LACEY. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 935) to amend section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to fees of registers and receivers.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph 12 of section 2238 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the word "Washington."

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say by way of explanation simply that in certain of the States and Territories the rates of fees of registers and receivers are 50 per cent. higher than in other parts of the United States. This becomes necessary by reason of the large expense of some of the offices, as well as because of the small amount of business done in them. Neither of these reasons any longer exists in the State of Washington, but on the contrary the fees in each of the offices there are largely in excess of the amount required for their ordinary expenses. This bill has been presented by the gentleman from Washington because of the unnecessary cost that is entailed upon the homesteaders and pre-emptors in that State.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LACEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MARY ALICE WHITE OGDEN.

Mr. PAYSON. I now ask consideration of the bill (H. R. 6034) for the relief of Mary Alice White Ogden.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas Mary Alice White having made a settlement as a pre-emptor on the northeast quarter of section 2, in township 2 south, of range 16 east, in the district of lands subject to sale at The Dalles, in the State of Oregon, and acting upon the advice of the local officers that her marriage before final proof, payment, and entry would not affect or invalidate her right to make such final proof, payment, and entry, became the wife of ——— Ogden prior to such final proof, payment, and entry; and

Whereas the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior have decided that by such marriage the said pre-emption settler placed herself under legal disability to make such final proof, payment, and entry; Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the said Mary Alice White Ogden be, and she is hereby, relieved from any disability to make final proof, payment, and entry for said northeast quarter of section 2, in township 2 south, of range 16 east, The Dalles land district, Oregon, growing out of or ensuing from her said marriage; and that if the said Commissioner of the General Land Office and the said Secretary of the Interior shall find the final proofs submitted as to said land by her to be otherwise satisfactory, the entry shall be approved and the patent of the United States issued to the said Mary Alice White Ogden therefor, notwithstanding her marriage aforesaid.

The committee recommended the adoption of the following amendments:

Strike out the preamble, and also substitute the word "the" for the word "said" in line 5 of the bill.

Mr. McMILLIN. This bill is improperly on this Calendar, Mr. Speaker. It seems, however, to be a meritorious claim, and I shall not make the point if the report accompanying it sustains the allegations of the bill.

Mr. PAYSON. There is no question as to the fact. It involves only the right to perfect an entry.

Mr. McMILLIN. Nevertheless it is not cognizable in this hour.

Mr. HERMANN. The Department reports it favorably.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read.

The report (by Mr. DE HAVEN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6034) for the relief of Mary Alice White Ogden, have considered the same and report as follows:

The legislation herein proposed received consideration by this committee at the last session of Congress and was favorably reported. The reasons for the passage of this bill were thus stated by the committee in House Report No. 3373, Fifty-third Congress, first session, and we adopt the same as part of this report:

"We find that Mary Alice White, a single woman and qualified pre-emptor, made settlement on the land described, filed her declaratory statement, made residence on, improved, and cultivated the land during the full period required by law, making the land her exclusive and bona fide home. That being about to marry, she consulted the local land officers as to whether it would affect her pre-emption claim, and they informed her that, having complied with the law by her residence and improvement for the period prescribed by the law, her marriage would not affect her right.

"She thereupon married ——— Ogden, and shortly after appeared before the same United States officials and then made her final proof and payment for the land, after the usual published notice, and received her certificate. The Interior Department suspends her entry on the ground that under the pre-emption law a married woman is not a qualified pre-emptor, and that she, having married before making her final proof, became disqualified to acquire title under the law. In view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, of the equities so apparent, of the assurances relied on, and the continuous good faith of the settler, we recommend the passage of the bill and confirmation of title to her."

We recommend that the bill be amended by striking therefrom the preamble, and also by substituting the word "the" for the word "said" in line 5, page 2, of printed bill, and, as so amended, that it be passed.

Mr. McMILLIN. I shall not make the point of order against the bill.

The amendments recommended by the committee were adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PAYSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LANDS TO KANSAS.

Mr. PAYSON. I now yield the remainder of the time to my colleague, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TURNER].

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas. I ask immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 3760) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey to the State of Kansas certain lands therein.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. This bill is not on the House Calendar and is not in order in this hour.

Mr. TURNER, of Kansas. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not recognize the gentleman for that purpose at this time.

Mr. PAYSON. That, Mr. Speaker, is all the business we have to present from our committee at this time.

PITTSBURGH, COLUMBUS AND FORT SMITH RAILWAY COMPANY.

The Committee on Indian Affairs was called.

Mr. PERKINS. I am instructed by the Committee on Indian Affairs to ask consideration of the bill (H. R. 344) to grant the right of way to the Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company, a corporation created under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Kansas, be, and the same is hereby, invested and empowered with the right of locating, constructing, owning, equipping, operating, using, and maintaining a railway, telegraph, and telephone line through the Indian Territory, beginning at a point at or near the southwest corner of lot No. 4 of section No. 14, township No. 35, range 23 east, on the south line of the State of Kansas, in the county of Cherokee, and running thence by the most practicable route through the Indian Territory, by way of a point at or near Afton and Table-qual, to a point on the Arkansas River near Fort Smith, Ark., with the right to construct, use, and maintain such tracks, turn-outs, sidings, and extensions as said company may deem to their interest to construct along and upon the right of way and depot grounds herein provided for.

Sec. 2. That said corporation is authorized to take and use, for all purposes of a railway and for no other purposes, a right of way 150 feet in width through said Indian Territory, and to take and use a strip of land 250 feet in width, with a length of 3,000 feet in addition to right of way, for stations, for every 10 miles of road, with the right to use additional ground where there are heavy cuts or fills as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of the road-bed, not exceeding 100 feet in width on each side of said right of way, or as much thereof as may be included in said cut or fill: Provided, That no more than said addition of land shall be taken for any one station: And provided further, That no parts of the lands herein authorized to be taken shall be leased or sold by the company, and they shall not be used except in such manner and for such purpose only as shall be necessary for the construction and convenient operation of said railway, telegraph, and telephone line, and when any portion thereof shall cease to be used, such portion shall revert to said nation, or tribe of Indians from which the same shall have been taken.

Sec. 3. That before said railway shall be constructed through any lands held by individual occupants according to the laws, customs, and usages of any of the Indian nations or tribes through which it may be constructed, full compensation shall be made to such occupants for all property to be taken or damage done by reason of the construction of such railway. In case of failure to make amicable settlement with any occupant, such compensation shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested referees, to be appointed, one (who shall act as chairman) by the President of the United States, one by the chief of the nation to which said occupant belongs, and one by said railway company, who, before entering upon the duties of their appointments, shall take and subscribe, before a district judge, clerk of a district court, or United States commissioner, an oath that they will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of their appointments, which oath, duly certified, shall be returned with their award to and filed with the Secretary of the Interior within sixty days from the completion thereof, and a majority of said referees shall be competent to act in the case of the absence of a member, after due notice. And upon the failure of either party to make such appointment within thirty days after the appointment made by the President, the vacancy shall be filled by the district judge of the court for the western district of Arkansas or the district court of Kansas, upon the application of the other party. The chairman of said board shall appoint the time and place for all hearings within the nation to which said occupants belong. Each of said referees shall receive for his services the sum of $4 per day for each day they are engaged in the trial of any case submitted to them under this act, with mileage at 5 cents per mile. Witnesses shall receive the usual fees allowed by the courts of said nation. Costs, including compensation of the referees, shall be made a part of the award and be paid by said railway company. In case the referees can not agree, then any two of them are authorized to make the award. Either party being dissatisfied with the finding of the reference shall have the right, within ninety days after making of the award and notice of the same, to appeal by the original petition to the district court of the western district of Arkansas or the district court of Kansas, which court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the subject-matter of said petition according to the laws of the State in which the same shall be heard provided for determining the damage when property is taken for railroad purposes. If upon the hearing of said appeal the judgment of the court shall be for a larger sum than the award of the referees, the cost of said appeal shall be adjudged against the railway company. If the judgment of the court shall be for the same sum as the award of the referees, then the cost shall be adjudged against the appellant. When proceedings have been commenced in court the railway company shall pay double the amount of the award into court to abide the judgment thereof, and then have the right to enter upon the property sought to be condemned and proceed with construction of the railroad.

SEC. 4. That said railway company shall not charge the inhabitants of said Territory a greater rate of freight than the rates authorized by the laws of the State of Kansas for services or transportation of the same kind: Provided, That passenger rates on said railway shall not exceed 3 cents per mile. Congress hereby reserves the right to regulate the charges for freight and passengers on said railway and messages on said telegraph and telephone lines until a State government shall be authorized to fix and regulate the cost of transportation of persons and freight within its respective limits by said railway; but Congress expressly reserves the right to fix and regulate at all times the cost of such transportation by said railway or said company whenever such transportation shall extend from one State into another or shall extend into more than one State: Provided, however, That the rates of such transportation of passengers, local or interstate, shall not exceed the rates above expressed: And provided further, That said railway company shall carry the mail at such prices as Congress may by law provide, and until such rate is fixed by law the Postmaster-General may fix the rate of compensation.

SEC. 5. That said railway company shall pay to the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the particular nations or tribes through whose lands said line may be located, the sum of $50 in addition to compensation provided for in this act, for property taken and damages done to individual occupants by the construction of the railway for each mile of railway that it may construct in said Territory, said payment to be made in installments of $1,250 as each working section of 25 miles of road is graded: Provided, That if the general council of either of the nations or tribes through whose land said railroad may be located shall, within four months after the filing of the maps of definite location, as set forth in section 6 of this act, dissent from the allowances provided for in this section, and shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior, then all compensation to be paid to such dissenting nation or tribe under the provisions of this act shall be determined as provided in section 3 for the determination of the compensation to be paid to the individual occupants of lands, with the right of appeal to the courts upon the same conditions, terms, and requirements as therein provided: Provided further, That the amount awarded or adjudged to be paid by said railway company for said dissenting nation or tribe shall be in lieu of the compensation that said nation or tribe would be entitled to receive under the foregoing provision. Said company shall also pay, so long as said Territory is owned or occupied by the Indians, to the Secretary of the Interior the sum of $15 per annum for each mile of railway it shall construct in the said Territory. The money paid to the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of this act shall be apportioned by him in accordance with the laws and treaties now in force among the different nations and tribes according to the number of miles of railway that may be constructed by said railway company through their lands: Provided, That Congress shall have the right, as long as said lands are occupied and possessed by said nation or tribe, to impose such additional taxes upon said railway as it may deem just and proper for their benefit; and any Territory or State hereafter formed through which said railway shall have been established may exercise the like power as to such part of said railway as may be within its limits. Said railway company shall have the right to survey and locate its railway immediately after the passage of this act.

SEC. 6. That said company shall cause maps showing the route of its located line through said Territory to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, and also to be filed in the office of the principal chief of each of the nations or tribes through whose lands said railway may be located, and after filing said maps no claim for a subsequent settlement and improvement upon the right of way shown by said maps shall be valid as against said company: Provided, That when a map showing any portion of said railway company's located line is filed as herein provided for, said company shall commence grading said located line within one year thereafter, or said location shall be void; and said location shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in sections of 25 miles, before construction of any such section shall be begun.

SEC. 7. That the officers, servants, and employees of said company, necessary to the construction and management of said road, shall be allowed to reside, while so engaged, upon said right of way, but subject to the provisions of the Indian Intercourse laws, and such rules and regulations as may be established by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with said intercourse laws.

SEC. 8. That the United States circuit and district courts for the western district of Arkansas and the district of Kansas, and such other courts as may be authorized by Congress, shall have, without reference to the amount in controversy, concurrent jurisdiction over all controversies arising between said Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company and the nations or tribes through whose territory said railway company shall construct their lines; said courts shall have like jurisdiction, without reference to the amount in controversy, over all controversies arising between the inhabitants of said nation or tribe and said railway company, and the civil jurisdiction of said courts is hereby extended within the limits of said Indian Territory without distinction as to citizenship of the parties, so far as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 9. That the said railway shall build at least 100 miles of its railway in said Territory within three years after the passage of this act and complete main line of the same within one year thereafter, or the rights herein granted shall be forfeited as to that portion not built. That said railway company shall construct and maintain continually all fences, roads, and highways crossings, and necessary bridges over said railway whenever said roads and highways do now or may hereafter cross said railway's right of way or may be by the proper authorities laid out across the same.

SEC. 10. That the said Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company shall accept this right of way upon the express condition, binding upon itself, its successors, and assigns, that they will neither aid, advise, nor assist in any effort looking towards the changing or extinguishing the present tenure of the Indians in their lands, and will not attempt to secure from the Indian nations any further grant of land or its occupancy than is hereinbefore provided: Provided, That any violation of the conditions mentioned in this section shall operate as a forfeiture of all the rights and privileges of said railway company under this act.

SEC. 11. That all mortgages executed by said railway company conveying any portion of its railway, with the franchises, that may be constructed in said Indian Territory shall be recorded in the Department of the Interior, and the record thereof shall be evidence and notice of their execution, and shall convey all rights and property of said company as therein expressed.

SEC. 12. That Congress may at any time amend, alter, or repeal this act, and the right of way herein and hereby granted shall not be assigned or transferred in any form whatever prior to the construction and completion of the road, except as to mortgage or other liens that may be given or secured thereon to aid in the construction thereof.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments, namely:

In line 39, section 3, before the word "district," insert "United States." Strike out, in lines 40 and 41 of section 3, the words "of the western district of Arkansas, or the district court of Kansas" and insert "at Muscogee, Indian Territory."

Strike out, in lines 43 and 44, same section, the words "in which the same shall be heard" and insert "of Kansas." Also, strike out all after the word "purposes," in the forty-sixth line, down to and including the word "appellant," in line 51.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman who introduced this bill whether that additional right of way through the Indian Territory is over and above the two roads which were agreed upon between the Indians and the Government north and south of east and west.

Mr. PERKINS. It is no grant of land, but it is an entirely new line.

Mr. HOOKER. It is a new grant of right of way. I ask whether this is to be done with the consent and approbation of the Indians through whose territory it runs.

Mr. PERKINS. There is no provision of the bill which requires or provides either that the consent or assent of the Indians shall be secured. The bill has the usual provisions and conforms with the bills we have heretofore passed granting to railroad companies rights of way through the Indian Territory. It provides for condemnation procedure, for the appointment of a commissioner, appraisement, damages, appeals, etc., substantially the same as is done in the States.

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. HOOKER. Does this bill carry any appropriation?

Mr. PERKINS. It carries no appropriation whatever.

Mr. CHEADLE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. I do not see my colleague [Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas] present. I presume he would desire to offer an amendment striking out the word "owning" in the seventh line of the first section. Anticipating what he would do, I move to strike that word out.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHEADLE. I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by striking out, in line 3 of section 2, the words "and fifty," reducing the right of way from 150 to 100 feet.

Mr. CHEADLE. It does seem to me that in a grant through that valuable Territory a right of way of 100 feet wide is sufficient for the construction of a railway; and for that reason I have offered this amendment.

Mr. HOOKER. In addition to the reasons suggested by the gentleman from Indiana for diminishing the amount of land granted for the construction of this railroad, I would call his attention to the further fact that it provides in the second section that the—corporation is authorized to take and use, for all purposes of a railway and for no other purposes, a right of way 150 feet in width through said Indian Territory, and to take and use a strip of land 250 feet in width, with a length of 3,000 feet, in addition to right of way, for stations for every ten miles of the road, with the right to use additional ground where there are heavy cuts or fills, as may be necessary for the construction and maintenance of the road-bed, not exceeding 100 feet in width on each side of said right of way, or as much thereof as may be included in said cut or fill.

There is no necessity for granting these roads any more than necessary for the purposes of the road, and I shall move as an amendment to that section that it shall only be with the consent of the Indian tribes through whose territory it passes.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHEADLE. I desire to offer an amendment, striking out the word "two" in line 4 and inserting the word "one." This proposition is for 250 feet additional width for the stations. It does seem to me that is entirely too much. I think 150 feet width in every ten miles of the right of way would be sufficient for the stations.

Mr. PERKINS. In answer to that suggestion, I would state that the bill that was before the House for consideration a few days since granted to the company a right of way of 300 feet each ten miles for depot purposes. So it has been with every bill granting rights of way through the Indian Territory. They provide that each ten miles they shall have, in addition to the right of way, a strip of country not exceeding 300 feet in width and 3,000 feet in length for depot, station, and other purposes. In this bill they are restricted to 250 feet in width, which is less than we have granted to other companies; and I think upon reflection the gentleman from Indiana will see that his amendment ought not to prevail.

The Clerk read the amendment of Mr. CHEADLE, as follows:

In line 4, section 2, strike out the word "two" and insert "one."

The question was put; and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. CHEADLE. Division.

Mr. H. it will be The a Mr. H. The F Mr. C. The bers were Mr. P. The n The n their na

Allen, Mr. Andrew, Atkinson, Baker, Bankhead, Banks, Barnes, Bartine, Beckwith, Belknap, Bergen, Biggs, Bingham, Blanchard, Bland, Blount, Boatner, Boothman, Bowden, Brewer, Brickner, Broslus, Brower, Brown, Browne, Browne, Buchanan, Buckalew, Bunn, Burrows, Bynum, Caldwell, Campbell, Candier, Candier

The and we Mr. BANKS ginia, Mr. D. MAN, I of Iowa MARTIN Alabama

Mr. glad if present The can be present Mr. dispen

The The tleman The ing— Mr. I send The

Add or tribe

Mr. the a five s there and s roads dersta propo it see dians, Terr to any simila which doma The kind

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment was not heard here, and I hope it will be reported again.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is right.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 32, noes 33.

Mr. CHEADLE. I make the point of no quorum.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask for tellers, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER counted the House, and announced that 139 members were present—not a quorum.

Mr. PERKINS. I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The roll was called, and the following members failed to answer to their names:

Allen, Miss.	Carter,	Grimes,	Post,
Andrew,	Catchings,	Hall,	Randall, Pa.
Atkinson, W. Va.	Cheatham,	Hansbrough,	Ray,
Baker,	Clements,	Harmer,	Reilly,
Bankhead,	Clunie,	Hayes,	Reyburn,
Banks,	Comstock,	Henderson, Ill.	Richardson,
Barnes,	Conger,	Henderson, Iowa	Sanford,
Bartine,	Connell,	Henderson, N. C.	Skinner,
Beckwith,	Cooper, Ohio	Hopkins,	Smith, Ill.
Belknap,	Cottrill,	Kelley,	Stephenson,
Bergen,	Covert,	Kerr, Pa.	Stump,
Biggs,	Cowles,	Lansing,	Taylor, Tenn.
Bingham,	Crain,	Lawler,	Taylor, J. D.
Blanchard,	Culbertson, Pa.	Lehlbach,	Thomas,
Bland,	Cutcheon,	Lewis,	Thompson,
Blount,	Dalzell,	Magner,	Townsend, Pa.
Boatner,	Dargan,	Mason,	Tucker,
Boothman,	Davidson,	McCarthy,	Turpin,
Bowden,	De Haven,	McClammy,	Washington,
Brewer,	De Lano,	McCord,	Wheeler, Ala.
Brickner,	Dibble,	McCormick,	Wheeler, Mich.
Brosius,	Dingley,	McKenna,	Whiting,
Brower,	Dolliver,	McKinley,	Whitthorne,
Brown, J. B.	Dorsey,	Milliken,	Wickham,
Browne, T. M.	Dunphy,	Mudd,	Wike,
Browne, Va.	Enloe,	Niedringhaus,	Wilber,
Buchanan, Va.	Ewart,	Oates,	Wilson, Ky.
Buckalew,	Finley,	O'Neill, Pa.	Wilson, Mo.
Bunn,	Fitch,	Owen, Ind.	Wise,
Burrows,	Flood,	Paynter,	Wright,
Bynum,	Forman,	Payson,	Yoder,
Caldwell,	Gibson,	Phelan,
Campbell,	Gifford,	Pickler,
Candler, Ga.	Goodnight,
Candler, Mass.

The following named members appeared after their names were called and were noted by the Clerk, under the rule, as present:

Mr. ANDREW, Mr. ATKINSON of West Virginia, Mr. BAKER, Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. BOOTHMAN, Mr. BRICKNER, Mr. BUCHANAN of Virginia, Mr. BYNUM, Mr. COMSTOCK, Mr. COOPER of Ohio, Mr. CRAIN, Mr. DIBBLE, Mr. DORSEY, Mr. ENLOE, Mr. FARQUHAR, Mr. FORMAN, Mr. GROUT, Mr. HANSBROUGH, Mr. HEARD, Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa, Mr. KERR of Pennsylvania, Mr. LAWLER, Mr. LIND, Mr. MARTIN of Indiana, Mr. PICKLER, Mr. TUCKER, Mr. WHEELER of Alabama.

Mr. COOPER, of Ohio (after the roll-call). Mr. Speaker, I would be glad if the records could show in some proper way that I have been present during this roll-call.

The SPEAKER. The rules prescribe the method. The gentleman can leave his name with the Clerk. The Clerk reports 192 members present.

Mr. PERKINS. I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana.

The question being taken, the amendment was agreed to; there being—ayes 90, noes 83.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Add to section 2 the following: "Provided, That the consent of the Indian tribe or tribes through which the railroads shall pass shall first be had and obtained."

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a word in relation to the amendment. As I have always understood, the treaties with the five semi-civilized tribes provide, especially the treaty of 1866, that there shall be two railways run through that Territory, one north and south and the other east and west, and that those are the only roads that are provided for by the treaties with those tribes. As I understand the gentleman in charge of this bill [Mr. PERKINS], the proposition now is to run another railway through this Territory, and it seems to me that inasmuch as it required the consent of the Indians, by treaty or agreement, to run the original roads through the Territory, the same principle ought to apply to giving the right of way to any other railway. This bill proposes a system of condemnation similar to that which we would exercise with regard to territory over which the Government of the United States had the right of eminent domain.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] kindly suspend? This matter must go over to another day.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. CALDWELL, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. THOMPSON, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee, until April 13, on account of important business.

To Mr. O'NEALL, of Indiana, until April 13, on account of important business.

To Mr. TUCKER, for the 24th and 25th of March, on account of important business.

PETITION OF CITIZENS OF THE CHICKASAW NATION.

Mr. MANSUR, by unanimous consent, presented the following petition; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

The petition of citizens of the Chickasaw Nation, being white men who have intermarried with native Chickasaw women, would respectfully present that by the unbroken custom and usage (until as hereinafter set forth) of the Chickasaw Nation, by their constitution and laws, and by the treaties between the said Chickasaw Nation and the United States of America, and by the laws of the United States applicable to said Chickasaw Nation, white men who have intermarried with native Chickasaw women have been recognized, treated, and held by said Chickasaw Nation, as well as by the United States, as incorporated into said nation as members and citizens thereof, and that as such members and citizens of said nation they have, until the acts hereinafter complained of, enjoyed the right and privilege of voting in all national elections, and of holding office in said nation, and have been held amenable like other citizens to their laws; that their relations with native Chickasaws were in all respects peaceable, friendly, and harmonious, and so continued until the 13th day of November, A. D. 1888, and again on the 6th day of April, 1889, the Legislature of the Chickasaw Nation passed the following proposed amendment to the constitution of the Chickasaw Nation, to wit:

"Be it resolved by both branches of the Legislature of the Chickasaw Nation, That the seventh section of the general provisions of the constitution of the Chickasaw Nation be amended so as to read, 'That every person who having married a Chickasaw Indian, or who has been adopted by the legislative authorities of said nation, shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities guaranteed to them only by the thirty-eighth article of the treaty of 1866, with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians.'"

This resolution was passed first, as stated, on the 13th day of November, 1888, and next on the 6th day of April, 1889, and was then declared to be part of the organic law, the object and intent of said amendment being to deprive the citizens of said nation by adoption or marriage of the elective franchise or of any participation of the making, execution, or enforcement of the laws by which they were to be governed, specifically guaranteed by said article 7, general provisions, proposed to be amended.

This amendment was subsequently adjudged by a majority of the members of the supreme court a valid amendment; the chief-justice, Hon. Samuel Love, the only member of the court who could speak the English, dissenting. Your petitioners declare said amendment null and void, and the decision of the court thereon a nullity, for the following among other reasons:

First, said amendment divests rights vested by the said article 7 of the constitution, which provides that "all persons, other than Chickasaws, who have become citizens of this nation, by marriage or adoption, and have been confirmed in all their rights as such by former conventions, and all such persons as aforesaid who have become citizens by adoption by the Legislature or by intermarriage with the Chickasaws since the adoption of the constitution of August 18, A. D. 1856, shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of native citizens. All who may hereafter become citizens, either by marriage or adoption, shall be entitled to all the privileges of native-born citizens, without being eligible to the office of governor," which above article is proposed to be amended; and in that it is violative of the fourteenth section of article 1 of the same constitution, which declares that "the Legislature shall pass no retrospective law or any law impairing the obligation of contracts."

Second, It violates section 11 of the same constitution, which declares that "whenever two-thirds of both branches of the Legislature deem it necessary, they may propose amendments to this constitution; and if two-thirds of both branches of the succeeding Legislature approve such amendments, they shall be engrated to, and form part of, this constitution." Your petitioners aver the fact to be, and the records of the Legislature so disclose, that the Legislature which passed the proposed amendment on the 13th day of November, A. D. 1888, was called to hold a special session, and the same Legislature which passed the act approved it as an amendment on the 6th day of April, A. D. 1889. It was, therefore, not a succeeding, but the same Legislature which passed the proposed amendment that approved it, in palpable violation of both the spirit and letter of section 11 of General Provisions.

Third, The action of the court was coram non jure, for no case was presented to that tribunal in such manner as by the constitution and laws of the Chickasaw Nation gave that court jurisdiction.

Fourth, The aggrieved parties were not allowed a hearing, nor were they in such manner before the court as that their rights could be passed upon by that tribunal.

Fifth, Said decision was in violation of the twenty-sixth and thirty-eighth articles of the treaty of April 23, A. D. 1866, between the United States and Choctaw and Chickasaw nations of Indians; and in direct violation of section 2079 Revised Statutes of the United States, which declares, among other things, that "no treaties with such [Indian] nations made prior to March 3, A. D. 1871, shall be hereby invalidated or impaired."

Sixth, Said act of the Legislature sweeps away rights which have existed since white men first began to marry with native Chickasaw women, and, whilst your petitioners who have intermarried with Chickasaw women are citizens of said nation by the constitution of the Chickasaw Nation and by special provisions of the treaty of 1866, they are none the less citizens of the United States of America, and are, as such, entitled to the protection of the act of March 3, 1871, found in section 2079, above referred to, and to the protection of the Constitution and laws in pursuance thereof pertinent to their case, and to the protection of existing treaties.

Your petitioners state that if a hearing be granted them they will state more specifically and in detail all the laws, treaties, customs, and usages upon which they rely and which can not well be embodied in this petition.

Your petitioners would state that, owing to the large number of white men resident in the Chickasaw Nation and intermarried with Chickasaw women, whose rights have been grievously wrested from them by the action complained of, a meeting was held at Purcell, in the Chickasaw Nation, on the 1st day of March, A. D. 1890, at which S. L. Williams, W. C. Randolph, C. L. Campbell, and J. F. Myers were appointed a committee to act for and in behalf of all the complainants, and said S. L. Williams was selected chairman, all of which committee, in common with those who met, were disfranchised by the acts complained of.

In view of the premises we respectfully ask the President, who by law is intrusted with general superintendence and care of Indian affairs, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to hear their petition and complaint. They state that they are without redress if it is not granted by the proper authorities of the United States of America; that, unlike a State a citizen whereof can appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States when his rights have been violated by disregard of the Constitution or of laws in pursuance thereof or of treaties made under the authority of the United States, there is no appeal from the action of the supreme court of the Chickasaw Nation to said court, although in violation of existing laws and treaties.

They ask upon hearing that they be restored to the rights enjoyed by them prior to the action complained of, and that all proper rules and orders be issued for their enforcement; and as in duty bound, etc.

S. L. WILLIAMS,
Chairman.
J. F. MYERS,
C. L. CAMPBELL,
W. C. RANDOLPH.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Eastern District of Texas, ss:

Before me, James W. Hocker, a commissioner of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Texas, duly appointed, commissioned, and qualified as such on this day personally appeared S. L. Williams, J. F. Myers, C. L. Campbell, and W. C. Randolph, who, after being by me duly sworn according to the form of law, upon their oaths depose and say that they are each and every one of them citizens of the Chickasaw Nation by marriage with Chickasaw women, and are well acquainted with the facts as set forth in the foregoing petition, and know from their personal knowledge that the same are true.

In witness whereof I have set my hand at office in the city of Purcell, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, in the said eastern district of Texas, this 4th day of March, A. D. 1890.

JAMES W. HOCKER,
Commissioner of United States Circuit Court for said District.
RETURN OF A BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to lay before the House the resolution which the Clerk will read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk request the Senate to return the bill of the House (H. R. 2239) for the relief of the heirs of John H. Jones and of the heirs of Thomas D. Harris.

The resolution was adopted.

PITTSBURGH, COLUMBUS AND FORT SMITH RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the last amendment was adopted to the bill granting the right of way to the Pittsburgh, Columbus and Fort Smith Railway Company through the Indian Territory. I voted in the affirmative, under a misapprehension of fact.

The SPEAKER. The motion will be entered.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE GAY, OF LOUISIANA.

The SPEAKER. The hour has arrived which has been fixed by order of the House for the delivery of eulogies upon Hon. Edward J. Gay, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

Mr. WILKINSON. Mr. Speaker this being the hour set apart for paying tribute to the memory of my deceased colleague, on behalf of the delegation from Louisiana, I send to the desk a series of resolutions to be read by the Clerk.

The resolutions were read, as follows:

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended, that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of Hon. Edward J. Gay, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased and in recognition of his eminent abilities as a distinguished public servant, the House at the conclusion of these memorial proceedings shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to communicate a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

Mr. WILKINSON. Mr. Speaker, it would be ordinarily appropriate for the successor of Hon. Edward J. Gay [Mr. PRICE] to make the opening address on this occasion. That successor was Mr. Gay's devoted companion and friend, notwithstanding the disparity that existed in their ages, and would need no prompting to lead us all in expressions of regard and esteem for his distinguished predecessor. But as the husband of his daughter, holding for Mr. Gay the affection of one of his own sons, associated with him as he was by the closest ties, the public utterance of these feelings would be the exercise of a privilege so painful that silence seemed to him more appropriate than eulogy on his part during these solemn ceremonies. It has devolved on me to take the place which under other circumstances he would fill, and give voice to the opening tribute among those which we are here to offer now.

Hon. Edward J. Gay was born at Liberty, in Bedford County, Virginia, seventy-four years ago. He was taken by his parents at the age of four to Southern Illinois. Four years afterwards his father, with his face still turned to the west, crossed the Mississippi River and settled at St. Louis, then a little town of 3,000 inhabitants, which the wildest enthusiast could hardly have foreseen would become, during Mr. Gay's lifetime, a splendid city of nearly half a million people.

Young Gay obtained the best education which the time and place afforded at St. Louis, at Belleville, Ill., and finally at Augusta College, Kentucky.

Naturally bright and industrious he improved his opportunities, and at the age of eighteen started with his father in commercial life. He showed great aptness, enterprise, and ability as a merchant, even at that early age, and began a career which was marked as much by success as it was noted for strict probity and integrity.

The record that he made as a merchant then was a source of satisfaction and even of just pride to him ever afterwards. I well recollect how much gratified he was on one occasion in this Hall when the distinguished gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GEAR] said in debate that Mr. Gay's career as a merchant of St. Louis before the war had made his name a synonym of honesty, integrity, and honorable dealing throughout the whole Mississippi Valley.

Mr. Gay was married in 1840 to Miss Lavinia, the daughter of Colonel Hynes, of Nashville, Tenn., who had large planting interests in Louisiana.

His marriage was a happy one. In the dear companionship of her he chose so well nearly fifty years were spent. The wife of his early and constant affection, two sons, two daughters, and a number of grandchildren survive him.

Colonel Hynes had large planting interests in Louisiana, and, in the management of this property, nearly fifteen years after his marriage, Mr. Gay first became a resident of the State which three times in succession gave him the commission of one of her Representatives here, and in whose industrial history he was destined so often for thirty-four years to occupy so conspicuous and commanding a position.

His life as a planter had begun but a few years before war's wild notes were heard and Sumter's guns woke the echoes which Manassas and Gettysburg and a hundred fields reverberated and which Appomattox only hushed.

An opponent of secession until opposition was unavailing, when the die was cast he sided with his people. His eldest son entered the field in defense of the South. Detained himself at home by reason of injuries received years before, he saw around him the ruin and destruction that followed in the wake of that appeal to arms.

When peace came at last Mr. Gay wasted no time in vain regrets, but gave his best energies to repair the ravages that war had made and to help others to do the same. Under the influence of his pluck and energy and of that of those like him, barriers to the floods were rebuilt, fields replanted, factories rose from their ashes, the land regained the beauty that had gone, and peace and plenty smiled where want and desolation stalked in many a home before.

As a planter and manufacturer he evinced the same thoroughness, diligence, and capacity which marked his mercantile life. He was foremost in all matters affecting the welfare of the agricultural community and was closely identified with the progress and enterprise of the great Southern city, New Orleans, the larger portion of which I have the honor to represent upon this floor.

Of all the avocations that he ever followed I believe Mr. Gay was fondest of agriculture, or of that combination of agriculture and manufactures which prevails on every large sugar plantation in Louisiana. He loved that calling in all its phases. He loved to see the mellow earth turn from the shining share. He loved to see the tender shoots of cane mark the long brown rows with tints of early spring and then grow on until they hid the earth with a continuous canopy of green. He loved to view the fields when under summer suns they lay like a sea at calm or were stirred by the breeze into emerald waves of loveliness and grace. And when the autumn was well along and the harvest came, to him whose life had always been an active one, there was a certain excitement in the busy grinding time, when he saw the skillful cutters stretched in line, with rapid blow and gleaming knife strip and top and fell the standing canes and cast the purple stalks in even rows and piles ready for the wagon's load, when above the sounds of rustling leaves and ringing steel, of rumbling carts and teamsters' urgent words, there came the cheery voices of contented labor, which burst at times into a work-song, weird and wild, but full of melody. He loved to see without his factory walls the ruddy glare of furnace-fires and within the engines go on and on by night and day, the massive rolls crush out the liquid sweets, the amber juices foam and dance with heat and steam, the machines revolve with lightning speed, from which at last emerge the pure and sparkling crystals, the finished product of twelve long months of cost and toil.

And thus, Mr. Speaker, in 1884, amid these rural scenes, the future appeared to him as quiet and serene as the placid calm of evening after storms have ceased and clouds have passed away.

But the merchant, who had laid aside the cares of his calling, the planter, who at almost the allotted three score years and ten looked forward to spending his declining years at peace in the society of his loved ones and amid the comforts of his home, received an urgent summons to bear his people's standard in one of the most hotly contested political conflicts of the time.

Mr. Gay was averse to accepting the nomination unanimously tendered him and to entering political life in his declining years, but the summons that came to him with such insistence he would not and did not disregard. Elected in that campaign to the Forty-ninth Congress against an opponent of great ability and with great patronage at his back, he was re-elected to the Fiftieth and Fifty-first Congresses, each time against a different competitor—for no man was found to enter the lists against him a second time—and each time with increased majorities, because each time he not only held the friends he had, but won others who had opposed him before.

He was particularly averse to accepting a third nomination on account of my party.

The Secretary never to the May 30, 1890, peaceful.

Mr. C. usefully Those who with him matters, which would not push.

Among the fifth Congress, big in his field he held it survives, whose presence this floor were national boundary most in the orable Speaker, will do, Mr. G.

the attention him anxiety His m He did u phrase of desired thought.

The oc When he justice for them from was lifted as an

When any radi had inst which th pictured carry de involved

At suc wisest nest char Imple stowed, his peop I well years ago and we his look close air was far fresh beyond viving a breezes pallid c health w the need

But, I if no wo had nev circle of tleman,

He wa he had t ance of those to gave a their fail

He ab scorn for which th He wa as he eve humbles for assist count of ill-health and need of rest; but, saying "I am willing to do my part," did that part—a noble one indeed!—unto death itself.

The seat to which he was elected the last time he was destined, alas! never to fill. Nearly three months after his second term was over, on May 30, 1889, at home and surrounded by those he loved, he passed peacefully away.

Mr. Gay's career as a legislator crowned a long life of honor and usefulness. He had the respect and esteem of both sides of this Chamber. Those who served on committees with him and were most in contact with him found a kindliness of feeling, a sound judgment on public matters, and the capacity to deal intelligently with these questions, which were hidden to many by his modest demeanor and the habit of not pushing himself or his opinions needlessly forward.

Among his associates on the Committee on Appropriations of the Fifty-third Congress was a congenial spirit, who, like Mr. Gay, was an apt student of the great problems of governmental finance. Missouri's gifted son, big in intellect and in frame, the lamented Burnes, was his intimate and his friend. Among them also was he whose deeds and name will be held in honor while good government exists and the love of liberty survives, I mean the illustrious son of Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL], whose presence sickness and suffering have withheld for months from this floor. Mr. Gay's closest associates, his most numerous intimates, were naturally on this side, but yonder aisle did not mark the outer boundary of his friendships. He found here that those who differed most in political faith could be closely alike in kindly feeling, in honorable service, and in unsullied career. They are alike also, Mr. Speaker, in readiness to pay the last tribute, as some of them soon will do, of regard and esteem to his memory.

Mr. Gay seldom took part in debate; but when he did he commanded the attention of this House, and I have seen members gather around him anxious to hear every word that fell from his lips.

His manner in debate was simple and he did not strain after effect. He did not call to his aid the arts of rhetoric and indulge in studied phrase or glittering trope, but he had the faculty of expressing what he desired to say in words that were simple, clear, and full of force and thought.

The occasion gave at times a loftiness and a dignity to his speech. When he was engaged in the attempt—successful in the end—to secure justice for the settlers upon the Houmas lands and strove to prevent them from being deprived of their homes and their little all, his voice was lifted in the cause of the weak against the strong, a cause as noble as any which ever had an advocate in its behalf.

When, upon questions of far greater moment, he protested against any radical change in the fiscal system of a century, which the fathers had instituted and patriots and sages had maintained and under which the pursuits of his people had grown and prospered, when he pictured the injustice and wrong of legislation which, if enacted, would carry desolation and ruin to that people, the magnitude of the issues involved found him equal to the place and the occasion.

At such a time he not only followed as legislator the example of the wisest statesmanship of the past, but also proved an able and an earnest champion of the dearest interests of those he served so well.

Implicitly did his people trust in him and well was that trust bestowed, for if ever Representative filled the measure of faithfulness to his people it was he.

I well recollect the long and trying summer days of that session two years ago, when he staid so long here after sickness had left its pallor and weakness on him. Even then members on this floor noticed in his look the faint shadows of the end. Away from here, outside the close air of this Chamber, restoration and health seemed possible. He was far from the home where blew breezes from the river and came fresh odors from the groves and the fields; but westward, close at hand, beyond those hills, were mountain resorts with crystal springs and reviving airs, and eastward, almost as close, was the sea, where Atlantic breezes brought often strength and color back to wasted frame and pallid cheek again; but he would not stay away, even when life and health were at stake. He considered his duty to be here, and here, until the need was past, here he remained, like a faithful soldier at his post.

But, Mr. Speaker, if Edward J. Gay's record here were blotted out, if no word of his were left upon our statutes, if his life as a legislator had never been lived, he would be remembered still far beyond the circle of family and of friends, for, as private citizen, as christian gentleman, he made his mark upon his time.

He was a man of simple tastes and sturdy virtues. Gifted in mind he had the brain to plan, the will to execute. Exact in the performance of his own obligations, he expected others to be the same; but to those to whom misfortunes came through no fault of theirs he often gave a helping hand, and with his counsel and his means retrieved their failing fortunes.

He abhorred pretense, had little patience with conceit. He had a scorn for idleness and brooked not him who did not use the talent which the Lord had given.

He was kind and sympathetic to those in his employ. Associated as he ever was with the first and highest in every worthy calling, the humblest laborer had ever ready access to him for justice or advice or for assistance in a time of need.

Mr. Gay was most respected and esteemed by those who knew him best. With his life and character no "distance lent enchantment," but intimacy—the closer view—disclosed the qualities and charms which the distance hid.

His charities, Mr. Speaker, were extensive, but rarely published to the world. He gave to learning without ostentation, to church without parade, to poverty and distress with kindly hand and sympathetic word.

He forgave as he hoped to be forgiven, and kept no malice in his heart for any man on earth.

Edward J. Gay had no dread of death nor fear to lose the christian's crown of immortality hereafter. He has gone indeed; and, although since then the months have flown and spring has come again with bud and bloom, at the mention of his name affection's tears will still gush forth and sorrow heave its sighs. Here friendship brings in memory now its tribute to the record of his deeds performed, of want relieved, of laurels won, of devotion to his people's cause, of standard held aloft for them, which never met with shame!

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, as one of the Representatives of the State of Missouri I come in its name to pay brief tribute to a memory which all its citizens delight to honor, and I can but regret that the circumstances under which I approach the discharge of that duty have left me so little of time and opportunity for preparation therefor. It was my good fortune to enjoy more than a passing acquaintance with Mr. Gay, and I am therefore qualified in some measure to speak as one having personal knowledge of his worth. Not until he and I entered, together, the Forty-ninth Congress had I ever enjoyed a personal acquaintance with him; but from my boyhood his name and fame as one of the leading commercial and financial characters of our State and of the Southwest had been familiar to me.

In the beginning of his service in Congress Mr. Gay was assigned to duty on the Committee on the District of Columbia, where I had the honor to serve with him, and in that association I had opportunities for observing his course, which soon won from me a high admiration for his ability and an affectionate regard for his personal character. He was one of the most modest and at the same time one of the best informed men I have ever known. He brought to the discharge of his duties here a strong mind, enriched with much learning, and an experience in the conduct of various and extensive business enterprises, public and private, that made him one of the wisest of counselors, as he was one of the safest and most conservative of legislators.

From his long and intimate connection with the conduct of municipal affairs in the cities of St. Louis and New Orleans and his perfect familiarity with the needs of a large metropolitan population, his services in connection with the legislation proposed for this city and District were of great value to his committee, and his influence and character lent much weight to its recommendations when they were considered on this floor. He was devoted to duty, and, though not enjoying robust health whilst a member of this body, he never missed a meeting of his committee or a session of the House, unless his attendance was prevented by sickness. As in the concerns of private life he was diligent, energetic, and successful to a remarkable degree, so in the discharge of his public duties his habits were the same; and that fidelity to his duty which won for him the respect and approval of his associates here secured for him also the gratitude and affection of his people at home.

Few lives better illustrate the possibilities of success that lie before the young men of this country than does that of Mr. Gay and fewer still are those more worthy of imitation.

Having first qualified himself for achieving success by acquiring a practical education and the establishment of a good moral character, he had a well grounded faith in himself, as those who knew him also had an unwavering faith in him. Of good habits, clear head, and honest purposes, his actions always proceeded upon plans well thought out and which were closely adhered to. While possessing rare prudence as a young merchant, his courage in entering upon new fields of business enterprise was no less distinguishing among his prominent characteristics. When only twenty-two years of age and possessed of financial means which in this day would be regarded as inconsiderable, he was the first to engage in the direct importation of coffee by the cargo into St. Louis; and that venture, from which older and richer merchants shrank in fear and counseled him against, became from the first a pronounced success, and the bold young merchant's reputation and fortune were assured.

It will be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that this important incident in the life of Mr. Gay occurred more than half a century ago, when the city which is to-day the great metropolis of the Mississippi valley was but a struggling town on the very frontiers of commerce, and at that time this act of intelligent enterprise on the part of the bold young pioneer in that line of commercial activity was regarded by his fellows as reckless in its conception and only accidental in its success. The enterprise, energy, and honesty of Edward J. Gay, applied to commercial pursuits in St. Louis, brought him abundant fortune, the accumulation of which was made without leaving a blot upon his character. Although for many years before his death he made Louisiana his home, the State of Missouri never ceased to regard him as one of her sons, and at the close of his illustrious life the city of St. Louis, where he had won his earliest triumphs, claimed the honor of giving sepulture to his remains.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is the just pride of his friends in that great city, with many of whose enterprises he was so long and so conspicuously connected, that, while he rests within her borders beneath an epitaph which duly records his honors, not alone in this way is his memory perpetuated among her people; for his name is commemorated by association with her institutions of commerce, education, and charity, of which he was ever the steadfast and generous friend.

Of the work accomplished by Mr. Gay as a citizen of Louisiana I will leave others, better qualified than I, to speak in detail; and with reference thereto I shall only say that, throughout a long and eventful career in that State, he was distinguished by the intelligent and successful application to private and public affairs of those high principles of business integrity and fair dealing which had made his name influential and honored in Missouri; and the rank assigned him by his just selection by the people of that State to fill high and responsible positions in commercial and political service fitly attests the appreciation and esteem in which he was there held.

It may not be inappropriate in this connection to refer to the fact that, though Mr. Gay had enjoyed, in a marked degree, the honors of his people, he never filled a position of public trust which came as the result of his seeking. Always modest and free from that sort of ambition which leads men to seek popular applause, he was ever content to fill a private station in life, though never shrinking when called by his fellow-citizens to take on the burden of great responsibilities. He was sent to Congress as a Representative of that district in Louisiana in whose service he died, without having sought or even desired that distinguished honor; and, although when he became the candidate of his party in said district his political opponents held control therein by an immense majority, such was the personal popularity of Mr. Gay and such the confidence reposed in his ability and fidelity to fitly represent the interests of his district and State that he was not only triumphantly elected for that term, but until death closed his honorable career no one was thought of by his people as a competitor for the position he so worthily held.

As may be inferred from what I have stated about the high commercial and financial standing of Mr. Gay, he was a man of great wealth; indeed, he was one of the wealthiest members of the American Congress, but none of his associates here would have ever suspected this from the bearing of the man. Always free from every approach to ostentation in his style of living, quiet and unpretending in his manner towards all his fellows, he exemplified in the highest degree the truth of that maxim that "rarely is the man who has been able to honestly acquire great wealth spoiled by its possession." I refer to his wealth only to emphasize with his associates here, who knew little of his possessions, and nothing from Mr. Gay himself—for no man ever heard from him an allusion to his affairs or to himself that savored of boasting—the virtue of modesty so strongly marked in this admirable character.

Wealth is not always the mark of honor; but when acquired in the honorable pursuit of legitimate business, the conduct of which benefits the whole world and takes nothing from any citizen, and when its possession stimulates and quickens the impulse to do good, instead of moving its possessor only to strive for greater acquisition regardless of effects upon others, then it is a badge of distinction which the best of men may be proud to wear. Such a possessor of wealth was Mr. Gay; and it may be truthfully said of him that in the wise, patriotic, and generous use which he made of his fortune, more than to the circumstance of his immense possessions, was the secret of his great influence.

Mr. GEAR. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to join my fellow-members in paying my tribute to the worth of our departed friend. It is an old adage, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum."

Sir, there are few men whom I have ever met who more truly illustrated in his life the truth of the quotation.

My acquaintance with Mr. Gay probably antedates that of any person here to-day. The first time I met him was in June, 1846. He was then engaged in business as a wholesale grocery merchant. St. Louis at that time commanded not only the trade of the Northwest, but extended also to Mexico on the southwest. Mr. Gay possessed in an eminent degree the essential qualities which make the successful business man, and was at the head of a firm whose trade extended throughout that country from New Orleans to the sources of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. By the fair and honest methods with which he transacted business his firm soon came to the front as the leading business concern of the Mississippi Valley, the reputation of which is to-day a pleasant remembrance to the old merchants of that section.

During a long and active business career great and wonderful changes have come over the country, to much of which he contributed both by his enterprise and his purse.

During his career as a merchant in St. Louis two great financial crises swept over the country, which involved the merchants and traders alike in bankruptcy. By his sagacity he foresaw the portent of the times and by his ability he carried his firm safely through those great financial storms and emerged therefrom with enhanced credit. His spoken word was not only his bond, but when once given was scrupulously kept.

His mind was equitable in the largest degree. This quality may be illustrated by a remark he once made to one of his clerks, who himself is now one of the leading business men of the West. He said: "John, always make it a rule when you are trusted to act for another to exercise your judgment in his behalf."

Thus, he honestly believed and put into practice in his every-day business the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

As you, his fellow-members, knew and appreciated him as you met him here day by day, so he was known and appreciated by all who transacted business with him during his long and active business life. Honest and upright in his daily walk and in his dealings, he especially impressed all with his kind and gentle manners. He was a manly man and a gentleman in the fullest meaning of the word. His character in this regard is idealized in the language of England's sweet poet:

There are some spirits truly just,
Unwarped by pelf or pride;
Great in the calm, but greater still
When pressed by adverse tide.
These hold the rank no king can give,
No station can disgrace,
Nature puts forth her gentlemen
And monarchs must give place.

Sir, the reputation he enjoyed for honesty of purpose, integrity in his business transactions, and as a conscientious christian gentleman is to his children a legacy more precious by far than the ample fortune he bequeathed them.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, across yon majestic river, in sight of this Capitol, lies a land remarkable not alone for the beauty of its scenery and fertility of its soil, but a wonderland, renowned and revered wherever the truth and beauty of glorious womanhood are respected and the strength and grandeur of a splendid manhood treasured. It can boast generation after generation of strong statesmen who had wisdom without conceit and learning without pedantry; of warriors who were valorous, but not oppressive—grand as Achilles in war and humble as Cincinnatus in peace. There the magnificent and fiery spirit of her sons is surpassed only by the beauty and loveliness of her daughters. From Virginia's hills and Virginia's vales, following the star of empire westward, her sons and daughters have wended their way. Wherever they have gone they have carried with them a hospitality which knew no stint and a love of orderly, constitutional government which knew no limit. In every State, from the Chesapeake to the Golden Gate, the sturdy sons of the mother of States and statesmen are found in the forum, in the field, in the factory, everywhere illustrating the integrity of man, advocating the rights of man, and advancing the material interests of man.

From such a stock and such a State sprang Edward J. Gay. Born in 1816, he was taken from Virginia to Illinois in 1820, and removed thence to St. Louis, Mo., in 1824. This city, now one of the wonders of the century and the country, was then but a small town. He may be said to have grown with its growth and strengthened with its strength.

It is not my purpose, nor would this occasion permit me, to detail all the important events in the life of this distinguished citizen and statesman. He was fortunate in youth in being placed under an educator of fine ability, under whom he made not only satisfactory but rapid progress.

Reaching manhood his tastes turned strongly to business rather than professional pursuits, and he entered upon a mercantile life. His chief characteristics were untiring assiduity, unswerving integrity, and boldness. After calm deliberation he reached his own conclusions and stood by them and defended them. He struck boldly out in his mercantile pursuits and went to orient or occident for what his trade demanded. Moved by this spirit, Mr. HEARD has told you he was the first to import coffee from the West Indies to St. Louis.

He married a fair daughter of Tennessee, Miss Lavinia Hynes, in 1840, who survives him.

In 1856 he moved to Louisiana, where most of his latter life was spent and from which he was sent as a Representative in Congress.

Mr. Speaker, in this busy age and progressive land, fortunate is that man who can leave a lasting impression on any State of this Union. But such was the power of this man that you may blot out either his record here or his life in St. Louis or his life in Louisiana, or any two of them, and there remains enough of fame for him to allow posterity to rank him a distinguished American citizen.

It was not my good fortune to meet Mr. Gay till he came here as a member of the Forty-ninth Congress. From that time on I knew him well. In the Fiftieth Congress we occupied seats so near each other that I saw him daily and hourly when the House was in session. I had thereby an opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with him and observe his actions.

As a man he was calm, self-possessed, and meditative. He reached conclusions, as I have stated, after thoughtful consideration, and adhered to them with great tenacity. He was modest but firm, courteous but bold.

As a legislator he was ever vigilant in looking to the interests of the great State he represented and the grand country of which it was a part. Those acquainted with his business affairs knew how exacting were the demands of his private interests. But while here he made these subservient to his public duties, as he should, and never allowed private affairs, however important, to take the time which he had agreed by the acceptance of his high office to dedicate to the public. Placed on account of his recognized ability on the Committee on Appropriations, the latter years of his life were devoted to the study of those economic questions involved in the appropriation of hundreds of millions of money in the government of sixty millions of people. How well this duty was discharged his vigilant attendance here and the records of his country attest.

But the end came after more than three score and ten years. He had found the valley of that great river a wilderness and a canebrake. He had helped to clear away its forests, to spread the wings of commerce over its waste of waters, and to people its valleys.

He had seen the blighting hand of civil war fall upon the blooming land and seen it wither. He had seen misgovernment, worse than war, hover over the land long after the smoke of battle had been lifted. But instead of being discouraged by calamity he was nerved by it. Disaster after disaster was succeeded by struggle after struggle till the land that was in tears smiled again.

Looking back to the past and remembering what a potent factor he had been, not only in building up the country originally, but in rehabilitating it, Mr. Gay could say with gladness what Othello said in sadness: "I have done the state some service."

Looking to the future and remembering that he had years before professed faith in the blessed Redeemer, he could triumphantly exclaim:

I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith.

Four States boasted being the place of his residence. More than forty States mourn his death.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. Speaker, Edward J. Gay lived a long, useful, and honorable life. Could more be said of any man than this?

His career was one of eminent success in all he undertook.

When he died one of the chief pillars supporting the social, industrial, and political institutions of Louisiana gave way. His life and character afford a most instructive lesson to the youth and manhood of the country.

Those who have preceded me in this discussion have told you that he was born of Virginia parentage, on the soil of the Old Dominion, in the early part of the present century; how his father, even then recognizing that "Westward the course of empire takes its way," had removed with his family first to Illinois and then to St. Louis, settling permanently at the latter place when it was but a frontier post and a town of 3,000 people; and how first his father and then himself became successful merchants and laid the foundation of the colossal fortune which was his at the time of his death and for many years prior thereto.

I shall not dwell upon this portion of Mr. Gay's life, fruitful as it was of the results of well directed energies, wise forethought, and sound business judgment. I prefer to speak of his life after he came to Louisiana. While he acquired large interests in Louisiana as early as in the forties, it was not until 1856 that he came to reside permanently there. He immediately took position as one of the most sagacious, far-seeing, progressive citizens of the State. He made his home upon one of his plantations, and settled down to the alluring life of a sugar-planter. His possessions were very large, embracing some of the best sugar properties in the most fertile portions of the State.

He became the largest sugar-planter and perhaps the wealthiest man in the State. He gave to his great interests his personal attention and supervision. No man in the State was ever more actively or intimately identified with sugar-production in Louisiana, and no one had a better understanding of its needs or had more thoroughly mastered its details. He was a thorough business man, with an extensive and liberal knowledge of industrial and political economy.

Mr. Gay's absorption in commercial and agricultural pursuits left him but small time for politics. Still, he recognized the duty incumbent on all citizens to give thought and attention to the concerns of government, and it was his habit throughout life to co-operate in local politics for the advancement of the best interests of the country.

He was opposed to secession and was active in his efforts to check the growth of that sentiment in Louisiana.

His grandfather had been a soldier of the Revolutionary war and the grandson's love for the Union sprang from the early teaching and example of the ancestor. He always showed his confidence in the stability of the National Union by large holdings of landed property in various sections of the country.

He was a friend to the laboring classes. In his section and wherever he was known, he possessed their confidence and esteem. He always gave liberally to enterprises toward the advancement of the colored people, and enjoyed great popularity among them, as was evidenced by the many thousands of colored votes he received at the several elections when he was a candidate for Congress. Indeed, so popular was he with this class of citizens that when he was nominated for Congress the first time by the Democratic convention one branch of the Republican party of the district met in convention and indorsed his nomination, notwithstanding his Democracy, and most of the leading colored Republicans took the stump for him.

But little of Mr. Gay's long and active life was spent in politics, and it was only in his last years that he yielded to the solicitations of his own friends and those of the State and of his party, and undertook the arduous duties incident to the high station to which he was repeatedly called by the suffrages of his countrymen.

When he was first nominated for Congress, he was an elderly gentleman enjoying the seclusion and ease of private life on the peaceful banks of the mighty Mississippi, surrounded by all the comforts that wealth affords and all the attractions of a beautiful and refined home.

He liked not the contention for office, and preferred the quiet of home life and the peaceful pursuit of business.

The pressure, however, upon him was so great in 1884 that he yielded and became the nominee of the Democratic party of the Third district of Louisiana for Congress.

When apprised by telegram of his nomination he wired in response that he could not accept. Other telegrams were sent urging his acceptance. Then it was he yielded. He looked upon the acceptance of the nomination in the light of a duty, and did not feel at liberty to decline it, though its acceptance entailed great personal inconvenience and sacrifice. As he himself said in his letter of final acceptance, "Nothing could have been more unexpected or more at variance with my inclination than to embark in a political canvass."

An index of the character of the man is had in the following extract from his letter of acceptance, dated September 15, 1884:

I regard the present as a period of critical importance to my district as well as to the entire State of Louisiana, and I recognize the obligation of every good citizen to be ready to sacrifice personal considerations where the public welfare may be subserved.

His opponent for Congress at that election was W. P. Kellogg, wily, shrewd, and experienced, with a hitherto unbeaten Republican majority back of him. Mr. Gay undertook the seemingly hopeless task of his overthrow. It was not his custom to go into anything to lose, and after one of the hardest fought political battles ever had in Louisiana he was elected by a handsome majority. This was to the Forty-ninth Congress.

In 1886, when the time came around for the nomination of a candidate for the Fiftieth Congress, the delegates to the convention met at Franklin, La. Mr. Gay had not sought a renomination. He was not even present at the convention. On the day the convention met he telegraphed one of the delegates as follows:

I have thought it proper to abstain from personal influence over the deliberations of the convention. I approve full and free discussion, and have no desire to be made the standard-bearer of the Third district unless so demanded by a united and harmonious constituency.

That day he was unanimously renominated, and the same delegate to whom he had sent the dispatch replied as follows:

The Democratic convention, thoroughly united and harmonious, has renominated you for Congress by acclamation amid great enthusiasm.

At his second election Mr. Gay increased his majority more than three times the majority attained over Kellogg in 1884.

He declined a third nomination for Congress on account of failing health. The parishes, however, instructed their delegates for him anyhow, and the convention renominated him in spite of his declination.

He finally consented to accept the nomination—his health had somewhat improved—and in his letter of acceptance said:

I accept your nomination because there is much to be done and I am willing to try to do my part.

Simple, strong words, a declaration of duty by an old man in feeble health, who recognized the obligation upon him as a citizen of the Commonwealth and evinced his determination to essay its performance as far as his physical strength would permit. A third time he was elected and became the accredited Representative to the present Congress. But in the providence of God he was not to be permitted to be sworn in as a member. He died on May 30, 1889, at his beautiful home on the St. Louis plantation, in Iberville Parish, Louisiana, where he had spent many happy years of his life. He died quietly and easily, without a struggle, and was conscious to within an hour of his death.

His wife, the ideal of his youthful love, survives him, as do his two sons and two daughters, one of whom is the charming wife of Hon. ANDREW PRICE, the present accomplished Representative in Congress from the district so ably represented by his distinguished father-in-law.

Mr. Gay lived out a period of more than three score years. His life was filled with works of usefulness and duty. He gave to public duty the same devotion, zeal, and activity with which he had worked for his own and himself.

His useful career in the National Legislature was a fitting termination to a life that had been spent in vigorously stimulating to prosperous proportions the interests and industries of the two States in which all the years of his manhood were spent.

In his death the State lost a public-spirited citizen, the sugar industry a progressive leader, and commercial circles a man honorable and successful in all his business pursuits.

His commercial connections throughout the country and his widespread reputation as a business man gave great weight to his opinions in legislative matters affecting the business interests of the country, and his large experience and accurate and mature judgment were of great value to his colleagues. In Congress he was, as in every other station of life, able, devoted, and conscientious. His life here was full of earnest and valuable exertion.

During his four years of service in the House he was never known to shirk any of the arduous duties incident to the position of Congressman. In spite of his age and infirmities, except when confined to his house by serious illness, he always was to be found at his post of duty. He was neither an orator nor a parliamentarian, but he was a worker and a thinker. Systematic, methodical, and painstaking in all he did, his whole course as a member of this House was marked with the same close application, persistent industry, and constant carefulness that were the distinguishing features of a long life devoted to varied and extensive business relations.

Added to a large and comprehensive knowledge of men and affairs, he possessed a mind remarkably well balanced, calm and just in its judgments, with rapid powers of observation, and a capacity to get the pith and substance of a proposition. To every subject which came before him he gave sound and practical examination.

His mind was analytical, his grasp of a subject rapid and comprehensive, his power of discrimination great. He mastered details and was pre-eminently a man of affairs.

He was earnest and honest in all he did, and kept in his heart always a large place for the affections of family and friendship. He was unostentatious and democratic in all things, singularly devoid of pretense, simple in character, of gentle disposition, greatly beloved in the family circle. While possessed of great energy, he was singularly tempered with moderation. He was unpretending and exemplary in all his personal habits and intercourse with his neighbors.

He was a domestic man; enjoyed his home, his family, the society of his wife and children and friends.

He was a man of profound religious conviction and fine religious sensibilities. The reverend gentleman who officiated at his obsequies, and who knew him well, declared that while he was a man of busy life and active affairs he yet held to his course heavenward. On his death-bed, speaking of the Savior, he said to his pastor: "He has done so much for me, and I have done so little in return for Him."

Mr. Speaker, the deceased was my friend, and with reverent hand I lay on his tomb the garland of this humble tribute to his memory.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Speaker, my acquaintance with the distinguished citizen whose death we now mourn began with the meeting of the Forty-ninth Congress. As members of that body we were both appointed by the Speaker on the Committee on the District of Columbia, and, though the disparity in our years was great, the relations which had their beginning then, and which subsisted unbroken during his entire service in this House, were most kindly and agreeable and a source of constant pleasure to me.

As a member of the committee charged with the consideration of the numberless measures affecting for good or ill the Capital of the nation and the people of this District, he was wise and prudent, and withal just and liberal.

Mr. Gay was impressed with the belief that as the population of the country multiplied and its wealth increased the Capital must necessarily grow and become more and more the center of culture, wealth, and influence; and his great good sense made him realize that in dealing with the affairs of the District it was wise and just to lay plans that would enable the Capital to keep pace with the general growth and expansion of the country. The characteristics, it seemed to me, that most distinctly marked our late friend and colleague were his earnestness of purpose and simplicity of life, together with great practical wisdom, coupled with independence.

Every one who came in contact with Mr. Gay must have been impressed with that unassuming simplicity of manner which characterized his social and official intercourse with others and which made him easily approachable both to the old and the young alike.

I remember well how much I was struck with this most agreeable characteristic, when, after becoming more intimately acquainted with him, I learned what large enterprises he had inaugurated and controlled, what success had been achieved by him and the good he had accomplished both for himself and his country.

That Mr. Gay was a man of earnest purposes is evidenced by the splendid results of his life's work.

Few men in all our Southern land have accomplished so much through their individual exertions, and surely no one could have done so many things and all so well unless controlled by that fixedness of purpose that so distinctly marked this distinguished citizen of Louisiana.

Those who were associated with him in the consideration and perfecting of measures in the committee-room or in their passage through this House will easily remember how self-reliant he was and how tenacious of his opinions when once formed. Such men are valuable in any place and at all times, and probably there is no characteristic more needed in public than that they have some fixed opinions, some earnest convictions, and that they have the courage to stand by them and contend for them.

The practical wisdom that had served Mr. Gay in all his private affairs and had given him such prominence among the successful business men of the country found ready and constant application when he left his home to assume the responsible functions of a law-maker for the American people. As the country grows in wealth and population its industries and enterprises become more varied and complex, and the duties devolving on the National Legislature naturally increase and multiply. The result is that the committees of Congress are charged more and more with the responsibility of considering and maturing all measures before they come to either House for its judgment. So that those men who quietly and unobtrusively consult, suggest, amend, and perfect in committee the various measures submitted to them often become the most useful legislators.

The new member, after he has fully entered upon the responsible duties of his office, early realizes that it is impossible for him to inform himself by personal investigation as to the merits of each of the numerous measures upon which he is called to vote, and soon learns that as to many of these he must rely upon the faithful research of his colleagues who as members of the several committees have been charged with the investigation, and it requires not many months of service in the House for every new member to learn that certain of his colleagues of longer service than himself have acquired the reputation as honest and thorough investigators, and that the statements of such men and the reports they submit can be safely relied on and acted upon. Mr. Gay enjoyed this enviable reputation. He was honest and thorough in his examination of facts and sound in his conclusions. These characteristics largely contributed to make him the valuable legislator that he was.

Another characteristic quite marked in the service of Mr. Gay in this House was his independence of judgment and action. Not that foolish independence that often leads erratic minds to illogical and unwise conclusions and that makes men cling to the wrong for consistency's sake, but that better sort which leads one charged with great responsibilities to assume without flinching the full measure of his duties and to rely on and act on his own judgment and convictions when they have once been honestly formed.

He was not a politician. He did not run for office. He was sent to this House by his friends and neighbors. They knew him and had confidence in him. They selected him as their Representative because they had faith in his wisdom and patriotism; and the ever-swelling majorities by which he was returned at each recurring election testify to the faithfulness with which he performed the duties intrusted to him.

But, Mr. Speaker, while the life and character and worldly achievements of our departed friend may be the just source of pride to all who knew him and may furnish, as they do, at once an inspiration and an example to the honest and aspiring youth of our land, the great consolation, now that he is gone, lies in the conviction that he was an earnest and honest Christian.

As early as 1843 he became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

He remembered his Creator in the days of his youth. At the early age of twenty-seven he took his stand on the right side of life and started on his journey to a better land. From the day he assumed the grave duties of church membership until the end of his long and useful career, he was an efficient and earnest worker in the great enterprises and labors which have made the Methodist Church such an immense power for good in this country. For, without disparagement of others, it may be truthfully asserted that this branch of the Christian church has wrought wonders in good works and has done its full share in carrying to the ends of the earth the everlasting word of the living God.

As in temporal affairs he was eminently practical, so was he in spiritual. He believed that faith without works is dead, and that true Christianity consists not only in believing, but also in doing. It was obedience to this conviction that led him to seek the wayward, to encourage the friendless, to lend a hand to the fallen, and to help the poor and unfortunate; and many there are yet living who testify to his kindness in all these ways.

An honest and successful private citizen, a faithful and wise public servant, a true and humble Christian—all of these was Edward J. Gay, of Louisiana. No higher encomium could any man ask.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to pay a just tribute of praise to the splendid qualities that adorned the character of our late associate, Edward J. Gay. First and best of all, it could be truthfully said of him that he was a Christian.

His life was useful, while it was quiet and unobtrusive. While he did not busy himself in searching out new friends, he was always ready to recognize the obligations the relation of friendship imposes, and willing and glad to assume them when the object was worthy.

I was in no wise intimate with him; but sitting by his side in committee during two sessions of Congress I came to know him well and note the strong attributes of his character. He was a thoughtful man. He was an utterly sincere man. The faculty of appearing to be what he was not he never acquired. He never put on a mere outward seeming. The outward was the true reflection of the inner man. What he was became manifest to every one who was brought in contact with and studied to know him. His reserve was not born of coldness. He abounded in charity, but that charity was free from ostentation. He gave alms without sounding a trumpet. He uttered no prayers upon street corners that he might be seen of men.

With Edward J. Gay the one supreme word in our language was duty. To him it was a word of imperial command, from which there was no appeal; and he yielded true obedience to its dictates. He did not seek to participate in the gaudies and much less the frivolities of fashionable social life. He was one of those of whom it was written:

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learned to stray;
Along the cool, sequestered vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Such lives are stronger for the preservation of this Republic than are the arms of mailed warriors. They impart to the national life a tone of harmony, and a sense of security, and a spirit of rest. They give to society a moral fiber, an integrity of purpose, which has a consistency and toughness that wears and endures.

Edward J. Gay was very wealthy, but he possessed no trace of that vain conceit and pretentious arrogance that are in some measure characteristic of those grown suddenly rich in our day. He did not become wealthy by virtue of advantage conferred by partial laws, nor by the accidental favor of some mere speculative venture, entered upon without wisdom and prosecuted without judgment. His fortune was the reward of a long life of patient, persistent, and honorable endeavor in the field of useful and legitimate business enterprise.

Independent so far as material wealth can confer that condition, he yet bore himself with an air of humility that was conclusive evidence that he realized in the largest and best sense how dependent upon each other all are in this life for that self-sacrificing friendship and kindly sympathy, without which, to noble minds, life would be a barren waste. Such was the man whose loss we mourn. Such men as he fulfill the law of compensation. They compensate in some measure for that assortment of worthless mortals, flung upon the surface of the sea of life, seemingly to furnish us evidence of God's power, but leaving us unable to reconcile such creations to an economy that is beneficent.

Some time the secrets of this mystery called death we shall know. But now it is enough that in faith we trust that whether this be given or that withheld, yet are all things done in wisdom and justice, as in love, to the sons of men.

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Speaker, it was not my fortune to be intimately associated with Mr. Gay in the preparation and consideration of matters of legislation while he was a member of this House or to enjoy, during the time, close personal relations with him, and therefore I can not speak of those tender qualities of head and heart which become more visible when the watchful business man is absent and the genial, warm-hearted friend and associate alone is present.

Mr. Gay was not a politician. His entrance as a member of Congress was at the advanced age of sixty-eight years. Had he become a member in his younger days he certainly would have enjoyed a successful and marked career; but his training, and no doubt his taste, were in a different line and there he won rewards and honors no less imperishable. Mr. Gay was not a man of words, but of actions. His terms in Congress were marked by an earnest and attentive, but quiet effort to secure wise and wholesome legislation. In the Forty-ninth Congress he served as a member of the Committee on Manufactures and that on the affairs of the District of Columbia.

In the Fiftieth Congress his eminent qualifications for the position won for him a place upon the Committee on Appropriations. As a member of Congress he was watchful of the interests of his people. Every attempt to encroach upon what he believed to be their rights met his resistance. He seldom yielded his convictions to the judgments of others; he thought for himself, made up his mind after careful investigation and mature reflection, and when he arrived at his conclusions he was irrevocably set in his opinions.

He was not a vacillating character, driven hither and thither by the currents of sentiment, that are as changeable as the winds, but whatever plans were formed were carried forward to a successful termination. He was not only a man of strong convictions, but was able to master the details of his various avocations as well as comprehend them in the aggregate, and was therefore successful in all and a failure in none. From his life and character valuable instructions may be derived and valuable lessons be learned. It is said that 90 per cent. of those who engage in commercial pursuits at some period of their lives fail.

This is not strange when the manner in which most men engage in and carry on various enterprises is considered. We often hear it remarked of some industrious and apparently prosperous person that he is possessed of great energy, and yet how often have we seen such men in the very zenith of their success fall to ruin.

We can find, in a lesser degree, young Napoleons of Wall street in every town. Such men possess energy, but lack judgment; they have the motive power, but are without head-lights.

Mr. Gay was not of this class; he was a perfect type of the successful man. Possessing great modesty, there was no dash about his manner. With a mind trained for the comprehension of both great and small things, he was able to master the particulars of whatever he undertook. He could not be lured into hazardous investments and undertakings by mere promises of large returns, but looked behind them to see if they were well founded. By a careful survey of the past and a clear comprehension of the present, he was able to calculate results with accuracy in the future.

An old, respected, and successful business man of Vincennes, Ind., a few years ago told me that when he first engaged in merchandising in that historical town he wholesaled to the merchants of St. Louis, who transported their goods across the prairies of Illinois by wagon. Said he, "I could have gone to St. Louis and become its greatest merchant, but I thought Vincennes was the point where the great central city of the country was to grow up."

Not so with the father of Mr. Gay. Starting from Virginia in 1820 with his youthful son, he passed by Vincennes—where George Rogers Clark had won imperishable renown in Revolutionary times, where stood the home of General William Henry Harrison, and near which, beneath the spreading oak, he held his famous council with Tecumseh—and entered the beautiful prairies beyond the Wabash, where they halted four years and then settled in St. Louis, on the banks of the Mississippi, the great highway of commerce, as the point where the great central city of the New World was to be built. And here it was built; and here grew up to manhood, to honor, to success, and to fortune Edward J. Gay.

The great talents and ability possessed by Mr. Gay were no doubt in some degree natural, but to these were added a rich scholastic education and a careful business training which made him the successful man that he was and would have crowned his labors with success in any calling. He was the first to import coffee by cargo from Cuba, which was considered by most merchants as a hazardous venture. By his talents and capabilities he soon built up a trade and became one of the most extensive wholesale dealers in the West, and was one of the prime movers in the enterprise of the erection of the present Merchants' Exchange building in St. Louis.

In 1855 Mr. Gay changed his residence and later his business, engaging in the production of sugar in the State of Louisiana. In this new field his abilities were more conspicuously displayed than in merchandising. He was not long in mastering every detail of his new vocation, and soon became more proficient than those who had spent their lives in the business; his recognized ability caused his selection as the first president of the Louisiana Sugar Exchange of New Orleans.

Mr. Gay's success, however, was not alone due to his abilities as a careful and cautious, but self-reliant business man.

With these qualifications he possessed sterling integrity and honesty. Those who dealt with him soon acquired confidence in him. He was not a designing speculator, bent on gain at all hazards, but the honorable, high-minded, upright dealer who wronged no one, but was trusted by all.

Besides his great capabilities nothing could have contributed more to his success in business and his standing among commercial men than his unquestioned and unquestionable integrity.

This monument of character which he built so symmetrically, adorned as it was with noble traits and successful deeds, would not be finished without the crowning virtues of morality and christian charity, and it is a pleasing remembrance to his friends and a consolation to his family that he not only possessed but practiced these to the close of his eventful life.

The world is better by his having lived, and the example of his life may well be taken as a model by those that may follow him.

Mr. CLEMENTS. There is a propriety in recounting, on occasions like this, the virtues and achievements of those of whom we pause to speak. This is proper, not alone for the purpose of paying tribute to their memories, but of utilizing their good examples of life in rendering better the lives of those who survive them and follow them.

In a country like this and under a government like ours, where it is possible for the child of humblest birth to attain the highest position of honor in official station, the aspirations of the young are naturally, in a great measure, turned towards the political arena. While ambition in this direction is not to be condemned, it should not be forgotten that there are other fields of useful labor in which great good to humanity can be accomplished, and as high and as true honor realized.

In the life and character of Mr. Gay there is much to be commended to the emulation of those engaged in or entering upon the struggle of life. It was in the duties of private, domestic, and business life that the sterling qualities of head and heart ennobled the career of this good and wise man. He was not a politician by profession or choice. He did not seek office. The people called him by nomination and election, unsought on his part, into their service. Prompted by a sense of duty, he responded. His political and official career is well known. He was three times unanimously, and by acclamation, nominated by the Democratic convention of his district, and successively elected by increasing majorities each time.

In this House he did his duty ably, fearlessly, and faithfully. When he addressed this body he commanded the hearing of all, and on each mind left an indelible impression. He was a member of the Committee on Appropriations in the Fiftieth Congress, and was a faithful, painstaking, just, and liberal participant in the arduous work of that committee.

But of his private life I wish to speak further. He was blessed with the greatest of all earthly blessings, that of a christian mother, who realized her duties and responsibilities and who lived to see her son a blessing to mankind. Napoleon has said that "the future good or bad conduct of a child depends entirely upon its mother," and a greater than he has uttered these words of wisdom: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Both his father and mother were devout christians, and their lives abounded in deeds of charity.

Mr. Gay's early career at school and in college was marked with success, the result of energy and close application in the development of a naturally gifted mind. Here, as well as under the benign influences of a christian home, was laid the foundation of that success in accomplishments and that true type of manhood developed in his life.

When he left school and went forth to grapple with the stubborn affairs of life he was equipped with a clear and accurate judgment, and pressed onward with a courage and energy that made failure impossible to him. He, without ostentation, soon displayed a degree of capacity that caused him to be regarded as almost a "business prodigy." One who was many years in his employ and knew him intimately says of him:

He was a just man, always giving full weights and measures. He was a temperate man, not given to excessive indulgence of any kind. He was a christian man, as his many acts of charity and christian benevolence show.

His long and successful business career abounds in instances of the practical observance of honesty, both toward employé and customer. His pastor, Rev. Felix R. Hill, has said of him:

He was a scrupulously honest man. He kept his contracts and his word was his bond.

He was one of whom it could have been said that he "swearth to his own hurt and changeth not."

Bishop Keener has said of him:

With great energy, he was singularly tempered with moderation. He was unpretending and exemplary in all his personal habits and intercourse with his neighbors. For breadth of view and intelligence upon all subjects he had few equals. In an acquaintance of forty years I have known no one more uniform, a man uniformly reliable in all departments and conditions of life. He was a pure and blameless man, a faithful husband, an affectionate father, and a helpful friend.

He died in the christian faith. Duty in all the relations of life was the standard to which he endeavored to raise his conduct. He was true to himself; he could not be false to others. Subject, as all men are, to the imperfections of human nature, it would be too much to say that he in all particulars attained this standard to which he aspired, but that he did so in a degree to leave a noble example, worthy to be followed, no one will question.

Mr. KINSEY. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the good people of the city of St. Louis, especially those who were the pioneers in her great commercial development, would not willingly allow this occasion to pass without having uttered, in their behalf, some word of tribute to the memory of Edward J. Gay. For more than half a century he was identified with our growth. He saw a trading-post on the frontier become the metropolis of the Mississippi Valley.

The great arteries of commerce that in later years bore this wealth of half a continent to and from our doors derived much of their energy from him, and dying he has left an indelible impress of his strong and rugged character upon the beautiful city which witnessed the achievements of his early and middle life.

The old-time merchant, who weathered every financial storm; whose word was his bond; whose credit was never tarnished or questioned; who, by the slow and conservative methods less in vogue now than then, built up a colossal fortune and at the same time wisely dispensed charity upon every hand, was no ordinary man. Such were the characteristics of Mr. Gay's business career.

It may well be doubted if any pursuit in these days has developed greater men in the things that really make men great than the successful management of the vast industrial and commercial enterprises of this country. In this line our late colleague and friend was pre-eminent.

The great steel bridge that spans the Father of Waters at St. Louis, her palatial Chamber of Commerce, and a score of other stately and noble structures are witnesses of his foresight, energy, and public spirit as a citizen.

He will be long remembered by our people as among the foremost citizens of his time.

I will not dwell longer upon this phase of his life, nor will I venture to speak of his public career as a member of this House. Others have done that more fittingly than I am able to.

In private life Mr. Gay was a christian gentleman, unostentatious, generous, kind, and helpful. His memory will be revered by many a weary soul whose burdens were made lighter by his generous hand.

His associates in all the walks of life will not soon forget him. His ashes now sleep in Bellefontaine, our beautiful city of the dead, where loving hands have erected a stately monument to mark his last resting place, in sight of which the commerce of the mighty West, which he helped to create, floats by, unheeded now, to the sea.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, just recognition of the merits of the dead is among the noblest of our impulses.

Cherishing the virtues of friends who have passed into "the great beyond," is to be commended.

Edward J. Gay, of Louisiana, the subject of our present sorrowful and most respectful consideration, surrounded by saddened hearts of the loved home circle, watched by the tenderest care of a devoted wife, peacefully passed beyond the skies to that brighter home May 30, 1889. That ending of a beautiful spring, which was succeeded by a glorious summer, typical of the closing of a successful life and the transformation into that life of glorious radiance of our Father's love.

Edward J. Gay was born at Liberty, Bedford County, Virginia, February 3, 1816. His father, John H. Gay, and family removed in 1830 to Illinois, and thence to St. Louis, Mo., in 1824, where he settled. He spent several years under the tuition of John H. Dennis, an accomplished teacher residing in Belleville, Ill.; and in 1833-'34 at Augusta College, Kentucky. He became familiar with business affairs in early life from being intrusted by his father with transactions of importance and responsibility. He was extensively engaged in commercial affairs at St. Louis, Mo., from 1838 to 1860; since 1855 he resided in Louisiana, and was largely engaged in commercial, manufacturing, and agricultural pursuits. He was prominently instrumental in the enterprise of the erection of the first and the present Merchants' Exchange building in St. Louis, and was the first president of the Louisiana Sugar Exchange of New Orleans. He was elected to Congress three consecutive times, thus proving his popularity with those whom he served so faithfully to his death.

Mr. Speaker, while we miss the companionship of our colleague, while we shall never more feel that cordial grasp of his friendly salutation, while we bow in meek submission to the will of "Him who doeth all things well," let us strive to follow the example set for us by our friend, hoping that when we sleep our last sleep we will have made as fair a record of good and faithful service as he has done.

"Love one another" was taught ages ago. How can we better follow this divine precept than to record the virtues of our dead companion?

'Tis of his virtues I would speak and say that with his head and hand and heart he profited my State, my home, and my people.

Mr. Speaker, monuments are reared commemorating deeds of valor, daring, and bravery, to illustrate respect, love, or veneration for the heroic dead, but in time these will pass away, while the good deeds of the silent worker, imbued with honest, noble purpose, will survive long after monuments shall have crumbled into dust. No monument of bronze or chiseled stone will rear its prominence aloft to mark the battle-deeds or war-famed glory of Edward J. Gay, but fervid smoke from towering chimneys of industrial plants established as his work will prove his record as a benefactor. I can not chant or loudly acclaim his victories of "broil and battle," but I can tell you of his love for home, where quiet and contentment were; where the loved wife in peace and pleasure reigned; where children dwelt, happy and gladdened by a father's presence and a parent's love; where nature smiled and happiness prevailed.

The tear-filled eyes and hearts so full, now mute in anguish round the hearthstone of that Southern home, are far more eloquent than spoken words (howe'er well phrased) to show the grief wrought by this "king of terrors."

Grateful hearts remember acts of kindness by our lamented friend, and know that penury and want could not prevail where industry and application joined with favor from our colleague's hand.

I know of those who but for help and aid from Mr. Gay would now be weary and disheartened with this world of care; I know of men who, now quite prominent in life, admit their obligations to that noble friend. Shall I, with this advantage to relate, let slip this chance to tell of my dead friend? Shall I do that which I am called to do and speak of him as he is entitled to? Or shall I let some gossips prate of what they think they know, and scratch the record he's entitled to? By industry and use of knowledge gained from books and men, he ventured out in enterprises new, that brought him profit, which, reinvested with progressive skill, brought more gain and success, until some called him "stilted;" but when he saw more plainly than some others could, it was but natural that his vision soared above that of his critics.

I knew him as a customer; so versed was he in my industrial line of business that I got ideas from his views which served me in my factory. And yet he passed not as a mechanic, but, fixed in notions of his own, he forced success, and, with success, reward.

His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, This was a man!

Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measured by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Mr. is susper esteemed shores of delegation of death.
the mids
the thron
the narro from the
the spirit

The pe
the imple
ward J. C path of c traits of long care
This man vigor of n hands and the excur of years, ruption t planting.

His har increase large field as a man ance, gre tributes l whose pe of auster tercourse paternal happiness

As a m planter, l having er rect, cou official la to his co
to be rig
As a c low show vouchsaf ready to and perfe given in

But whe doeth.

Thus v
of record

Mr. Sp
a membe to enjoy true wor his activ ties. In interests terminat ceased by remembe as their years of

Mr. W from Oh
TERS], a to speak and I as marks in The S objection
There

We speak what we do feel,
Not what we ought to say.

Good angels guard thee,
Sleep, sleep in peace
And wake in joy.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, again the business of this House is suspended that proper tribute may be paid to the memory of an esteemed colleague who has passed beyond the river of life unto the shores of eternal rest. Within less than half a decade the Louisiana delegation in Congress has been thrice invaded by the insatiable hand of death. Three of Louisiana's statesmen, in almost as many years, in the midst of useful service, have been called to answer a summons from the throne of immortality. They have quietly, all of them, traversed the narrow but fearful limits of the abyss which separates the living from the dead, and have reached the mysterious land wherein dwell the spirits, the statesmen gone before.

The pendulum of unfolding destiny has described another arc, and the implacable decree of fate has terminated the useful career of Edward J. Gay. Born of a parentage whose sturdy arms carved out the path of civilization in the rugged forests of the West, he inherited the traits of unflinching moral courage and indomitable will which, in the long career of a successful life, were his prominent characteristics. This manifested itself in a greater part of his after-life, when, in the vigor of manhood, he met with an accident which paralyzed his arms and hands and rendered him almost helpless physically. Notwithstanding the excruciating pain to which he was subjected through a long series of years, in consequence of his injury, he continued with little interruption the pursuits of his great interests in commercial life and sugar-planting.

His hands were fettered, but his will and mental energy seemed to increase with his physical weakness, and his wonderful activity over a large field of operation in nearly every variety of business marked him as a man of extraordinary resources, possessing remarkable perseverance, great foresight, and unbending purpose. As a result of these attributes he amassed a great fortune and took rank as an able financier, whose peer does not exist in the Southern States. There was nothing of austerity in his private life; nothing of ostentation in his social intercourse. He was plain and hospitable in his home and strong in his paternal and conjugal affection. His home was a model of domestic happiness and tranquillity.

As a merchant, he reached the highest plane of success; as a sugar-planter, he developed the industry to its fullest limit; as a statesman, having entered political life in his maturer years, he was careful, correct, courageous, carrying his business habits and principles into his official labors. As a man, he was upright, just, truthful, sincere, true to his convictions and brave in his advocacy of what he considered to be right.

As a christian, he served his God humbly, with no display of hollow show, but with a contrition inspired by "a heavenly spirit of all grace vouchsafed to man through the sacrifice of the Son of God, which stands ready to enter the hearts of all men who serve God with a willing mind and perfect heart." In charity he followed the injunction of Christ given in the Sermon on the Mount:

But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth.

Thus we have his character; a type worthy of emulation and worthy of record in the history of this House.

Mr. Speaker, it was my good fortune in entering upon the duties as a member of the Fiftieth Congress to occupy a seat near Mr. Gay and to enjoy the benefit of his kind advice. It was here that I learned his true worth as a Representative of his people. I have often wondered at his activity and strict attention to the smallest detail of his official duties. In the discussion of the great questions involving seriously the interests of his people he took an active part, and with unswerving determination avowed the purpose of his course with a courage only possessed by a man of his strong characteristics. Mr. Gay will long be remembered by his constituents for the good work he accomplished as their Representative, and his death has caused a void which many years of patient waiting and earnest endeavor will find unfilled.

I need not be missed, if another succeed me
To reap down those fields which in spring I have sown.
He who plowed and who sowed is not missed by the reaper,
He is only remembered by what he has done.

Needs there be praise of the love-written record,
The name and the epitaph graved on the stone?
The things we have lived for, let them be our story,
We, ourselves, but remembered by what we have done.

Mr. WILKINSON. Mr. Speaker, three gentlemen, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCKINLEY], the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS], and my colleague from Louisiana [Mr. BOATNER], all desired to speak on this occasion. They have been unavoidably detained, and I ask unanimous consent that they have leave to print their remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCCREARY). In the absence of objection, leave will be granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. WILKINSON. I now move the adoption of the resolutions already submitted.

The question being taken, the resolutions were unanimously adopted; and in accordance therewith (at 4 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following communication was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS OF THE STAFF.

Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting petitions and recommendations submitted by the adjutant-general of the commissary sergeants and post quartermaster sergeants stationed at Benicia Barracks and San Diego Barracks, California, for an increase in the pay of non-commissioned officers of the staff—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A bill (S. 826) for the relief of Horatio Phillips Van Cleve—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTIONS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following resolution was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized to have the reports of the United States commissioners to the Centennial International Exhibition at Melbourne, 1888, or such of them as may be accepted by him for publication, printed and bound at the Congressional Printing Office, and that, in addition to the usual number, there shall be 600 extra copies for the use of the Senate, 1,200 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,200 for the use of the Department of State;

to the Committee on Printing.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, reports of committees on bills of the following titles were delivered to the Clerk, ordered to be printed, and referred as follows:

Mr. GEST, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 7469) for the relief of George Stodd—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LANE, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported with amendment the bill (S. 1207) granting a pension to Lydia K. White, a volunteer army nurse—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GROSVENOR, from the Committee on War Claims, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 1786) for the relief of D. M. Sprague and William Tilton—to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ATKINSON, of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 5496) to incorporate the Georgetown and Arlington Railway Company of the District of Columbia—to the House Calendar.

Mr. POST, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 720) for the erection of a public building at Hamilton, Ohio—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DIBBLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 7630) to increase the limit of cost of the public building at Charleston, S. C.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. KERR, of Iowa, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported favorably the bill (S. 2349) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Kansas City, in the State of Missouri—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (S. 233) for the erection of a public building at Danbury, Conn.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 178) to provide for enlarging the proposed public building at Savannah, Ga.; the purchase of another site, if practicable, and for the sale of the present site—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (S. 1027) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, Va., and making an appropriation therefor—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 3279) for the erection of a public building at Rome, Ga.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CLUNIE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union:

A bill (S. 1266) for an extension of appropriation for the erection of a public building at Los Angeles, Cal.; and

A bill (H. R. 953) for a public building at Sheboygan, Wis.*

Mr. VAN SCHAICK, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 467) for the erection of a public building at Saginaw, Mich.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (S. 878) for the improvement and enlargement of the public building at Petersburg, Va.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DIBBLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 3827) for the erection of a public building for the use and accommodation of the United States Geological Survey upon the Government reservation in the city of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEHLBACH, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported with amendment the bill (H. R. 445) for the erection of a shop at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass.—to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CARLTON, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably the following bills; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House:

A bill (H. R. 7388) for the benefit of John T. Leavell; and

A bill (H. R. 7086) for the relief of Merrill Denham.

Mr. ENLOE, from the Committee on War Claims, submitted proposed amendments to the bill (H. R. 7616) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies, etc.; which were ordered printed as part 2 of Report No. 491.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were introduced, severally read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. MANSUR: A bill (H. R. 8521) to regulate, define, establish, and secure the civil, political, and property rights of such American citizens as have intermarried with the Chickasaw Indians, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. TURNER, of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 8522) defining lager beer, also imposing a special tax upon and regulating the manufacture, sale, and importation of adulterated lager beer—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOUK: A bill (H. R. 8523) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Little Tennessee River, at or near Niles Ferry, Tennessee—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. STOCKBRIDGE: A bill (H. R. 8524) for the rebuilding of the United States revenue steamer Thomas Ewing with an iron hull—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8525) to regulate the pay of minors enlisted in the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8526) to provide for the industrial development of the United States, and to reduce the revenue—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROSIUS: A bill (H. R. 8527) for an appropriation for the printing of bulletins of information for Agricultural Department—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. ANDERSON, of Mississippi: A bill (H. R. 8539) relinquishing the title of the United States to certain tracts or parcels of the public lands situated in the State of Mississippi to the purchasers thereof from said State—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PRIVATE BILLS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills of the following titles were presented, and referred as indicated below:

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 8528) granting a pension to O. C. Carpenter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CRAIN: A bill (H. R. 8529) for the relief of Vidal Hernandez—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FITCH: A bill (H. R. 8530) for the relief of Henry Sibo—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GEST: A bill (H. R. 8531) to increase the pension of Elizabeth Malarky—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAYNES: A bill (H. R. 8532) granting a pension to Mary Webster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEARD: A bill (H. R. 8533) for the relief of Miller Thompson—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KELLEY: A bill (H. R. 8534) granting an increase of pension to James W. McMillan, late brevet major-general volunteers—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAWLER: A bill (H. R. 8535) granting a pension to Catharine Quigley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROGERS: A bill (H. R. 8536) for the relief of Benjamin S. Fox—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RUSK: A bill (H. R. 8537) granting a pension to Peter Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WALLACE, of New York: A bill (H. R. 8538) for the relief of James C. Slaght—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXI, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ALLEN, of Michigan: Petition of the Michigan State Board of Agriculture, for the transfer of the Signal Service to the Department of Agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BELDEN: Petition against employment of aliens on public works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. BELKNAP: Petition of the Michigan State Board of Agriculture, to transfer the national weather service to the Department of Agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BLISS: Petition praying that none but citizens of the United States be employed in the construction of Government buildings—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Michigan Agricultural College to transfer the national weather service to Agricultural Department from the War Department—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, of Kentucky: Petition of citizens of the District of Columbia, for a national Sunday-rest law—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BREWEK: Petition of Agricultural College of Michigan—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CANNON: Papers to accompany House bill granting a pension to O. C. Carpenter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CARUTH: Papers to accompany H. R. 1295, granting an increase of pension to Margaret J. Lovell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHIPMAN: Petition of Michigan State Board of Agriculture, praying that the Weather Bureau shall be transferred to the Agricultural Department—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Union No. 2 of the city of Detroit, Mich., of the Bricklayers and Masons' Union of America, against the employment of aliens by the Federal Government in the construction of the public works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CONGER: Memorial of Robert Henderson post, Grand Army of the Republic, Bayard, Iowa, in favor of service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CUTCHEON: Memorial of the State Board of Agriculture for the reorganization of the Signal Corps and the transfer of the weather service from the War Department to the Department of Agriculture—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of farmers' and beekeepers' associations of Newaygo County, Michigan, in favor of free coinage of silver—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. DE LANO: Petition of bricklayers and masons of the International Union of America, No. 46, protesting against aliens being employed on Government works, etc.—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. FINLEY: Petition of citizens of Green, Hart, and Edmonson Counties, in Kentucky, asking that appropriation of money be made to extend slack-water navigation as high up Green River as Greensburg—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FITCH: Petition of Union No. 37, city of New York, Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, protesting against employment of alien labor on public buildings and other Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. GEST: Petition and proof upon the bill to pension Elizabeth Mulosky—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of 30 clerks in second-class post-offices of Vermont—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of Robert Krounz and 104 others, members of German societies, Davenport, Iowa, protesting against the passage of any law materially changing present naturalization and immigration laws—to the Select Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HAYNES: Petition of Capt. George P. McKay, of Cleveland, Ohio, and 54 others, owners and masters of vessels at Cleveland, Ohio, for the early completion of the Toledo, Ohio, harbor improvement—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa: Resolutions passed by E. C. Little Post, No. 54, Grand Army of the Republic, Independence, Iowa, Department of Iowa, urging the passage of the service-pension bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions of Buckeye Alliance, No. 1371, Alden, Iowa; Vernon Township Alliance of Farmers, No. 835, Dows, Iowa, and Union Alliance of Farmers, No. 1203, Cedar Falls, Iowa, favoring the Butterworth bill against gambling in farm produce—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LAWLER: Petition of Chicago Leather Association, against duty on hides—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of book publishers, in favor of the passage of the resolution in favor of introducing short-hand method of spelling in the Government Printing Office—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. LEE: Petition of Charles A. Day, for pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MORGAN: Petition of J. M. Calhoun and 69 others, against the Conger bill taxing compound lard—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'DONNELL: Petition of the Michigan State Board of Agriculture, praying that the Weather Bureau be transferred to the control of the Department of Agriculture—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PETERS: Petition of citizens of Ness County, Kansas, for aid in developing the sugar industry in Kansas—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. PRICE: Petition of Pierre Breaux, of Terre Bonne Parish, Louisiana, for reference of his claim to the Court of Claims under the provisions of the Tucker act and Bowman act—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. QUINN: Petition of the United States Brewers' Association—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. RAY: Petition of Subordinate Union No. 11, city of Washington, Pa., of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, praying that the laws be so amended that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed on Government works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. ROGERS: Resolutions of Memphis Cotton Exchange, against taxing cotton-seed oil—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of Chamber of Commerce of Fort Smith, Ark., in relation to a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the International Union of the Masons and Bricklayers of America, against the employment of foreign labor—to the Committee on Labor.

Also, resolutions of Merchants' Exchange, Memphis, Tenn., against taxing cotton-seed oil—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. RUSK: Papers and petition relating to bill for a pension for Peter Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL: Resolutions of the New Haven (Conn.) Typotheta, in favor of copyright bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STONE, of Missouri: Resolutions of the board of directors of the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, with regard to the Edmunds inspection bill, for hog products intended for export—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Peter R. Johnson, praying that his claim be referred to the Court of Claims—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STRUBLE: Resolutions passed by Alliance No. 1204, Spirit Lake, Iowa, urging the passage of H. R. 5353—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolutions passed by Pleasant Valley Farmers' Alliance, No. 775, Iowa, urging passage of same measure—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. TOWNSEND, of Pennsylvania: Petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, against employment of aliens on public works—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. WASHINGTON: Resolution of Huron Union, Pleasant View, Tenn., regarding election of President, Vice-President, and United States Senators by direct vote of the people—to the Select Committee on the Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

Also, resolutions of Farmers' Exchange, Memphis, Tenn., regarding compound lard—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. WHEELER, of Michigan: Petition of Spencer M. Hill and 11 other vessel-owners and masters of the Great Lakes, praying for an appropriation for breakwater at Petoskey, Mich.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

SENATE.

MONDAY, March 24, 1890.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. G. BUTLER, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 3 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Atlanta, Ga., praying for the passage of laws providing for the employment of only citizens of the United States on Government works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the petition of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Mrs. Mary S. Logan, Clara Barton, Susan B. Anthony, Clara Bewick Colby, Mrs. J. H. Spofford, Olivia M. Ford, Mrs. J. F. Macfarland, Mrs. Dr. Reiley,

A. M. Chamberlain, and many others, prominent ladies of Washington, D. C., and Lavinia H. Chase and Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Massachusetts, and many others, praying for the establishment of an inebriate asylum in the District of Columbia for the treatment of males or females; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a letter from C. A. Power, secretary of the Indiana State Service-Pension Association, transmitting a copy of resolutions adopted by that association favoring certain pension legislation; which, with the accompanying resolutions, was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. WASHBURN presented a petition of citizens of St. Paul, Minn., praying Congress to amend the laws so that none but citizens of the United States shall be permitted to work on any public buildings, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MANDERSON presented a preamble and resolutions adopted by the board of supervisors of York County, Nebraska, favoring an appropriation for a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of subordinate lodges of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Lincoln, Omaha, and Kearney, in the State of Nebraska, praying for legislation against the employment of aliens on Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. MANDERSON. I present a memorial of 205 citizens of Lancaster County, Nebraska, remonstrating against the reduction of the duty on sugar, and praying for aid to encourage the production of sugar from beets and sorghum. As this is a matter that pertains to the question of the tariff on sugar, I presume the memorial should go to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PADDOCK. A bill on that subject has been referred by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to the Committee on Finance.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The memorial will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOAR. I present sundry petitions from the Bricklayers' Union, citizens of Worcester, Springfield, Lowell, and Fitchburg, all populous cities in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to the same effect as those presented by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], in favor of legislation prohibiting the employment of aliens on Government works. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I present the memorial of H. J. Skeffington, on behalf of the Boot and Shoe Makers' International Union, remonstrating against the ratification of a certain extradition treaty with Russia. I suppose the memorial should be presented in executive session, as the question of its reference might be debated and might be determined upon considerations which could not now be made public.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has already agreed to receive petitions of that character in open session. They have been received and referred on previous occasions to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HOAR. I present the memorial in open session, but it is contrary to my judgment of the proper course.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The memorial will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, presented a petition of 580 citizens of Pueblo and Maniton Springs, Colo., praying for the passage of an act opening to settlement the abandoned military reservation at Pike's Peak, Colorado; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented resolutions adopted by McMillan Post, No. 463, Grand Army of the Republic, of Baxter, Iowa, in favor of the passage of the service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PADDOCK. I present a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Grand Island, Nebr., praying for an amendment to the law so that none but citizens of the United States shall be employed on Government works. I also present a similar petition from the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Lincoln, Nebr.; also, a similar one from the same organization at Kearney, Nebr. I move that the petitions be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PADDOCK presented resolutions adopted by the board of supervisors of York County, Nebraska, praying for an appropriation by Congress to complete the improvement of the harbor at Galveston, Tex.; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. STEWART presented twenty-nine petitions signed by 1,003 members of the Farmers' Alliance, citizens of Nebraska, praying for the free coinage of silver; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. STOCKBRIDGE presented petitions of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Muskegon and Manistee, in the State of Michigan, praying for legislation against the employment of aliens upon any and all Government works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of farmers, citizens of Portage, Mich.,

praying for legislation to prevent speculation in grain; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a memorial of the Springfield (Ohio) Monthly Meeting of Friends, remonstrating against large expenditures for the Navy and coast defenses; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented a petition of 32 citizens of Ted post-office, Bloom Township, Wood County, Ohio, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PIERCE presented a memorial of the Legislature of North Dakota, which was referred to the Select Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint memorial.

Whereas it is desirable to make a thorough test of artesian-well water for irrigation purposes; and

Whereas, owing to the facility for getting a good flow of water, the vicinity of the city of Edgely, La Moure County, North Dakota, would be a good location for making such test: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the State of North Dakota (the senate concurring), That our Senators in Congress be instructed and our Representatives requested to use their best endeavors to secure through Congress the passage of an act appropriating $15,000 per annum for sinking artesian wells on an experiment farm near the city of Edgely for the purpose of testing the utility of the water from such wells for irrigation, and that certified copies of the foregoing memorial, signed by the presiding officers and chief clerks of the Legislative Assembly, be forwarded to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

D. B. WELLMAN, Speaker of the House.

Attest:

J. G. HAMILTON, Chief Clerk.

ALFRED DICKEY, President of the Senate.

Attest:

C. C. BOWSFIELD, Secretary.

Mr. PIERCE presented a petition of 45 farmers of Stutsman County, North Dakota, praying for the passage of Senate bill 2607, creating a commission to investigate the causes of agricultural depression; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of St. Louis, Mo., and a memorial of the Cigar-Makers' Union No. 444, of St. Louis, Mo., remonstrating against the ratification of the proposed extradition treaty with Russia; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BLACKBURN presented a petition of certain citizens of Covington, Ky., praying for legislation in the interest of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. DAWES presented a memorial of the New England Ship-Owners' Association, remonstrating against free ships; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented petitions of subordinate unions of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Lowell, Worcester, Lawrence, Springfield, and Fitchburg, in the State of Massachusetts, praying for such an amendment of the laws as will prevent the employment of aliens on public works; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. DAWES. I present a memorial of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union, remonstrating against the ratification of a treaty. I should like to inquire whether these memorials are received in open session?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Memorials relating to the ratification of the proposed treaty with Russia have been received in legislative session.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to raise the point of order upon that question once more.

Mr. VEST. The question was decided the other day by a vote of the Senate. My colleague [Mr. COCKRELL] raised the question.

Mr. HOAR. I know that; but very few members of the Senate, I think, were present. I understand that the members of the Committee on Foreign Relations were not present. I think every Senator will see that as the matter of the reference of such a petition or memorial is open for debate it may involve questions not disclosed, and the mere fact that there is such a treaty pending may be assumed in a petition and yet not have been properly disclosed by the Senate. I think the previous decision ought to be reversed at once.

Mr. DAWES. I suppose that until the vote the other day there never was any question about it that such petitions should be presented in executive session. I was aware of the vote the other day, but it seemed to me a departure from the custom. I have no choice myself. I am not so strong a believer in everything being done in secret session as some.

Mr. VEST. Of course it makes no material difference. I presented a large number of these petitions in executive session. I suppose I can state that.

Mr. DAWES. I have one more of these memorials.

Mr. HOAR. I will withdraw the point of order for the time being, because the Senate does not want to be delayed with the matter now.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to have a full Senate when the question is discussed, because I think the Senate did exactly right.

Mr. HOAR. Of course this a departure—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the memorial presented by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MORGAN presented a petition of 94 voters, citizens of Dallas County, Alabama, praying for the free coinage of silver; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of Subordinate Union No. 2 of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, of Mobile, Ala., praying that the employment of labor on Government works be limited to citizens of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a petition of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America, in St. Louis, Mo., dated March 19, 1890, and signed by the president and secretary, calling attention to certain laws of the United States in regard to the erection and construction of public buildings and the employment of aliens to work upon such buildings, and protesting that it is not right, and that preference should be given to citizens of the United States.

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PUGH. I present a petition upon the same subject from the same organization in the city of Mobile, Ala., and I move that it be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WALTHALL presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of Columbus, Miss., and a memorial of the Natchez (Miss.) Cotton and Merchants' Exchange, remonstrating against legislation having for its object the taxation of compound lard, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. BATE presented a memorial embodying a resolution adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring an appropriation for the protection of Chattanooga and the low lands near the Tennessee River in front of Chattanooga, likewise the national cemetery at that place, from overflow; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BERRY presented a petition of Subordinate Union, No. 2, of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union of America of Little Rock, Ark., praying for the employment of none but American citizens on the public works; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of the Farmers' Exchange of Memphis, Tenn., remonstrating against the bill to tax compound lard; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MITCHELL presented memorials, numerous signed by citizens of Oregon, remonstrating against the passage of the bill known as the Pacific Railroad refunding bill, or any law by which the time shall be extended in which payment shall be made of the amounts due or to become due the Government from the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition signed by many citizens, letter-carriers, and others, of Portland, Oregon, praying for the passage of House bill No. 3863, fixing the maximum pay of letter-carriers at $1,200 per annum and providing for substitute letter-carriers at $200 per annum; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. FRYE presented a petition of 600 citizens of Idaho Territory, a petition of the governor, secretary of state, attorney-general, and members of the Legislature of Montana, also of citizens and residents of Helena, Mont.; a petition of B. F. Waite, ex-governor of Montana, and 86 other prominent citizens of Dillon, Mont.; a petition of merchants, miners, manufacturers, and other prominent citizens of Anaconda, Mont.; a petition of 56 citizens of Deer Lodge, Mont., and a petition of citizens of Butte, Mont., praying for the passage of the Union Pacific funding bill; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. INGALLS presented a petition of citizens of Sumner, Marion, and Labette Counties, Kansas; a petition of citizens of Montgomery County, Kansas, and a petition of citizens of Kansas, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post No. 32, Nebraska, and a petition of Grand Army of the Republic Post No. 82, Nebraska, in favor of Senate bill No. 496, removing the limitation in the arrears-of-pension act; which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a petition of sundry owners and tenants of property in Washington, D. C., praying for the improvement of certain streets in that city; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BLAIR presented a memorial of Mrs. E. E. Faulkner, and 32 other leading citizens of Keene, N. H., remonstrating against the removal of the Southern Utes from their present reservation; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented a petition of 85 citizens of the District of Columbia and a petition of citizens of Idaho, praying for the passage of a Sunday-rest law; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PLUMB presented a petition of the Greeley County (Kansas)

Veterans' Association, praying for the passage of the service-pension bill; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented a memorial of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of Atchison County, Kansas, remonstrating against the passage of the bill authorizing the issuing of United States bonds as a basis for the national-banking system; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of the Board of Trade of Topeka, Kans., remonstrating against the imposition of a duty upon ores imported from Mexico; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of E. B. Cowgill and other citizens of Kansas, praying for certain legislation in regard to the beet and sorghum sugar industry; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TELLER presented a petition of the board of county commissioners of Fremont County, Colorado, and a petition of the city council of Pueblo, Colo., praying for an appropriation by Congress for a deep-water harbor at Galveston, Tex.; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FARWELL presented the petition of the Rockford Typographical Union, No. 213, of Rockford, Ill., praying that Senate bill 232, relating to copyrights, be made a law; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, presented the memorial of Joseph Scott and other citizens of Arkansas, remonstrating against the passage of the bills pending relating to compound lard; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WALTHALL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom were referred the bill (S. 1214) for the relief of Thomas J. Spencer and the bill (S. 1215) for the relief of Thomas J. Spencer, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bills were postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2197) to increase the pension of Ziba Yarnell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SAWYER, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 956) to amend section 25 of the act of March 3, 1879, entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes," reported it without amendment.

Mr. STANFORD, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1512) to erect a public building at Lima, Ohio, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 407) to authorize the acquisition of certain parcels of real estate embraced in square No. 380 of the city of Washington, to provide an eligible site for a city post-office, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the bill (S. 298) to increase the accommodations at the marine hospital at Detroit, Mich., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3062) making appropriations for continuing the erection of the public building at Worcester, Mass., reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 848) to authorize the construction of an addition to the public building in Dallas, Tex., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. STEWART, from the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2109) to insure the purity of elections in the Territory of Arizona, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PLATT, from the Committee on Territories, to whom was referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1590) to ratify an act entitled "An act to provide for a wagon-road between Mount Idaho, in Idaho County, and Little Salmon Meadows, in Washington County," in Idaho Territory;

A bill (H. R. 6474) to submit the location of the county seat of Shoshone County, Idaho Territory, to a vote of the people of said county; and

A bill (H. R. 7170) to authorize the city of Ogden, Utah, to assume an increased indebtedness.

Mr. PLUMB, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 326) ceding, upon condition, public lands to the State of California and other existing States, and to the eventual States to be formed out of the existing Territories, in aid of the irrigation of dry and arid lands, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. DOLPH, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 455) to reimburse settlers and purchasers on even-numbered sections of public lands within the limits of Congressional grants in cases of forfeiture of odd-numbered sections, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3027) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of certain settlers on the public lands, and to provide for the repayment of certain fees, purchase-money, and commissions paid on void entries of public lands," reported it with amendments.

ZOOLOGICAL PARK COMMISSION REPORT.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back favorably a House concurrent resolution to print the report of the Zoological Park Commission. I ascertain that the cost of printing the report, which is of local importance, will be $38.02. I ask that the resolution may be considered at this time.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring therein), That there be printed of the report of the Zoological Park Commission, and its accompanying maps, 1,000 extra copies, of which 250 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 250 copies for the use of the Zoological Park Commission.

SENATORS FROM MONTANA.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom were referred the papers purporting to be the credentials of Messrs. Sanders, Power, Clark, and Maginnis, severally claiming seats from the State of Montana, to submit a report and to report the accompanying resolutions.

I wish to state that the minority of the committee desire to submit a minority report, and I ask that this report be not printed until to-morrow morning, when the views of the minority will be presented. I also ask that sundry papers and documents which accompany the report may be printed as an appendix. I wish to have the resolutions read. The resolutions in the cases of Clark and Maginnis should be first read and then in the cases of Sanders and Power. That is the usual course.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolutions reported by the committee will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That William A. Clark is not entitled to be admitted to a seat in the Senate from the State of Montana.

Resolved, That Martin Maginnis is not entitled to be admitted to a seat in the Senate from the State of Montana.

Resolved, That Wilbur F. Sanders is entitled, upon the merits of the case, to be admitted to a seat in the Senate from the State of Montana.

Resolved, That Thomas C. Power is entitled, upon the merits of the case, to be admitted to a seat in the Senate from the State of Montana.

Mr. GRAY. I am directed in behalf of the minority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections to submit to the Senate resolutions declaring that Messrs. Sanders and Power are not entitled to be admitted to seats in the Senate and that Messrs. Clark and Maginnis are so entitled. I have in my hand a report in behalf of the minority of the committee, expressing their views upon the contested election, but inasmuch as one of the members of the minority has been absent from the city for some days there has been no opportunity for a conference, and I ask leave on behalf of the minority to withhold the minority views until to-morrow, in order that such conference may be had.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Leave will be granted, if there be no objection.

Mr. GRAY. I ask, as the delay will not be long, that the report of the majority be not printed until to-morrow, when our report will follow it.

Mr. HOAR. I have already made that request. I desire the report of the majority to be withheld until to-morrow, and I give notice that on the return of the report from the printer, which I suppose will be by Wednesday morning, I shall ask the Senate to proceed as early as may be with the consideration of the case. As Senators may like to have an opportunity to read the reports, I shall not call up the matter before Thursday, but on Thursday morning, if there be no objection, I shall ask the Senate to take up these cases for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolutions will be placed on the Calendar.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FREMONT, NEBR.

Mr. SPOONER. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 533) for the erection of a public building at Fremont, Nebr., to report it with an amendment.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be acted upon at this time for the reason which I shall state. The Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have at this session adopted a new form of public-building bills. The other House is using the old form. The Senate has also been in the habit of incorporating an appropriation clause in such bills. The other House sends bills here without such a clause. It is important that there should be some conference and agreement between the two Houses on both of these questions. A number of House bills are being held up to await the result of the conference. In order that we may have an immediate conference upon the subject between the committees of the two Houses I should like to have the amendment put on the House bill that we may insist on the amendment and ask for a conference.

Mr. HARRIS. Is it a House amendment to a bill of the Senate that the Senator asks us to consider?

Mr. SPOONER. No; it is a Senate committee amendment to a House bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. INGALLS. Can the Senator from Wisconsin inform us what action has been taken in connection with the Senate bills that have already passed the other House with an amendment, perhaps six or eight in number?

Mr. SPOONER. They are in the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds awaiting the result of a conference on the bill now reported.

Mr. INGALLS. Why should not they all be put into conference?

Mr. SPOONER. They will be reported after a little while.

Mr. INGALLS. It seems to me that the discrimination against the bills that have already passed both Houses is indefensible; that is to say, having been sent to the other House and having been returned with an amendment they should be entitled to prior consideration. I speak of this because I am interested personally in one of them which happens to provide for a public building at the town where I reside. There ought, it seems to me, to be such disposition of those bills as would put them all on the same footing, and not let this one go to a conference and let the others remain in committee subject to such action as may be taken hereafter.

Mr. SPOONER. If the committee of conference shall agree to the position of the House of Representatives upon the subject, we shall require no conference on the other bills, but the Senate will be asked to accede to the House amendments.

Mr. INGALLS. But the Senator is mistaken about that from the fact that the bills as they come from the other House are unintelligible and insensible. The appropriating clause is stricken out of the bills as they passed the Senate, but there are still clauses remaining in the bills which provide that certain expenses shall be paid out of the appropriation therein made. Therefore it is absolutely impossible that the bills should be passed as they came from the House of Representatives. There must necessarily be an agreement upon the necessary amendments to make them intelligible.

Mr. SPOONER. I have not looked over the bills to which the Senator from Kansas refers, but I will say to him that they will be very promptly reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 533) for the erection of a public building at Fremont, Nebr.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. PADDOCK. I do not understand the proceeding exactly.

Mr. SPOONER. I asked unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the House bill providing for the erection of a public building at Fremont, Nebr., in order that we may put to it a Senate amendment, so as to get it speedily into conference.

Mr. PADDOCK. That is satisfactory to me. I desired the information; that was all.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read at length as in Committee of the Whole.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, secure by condemnation, or otherwise acquire, a proper site for, and cause to be constructed at Fremont, Nebr., a suitable building for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices, at a cost not exceeding $60,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall cause plans and estimates to be made so that no expenditure shall be made or authorized for a full completion of said building beyond the sum hereby appropriated; and the said building herein provided for shall be at least 50 feet removed from any other building: Provided, That no money be used or applied for the purposes mentioned until a valid title for the site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall cede to the General Government of the United States jurisdiction over the property and exempt the same from taxation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds report to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, and other Government offices, in the city of Fremont and State of Nebraska, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $60,000, which said sum of $60,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose, out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plans, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plans, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch-plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch-plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon, at Fremont, in the State of Nebraska."

Mr. SPOONER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, and request a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. SPOONER, Mr. MORRILL, and Mr. VEST were appointed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BLACKBURN (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3244) granting a pension to Jacob Leiber; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. MORRILL (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3245) for the regulation of the practice of dentistry in the District of Columbia, and for the protection of the people from empiricism in relation thereto; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 3246) for the examination and survey of certain rivers in the State of Washington, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 3247) granting a pension to Jacob Berg; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BATE (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3248) granting a pension to Eli G. Fleming; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 3249) to establish a port of delivery at Nashville, Tenn.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. INGALLS (by request) introduced a bill (S. 3250) to reduce the pay proper of minors enlisting in the Army; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 3251) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Fosnot; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 3252) granting a pension to Charles A. Sargent; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLUMB introduced a bill (S. 3253) for the relief of Myron S. Piper; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 3254) to authorize the purchase of the copyrights and stereotype plates of Hickey's Constitution of the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. DAWES introduced a bill (S. 3255) for the erection of a shop at the National Armory, Springfield, Mass.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. HOAR submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 4970) to simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenues; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 280) to amend "An act to incorporate the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company of the District of Columbia," which became a law August 10, A. D. 1883;

An act (S. 1083) to amend the "act giving the approval and sanction of Congress to the route and termini of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad in the District of Columbia;" and

An act (S. 1272) to increase the limit of cost of the public building authorized by act of Congress, approved June 30, 1886, to be erected at El Paso, Tex.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. BLAIR, it was Ordered, That the papers now on file in the Secretary's office in the case of Patrick Larkin, late a private in Company K, Fourth Vermont Volunteers, be returned to the Adjutant-General of the Army.

TESTS OF NITRO-GLYCERINE SHELLS.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate, as soon as may be, a copy of the report to the Chief of Ordnance, United States Army, dated on or about November 11, 1887, by the ordnance board, of certain tests at Sandy Hook of a new method of firing shells charged with nitro-glycerine from ordinary guns, and also a copy of that part of the report, dated September 30, 1889, of Maj. Gen. O. O. Howard, to the Adjutant-General, United States Army, relating to the same subject.

Mr. COCKRELL also submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate, as soon as may be, a copy of the reports to the Chief of Ordnance, United States Navy, dated on or about November 1, 1887, and July 6, 1889, by the ordnance board, of the tests made at Newport and Annapolis of a new method of firing shells charged with nitro-glycerine from ordinary guns.

COLUMBIA RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. ALLEN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the Senate any information in his possession concerning any interruption to navigation by reason of a bar in the Columbia River between the city of Vancouver and the mouth of the Willamette River, and of the character thereof, and approximate cost of removing said bar, together with such facts and considerations as he may deem important respecting the same.

ELMER A. SNOW.

Mr. BLAIR. On Saturday, Order of Business No. 393, being the bill (S. 2391) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow, was passed. There is in possession of the Senate the same bill passed by the other House. I desire to move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate bill was passed and then to call up the House bill and have it passed. The bills are identical in their provision. I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill (S. 2391) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow was passed. The bill is still in the possession of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The House bill is not on the Calendar, and must be in the hands of the Committee on Pensions, the Chair is advised.

Mr. BLAIR. The Senate bill was on the Calendar and was passed on Saturday. It is still in the possession of the Senate, and I move to reconsider the vote by which it was passed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion to reconsider.

Mr. HARRIS. What is the motion? I did not hear it.

Mr. BLAIR. We passed a Senate pension bill on Saturday which is identical with a House pension bill now in the possession of the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator wants to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed?

Mr. BLAIR. Yes, sir.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR. I now move to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6099) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow.

Mr. SHERMAN. The committee will have to be discharged from its further consideration, I suppose?

Mr. BLAIR. Just as soon as this bill is disposed of, I shall move the indefinite postponement of the Senate bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I say the committee will have to be discharged from the further consideration of the House bill in order to get it on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. Has the House bill been reported to the Senate?

Mr. BLAIR. I do not understand that it has been referred to the Committee on Pensions. Is it not in the possession of the Secretary?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not been reported to the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Has it been referred to the committee?

Mr. BLAIR. I will move that the Committee on Pensions be discharged from the further consideration of the House bill.

Mr. HARRIS. It has not been referred to the committee, I understand. If not, the Senator from New Hampshire simply desires to ask for the consideration of the House bill.

Mr. BLAIR. I understand that the bill has been referred to the Committee on Pensions. The clerk of the committee informs me that it has been referred to the committee. So I now move to discharge the Committee on Pensions from the further consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR. I now move that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read first.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6099) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow.

Mr. SHERMAN. Did that pass the other House at the present session?

Mr. BLAIR. The bill has passed the other House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire asks for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Where is the bill now? Is it on the Calendar?

Mr. BLAIR. It was not placed on the Calendar. It comes from the other House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Committee on Pensions has been discharged from the further consideration of the bill and it now is before the Senate. It is not on the Calendar.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let the bill be read for information.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Whereas a pension of $100 per month is allowed by act of Congress approved February 12, 1889, to those who lost both hands, and loss of use of both hands is just as severe a disability, requiring the same aid and attention, and said Elmer A. Snow was then totally disabled in both hands from gunshot wounds received in line of duty: Therefore,

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Elmer A. Snow, late a trumpeter in M Troop, Third United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension of $100 per month in lieu of the pension now received by him.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Now, let us hear the report read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is no report, the bill never having been reported from any committee, the Chair understands.

Mr. BLAIR. It is a House bill.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There must be a report accompanying the bill, or a Senate report on the Senate bill. I understand that there was a Senate bill.

Mr. FRYE. The Senate passed a bill on Saturday exactly like this.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We want to hear the Senate report then.

Mr. BLAIR. It can undoubtedly be sent for. It is the one the Senate acted upon on Saturday and is not now in possession of the Senate. It has been sent for.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Was the report read on Saturday?

Mr. BLAIR. I was not present; I do not know.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I was not present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report has been sent for.

Mr. EDMUNDS. We shall get it in a minute, I suppose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions on the 11th of February.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I presume the papers are in the committee-room, and perhaps it may take some little time to find the report.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not apprehend that it will. I should be glad to get through with the bill now. A similar bill has been passed by both the Senate and the House. This is only an effort to get the man his pension without any unnecessary or unusual delay, and it is a common procedure in such cases.

Mr. EDMUNDS. I see it is. We only want to know what we are voting upon. I was about to suggest that we have unanimous consent to lay this bill aside informally to be taken up the moment the report can be found, to save time; that was all. I do not wish to postpone it.

Mr. BLAIR. The report will be here in quicker time than it would take to lay the bill aside informally.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Very well; I have no objection to waiting.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not think we ought to wait. This bill has had its day; it has been passed, and no doubt it will pass again at any moment when it is reached. If the morning business is through, I will submit a motion to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business of Friday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business? If not, the Calendar is in order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Pending the Calendar, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business of Friday.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Ohio if it would not be well for us to devote the hour between now and 2 o'clock to the regular order, which is the Calendar under Rule VIII, and take up the unfinished business promptly at 2 o'clock. We are making very slow progress upon the Calendar, and I think it important that we should proceed with it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report upon the bill under consideration is now in the possession of the Senate.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Let it be read. It is short.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report submitted by Mr. BLAIR February 11, 1890, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2391) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow, have examined the same, and report: Elmer A. Snow was discharged as a trumpeter of M. Troop, Third United States Cavalry, March 19, 1877, on surgeon's certificate of disability, a copy of which, from the files of the Pension Office, says:

"Gunshot wounds of right elbow and both wrists and all the joints of both hands; unable to dress or feed himself. Disability total."

And from the Adjutant-General's Office:

"Gunshot wound left wrist and right arm; fractures of bones of wrist and arm."

And Examining Surgeon T. B. Hood says:

"Gunshot wound of left wrist. The ball entered near the head of radius and passed through, fracturing the bones and injuring the joint, also cutting of the radial artery; the motion of the wrist is limited, flexed on the forearm, the palm stiff, the fingers extended and impossible of but limited and feeble flexion; can not grasp a fork or knife in this hand, and can certainly not use it in any kind of labor. Equal to the loss of hand and permanent. Gunshot wound near the right elbow-joint, injuring the nerves supplying forearm and hand, which are paralyzed and useless; fingers stiff and unmovable by the will; can grasp nothing in this hand; equal to the loss of a hand. We believe this man's disability is permanent and he requires, and always will require, aid and attendance."

James H. C. Gaskins, an attendant, says on oath:

"I have undressed and dressed him, cut up his food and buttered his bread, brushed his clothes, and undressed him in the water-closet sufficient for him to obey the calls of nature, and other minor aid."

Patrick H. Briscoe, another attendant, on oath says:

"I have undressed him, cut up his food, buttered his bread, put on his overcoat, buttoned his shoes, and rendered much other aid; said aid being necessary, as said E. A. Snow has lost the use of both his hands."

Samuel G. Wooding, on oath, says:

"I have undressed and dressed him and washed him at the bath-rooms in the House of Representatives at different times."

All the above were sworn to March 20, A. D. 1879. He now receives a pension of $72 per month under act of Congress approved June 16, 1880.

He was before your committee with his supporters off, and it was apparent to us that he was as utterly helpless and as totally disabled as if his hands were amputated; and he is constantly obliged to wear a supporter on his left forearm and hand to hold his left wrist-joint together, and also one on his right arm from above his elbow to his hand to support his right elbow-joint, arm, and hand.

The act of Congress approved February 12, 1889, contained a clause for the loss of use of both hands. The House committee, in striking out that clause, said:

"While it is probable there are some soldiers whose hands were not amputated who suffer as great a disability as though amputation had been performed, most of that class have some use of their hands; to include this class necessarily will complicate the matter. There are twenty-one soldiers whose hands have been amputated. When they are cared for, other classes, if suffering as great a disability, can urge their claims."

It is very clear to your committee that Mr. Snow is suffering from as great a disability, and has been since the 12th day of February, 1889, and has been as great a sufferer, requiring the same aid and attention, and is one of the cases contemplated in the report.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments: Strike out the word "Treasury," in third line, and insert the word "Interior." Strike out all after the word "month," in the seventh line, and insert the following words: "in lieu of the pension he is now receiving."

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Now, I insist on my motion.

Mr. BLAIR. I move that the bill (S. 2391) granting an increase of pension to Elmer A. Snow be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to some and disagreed to other amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7496) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes; that it had agreed to the fifty-fifth amendment of the Senate with an amendment; and that it asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. HENDERSON of Iowa, Mr. CANNON, and Mr. BRECKINRIDGE of Kentucky managers at the conference on the part of the House.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE GAY.

The message also announced that the House had passed resolutions commemorative of the life and services of Hon. Edward J. Gay, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I insist now on my motion to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business of Friday, being the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I do not believe that the clause of the Constitution concerning controversies in which the United States shall be a party, controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, has any relation except to the named controversies and to suits in equity and at law known and recognized to be such at the time of the adoption of the Constitution and now known and recognized to be such. I do not think such personal or mutual relations as are named in the clause have any connection with that large domain, the jurisdiction conferred in the beginning of the section arising "under the Constitution and laws of the United States." On the contrary, while the laws of the United States have granted special rights, remedies, or recoveries, those rights, remedies, and recoveries are to be entertained by the Federal courts without reference to the personal condition of the parties who may be interested in them. Such, I think, has been the invariable interpretation and practice under the first grant of power in this section, as far as we have gone into the domain characterized as "arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States."

I apprehend there are very few of us of this generation who have the slightest conception what this domain, very extensive in its character, shall yet include or embrace. Congress has seen fit heretofore to enter this domain very partially, only upon one or two or at the most three lines, and then to go no very great distance. The progress made in it has been always and must be dual. The jurisdiction conferred on the United States courts, arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, is not self-operative. It always requires the act of Congress in the first place and the judgment of the court in the second place to make any progress at all in that domain. Congress must take the initiative. We must take action upon the subject-matter, and if our own jurisdiction in respect to such subject-matter is sustained by the courts the judicial jurisdiction in the courts is then sustained in respect to such subject-matter and the methods by which it is to be adjudicated.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] spoke the other day about the difficulty of defining the word "commerce," especially as contained in the phrase "interstate commerce." I recollect one judicial decision upon this subject very definitely. The Supreme Court has decided that insurance is not commerce, and I suppose by following the circle of negotiations long enough and excluding all the things not commerce we should come at last to the residuum, which must be commerce or interstate commerce, because it can be nothing else. A fortiori, judging from this principle, I should myself have decided that transportation is not commerce nor interstate commerce either. It can not be. It is only a means of conducting commerce, notwithstanding the courts and Congress have decided and have judicially determined that transportation is a matter so nearly related to interstate commerce that both Congress and the Federal courts have jurisdiction in relation to it under the clause giving us the power to regulate interstate commerce.

Now, sir, we have created a special tribunal to try cases under the interstate-commerce act. We have legislated very fully and very elaborately upon the incident to interstate commerce called transportation by railway. We need not have created a special tribunal. We could have referred the whole matter to the Federal courts in the first instance. But whether this matter of interstate transportation by railway be dealt with by Congress or the courts, by special tribunals or by the regular tribunals, the law with regard to it provides for a special class of cases arising under the law of Congress, affording special remedies and relief, affording special rights for recovery, and it is not therefore necessary that litigants in this subject-matter should occupy to each other the personal relations mentioned in the latter clause of the section, and no inquiry has been made by the commission upon interstate commerce, upon transportation, or by a court trying a cause in relation to such measure, as to whether litigants were residents of different States or whether the suit was between a citizen of one State and a citizen of another State, or what might be their personal or official relations. It is only required to give jurisdiction in such matter that the party shall be interested in the subject-matter which Congress has taken under its jurisdiction; that is, railway transportation in interstate commerce.

Take another instance. I should myself have determined, reasoning in the same manner as before stated, that if there were any subject necessarily committed solely and exclusively to State action, it would be the relation between debtor and creditor. Had it not been for a long precedent history of determination upon the subject, I should say that it was clear Congress had no power to deal with such relations; yet the history of the general bankruptcy law in this country has been so long settled, so well known, that our authority to deal herein is no longer questioned, it is res adjudicata, and the only inquiry now made with respect to the passage of a general bankrupt law, with all its special rights and remedies and its utter indifference to parties, would be whether it is expedient to do so. Congress having taken jurisdiction of the subject and having created special writs, processes, rights, remedies, recoveries, and defenses in this matter, it is never inquired in any case in a Federal court as to whether the parties in such cases were citizens of different States, were litigating with their own State or another, or whether they were representing any of the peculiar relations named and alluded to in the closing clause of the jurisdictional section which I first read.

I have known, and so has every attorney here known, litigants in the Federal courts under this special act of Congress, under both the acts of Congress in relation to bankruptcy, to be residents of the same State, of the same town in the same State, next-door neighbors, so absolute is the usage upon that subject-matter and so absolutely does the special provision of rights and remedies under an act of Congress confer unquestioned jurisdiction without any inquiry in respect to peculiar personal relations or official relations between the litigants.

I feel inclined to make the prediction, as one of the things to come in this vast domain, scarcely touched, of cases arising under the Constitution and laws of Congress, that the whole mass of merchantable paper known as negotiable by the law merchant, made at one place, negotiable at another, payable at another, transcending in its negotiation State lines, will be remitted to Congressional action, and with respect to its creation, its formation, its negotiation, with respect to all the rights and liabilities which may arise under it, the people, stunned with the eternal dissonance of conflicting decisions and judgments of forty-eight or fifty tribunals of last resort in the States upon the subject of interstate negotiable paper, will require Congress to act therein, and that, unconstitutional as I now deem it or think it, it will as a matter of necessity be done, and in any such legislation with respect to that paper, the whole bulk of it, the personal and peculiar conditions of litigants will not be inquired about, but simply whether the one party or the other is entitled to relief or liable to recovery against him by reason of being a party to interstate commercial paper, negotiable and payable and suable under the action of Congress which may finally take place upon that subject.

I go now, though, to another department of the domain which has been partially entered. I think we have only three times entered it since the existence of the Government.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question on that interesting subject?

Mr. TURPIE. Yes, sir.

Mr. MITCHELL. In discussing this negotiable paper business—

Mr. TURPIE. That was a mere suggestion.

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand the law is now that where the parties to negotiable paper are citizens of different States the Federal courts have jurisdiction.

Mr. TURPIE. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL. Does the Senator hold that Congress could go further and give parties a remedy in the Federal courts irrespective of the question as to whether the real parties to the paper were citizens of different States at the time?

Mr. TURPIE. I have stated what I have to say on that subject. The RECORD will show it, and I do not wish to be asked except as to what I have said.

Congress passed a law concerning the creation and existence of national banks, one entering upon this same domain of formerly disputed, and in fact now disputed, questions. One of the sections of that bill provided that the national banks should have the right to sue in the Federal courts and conferred jurisdiction upon the Federal courts, and suits were brought under that section in the Federal courts. No question was ever made as to what the relation of the parties was to each other in respect to residence—none whatever. It was simply necessary, Congress having conferred jurisdiction, that one of the parties should be a national bank to avail itself of this special remedy, and that the other should be liable or claimed to be liable as a debtor in some way to such national bank.

The legislation respecting transportation, the legislation respecting bankruptcy, and the other partial legislation respecting national banks are perhaps the only three instances in which we have entered upon this great domain of cases arising under the laws of Congress.

From the interpretation and practice under all three of these instances, I should think that when we assume special legislative jurisdiction and create causes of action by special enactment and confer the judicial jurisdiction upon Federal courts, it is not necessary to define further any relations, personal or official, as between the litigants in these courts. No inquiry will ever be made, should Congress assume this jurisdiction, create the rights and remedies, and give to the courts the power to pass upon them, where the parties live, whether they are private citizens or otherwise, what the corporations may be, except that they shall be both related as plaintiff and defendant, adversely or favorably, to some question connected with this subject-matter, the prevention of trusts in interstate commerce.

I do not feel like entering into any strictures upon the phraseology of the bill of the honorable Senator from Ohio. I am too favorably inclined to the main purpose of this measure to indulge in any criticism of any effort made in good faith to prevent or avert these evils. There are some of them with which I think it is necessary to deal; but there is nothing in the bill which is not amendable. I am very far from saying with the Senator from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] that the objections to the bill of the Senator from Ohio are fundamental and that the scope of the measure lies beyond our power.

On the contrary, I believe that Congress has the same power to regulate interstate commerce that the States have to regulate commerce within their own lines, and that, as a matter of public policy, we have the same right to make this regulation affording civil remedies for those injured by the trusts, denouncing the trusts penally and all the others which are contemplated, as a State has under similar circumstances. Nor do I think with the Senator from New York that we are discharged from duty or released from our obligation to legislate upon the subject of trusts because the States have a right to do so.

They unquestionably have a right to do so, but there comes a time when the States have not that right. There comes a time, sometimes it may be a few hours, sometimes a few days, it is always a brief time, but it is a time of transit, in which the goods are moving from one State to another. It is a creating, formative, procreative, profit-bearing time. If at that time, by reason of the condition imposed by it, we may at that very moment strike a blow at these mischiefs, it will be more effective and more remedial in its character than any amount of State legislation upon the subject; and although with reference to a single transaction it is admitted it may be very brief, yet with reference to the whole of the transactions of trusts in interstate commerce there is not an hour of the day or night whose moments are not filled by violations of the law here proposed, whose moments are not filled with the perpetration of that crime against the people which this bill denounces and which these measures aim to punish.

The purpose of the bill of the Senator from Ohio is to nullify civilly the agreements and obligations of the trusts of these fraudulent combinations; I favor it. There is another purpose: to give to parties injured a civil remedy in damages for injury inflicted; I am in favor of that.

Those are the two principal measures embraced in that bill. I am willing to go much further, and I think the Senators generally will also. There is a bill introduced by the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN]. It is a most carefully and elaborately prepared bill as far as the penal section is concerned. It has been introduced into the Senate, but I am sorry that the Senator himself speaks of it as a substitute for the bill of the Senator from Ohio. It is in no sense a substitute. Allow me to suggest that it be made an additional section in the one bill which is to receive our sanction.

There can be no objection to the proposition to nullify civilly trust-contracts, the contracts of fraudulent trusts described here. There can be no objection to giving a civil remedy for those injured thereby. And there ought to be still less objection to punishing penally those who are guilty of these fraudulent combinations. This much will be accomplished by a bill embracing such sections as those proposed by the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Texas, not using either as a substitute, but all as additional, incidental, and closely connected with the main object and purposes of the whole body of legislation upon the matter about which and over which we are about to assume jurisdiction.

There is another bill here having very great merit. I allude now to the bill of the Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. GEORGE] upon the same subject. I have not heard that Senator say that it was offered as a substitute, but I suggest that it ought to go into the same bill as auxiliary thereto. I am perfectly willing to authorize the President to suspend the collection of duty with respect to commodities which have become the subject of fraudulent trusts, so that we shall have the action of Congress, the action of the courts, and the action of the Executive all directed to the same purpose.

Sir, a good deal has been said about the difficulties which are involved in this kind of legislation and the difficulties of administering a law or passing a law of this nature. We should have all these sections put into the same bill, making an act of only six or seven sections, upon the subject of trusts, and I think that would be a very brief enactment upon that subject. I do not think it would be a perfect enactment. No first legislation is ever perfect. I would rather favor imperfect legislation upon this subject than to be silent. It is only by commencing and prosecuting these different projects to the form of law, entering this domain, and asking the opinions of the Federal tribunals as to our own jurisdictional power, first, that we shall ever be able to lay hands upon these conspiracies which have done so much to injure the commercial credit and prosperity of interstate trade. It is our duty to do that first.

After all, these difficulties may be greatly overrated. It is a very difficult thing to convict a man under the numerous penal statutes in all the States of fraudulent conveyance. I have known a great many prosecutions of that kind in my life and not a single conviction; yet I would not vote for the repeal of such a statute. It is a valuable law, and has prevented much fraud. It is in terrorem over offenders, and whether prosecutions have been sustained or not it has exercised a valuable moral influence in the business of the country.

In the same respect we have it as part of the statute of frauds that such conveyances shall be void; also a very useful enactment. Now, I would add as a part of the Congressional statute of frauds exactly the provision in the bill of the Senator from Ohio that all agreements, notes, bonds, securities, and contracts of any nature made by a trust for trust purposes, or made by one of these fraudulent combinations, shall be null and void. The civil nullification of all the paper creatures of these combinations is a thing we have certainly in our power.

Again, sir, there may be some difficulty in defining this offense. To describe it is impossible. It is like the penal offense of fraud. The courts have never attempted to define it. In the statute the definition of it is very brief, "a conveyance with intent to hinder or delay creditors." Notwithstanding, the definition has been made practical, it has been made useful, and it has become a measure of the first importance in the conduct of the business of the country; and notwithstanding this definition may be imperfect and there may be no description and can be none altogether applicable to fraudulent commercial trusts, they vary so much and are so multiform in their character, yet the definition here attempted will, if it do nothing else, lead us to a better form and a more explicit definition or description of the offense here meant to be denounced.

Notwithstanding the difficulty which courts and juries have had in punishing men, or in investigating cases brought upon complaints of fraudulent conveyance or of procuring goods upon false pretenses, yet this jurisdiction has been of extreme worth and is still of great utility. We know that in the revenue acts there are very great difficulties accompanying sometimes the conviction of a smuggler, at other times of parties who are charged with making false invoices and false inventories, and there are many of the definitions or attempted descriptions of offenses in the customs acts which are even now, after years of adjudication, more vague and more indefinite than anything contained in the bill of the Senator from Mississippi, and the Senator from Ohio, or the Senator from Texas upon this subject; and yet they have not practically failed to prevent those frauds and to punish offenders.

We need not conceive, and I do not think any of us have, that Congress takes upon itself the entire charge of the administration of justice in the country. We have only one branch of it. We make the laws which are to be civilly and penally administered. The moment we denounce these trusts penally, the moment we declare these fraudulent trust combinations to be conspiracies, to be felonies or misdemeanors, that moment, under their own maxim, the courts are bound to carry out the intention and purpose of the legislation, and even to favor that purpose and intention, that the will of the people may prevail and not perish. This is one of the fundamental maxims. I have no doubt that when this law goes into practical operation it will receive a construction and a definition very useful to us; it will be aided by courts and juries; it will be aided by advocates upon both sides in stating different views of construction, and above all it will be supported and upheld by a public opinion expressed in a denunciation of those evils which this kind of legislation would avert and avoid.

Mr. PUGH. Mr. President, it will take me but a short time to give my views to the Senate upon the important bill now before us. I have listened with interest and instruction to the speech of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and in the main I fully indorse it.

Mr. President, the existence of trusts and combinations to limit the production of articles of consumption entering into interstate and foreign commerce for the purpose of destroying competition in production and thereby increasing prices to consumers has become a matter of public history, and the magnitude and oppressive and merciless character of the evils resulting directly to consumers and to our interstate and foreign commerce from such organizations are known and admitted everywhere, and the universal inquiry is, What shall be done that can be done by Congress to prevent or mitigate these evils and intolerable exactions?

Congress may declare these trusts and combinations to be unlawful, if they are against the public policy of the United States, and without any act of Congress prohibiting their creation or existence they could not now be enforced in any court, because they are manifestly contrary to the public policy of the United States. Such trusts and combinations could not be enforced even as against the parties to them, for the reason that the wrongdoing of any party to them can not be visited upon him by the courts on account of his conduct when to do so would be detrimental to the public policy of the United States, and in such cases the courts relieve the wrongdoer to protect the public policy, which is paramount.

Why are such trusts and combinations contrary to the public policy of the United States? For the plain reason that they hinder, interrupt, and impair the freedom and fairness of commerce with foreign nations and among the States.

To use the language of the bill before the Senate, are "arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States, or between two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of the United States and foreign States, or citizens or corporations thereof, made with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States; or with a view or which tend to prevent full and free competition in articles of growth, production, or manufacture of any State or Territory of the United States, with similar articles of the growth, production, or manufacture of any other State or Territory, or in the transportation or sale of like articles the production of any other State or Territory of the United States; and all arrangements, trusts, or combinations between such citizens or corporations made with a view or which tend to advance the cost to the consumer of any such articles," against the public policy of the United States?

Can any Senator doubt that the recitals of the first section of the bill are true, and that they amount to a violation of the public policy of the United States, and, if so, that Congress can declare such transactions to be unlawful and void for that reason? What public policy of the United States is violated by the acts recited in the bill? Manifestly the public policy founded on and to be encouraged and promoted by the freedom and fairness of our commerce with foreign nations and among the States and the unrestricted interchange of their productions. Has Congress no power to protect the public policy? If no such power exists in Congress, then our public policy is at the mercy of conspirators against it, and, although clothed with an express grant of power to regulate commerce, no power exists by implication which Congress decides to be "necessary and proper" to execute the express grant.

But it may be conceded that Congress has the power under the commerce clause of the Constitution to define what acts are detrimental to our commercial policy and to prohibit them. What is the value of such a power if it is limited to mere declaration and prohibition? If the acts denounced in the bill are unlawful or become so by declaration and prohibition by Congress because they have the effect or tend to violate our commercial policy, why should Congress be powerless to enact penalties and provide remedies? I have heard no answer to this inquiry except that the Federal courts have no jurisdiction and Congress can confer upon them no jurisdiction to enforce any remedies for the evils recited in the bill.

Let us see if this opinion is well founded. In Cohens vs. Virginia, 6 Wheaton, page 378, many times cited, Chief-Justice Marshall delivered the opinion of the court in these words:

The second section of the third article of the Constitution defines the extent of the judicial power of the United States. Jurisdiction is given to the courts of the Union in two classes of cases. In the first their jurisdiction depends on the character of the cause, whoever may be the parties. This class comprehends "all cases in law and equity arising under the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties," etc. This clause extends the jurisdiction of the court to all the cases described, without making in its terms any exceptions whatever and without any regard to the condition of the party. If there be any exception it is to be implied against the express words of the article.

It is solely from the subject-matter, "the character of the cause," that I desire the power of Congress to pass the bill under consideration and to confer jurisdiction to the Federal courts to execute the law. The subject-matter is commerce with foreign nations and among the States, and the public policy founded on its encouragement and promotion. In my humble judgment it was unnecessary for the bill to make the parties to the trust and combination citizens or corporations of different States, and it should be amended so as to include citizens of the same State or Territory. It matters not where the parties reside if their acts or combinations hinder, delay, interrupt, or prejudice the freedom and fairness of our commerce or violate our commercial policy in the manner specified in the bill. I have no doubt Congress has the power to make such trusts and combinations criminal and punishable by fine and imprisonment.

Whenever the bill before the Senate becomes a law of the United States, the Constitution declares, in the language of Chief-Justice Marshall, that "the judicial power of the United States extends the jurisdiction of the court to all cases in law and equity arising under the laws of the United States, without any exceptions whatever and without any regard to the condition of the party." Make the bill before the Senate a law of the United States. I know of no law Congress has the constitutional power to enact that Congress can not authorize and require the courts of its own creation to execute.

Where did Congress get the power to enact into a law the fifth section of the act "to regulate commerce," known as the interstate-commerce law, which declares—

That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to enter into any contract, agreement, or combination with any other common carrier or carriers for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads or any portion thereof; and in any case of an agreement for the pooling of freights as aforesaid, each day of its continuance shall be deemed a separate offense?

I know it will be at once claimed that these common carriers are engaged in interstate transportation on public highways, and that it is their pursuit there that subjects them to the jurisdiction of Congress and the Federal courts. This is true; but what I wish to show is that the crucial test urged by Senators opposed to the proposed legislation for want of constitutional power in Congress is the judicial definition of commerce with foreign nations and between the States.

It is claimed that the Supreme Court in the leading case of Brown vs. The State of Maryland crystallized the law as to the meaning of foreign commerce by saying that it was "imports in the original package remaining in the hands of the importer unbroken; and when and so long as the original package was in that condition it was the subject of foreign commerce, and if it was broken, it was not the subject of foreign commerce."

Again, cases have been decided by the State courts, and for some subject to the "common law."

It is in fact, of commerce, and for some subject to the "common law."

The only way to prevent health, and that Congress state-commerce by fine and arrest, and of freight, and any or any regulate bines the State roads the transits different rates.

Again, "act for the exposure and among cases of their own State and Territory are in the

Read the That in etc.

Read the That to stock after

Read the That no of any stock from one etc.

And I Nor should to be dismembered; port in p stock kn

Any or ing viola and pan the Unit courts a

Thus the Com the Stat who vot merce a

The c to Cong per by or that ject of foreign commerce. When it left his hands and the package was broken, and the goods went into the common mass of the property of the people of the State, then the commercial clause of the Constitution as to foreign commerce ceased to operate."

Again, it is correctly stated that the Supreme Court in three leading cases has also defined the constitutional meaning of "commerce among the States" to be in "articles, commodities, productions that become the subject of sale or barter and are in the custody of the carrier and in transitu, actually moving from one State to another to purchasers and consumers." When these articles, commodities, or productions of one State are in the condition of being moved and are labeled for carriage and for sale or other disposition in another State, then they become subject to the operation of the commerce clause of the Constitution as to "commerce among the States."

It is important that Senators should understand that the definitions of commerce with foreign nations and among the States relate exclusively to the corpus of foreign and interstate commerce. The physical body, the articles, the productions, the goods, wares, and merchandise, the freight—when these become the subject of "regulations" by Congress they can be reached only when in the original unbroken package in the hands of the importer and when in transitu from one State to another. But there is a wide difference, in my humble judgment, between the power of regulating the corpus of foreign and interstate commerce in its transition state between the producer and the consumer, and the power of reaching and regulating individuals, companies, and corporations who enter into agreements, trusts, and combines to hinder, delay, interrupt, or in any way to prevent the full, free, and fair transit and interchange of the corpus of commerce with foreign nations and among the States.

The one jurisdiction is over the physical body, the other jurisdiction is over persons and corporations who conspire against the freedom, the health, and well-being of the physical body. It is the latter power that Congress exercised in the passage of the fifth section of the interstate-commerce act. There the power is exercised to reach and punish by fine and imprisonment individual carriers who "enter into any contract, agreement, or combination with any other carrier for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads or any portion thereof." The law of the fifth section of the act "to regulate commerce" is aimed at the persons and their trusts and combines that interfere with the freedom and fairness of commerce among the States. It embraces carriers who never handle the freight and railroads that have never had or carried a pound of the freight while in transitu or otherwise, the earnings for carrying which by other and different railroads are to be equally divided.

Again, from what source did Congress derive the power of passing the "act for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, to prevent the exportation of diseased cattle, and provide means for the suppression and extirpation of pleuro-pneumonia and other contagious diseases among domestic animals?" Here is an act of Congress embracing diseased cattle that are not in transitu from one State to another, and also their owners who are not common carriers, but citizens of the same State engaged in raising cattle for shipment and sale in another State or Territory, and the cattle, the corpus of commerce among the States, are in the range, not even penned for transportation.

Read the beginning of the fourth section:

That in order to promote the exportation of live-stock from the United States, etc.

Read the fifth section:

That to prevent the exportation from any port of the United States of live-stock affected with any contagious disease, etc.

Read the sixth section:

That no railroad company within the United States, or the owners or masters of any steam or sailing or other vessel or boat, shall receive for transportation from one State to another any live-stock affected with any contagious disease, etc.

And I call special attention to the following:

Nor shall any person, company, or corporation deliver for such transportation to any railroad or any vessel or boat any live-stock knowing them to be diseased; nor shall any person, company, or corporation drive on foot or transport in private conveyance from one State or Territory to another any live-stock knowing them to be diseased.

Any of the persons or corporations thus prohibited "who shall knowingly violate the provisions of section 6 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor" and punished by fine and imprisonment, and the district attorneys of the United States are required to prosecute, and the district and circuit courts are given jurisdiction to execute the law.

Thus we discover that power was found in the commerce clause of the Constitution to protect commerce with foreign nations and among the States against diseased cattle, but it is denied by the same Senators who voted for the cattle bill that any power exists to protect our commerce against the greater evil of trusts and combines.

The commerce clause of the Constitution has also furnished power to Congress to prevent the spread of cholera and yellow fever and small-pox by prohibiting and punishing the transportation of goods infected or that have been exposed to the infection of these epidemic diseases.

There is no epidemic disease that is as destructive to human health and life as trusts and combines are destructive to the health and happiness and well-being of industrial pursuits, and the freedom, growth, and prosperity of our foreign and domestic commerce.

Mr. President, I am thankful that I have no capacity to indulge in hair splitting so I can see how many hairs I can make out of one, neither have I any ambition to excel in ciphering to show into how many decimal fractions I can reduce the constitutional grants of power to Congress. The framers of the Constitution were practical men with a large stock of common sense and not enough uncommon sense to interfere with the wisdom, safety, and perfection of their great work. The grants of power to Congress are defined in plain language, and, although specific, the grants are comprehensive in their scope, to be exercised by Congress within the common-sense limitations of the Constitution.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent that the present order of business be laid aside in order that I may move to take up House joint resolution 117, Calendar No. 704, being a resolution reported from the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent of the Senate that the unfinished business be informally laid aside, in order that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 117) authorizing the appointment of thirty medical examiners for the Bureau of Pensions, fixing their salaries, and appropriating money to pay the same to June 30, 1890. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. PLUMB. It is suggested by Senators that I allow the Senate to vote on the bill now pending. I supposed other debate would ensue, but I do not care to intrude this into the proceedings if the bill of the Senator from Ohio can be disposed of at once.

Mr. VEST. No; it can not be.

Mr. PLUMB. I will request the Senate, then, to do as I have heretofore indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent of the Senate that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside in order that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of the resolution indicated by him. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to hear what it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the title of the resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. If this is a mere temporary matter I shall not object to the bill being laid aside informally.

Mr. PLUMB. I just asked to have it laid aside informally.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the resolution leads to debate, I shall object to its being taken up now.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is due to say that there will be some discussion of it; I do not know how long it will last.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then I must object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection.

Mr. PLATT. I make the point under Rule V, section 2, that there is no quorum of the Senate present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the second section of Rule V.

The Secretary read Rule V, section 2, as follows:

If, at any time during the daily sessions of the Senate, a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the Presiding Officer shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll and shall announce the result, and these proceedings shall be without debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Edmunds,	Manderson,	Sawyer,
Allen,	Farwell,	Mitchell,	Sherman,
Allison,	Frye,	Morgan,	Spooner,
Bate,	George,	Morrill,	Stewart,
Blackburn,	Gibson,	Paddock,	Stockbridge,
Blair,	Harris,	Payne,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Pierce,	Vest,
Coke,	Higgins,	Platt,	Walthall,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Plumb,	Washington,
Davis,	Ingalls,	Pugh,	Wilson of Iowa,
Dixon,	Jones of Nevada,	Ransom,	Wolcott,
Dolph,	Kenna,	Reagan,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being a quorum present, forty-seven Senators having answered to their names, the Senate will proceed with the consideration of the unfinished business. The pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS]. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to so much of this amendment as seeks to make illegal the class of contracts described in the first and second sections of the bill, but the amendment also creates a tax and is therefore not within the originating power of the Senate. I think we ought not to violate the Constitution by voting for an amendment which we have no right to pass as a bill. I shall, therefore, content myself by simply voting against the amendment. I do not know that any question of order can be raised, but it is a question of constitutional law. We have no power in the Senate to originate tax bills, and I hope, therefore, the amendment will be voted down on this ground, although I am in favor of the general proposition of making these contracts null and void.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I wish to suggest also in that connection—I do not see the Senator from Kansas present—that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas is not germane to the subject-matter of the original bill. It is on an entirely different subject and has no reference to the bill. It proposes to deal with the question of futures and subjects of that kind, not the subject of trusts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Texas as presenting a question of order?

Mr. REAGAN. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no rule in the Senate of relevancy or requiring that an amendment shall be germane. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. REAGAN. All right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. REAGAN. Is it not proper, under the rule, to perfect the original bill before voting on the question of a substitute for it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Kansas is in the nature of perfecting the original bill, as it is offered as an addition to the original bill, and not as a substitute.

Mr. REAGAN. Is that to be voted on before a prior amendment offered to the original bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It, being the first amendment in the nature of an amendment to the original bill, and not offered as a substitute for it, is first in order. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas is in the nature of a substitute for the original bill.

Mr. REAGAN. I tried to ask unanimous consent of the Senate to modify that so as to make the measure which I offered an amendment to the bill, striking out all after the third line of section 1 and inserting—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that the Senator from Texas has a right to modify his amendment.

Mr. REAGAN. And numbering the sections 3, 4, and 5, beginning with the third line of the first section.

Mr. EDMUNDS. The amendment of the Senator from Kansas, as printed, is to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. So the Chair understands, but the original shows it is an addition, and not a substitute.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator from Kansas changed it.

Mr. EDMUNDS. It appears, then, that the print is incorrect; it has been changed since, so that the Chair is quite right in holding that the pending question is on the addition proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. REAGAN. I cannot afford to differ with the occupant of the chair on a question of rules, but my understanding has always been, both of the rules of the Senate and of the rules of the House of Representatives, that when amendments were pending to an original bill it was in order to perfect the original bill before a substitute was offered for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In that the Senator is unquestionably right.

Mr. REAGAN. Then I ask for a vote on my amendment to the bill of the Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the amendment of the Senator in the nature of a substitute or an addition to the original bill?

Mr. REAGAN. It is an addition to the original bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the Senator's amendment is first in order, having been first introduced; and the question is upon the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN]. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. CULLOM and Mr. EDMUNDS. Let it be read.

Mr. INGALLS. Before the point of order is finally passed upon, allow me to suggest that my impression is that the Chair may have been misled. I see that the print of my amendment is that it is "intended to be proposed," to wit: "Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say to the Senator from Kansas that the original manuscript shows that his amendment was intended as an addition, not as a substitute.

Mr. INGALLS. That is right. Then, that being the case, the amendment of the Senator from Texas was to strike out and insert.

Mr. REAGAN. That I have modified by the consent of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas has modified it so as to make it an addition, and, it having been first introduced, the Chair holds that it is first in order.

Mr. INGALLS. The Chair is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following—

Mr. GEORGE. Before commencing the reading I should like to inquire, Is that the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS]?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN].

Mr. GEORGE. Is it offered as a substitute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is offered as an addition to the original bill.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the bill it is proposed to insert the following additional sections:

Sec. 3. That all persons engaged in the creation of any trust, or as owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any trust, employed in any business carried on with any foreign country, or between the States, or between any State and the District of Columbia, or between any State and any Territory of the United States, or any owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any corporation using its powers for either of the purposes specified in the second section of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment at hard labor in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or by both of said penalties, in the discretion of the court trying the same.

Sec. 4. That a trust is a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons, firms, or associations of persons, or of any two or more of them, for either, any, or all of the following purposes:

First. To create or carry out any restrictions in trade.

Second. To limit or reduce the production or to increase or reduce the price of merchandise or commodities.

Third. To prevent competition in the manufacture, making, purchase, sale, or transportation of merchandise, produce, or commodities.

Fourth. To fix a standard or figure whereby the price to the public shall be in any manner controlled or established of any article, commodity, merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, use, or consumption.

Fifth. To create a monopoly in the making, manufacture, purchase, sale, or transportation of any merchandise, article, produce, or commodity.

Sixth. To make, or enter into, or execute, or carry out any contract, obligation, or agreement of any kind or description by which they shall bind, or shall have bound themselves not to manufacture, sell, dispose of, or transport any article or commodity or article of trade, use, merchandise, or consumption below a common standard figure, or by which they shall agree in any manner to keep the price of such article, commodity, or transportation at a fixed or graduated figure, or by which they shall in any manner establish or settle the price of any article, commodity, or transportation between themselves, or between themselves and others so as to preclude free and unrestricted competition among themselves and others in the sale and transportation of any such article or commodity, or by which they shall agree to pool, combine, or unite in any interest they may have in connection with the sale or transportation of any such article or commodity that its price may in any manner be so affected.

Sec. 5. That each day any of the persons, associations, or corporations aforesaid shall be engaged in violating the provisions of this act shall be held to be a separate offense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senate ready for the question on the amendment of the Senator from Texas?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I regard that amendment as I do the bill, as utterly without warrant in the Constitution, by which Congress is bound, but I regard it as more efficient, if an unconstitutional bill can be efficient, than the original bill, and at this stage of the proceedings, as we are perfecting the bill, and if the bill is passed at all in my opinion the Constitution will be violated, I think it is well, if we are to have a violation of the Constitution, that we shall have a bill that will do the people some good, if it is to operate at all, and for that reason I shall at this stage of the proceedings vote for the proposition of the Senator from Texas as an amendment to the bill of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I am in full sympathy with the efforts on the part of the Senator who introduced this bill and the several amendments to it to control the trusts, of which we hear so much complaint. The only question seems to be just how the trusts can be controlled. My own judgment on that point is that the States are the most competent to control trusts and to control them efficiently. It is suggested by a Senator near by, "Suppose the trusts control the State." I do not know that they are any more likely to control a State than they are to control this body or any other legislative body. These combinations have, of course, become very powerful; they have vast sums of money at command and generally a vast army of people engaged in connection with them whose interests are with them, and of course they have become powerful, but still not so powerful, I think, but that the States can and ought to control them.

So far as the General Government can control them, I am in favor of the General Government undertaking to control them. I am inclined to vote for this bill because it seems to me that it is possible to do something in that direction. I want to say, however, that I am not so sanguine of its accomplishing the purpose for which the bill is intended as some who have spoken upon the subject. I doubt whether very much benefit will be derived from this bill, and unless the States take hold of the question and devise appropriate legislation for suppressing these trusts or limiting the amount of capital that can be aggregated in one corporation this trouble will continue, in my judgment.

I understand that some of these trusts have been disturbed by the recent decisions of the courts of the country, which, as the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] showed the other day, have been all in one line, and I suppose no lawyer needs to have any argument made to him that these combinations and trusts are illegal without statute. But frightened somewhat by the decisions of the courts they have gone to work and have united what were many corporations into one with all the characteristics of a corporation and none of a trust as we now speak of and treat trusts. When that is done, it is beyond the power of this body to deal with them unless they impede or impair or hinder or delay interstate commerce. When they do that, of course they bring themselves within the jurisdiction of the General Government. But the great evil against which the people are complaining, these corporations perpetrate at home in the respective States, untouched by any legislation of ours.

I do not know whether this bill will be used for the benefit of the people or whether it will be used against them, especially the amendment which is now proposed to be voted on. I realize that the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] is an honest enemy to these combinations, and that he intends as far as possible to control them by the legislation proposed. But take the fourth paragraph of section 2 of the Senator's amendment. Among the things that are spoken of and made illegal is this:

Fourth. To fix a standard or figure whereby the price to the public shall be in any manner controlled or established of any article, commodity, merchandise, produce, or commerce intended for sale, use, or consumption.

The second is:

Second. To limit or reduce the production or to increase or reduce the price of merchandise or commodities.

There are legitimate and proper efforts that can be made for the advancement of prices. This refers to reduction in price as well as to advance in price. If there is a combination to put down the price of an article or to put it up, it is equally punishable under this provision by a criminal prosecution. There may be a condition of things where it is perfectly proper to put down the price of an article and on the other hand there may be a condition of affairs where it would be perfectly proper and legitimate to put up the price of an article.

I know it will be said in answer that these things should be left to the natural course of affairs, of commerce, and trade. But there has been recently organized all over this country what is called the Farmers' Alliance. What is the object and what is the purpose of it? The very purpose of it is to increase the price of farm products, and that I regard as a thing most desirable to be done, and I regard it as absolutely essential to the prosperity of this country. There has recently been organized, in the Northern States more particularly, and I suppose it will spread all over the country, what is called a National League amongst the farmers for the same identical purpose that the Farmers' Alliance has been organized for. Shall it be said that these organizations are forbidden by law? Is it possible that we are putting it in the power of some men to coerce and force the farmers to abandon these organizations? Does anybody believe that these organizations are inimical and hostile to the public welfare? On the contrary, does not everybody know that unless we can by some method increase the price of farm products in this country a great many farmers in the United States will be in bankruptcy and turned out of their homes?

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. I think that is a very good point that the Senator has made against the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas, but can not the same point be made against the original bill as introduced by the Senator from Ohio and amended by the Committee on Finance?

Mr. TELLER. The same point can be made with this difference, that one is a civil proceeding and the other is criminal. That is all the difference. I was going to say the same of the original bill.

Mr. GEORGE. But still, if I understand the Senator, he admits that under the bill as last reported by the Committee on Finance the Farmers' Alliance, being composed of citizens of different States, is an organization which is condemned by the bill.

Mr. TELLER. I think so, by the bill itself. I think it is objectionable to that criticism, although, of course, it is not so objectionable, because the one is a civil and the other is a criminal proceeding.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator allow me further?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. Under the original bill as reported by the Committee on Finance, every farmer belonging to one of these alliances would be liable to a civil action and to the recovery of double damages against him for being a member of that organization, the tendency of which is to increase the price of his farm products.

Mr. TELLER. That is what I was saying. It seems to me that is the fact. While I am extremely anxious to take hold of and control these great trusts, these combinations of capital which are disturbing the commerce of the country and are disturbing legitimate trade, I do not want to go to the extent of interfering with organizations which I think are absolutely justifiable by the remarkable condition of things now existing in this country.

I believe this bill will go further than that. I believe it will interfere with the Knights of Labor as an organization. While I have never been very much in love with the Knights of Labor, because of some of their methods, yet their right to combine for their mutual protection and for their advancement can not be denied. While in many instances I think they have gone beyond what they should have done, beyond what was legitimate and proper, yet on the whole we can not deny to the laborers of the country the opportunity to combine either for the purpose of putting up the price of their labor or securing to themselves a better position in the world, provided always, of course, that they use lawful means. I do not believe the mere fact of combining to secure to themselves a half-dollar a day more wages or greater influence and power in the country can be said to be an unlawful combination.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him there?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. The Knights of Labor, as I understand, are an organization composed of citizens of the different States of the Union, probably of every State of the Union. The object of that organization, as I understand furthermore, is to increase the price of their wages. Now, increasing the price of wages has a tendency, in the language of this bill, to increase the price of the product of their labor. Are they not also included, then, in the bill of the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. TELLER. When I said that the Knights of Labor were included I meant that they were included both in the civil provisions and in the criminal provisions. In my judgment they are in both. I do not believe that anybody in the Senate proposes to go to that extent. It is suggested to me by a Senator near me that the Typographical Union would come in in the same way.

Mr. HISCOCK. And it would practically include all the trades unions.

Mr. TELLER. It would practically include perhaps all the trades unions in this country. Many of these organizations are corporations. If they are not, at least they will be termed "combinations" under this bill.

Mr. President I admit as a general rule the principle should be to let trade and commerce go on in the natural way, and yet we can not object to men putting up the price of certain things or under some circumstances putting down the price of certain things when the great mass of the people are benefited by that movement. I have not learned the doctrine that cheapness is the only thing in the world that we are to go for. I do not believe that the great object of life is to make everything cheap. I have before me now, in the morning papers, a statement of the condition of tailors in London. It is headed:

PATHETIC PLEA FOR AID—EAST END TAILORS OF LONDON PETITION THE QUEEN FOR HELP—A HOPELESS SET OF WORKMEN.

It is dated yesterday, London, March 23:

LONDON, March 23.

The East End tailors held an enormous mass meeting to-day, at which their wretched condition was mournfully discussed. A more hopeless set of men perhaps never existed. All the spirit is crushed out of them by the remorseless "sweating" system, into the miseries of which they have fallen. Even the wild eloquence of the socialist Lions, who has devoted much time to the attempt to organize and energize these poor creatures, failed to arouse them to any confidence in their own powers of self-salvation or any hope of relief except from what seems to them the all-powerful arm of the governing class. Accordingly the outcome of the meeting was the adoption of a resolution to petition the Queen for help; and also to send an appeal to the international labor conference at Berlin to consider their case and if possible take some action on their behalf.

If a condition of that kind existed in this country and a class of laborers should combine to raise the price of their labor, and thus have a tendency to increase the price of the product, whether it was in a mill or in a shop or on a farm, would it not fall within the inhibition of this bill, both the original bill and the amendment of the Senator from Texas?

Mr. REAGAN. Will the Senator allow me to make an explanation so that he can reply to it if he will?

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. EDMUNDS. Will both the Senators allow me to say a word in explanation before they go on?

Mr. President, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] is the substance and for aught I know now literally the body of the bill that he introduced, I see by the top of it, on the 4th day of December last, I think about the first day of the session, and which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. I think it due to the Senator and to the Senate to state that according to our course the chairman very soon, almost immediately, referred that bill to a subcommittee of three among the most eminent and earnest of the members of that committee, but the committee has not yet been able to act upon it, owing, I have no doubt, to other important business in the committee, our time having been almost exclusively and necessarily devoted to the consideration of executive business. I think it is due to the Senator from Texas and to the Senate, he having introduced the bill so early, to say that.

Mr. REAGAN. I am not surprised that there should have been some delay, for the subject is certainly one that I have found it very difficult to get any remedy for; and I am not surprised that there should be some delay in preparing a bill.

In reference to the point made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], I wish to remark that he is doubtless misled as to the effect of the fourth clause of the second section of my amendment, to which he has referred, by considering it isolated from the provisions of the first section. He will see that the first section, as introduced by me, limits its operation to matters involved in commerce with foreign nations and between the States, in this language:

That all persons engaged in the creation of any trust, or as owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any trust, employed in any business carried on with any foreign country, or between the States, or between any State and the District of Columbia, or between any State and any Territory of the United States, or any owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any corporation using its powers for either of the purposes specified in the second section of this act—

The second section of the bill as I introduced it, but the fourth section of this amendment—shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, etc.

The second section in each of these clauses relates back as to the question of authority to the first section, so that whatever view may be taken as to the constitutional question presented by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], that point can not arise on this, which relates to the criminal part of the proceeding because it is limited to business in international or interstate commerce, and I suggest that the Farmers' Alliance and the Knights of Labor would not come under that clause; but, if they did, the way to prevent all such organizations is to strike down first the organizations which give rise and necessity to this local labor association.

Mr. PLATT. If the Senator from Colorado will permit me, and if the Senator from Texas will give me his attention, I desire to say a word.

I had supposed it to be true that the first part of the section, that is, down to line 6, referred to trusts employed in any business carried on with any foreign country or between the States, or between the States and the District of Columbia, or between the States and Territories, but from line 6 down I supposed, as the language reads "or any owner or part owner, agent, or manager of any corporation using its powers for either of the purposes specified in the second section of this act," had no reference whatever to a business carried on which might be called foreign commerce or interstate commerce, but was intended to punish a stockholder in any corporation who should do any of the things included in the several heads of the second section. That is the way I have understood it.

Mr. REAGAN. The object was as I have stated.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Connecticut has explained that provision exactly as I understood it. Of course I may be all wrong about it and it may be entirely different. It may not be objectionable but it would be well to put this in form so that there can be no question about it.

Mr. President, I had not quite concluded reading the newspaper extract which I wanted to read. It continues:

The petition sets forth in vivid and pathetic terms the condition of the tailors, who [which], since the days when Kingsley selected them for portrayal in Alton Locke as types of industrial misery, which led to the Chartist uprising, has been, if possible, growing more wretched, until now their life is merely a short and bitter struggle with starvation. They pray the Queen to interfere and save their families, who are dying of consumption and inanition in their filthy dens.

The Queen will hardly be able to do anything for these unfortunate subjects of hers, as she has but recently received the report of a royal commission on the subject, the gist of which is that nothing can be done but to trust in the operation of the Malthusian law of population.

The boot and shoe makers are also dissatisfied with their condition, and a strike in that trade is imminent. The employers are trying to conciliate them, but have thus far failed, and a mass meeting of the men will be held to-morrow, at which it will be decided whether or not to quit work.

I know that nobody here proposes to interfere with the class of men I have mentioned. Nobody here intends that by any of these provisions, either in the original bill or in any amendment; and I have only called attention to it to see if the efforts of those who have undertaken to manage this subject can not in some way confine the bill to dealing with trusts which we all admit are offensive to good morals.

I do not myself desire to interfere with the management of this bill which has been reported from the Committee on Finance and is in the hands of such able gentlemen as those who proposed it originally, or those who have attempted to interfere with it and to aid in its perfection.

Mr. President, I was greatly struck with the amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS], and I believe if that can be enacted into law it will greatly relieve the agricultural interests of this country. I was, however, somewhat disturbed in my idea of supporting that proposition by the suggestion made by the Senator from Ohio that it was beyond the jurisdiction of this body to pass it. That is the only objection I can see to it. It seems to me that the measure is well intended and very desirable; and it strikes me that if it could be carried out it would go far to relieve the people of this country. I do not know what the Senator who introduced it would say upon the constitutional question, but I shall listen when he takes the floor on that point.

I want to repeat that I am exceedingly anxious myself to join in anything that shall break up and destroy these unholy combinations, but I want to be careful that in doing that we do not do more damage than we do good. I know how these great trusts, these great corporations, these large moneyed institutions can escape the provisions of a penal statute, and I know how much more likely they are to escape than the men who have less influence and less money. Therefore, I suggest that the Senators who have this subject in charge give it special attention, and by a little modification it may be possible to relieve the bill of any doubt on that point.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, all I desire is that this bill, the object of which I believe is approved of by more than three-fourths of the Senate, should be treated like all other bills that have been carefully considered by a committee of this body and reported to the Senate. To attempt to defeat this bill by offering various other bills from other committees or from the other House on different branches of the same subject or on entirely different subjects, is not the proper way to deal with the work of a committee.

Now, let us look at it. The bill as reported contains three or four simple propositions which relate only to contracts, combinations, agreements made with a view and designed to carry out a certain purpose, which the laws of all the States and of every civilized community declare to be unlawful. It does not interfere in the slightest degree with voluntary associations made to affect public opinion to advance the interests of a particular trade or occupation. It does not interfere with the Farmers' Alliance at all, because that is an association of farmers to advance their interests and to improve the growth and manner of production of their crops and to secure intelligent growth and to introduce new methods. No organizations in this country can be more beneficial in their character than Farmers' Alliances and farmers' associations. They are not business combinations. They do not deal with contracts, agreements, etc. They have no connection with them. And so the combinations of workmen to promote their interests, promote their welfare, and increase their pay if you please, to get their fair share in the division of production, are not affected in the slightest degree, nor can they be included in the words or intent of the bill as now reported.

On the other hand, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] offers a bill which was framed by one of my colleagues in the House of Representatives, and the fact that it is pending there is a matter known and shown by the record, and it is still being considered by a committee of that body. It proposes to deal with a class of contracts that do not have to do with production, that are based upon the idea that there is no production at all. They are options on property that does not exist. They are what are called mere contracts without regard to production, based upon nothing, upon empty air. They are gambling contracts. If the Senator from Kansas wishes to introduce a proposition to prevent gambling in property which does not exist, to prevent agreements to deliver property without any intention to deliver it, that is one question and an entirely different matter from the one covered by the bill. That is a question to be considered by itself, and it ought not to be attached or annexed to this bill.

But there is another fatal objection to that measure, it seems to me. We can not vote for it without violating our obligations under the Constitution of the United States. The Senate has no power to originate any form of taxation, and yet here is a proposition to tax in various ways these illegal contracts, with a view to deter them from being made, just as we imposed the tax upon the issue of State bank paper, in order to drive it out of existence, but still we levied it in the form of a tax; it was part of a tax bill, and the proper place for this proposition, so far as it attempts to levy a tax, is upon a tax bill. It would be proper upon the tariff bill when it comes to us, but it has no relation to the subject-matter of the pending bill.

The original bill deals with a combination, agreement, or contract to advance the price of productions on hand; it relates to actual commerce in things tangible passing from State to State; while the proposition of the Senator from Kansas is to deal with things intangible, with contracts in the nature of gambling, and it has no relation to this matter, and to put it on as an amendment to this bill, it seems to me, is not treating the subject fairly unless the Senate wants to defeat the original proposition. It seems to me it is a great deal better for us to have a fair vote on the original proposition, disconnected with any other measure pending at this time.

Take the proposition of the Senator from Texas. It does contain some matter germane to or connected with the original proposition, but it introduces into this debate a criminal law, and that was one of the objections made to the original bill as first reported by the Committee on Finance. When we undertook to amend it and put on a criminal clause, and after full reconsideration of the subject, it was thought best to omit the criminal clause and to leave that for future consideration, because we were dealing with a new subject-matter and it was deemed a great deal better to declare the general principle of law, without any criminal section, leaving Congress to provide hereafter criminal penalties, as I have no doubt it will do if they shall be found to be necessary.

The objection I have to the proposition of the Senator from Texas is, first, that it is a proposition pending in another committee of this body, and there it is being considered. The Senator from Vermont says it has been referred to a subcommittee and they have not reported upon it. Now, is it wise to ingraft here that proposition which has not yet been considered by the committee in charge of it, relating to a different subject-matter? I think it is not fair; it is not right. In this way, by antagonizing friendly propositions, you may defeat any bill.

Suppose, for instance, the amendment of the Senator from Kansas should be ingrafted on the bill; a Senator might say, "I can not vote for that because it undertakes to do what the Constitution plainly declares the Senate can not do," and that would result in defeating the original proposition. So with the proposition of the Senator from Texas. He offers here a criminal statute defining various kinds and various forms of combinations; it has not yet been subject to scrutiny, and it is now pending before a committee of this body which has not yet considered it. Suppose that is ingrafted on this bill. Some member of the Senate might with great propriety say, "Why, this is a new proposition; it has never been fully considered; it does not come to us perfected by the judgment of a committee; it is drawn out, wrested, taken from the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, and put upon a bill which has already been considered and fully considered by another committee."

I am actuated by no desire to have this bill and nothing else, because I would accept any amendment that met my judgment, and I will vote for any proposition that will make it clear and confine it to its proper objects; but I do think the Senate of the United States in dealing with a question which at this time commands the attention of the people of the United States as much as any other should deal with it in a fair way. In other words, there should be fair play on all these various propositions, and we should not combine incongruous elements in order to defeat the original proposition. If you do not like the bill, vote it down. If you can propose any amendments to carry out the object of the bill, to limit its operation, or in any way to improve it, they are proper and ought to be offered; but do not put on different propositions. I might with the same propriety take the pension bill which is now pending here, giving a pension to dependent relatives of soldiers, and a thousand other bills on the Calendar and offer them as amendments. That is sometimes a way of trying to defeat an original bill. I think, however, it is better for Senators of the United States to defeat it squarely by a fair vote, and say that the original bill ought not to pass rather than to encumber it with propositions that lead to endless argument.

I shall vote against all these amendments which do not seem to carry out the object defined in the original bill, not because I disapprove of them, for I approve of all attempts to destroy and to declare illegal, null, and void all those gambling contracts which now pester the business of the country. I shall at the proper time be perfectly willing to denounce criminal penalties upon any man who violates the principles of this bill; but I do not think at this time it is wise for us to introduce criminal legislation upon a remedial bill of this character. As I said in my argument—and I do not want to repeat it over again—this bill is simply an attempt to extend the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, to declare unlawful contracts which have been held unlawful in every State of the Union where the subject has been brought before the courts; nothing more, nothing less.

The only ground of objection to this is that we can not extend the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States thus far. That argument has been fully answered by Senators on the other side. I attempted to answer it myself by showing a great number of authorities. The honorable Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH] and the honorable Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] have shown that this bill as it now stands is not only constitutional, but that it is the duty and right of the United States to aid the States in declaring null and void these combinations and agreements in restraint of trade. I hope, therefore, we shall have a fair vote on these different measures as they come up and as they are reported by committees, and that when the bill of the Senator from Texas is reported from the Judiciary Committee we shall have the judgment of that committee upon that bill. When the proposition which is now made by the Senator from Kansas comes up to us it is to go first to the Committee on Finance, because it is a part of a scheme for raising revenue and can only be treated as a revenue measure. The other provisions of that bill are simply incidental to the main point.

I say it is better and fairer in dealing with this great subject to take the bill which has been reported by the Committee on Finance, reject it if you will, improve it if you can, and confine the attention and intelligence of the Senate to the provisions and objects of this bill, and go no further until the other bills are reported and have gone through the same scrutiny, and then we shall have time enough to do it. So far as I can see, there are no provisions in the bill offered by the Senator from Kansas but what meet my judgment in a general way. I have only had time to read it this morning. The first two sections I am entirely agreed to, but they have never been matured, never have been reported by any committee, never have been considered by a committee. When they are so considered, we shall have time enough to act upon them.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio to explain one or two provisions of this bill or amendment, as it is reported to the Senate, before he leaves the floor.

Mr. REAGAN. I should like to reply to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to ask the Senator from Ohio one or two practical questions about the details of the bill, which will take but a moment. The bill provides that—

The circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity.

I suppose it is the purpose of the Senator from Ohio to give private citizens who are injured by these combinations or monopolies for the advancement of cost or preventing men from freely competing, a civil remedy in the courts, is it not?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose that is the object, and I suppose any citizen of the United States might bring a suit in the courts if he had been wronged or claimed that he had been wronged in this way. Now the bill goes on and says:

And the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is confined to the first section of the bill.

Mr. HOAR. I understand that, and my question is confined to the first section of the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. The first section of the bill does not give a civil remedy at all; it is the second section that gives a civil remedy.

Mr. HOAR. The first section says that—

The circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section.

Now the Senator says the first section does not give the civil suit at all.

Mr. SHERMAN. It does give a suit in the name of the United States:

And the Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed, in the name of the United States, to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

Mr. HOAR. Then the Senator avoids my first question and does not mean to answer it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do.

Mr. HOAR. Let me put the question again. The first section of the bill declares:

The circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section, and to issue all remedial process, orders, or writs proper and necessary to enforce its provisions.

Now, this section has declared that all these arrangements are wrongful and unlawful, and that is the only declaration which gives any private citizen any right to sue under them. That is the declaration of the first section. It seems to me that as the Senator has got this bill so drawn that any citizen of the United States can invoke the civil remedy and the civil jurisdiction provided in the first section under the bill—it seems to me there is no doubt of it whatever—and when he has done it the bill makes it the duty of a United States officer, the Attorney-General or the district attorney, not merely to commence and prosecute the suit, but to prosecute it without compromise or abandonment, because he is expressly commanded to prosecute it "to final judgment and execution."

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, Mr. President, the Senator has confounded the two sections together. They are absolutely distinct and independent, each conveying the proper authority and jurisdiction to the courts of the United States. The first deals only with combinations made in restraint of trade or to prevent free competition in the importation, transportation, etc., of articles. They are in the nature of public offenses against public policy. In regard to those in the first section it is declared that—

The Attorney-General and the several district attorneys are hereby directed in the name of the United States to commence and prosecute all such cases to final judgment and execution.

And before that it is provided—

The circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature.

Mr. HOAR. Are they of a civil nature? The Senator has just said that these are public offenses and the statute says that they are suits of a civil nature.

Mr. SHERMAN. Can not the United States commence a suit of a civil nature?

Mr. HOAR. For a crime?

Mr. SHERMAN. Not for a crime, but for a remedial proceeding. It is a proceeding such as is known in every State of the Union, as in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and in other States. There are suits by the people of New York against these combinations. We have a suit of the people of Ohio and the people of Missouri; I quoted here a decision in a suit of the people of Illinois—just such things as are contemplated by this bill. If the Senator from Massachusetts will read the second section of the bill he will find that that alone deals with private suits.

SEC. 2. That any person or corporation injured or damaged by such arrangement, contract, agreement, trust, or combination defined in the first section of this act may sue for and recover, in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, without respect to the amount involved, of any person or corporation a party to a combination described in the first section of this act, twice the amount of damages sustained and the costs of the suit, together with a reasonable attorney's fee.

It is the second section that gives the civil suit, and that is not to be prosecuted at all by the United States or by the officers of the United States. The first section deals with the public injury to the people of the United States and there the suit is brought in the name of the United States to restrain, limit, and control such arrangements so far as they are illegal. The second section gives a private remedy to every person injured. It seems to me the two sections are as distinct from each other as possible.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Ohio states, in my very humble judgment, two entirely different and conflicting and inconsistent propositions. I agree and thoroughly understand that the second section of the bill gives individuals the right to private suits. I leave that out as settled. I am looking at the first section alone. The Senator says that the first section provides nothing but suits for public offenses, which are criminal suits and to be tried in the name of the United States, as for an offense against the United States. The language of the section is:

And the circuit court of the United States shall have original jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at common law or in equity arising under this section.

I should like to ask the Senator again, does he understand that the United States is to enforce this proposed statute by a civil suit, and not by a criminal proceeding?

Mr. SHERMAN. I say that in a civil suit brought in the name of the United States the United States may sue on a contract; they may sue for a neglect; they may sue for a great many things. Those are civil suits. The distinction between a civil suit and a criminal suit, I need not tell the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOAR. I understand that. What will be the judgment?

Mr. SHERMAN. It may be a judgment of ouster of the corporation; it may be a judgment for damages. Civil suits and criminal suits are easily distinguished.

Mr. HOAR. There is no difficulty in that.

Mr. SHERMAN. Very well. This is a civil proceeding commenced by the people of the United States against these corporations, and a judgment may be, as in ordinary cases, an ouster of the power of a corporation; it may be for damages; there may be an injunction; there may be proceedings in quo warranto, and so of the other ordinary civil proceedings which are fixed by the judiciary act of the United States.

But the second section provides purely a personal remedy, a civil suit also by citizens of the United States. The Senator from Texas wishes to add to it a criminal remedy. In that I differ from him. I think it is better not to put a criminal section in this bill. Still, if it is adopted by the Senate, that would not deter me from voting for the measure, because that at least is in harmony with the bill and seeks to carry out the same object. However, in my judgment, his measure ought to undergo the same scrutiny that this bill has undergone. Let it be reported from the Judiciary Committee, and then we can consider it and probably vote for it, if so reported after full scrutiny.

Mr. REAGAN. I ask unanimous consent, if it is necessary, to modify my amendment by inserting after the word "corporation," in line 9 of section 3 (in the first section of the amendment), the words "company or person employed in any such business." I make this modification because I think there was force in the objection made by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], and I think these words cure that difficulty. That puts it all under the interstate and international commerce clause.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection that modification will be considered as agreed to. The Chair hears no objection, and the amendment of the Senator from Texas is so modified.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. President, I confess to a little surprise at the suggestions of the Senator from Ohio that the amendment which I have submitted is different in character from the measure which he has reported, and that they ought to be separately acted upon by the Senate. What is the object of the bill reported by the Senator from Ohio? It is to prevent and to punish persons engaged in trusts and combinations for unlawful purposes. What is his remedy? It is a civil suit, and a civil suit to be brought in the circuit court of the United States. Who can avail themselves of that remedy? Rich corporations and rich men may, but the great mass of the people are not able to employ counsel and go with witnesses to the circuit court for the vindication of their rights.

So the remedy as presented (and I intend at the proper time to offer an amendment to meet that) is inadequate; it is insufficient. I propose to aid the Senator in the prevention and punishment of trusts and combinations for unlawful purposes by providing that their formation, and the action under them when in connection with the international and interstate trade, shall be unlawful and shall be punished as provided in my bill. That certainly gives an efficient remedy, and a much more efficient remedy than that proposed by him for the very evil which he seeks to prevent.

The Senator suggests that my amendment ought to undergo the revision of a committee. I may say to the Senator that much of it is copied out of a law, not a law of Congress but of one of the States, which underwent very thorough and searching discussion. So all I had to do in this case (and that is the purpose I had) was to make the provisions of the State law applicable to international and interstate commerce. That is as far as it has seemed to me our powers go.

When first discussing this bill I suggested that I thought it proper that a clause giving a civil remedy should be inserted, but that the most efficient means of preventing the very evil which the Senator from Ohio is driving at is to make these offenses penal and provide for their prosecution in the courts of the country. I suggest that if the purpose is to prevent these things it is much more efficient than the remedy proposed by the Senator and exactly in the same line and for the same purpose.

I call again the attention of the Senator to the fact that his bill gives this jurisdiction to the circuit court of the United States, and that only the corporations and the rich men will be able to go into that court to assert the remedy which he proposes; and that the great mass of the people who are the sufferers from these combinations and trusts will not have the means to employ counsel and to take witnesses to the Federal courts, often at a great distance from them, to vindicate and enforce their rights.

We need a law upon this subject that will punish every man engaged in this business and that will give an adequate remedy in a convenient jurisdiction to every person who is damaged by these associations. I trust that the Senate will sustain the amendment which I have offered to the bill for the purpose of giving it efficiency, for the purpose of affording to the people that protection which he desires to secure.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, this whole subject is surrounded by difficulties of the gravest character. Men must unite their efforts to have any civilization at all. An individual by himself can be but a savage. Combination, co-operation, is the foundation of all civilized society. When you permit that at all, the question is where you are to stop and say there shall be no more combinations.

These combinations seem almost like a necessary evil resulting from civilization. Our ancestors have tried to check them in England for hundreds of years. They had their common-law rules, they had their statutory regulations, and finally they came to the conclusion in that country that legislation would not reach the subject, but that it simply retards trade and embarrasses those whom they do not desire to embarrass. If we attempt it in this country, we shall have a similar history. Besides, the Congress of the United States is laboring under special difficulties on account of its limited jurisdiction.

To show the experience in England in dealing with this particular question, I have here a statute passed in 1844 which wiped out all that had preceded it, and left trade and commerce free, and I think it is so instructive a lesson that it ought to be incorporated in the RECORD. I send it to the desk and ask that the statute be read. The statute itself is its own commentary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chief Clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

An act for abolishing the offenses of forestalling, regrating, and engrossing, and for repealing certain statutes passed in restraint of trade.

Whereas divers statutes have been from time to time made in the Parliaments of England, Scotland, Great Britain and Ireland, respectively, prohibiting certain dealings in wares, victuals, merchandise, and various commodities by the names of badgering, forestalling, regrating, and engrossing, and subjecting to divers punishments, penalties, and forfeitures persons so dealing; and

Whereas it is expedient that such statutes, as well as certain other statutes made in hindrance and in restraint of trade, be repealed; and

Whereas an act of the Parliament of Great Britain was passed in the twelfth year of the reign of King George the Third, intitled an act for repealing several laws therein mentioned against badgers, engrossers, forestallers, and regraters, and for indemnifying persons against prosecutions for offenses committed against the said acts, whereby, after reciting that it had been found by experience that the restraint laid by several statutes upon the dealing in corn, meal, flour, cattle, and sundry other sorts of victuals, by preventing a freetrade in the said commodities, have a tendency to discourage the growth and to enhance the price of the same, which statutes, if put in execution, would bring great distress upon the inhabitants of many parts of this kingdom, and in particular upon those of the cities of London and Westminster, sundry acts therein mentioned, and all the acts made for the better enforcement of the same, were repealed, as being detrimental to the supply of the laboring and manufacturing poor of this kingdom; and

Whereas, notwithstanding the making of the first-recited act, persons are still liable to be prosecuted for badgering, engrossing, forestalling, and regrating, as being offenses at common law, and also forbidden by divers statutes made before the earliest of the statutes thereby repealed: For remedy thereof, and for the extension of the same remedy to Scotland and to Ireland,

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, That after the passing of this act the several offences of badgering, engrossing, forestalling, and regrating be utterly taken away and abolished, and that no information, indictment, suit, or prosecution shall lie either at common law or by virtue of any statute, or be commenced or prosecuted against any person for or by reason of any of the said offenses or supposed offenses.

II. And be it enacted, That the several acts and parts of acts made in the Parliaments of England and Scotland, Great Britain and Ireland, hereinafter mentioned, shall be repealed, but not so as to revive any act repealed by any of the acts hereby repealed; (that is to say.)

The following acts and parts of acts of the Parliament of England, to wit: So much of an act passed in the fifty-first year of the reign of King Henry the Third, intitled

A statute of the Pillory and Tumbrel, and of the assize of bread and ale, as is now in force:

So much of an act passed in the 12th year of the reign of King Edward the Second, intitled No officer of a city or borough shall sell wine or victual during his office, as is now in force:

So much of an act passed in the reign of King Henry the Third, King Henry the First, or King Edward the Second, intitled The punishment of a butcher selling unwholesome flesh, as provides punishment for a butcher or cook that buyeth flesh of Jews and selleth the same unto Christians:

The whole of an act passed in one of the three last-mentioned reigns intitled No forestaller shall be suffered to dwell in any town:

The whole of an act passed in the 23d year of the reign of King Edward the Third, intitled Victuals shall be sold at reasonable prices:

The whole of an act passed in the 25th year of the same reign, intitled The penalty of him that doth forestall wares, merchandise, or victual:

So much of an act passed in the 27th of the same reign intitled A statute of priors, as provides that commissions shall be granted to inquire of offenders contrary to the statute of 23 Edw., 3 c. 6, and enacts, "The penalty for forestalling of merchandises before they come to the staple:"

The whole of two acts passed in the 31st year of the same reign, respectively intitled The statute of herrings, and another Statute of salt fish:

The whole of an act passed in the 35th year of the same reign, intitled An ordinance of herring:

So much of an act passed in the 37th year of the same reign, intitled Merchants shall not ingross merchandises to enhance the prices of them, nor use but one sort of merchandise, as is now in force:

The whole of an act passed in the same year, intitled Clothiers shall make cloths sufficient for the foresaid prices, so that this statute for default of such cloths be in no wise infringed:

The whole of an act passed in the second year of the reign of King Richard the Second, intitled A confirmation of the statutes of 23 Edw. 3, St. 4, c. 2, against forestallers:

So much of an act passed in the 13th year of the same reign, intitled The rates of laborers' wages shall be assessed and proclaimed by the justices of the peace, and they shall assess the gains of victualiers who shall make home-made bread, and the weight and price thereof, as is now in force:

So much of an act passed in the 4th year of the reign of King Henry the Fourth, intitled An hostler shall not make horse-bread; how much he may take for oats, as is now in force:

So much of an act passed in the 25th year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, intitled Proclamations for the prices of victuals, namely, the pricing of them and proclaiming the prices, as is now in force:

So much of an act passed in the 28th year of the same reign, intitled For prices of wines, as is now in force, not relating to the gauging and measuring of wine, oils, honey, or other liquors or things:

So much of two acts passed in the session of Parliament holden in the third and fourth years of the reign of King Edward the Sixth, respectively, intitled An act for buying and selling of rother beasts and cattle, and An act for the buying and selling of butter and cheese, as is now in force:

The whole of an act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the fifth and sixth years of the same reign, intitled An act against regraters and ingrossers of tanned leather, except the prohibition of currying or dressing tanned leather within the city of London and the suburbs thereof, as provided by the last-mentioned act:

Also the following acts of the Parliament of Scotland, to wit:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and three, intitled Of malt Makaris in burrow towns:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and thirty-five, intitled Off Forstallaris:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and forty, intitled For eschewing of derth of wittalis, fische, and fysche:

Also an act of the same year, intitled For stanching of derth and prices of wyne, salt, an tymmer:

Also an act of the same year, intitled Anentis forstallaris:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and fifty-five, intitled Anent the disposition of wyne, salt, and tymmer brocht into the realme:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and seventy-nine, intitled For punishment of regtratis and forstallaris:

An act passed in the year one thousand five hundred and ninety-two, intitled Aganis foirstallaris and regratitatis:

An act passed in the year one thousand six hundred and sixty-one, intitled An act for erecting of manufactories:

Also the following acts and parts of acts of the Parliament of Ireland, to wit:

The whole of an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of King Edward the Fourth, intitled An act against engrossers and regraters of corn:

The whole of an act passed in the thirty-third year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, intitled an act for grey merchants, as revived and perpetuated by a subsequent act passed in the eleventh year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth intitled an act for reviving the statute against grey merchants, the statute for servants' wages and the statute of Jeofails:

So much of an act passed in the second year of the reign of Queen Anne, intitled an act to prohibit butchers from being graziers, and to redress several abuses in buying and selling of cattle, which act is perpetuated by another act made in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, as prohibits any butcher from being a grazier, or keeping in his possession, or in trust for him, above 20 acres of land, or from selling any cattle to any other butcher in Dublin, or within 5 miles thereof, or from keeping at hay or feed oxen or other cattle for above ten days, or from exposing for sale any oxen or other cattle within 20 miles of the place where bought, and which prohibits any person from selling or exposing for sale any cattle or sheep on the same day when bought:

So much of an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of King George the First, intitled an act for regulating abuses committed in buying and selling cattle and sheep in the several markets of this kingdom, as prohibits cattle from being bought within six miles of any market:

The whole of an act passed in the fifteenth year of the reign of King George the Second, intitled an act to explain and amend a clause in an act passed in the second year of the reign of Queen Anne intitled, "An act to prohibit butchers from being graziers, and to redress several abuses in buying and selling of cattle, and in slaughtering, and packing of beef, tallow, and hides:"

The whole of an act passed in the thirty-first year of the reign of King George the Second, intitled an act to prohibit salesmen from being graziers, and to redress several abuses in buying and selling cattle or meat:

So much of an act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the thirteenth and fourteenth years of the reign of King George the Third, intitled an act for paving streets within the city and county of the city of Dublin, as authorizes a market jury to seize provisions or victuals in the hands of any forestaller, regrater, or engrosser:

So much of an act passed in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, intitled an act for establishing market juries in cities as authorizes and empowers certain market juries to seize provisions or victuals found in the hands of forestallers, regraters, and engrossers.

III. And be it enacted, That the several acts and parts of acts which were repealed, as to Great Britain, by the first recited act of the twelfth year of the reign of King George the Third, shall be taken, after the passing of this act, to be repealed as to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

IV. Provided, always, and be it enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to apply to the offence of knowingly and fraudulently spreading or conspiring to spread any false rumor, with intent to enhance or deery the price of any goods or merchandise, or to the offence of preventing or endeavoring to prevent by force or threats any goods, wares, or merchandise being brought to any fair or market, but that every such offence may be inquired of, tried, and punished as if this act had not been made.

V. And be it enacted, That this act may be amended or repealed by any act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

Mr. STEWART. The difficulty in dealing with this question is well illustrated by hundreds of years of experience in Great Britain, where Parliament was supreme, where they could pass and enforce any law they pleased on this subject. They found after all this experience that such laws were simply hurtful, and so they passed an act repealing the law, changing the common law with regard to it, and leaving trade and commerce free.

The difficulty in the whole subject is in reaching any precise evil or defining the offense. If you say there shall be no combination the tendency of which shall put up prices, how far would that reach? It would reach to nearly every transaction in life and would be particularly oppressive upon the struggling masses who are making combinations to resist accumulated wealth. Accumulated wealth has the power to prosecute, and if the laborers combine in any form to protect themselves there will be means found of prosecuting them.

If small traders combine together to meet some great trust so as to enable them to carry on their business, the power will be in the hands of the great trust and the opposition will be trusts. This scheme seems to me to put in the hands of accumulated capital the power to have all associations that can possibly be rivals prosecuted, because the associations that seek to resist trusts are not organized so artfully. Their purpose has to be avowed; they must state what their purpose is in order to get the inexperienced masses to go with them. It must be for the purpose of protecting themselves, whereas the experienced few who handle accumulated capital can do this in such a manner as to preclude all the possibility of proof.

So I believe the practical working of this bill, if it were constitutional and we had a right to pass it, would be to crush out competition where the people are trying to protect themselves against oppressive monopolies. I think that it is the way it would work practically.

Besides, I do not find any warrant in the Constitution for this particular class of legislation. It is stated in the first section of the bill that when combinations between citizens of different States and citizens of the United States combine with aliens to do certain things they shall be amenable to the law and shall be prosecuted in certain ways. I suppose that is the jurisdictional provision.

Mr. GEORGE. That is the jurisdictional provision.

Mr. STEWART. Now, that jurisdictional provision is referred to citizenship, and the provision in the Constitution gives the United States courts jurisdiction when and of what? First, it gives them jurisdiction in cases of equity and actions at law, and nothing else. This is given in certain cases on account of citizenship. Where citizens reside in different States they can have their controversies settled in the United States courts. But this is not a controversy. On the contrary, it is a combination; it is an agreement.

There is no dispute between these citizens resident in different States, but it is a partnership formed of citizens of different States that confers no jurisdiction upon the Federal courts. There is a difference between a partnership where all the parties agree and a litigation where the two parties disagree. The fact that they reside in different States and agree to do something does not add to the jurisdiction one particle. That part of it may be eliminated from the bill as having nothing to do with it.

Then the bill provides in a separate clause by itself:

And all arrangements, trusts, or combinations between such citizens or corporations—

Meaning combinations between citizens of different States or between citizens of the United States and aliens—made with a view or which tends to advance the cost to the consumer of any such articles, are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful, and void.

It might just as well read, and it would be just as constitutional if it had said, that "all combinations having that tendency should be unconstitutional and void."

Now, it is the struggle of every community, it is the struggle of all the people who are attempting to better themselves, to get a good price for their commodities. Why might not the citizens of Iowa and Kansas unite and say, "We will hold back our corn; we will not sell it at these ruinous prices; we will combine and hold it until prices are better; we will put up the prices; they are robbing us. There is an organization in Chicago that is bearing this article, that is selling it short, that is putting it down; they are robbing us and we will not sell; we will combine?"

Suppose all the people of the different States should combine together and say, "We will stand against this Chicago combine that is attempting to get our produce for nothing," why would not they be liable to prosecution, the whole of them, if it were a constitutional law? But have they not a natural right to hold their products back until they can get a better price?

This is only one of a thousand instances in which this measure would be abused if it were passed. It is not the intention of anybody here to make that construction of it; we are trying to remedy the evil; but it is very probable that if this bill were passed the very first prosecution would be against combinations of producers and laborers whose combination tend to put up the cost of commodities to consumers. It would be a weapon in the hands of the rich against the poor, and if you will trace the history of such legislation you will find that the experience of Great Britain was that such laws have always been turned against the people. After several hundred years of experience Parliament wiped them all out.

I believe that the true remedy against such trusts is that of counter combinations among the people. I believe in co-operation. Take, for instance, the most notorious trust in the West that there has been so much said about—the beef trust in Chicago. You can not reach that by such legislation as this. But suppose that you had a general law on your statute-books passed by the United States, that has the power to regulate interstate commerce, or suppose there was such a law in Illinois allowing the consumers to combine and have a co-operative organization, and suppose five thousand consumers in Chicago would form an association and supply themselves?

The trouble is, these combinations monopolize the market. Suppose those who are oppressed should do that? They might unite and get beef in for enough people, so that under this law they, too, would unite together. They could so co-operate that they can supply themselves with beef. It is because they do not take that means that the beef combine has control. This law would prevent them from combining against the other combine. If they did co-operate, however, they would be certain to get enough inhabitants who consume beef to meet together and say "We will buy of nobody else." That would break up your trust. If you pass this proposed law, however, and such a combination were attempted in Chicago, it would be prosecuted the next day.

These evils of combination, of course, are great, but the question is, do they not grow out of civilization itself, the foundation of which is organization, and without organization men would be savages? Should we not rather encourage organizations among the people to meet the grasping disposition of the favored few? The great trouble from the beginning of civilization has been that the few have combined against the many, being more competent, and that the few in various ways secure to themselves special privileges against the masses. I say let the masses combine.

One of the worst combines that have ever been inaugurated on earth from the beginning has been the combine on money, which has been an organization sanctioned by law to put up prices and put them down at the option of the speculator; to make it scarce or dear whenever they desired. That is the great trust that is pressing upon the country today. The labor organizations in this land are beginning to wake up to what is hurting them, and they are demanding legislation whereby the amount of money in the country shall be kept stationary in proportion and business, so that they shall not be robbed by low wages or half pay. They are getting waked up to that.

Let the people organize, I say, to get proper legislation for the whole country, but do not strike at civilization and say that you will abandon the idea of co-operation, which is absolutely necessary, without which we could not exist as a nation or remain in any civilized state.

I think that this bill is on the wrong basis and it will cut in the wrong direction if it passes, inasmuch as I find no warrant in the Constitution for Congress to pass this kind of a law and no warrant in the exigencies of our condition.

The amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] has a good feature in it. It aims at a particular thing. It strikes at these options, where men are selling something they do not have, where they are selling other people's property short. That is one of the few things in the list that might be selected, and dealing in options, selling other people's property short, might be remedied or stopped.

There is some difficulty about that, because there must be limited agreements to deliver property in the future which has not yet been produced; but the mere dealing in other people's property without any intention of furnishing the property, simply to destroy its market value, is a dangerous thing. If that could be properly guarded there might be something gained. It is dangerous also to attempt that. It has been attempted and has thus far failed. I would not advise any legislator to vote to sanction any dealing of that kind, but when you say that all combinations of the people to protect themselves against monopoly shall be criminally prosecuted in the United States courts, you go too far; you attack the wrong people.

Then, the bill provides for another thing which will be very vexatious. It makes it the duty of the district attorney and of the Attorney-General, all the law portion of the Government, to prosecute these actions, and you will have the whole country converted into a most vexatious lawsuit. It will be against people who are illy prepared to defend themselves. Those who are cunning will work by their secret organizations. The power of those who understand this will not be touched; but if it is carried out you will fill the whole country with litigation and retard business and development. You will do the very thing which you would regret the most of all.

If this question is to be dealt with, I say it is within the jurisdiction of the States. What jurisdiction has the United States to go into the States? These combinations and organizations are in the States. Bring suits in the States to abolish them or to punish them for having formed trusts and partnerships in the States! What authority have you? The attempt in the first section to acquire jurisdiction by citizenship in different States will not reach the point. What is the difference? A partnership is not a case presented at all. United States courts have jurisdiction of controversies, not partnerships. Stripped of that, it authorizes the law officers of the United States to sue persons for making business combinations in the States, making it their duty, of course, to bring suits. The law would either be a dead letter or it would be a weapon of injury to the people who want redress in some substantial way.

I think the best way to legislate is to legislate upon those subjects which Congress has the confessed jurisdiction of, and to relieve the present depression in business as rapidly as possible.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN], as modified, to the bill reported by the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, I am a little troubled by the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS], which, to be sure, seems to aim at the destruction of the business of gambling, dealing in futures and options, by imposing so heavy a tax upon the articles to be dealt in as to amount to a prohibition. Nevertheless, the amendment does legalize such transactions. It expressly legalizes gambling in options and in futures. It licenses the practice, fixes the conditions and terms under which this gambling, universally denounced to be a crime, is to be conducted, under and by authority of the laws of the United States. It is not business, like the dealing in oleomargarine, which is understood to be useful food, but there being abuses connected with it likely to become serious it was thought worth while, by a very slight tax, so that there could be a regulation of the subject, to guard the public against evils resulting from unrestrained traffic.

Mr. INGALLS. Did the Senator do me the honor to examine section 10 of my proposed amendment before making that remark?

Mr. BLAIR. Section 10 of the Senator's amendment provides—

That neither the payment of the taxes required nor the certificate issued by the collector under this act shall be held to legalize dealing in options and futures, nor to exempt any person, association, copartnership, or corporation, etc.

Certainly I had read that; but the Senator, I suppose, understands very well (at least I understand) that, although there might be a provision of that kind, nevertheless the enactment of conditions under which the business may be conducted is a license; and that the acceptance of a tax on the part of the United States from the party who exercises that business is a practical exemption of the party from all penalties and is a legalization of the practice itself. It is not sufficient to insert these nugatory words in the proposed statute and yet say to the party, "You can do this business if you pay us so much." It is not in the power of the lawgiver to authorize a thing to be done upon condition that a certain amount of money be paid, and then by words which are practically nugatory prohibit the exercise of the privilege a license to do which is given.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] said that dealing in options and futures, or at least in futures, under certain circumstances, is sometimes necessary. Very likely that may be true in some conceivable cases. I do not find fault with the Senator's statement, but the point I wish to make is this: If that be true, a measure like this, which does not except those cases wherein the practice is a right one, a measure like this, which in general terms by this tremendous imposition of taxes upon the exercise of the right renders the exercise of that legitimate and proper right impossible, certainly should not be adopted by the Senate. The amendment contains no exceptions reaching a case such as may have been referred to by the Senator from Nevada. It is an intended prohibition of just those cases, as well as of the abuse of actual gambling, which constitutes the great abuse under which the country suffers.

It is no reply to say that this is an important thing and will prohibit generally the hurtful practices which are ruining the farmers of Kansas and Nebraska, as they understand, and throughout the West generally. It is no remedy for the difficulty under which they are laboring to enact the proposed amendment presented into law. First, it legalizes the practice, and, in the second place, it proposes to put upon the statute book a law which, in the next session—it may be at this very session—may be so amended and modified by the reduction of the taxes as to become practically inoperative as a prohibition of the practice itself. It seems to me that the amendment, if it is to accomplish anything as a remedy to the farmers in the West or elsewhere, should be pretty thoroughly examined.

I think if the sharp and critical Senator from Kansas looks his amendment over he will find that he can correct it grammatically in quite a number of important particulars. I call his attention, for instance, to the fifth line of section 2, where it has the words "when at the time of making such contract or agreement." Then in the eighth and ninth lines he has a repetition of precisely the same phraseology. There are a good many other things in the amendment which I have glanced at which I think would be worthy the attention of the Senator somewhat if he wants to put it upon the statute-book, so far as grammatical construction is concerned. But that is not of so much importance. I call his attention to the possible evil operation of the amendment in the regards I have pointed out of a more substantial character.

I suggest to the Senator from Ohio, in order to meet the difficulties he seems to be laboring under, and which are inevitably to destroy his bill if one may judge from the criticisms of the Senate, that in the fifth line of the first section he strike out the words, "to prevent full and free competition" and insert instead the words "to permit a monopoly." Everybody knows what a monopoly is, and nobody will object to prohibiting a monopoly. In the seventh line I suggest to insert after the word "or" the words "a monopoly;" and again in the eleventh line, where the words "intended for and which" occur, it would be necessary, in order to have good grammar, to insert the word "transportation" after the word "for." Likewise, if he will look a little farther along, in the fourteenth and fifteenth lines I suggest that it would at least make the bill better in the direction which he evidently intends the bill to operate, to strike out the words "intended to advance" before "the cost" and to insert the words "primarily intended to enhance," so as to read: "primarily intended to enhance the cost to the consumer of any such articles;" and after the word "articles" to insert "and for the promotion of a monopoly." I give notice that I shall move these amendments. Let them be taken down, with the idea that they may be moved when the proper time comes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to call the attention of the Senator from New Hampshire to the fact that the original bill is not now before the Senate for amendment.

Mr. BLAIR. I say I give notice of the amendments and ask that they be taken down for examination. If they do not prove to be of any consequence I shall not trouble the Senate with offering them formally.

Mr. ALLISON. The original bill has been disposed of by a general amendment, so that the lines to which the Senator alludes will not apply to the amendment reported from the Committee on Finance, which is now treated as the original bill.

Mr. BLAIR. They will not apply, I see.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator from New Hampshire has a copy of the reported amendment before him, I think.

Mr. BLAIR. I have the amendment. The other phraseology which I thought might be worthy of consideration comes in the fourteenth and fifteenth lines in section 1, striking out, as I indicated, and inserting the words "primarily intended to enhance;" so as to read: "primarily intended to enhance the cost to the consumer of any such articles;" and then to insert after the word "articles" the words "and for the promotion of a monopoly." I shall have these amendments ready to go in a different arrangement, applying the same phraseology to different lines.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not understand why the Senator from Ohio has inserted in the bill the language of the first few lines, confining his penalty to citizens or corporations of different States or citizens or corporations of the United States and foreign States. I suppose it was prepared with some idea on the part of the draughtsman of the bill that contracts between citizens of foreign States and our citizens or between citizens of different States were necessarily commerce between those States, and that that was essential to bring the proposed statute within the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce between the different States or with foreign States. But that, as it seems to me, is very clearly a mistake. It is not commerce between the States for a citizen of Massachusetts to go into Ohio and buy a farm there, or buy a barrel of flour there, or even make an unlawful contract there.

This bill must stand, if at all, upon the fact that it is a bill to protect what is described alone, and that is the importation, transportation, or sale of articles imported into the United States or transported from one State to another or from a State to a Territory or the District of Columbia.

The Senator, it seems to me, would make his bill much more comprehensive if he struck out, after the word "combinations" in the fourth line, down to the word "thereof" in the seventh line, and it would stand within the Constitution as a measure for the protection of foreign or interstate commerce. I suppose we could punish a single person who did not combine with anybody else in another State who committed an act which was clearly to the injury of foreign commerce or commerce between the States, as, for instance, if he should adulterate some article which was to be exported or taken from one State to another, and perhaps we could punish him even for putting obstructions on the track of a railroad engaged in interstate commerce itself. There are a great many illustrations that could be put.

So it seems to me that the Senator has aimed his shot at a very small portion of the offenders when he has a perfect right to include them all. That is the first criticism of the bill that I have to make.

Mr. SHERMAN. In the bill as originally draughted by myself I did not insert the words "between two or more citizens or corporations."

Mr. HOAR. I do not lose the floor by yielding to the Senator. The Chair will understand that he is merely making an explanation.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have the original bill before me, and it reads precisely as the Senator proposes:

That all arrangements, contracts, agreements, trusts, or combinations between persons or corporations made with the intention to prevent full and free competition, etc.

But these very words were inserted with a view to confine the operation of the bill to contracts made between citizens or corporations of different States, so as not to invade, by possibility, the jurisdiction of the courts of the States. I prefer a great deal the original draught, but to avoid somewhat the criticism of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] I put in those words so as to describe contracts made between citizens and corporations of different States dealing in interstate commerce. As a matter of course I have no objection if the Senator should propose to strike out the words "two or more citizens or corporations, or both, of different States," but then it would only lead again to the objection. I do not want to fight both Senators, however.

Mr. HOAR. Of course, if the Senator does not want to interfere with the State jurisdiction and the State does what he would consider its duty in the premises, the State can equally punish as far as the bill is concerned any act which it has the power to make unlawful, whether it is done by two citizens of its own State or a citizen of its own and a citizen of another State, an act done within its borders, if the act be unlawful. The only jurisdiction over this subject is the jurisdiction to protect foreign and interstate commerce. That we have; that we can regulate; that the States can not regulate under the recent railroad decisions of the Supreme Court overruling a case from Illinois and that class of decisions where it was held that the jurisdiction was concurrent.

I suppose that, so far as this is a regulation of the commerce between this country and a foreign country or between two different States of this country, the jurisdiction of Congress is conclusive over it; the States can not touch it. A State can no more touch it when two of its own citizens do the act than it can when two citizens, one of its own State and another of another State, do the act, because it is a regulation of foreign or interstate commerce with which a State does not undertake to deal. If that be true, it seems to me, with great respect to the learned and able Senator, that he was right in his original judgment, and that the error of the amendment is in yielding to an untenable attack which was made on the bill as he originally drew it. I should hope that before the bill is voted upon that amendment will be made, because otherwise it will be easy to avoid its operation altogether by the offenders taking up their residence or citizenship in the same State, and this bill does not touch them.

Mr. HISCOCK. Do I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts is arguing the jurisdiction in reference to this subject on account of residence?

Mr. HOAR. That is the very thing I am attacking.

Mr. HISCOCK. That is, the Senator thinks that no jurisdiction is given on account of residence?

Mr. HOAR. Certainly; that is the proposition I am endeavoring to maintain, and I hope I have the concurrence of my honorable friend from New York.

Mr. HISCOCK. You have.

Mr. HOAR. In the next place, I want to come to the subject which was the matter of a colloquy between the honorable Senator from Ohio and myself when he was addressing the Senate in his own right, in his own time, and that is, that this bill fails to afford any considerable remedy to anybody, either to the public or to any private citizen, except so far as it may give a power to private citizens to bring their suits. It provides, in the first place, only for jurisdiction in the courts of the United States in suits of a civil nature to enforce the provisions of the bill. There is no remedy by penal suit; there is no remedy by indictment or by any other criminal process, if there be any other criminal process known.

The Senator says the suit of a civil nature gives, as against these corporations or partnerships, all the remedy which could exist for individuals when brought on the part of the United States. But what will it amount to? You can not prove in any court that the United States will suffer damages, though you can say why, in a civil suit brought by the Attorney-General or district attorney, the United States shall recover $100,000, or $200,000, or $500,000. It is an injury to the public, but there is no injury to the United States as a Government in respect of any of its property, or ownership, or function.

But the honorable Senator says they can get judgment against the corporation by ouster or quo warranto. I respectfully submit to the Senate and to the careful reflection of my honorable friend from Ohio that that is not a sound legal proposition.

A quo warranto, as I understand it, is a process by which a corporation is deprived of its corporate power by a judgment in a proceeding instituted in behalf of the authority which created it, because it has exceeded its functions or disobeyed the law in a matter which, by the law of its being, makes that disobedience a forfeiture of its franchise.

Mr. SPOONER. Or by non-user.

Mr. HOAR. Or by non-user, which is another basis of proceeding by quo warranto, as the Senator from Wisconsin suggests. But it is perfectly clear to my humble judgment as a legal proposition that an offense by a corporation created by the State of Ohio or the State of Massachusetts against a law of the United States can not, even if it were expressly declared by the law of the United States to accomplish that result (which this proposed law does not at all declare), constitutionally operate as a deprivation of a State corporation of its State charter and function.

Mr. HISCOCK. If the Senator from Massachusetts will allow me to interrupt him again, I will make this suggestion: The purpose of that provision, if it has any purpose, is, first, to make these contracts void. No one, then, has suffered any damages. If the first section has any purpose it is to reach out and commence actions to set aside contracts of that kind that have been made, to institute, so far as you can by suit, investigations into all of the business affairs of the people who may be engaged in interstate commerce possibly. Before there has been any sale of the property, if you please, the contract has been made; before any manufacturing has been done you commence then and there to start a sort of bureau of protection against this sort of thing.

Mr. HOAR. I will answer that presently. I am at present dealing with the suggestion of my honorable friend from Ohio. I submit to the lawyers of the Senate, including my honorable friend from Ohio, who is one of the ablest members of this body, as we all know, that it do so; it is a ness to a st within a S able to m

is growing greater and greater, and stronger and stronger. If you are impotent and unable to deal with the question and can not prescribe any remedy but quack medicine, then you are utterly unfit to perform your duties as the representatives of the people of the United States.

There are classes of contracts springing up here and being enforced day by day which have tended more than all else combined to bring these complaints upon us, complaints from the workingmen all over our land, from the farmers in their alliances and in their other organizations. They can not see the cause or source of this evil, but they demand a remedy and that demand will be heard. Nor will it be turned aside by any combination here or anywhere else. It must be met openly, and if you are unable to do anything with it let it be so and announce your inability.

Look at our dealing with interstate commerce. Some years ago it came up here on the bill of my honorable friend from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM], and it was hooted and jeered at; and when the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] started out on that road in the other House he was met with constitutional objections without number. The railroads were then too powerful to be dealt with. They combined together. There was one striking case which I introduced in my argument the other day where they gave a single other corporation in the combine the advantage of $5,400,000 a year in one transportation contract. But fortunately my honorable friend from Illinois here and the Senator from Texas and others elsewhere took hold of the matter and they prescribed a remedy, and now do you say that is a quack remedy, that it is an ineffective remedy? Yet their proposition was met by the same class of arguments that this bill is met with.

No, sir; the power of Congress is the only power that can deal with these corporations. The power of Congress is the only one that can regulate the internal commerce of this country. The power of Congress is the only one that can bring all the parties to combinations before a tribunal, and have that tribunal pronounce judgment, not in a criminal suit, but in a civil suit.

These corporations do not care about your criminal statutes aimed at their servants. They could give up at once one or two or three of their servants to bear this penalty for them. But when you strike at their powers, at their franchises, at their corporate existence, when you deal with them directly, then they begin to feel the power of the Government. So in regard to interstate commerce by rail. All those corporations and organizations opposed that law, but when it went into force it produced enormously good effects, and everybody appreciates it, and nobody proposes to dispense with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was organized to enforce the interstate-commerce law.

Sir, I have that confidence in the courts of the United States that I believe if you even give them a single grip, if you give them jurisdiction of this class of cases by law—because this jurisdiction can only be conferred by the law—they will administer the law. The Senator from Massachusetts says we are providing here only for cases of a civil nature. Strike it out, if you please. I would say "all cases at law or in equity arising under this statute;" or, better yet, I would use the broader terms, "all controversies between citizens of different States," the language used by the Constitution. Strike out the words "of a civil nature." Those words are properly in the bill, because the remedies pointed out in this measure are of a civil nature, and therefore they are properly defined as cases at law or in equity of a civil nature. Strike out the words and then the jurisdiction will be broader. That would be an amendment I should favor.

But the Senator says that I have crippled this measure by inserting words of limitation, so that these combinations must be between citizens and corporations of different States. Only the other day I met with a different kind of objection. It was said here that we were reaching out so as to bring citizens of the same State into court as defendants; that I was reaching out after a jurisdiction that ought to be limited to the State itself; and to avoid that objection I propose to provide that the combinations must extend beyond the State.

I think that is a wise provision. I think it is well to do it. Why? Because these combinations are always in many States and, as the Senator from Missouri says, it will be very easy for them to make a corporation within a State. So they can; but that is only one corporation of the combination. The combination is always of two or more, and in one case of forty-odd corporations, all bound together by a link which holds them under the name of trustees, who are themselves incorporated under the laws of one of the States. You can not make a combination such as is described by this bill unless it embraces the members of many corporations of many States.

Gentlemen say you must show when the commerce commenced and when it ended; you must distinguish between production and commerce. The agreements point out and mean transportation from place to place. What do these great combinations—take for instance the Standard Oil Company—do when they transport oil to Ohio, or Chicago, or Indiana, east and west? They transfer oil from Pennsylvania to every part of the country. It is necessarily a part of their business to do so; it is an incident of their business. If you could confine their business to a single State or if their contracts could only reach commerce within a State, their profits would dwindle into the air; but they are able to make these combinations embracing corporations without number, extending their operations not only through every State of the Union, as the Standard Oil Company does, but throughout the civilized world, competing as they do—and I am glad they do compete—with all foreign nations and all foreign productions. If they conducted their business lawfully, without any attempt by these combinations to raise the price of an article consumed by the people of the United States, I would say let them pursue that business.

I am not opposed to combinations in and of themselves; I do not care how much men combine for proper objects; but when they combine with a purpose to prevent competition, so that if a humble man starts a business in opposition to them, solitary and alone, in Ohio or anywhere else, they will crowd him down and they will sell their product at a loss or give it away in order to prevent competition, and when that is established by evidence that can not be questioned, then it is the duty of the courts to intervene and prevent it by injunction and by the ordinary remedial rights afforded by the courts.

Not only that, but this provision allowing any party to sue is of vital importance. Why, sir, I know of one case where a man in good circumstances, a thrifty, strong, healthy American, was engaged in this kind of competition. He was met in just the way I have mentioned. If he had had the right to sue this company in the courts of the United States under this section he would have been able to indemnify himself for the losses that he suffered. I have known of other cases of the kind. Sometimes the damages would be too slight to give the courts of the United States jurisdiction. In the case of a single individual whose bread has been advanced in price or whose small expenditures have been somewhat increased, there is no remedy for him. The remedy is only for those who are largely enough interested to sue in the courts of the United States.

This bill does only two things. It authorizes the Government officers in a proper case where these combinations are plainly made with a view that is declared by the law of every civilized country to be unlawful and void and destructive to trade—when such a combination does exist the United States may come in and as a suitor in the name of the people of the United States may sue for and prevent and, if possible, enjoin, restrain, or tie up these combinations. That is authorized to be done by the first section.

The first section only provides for that wrong a general remedy, and if any injustice be done a suit is brought in the name of the people of the United States by the Attorney-General, and the courts of the United States must decide. Will they be governed by wild and arrogant feelings, like the Communists or Nihilists? No; the United States, the power of the country, sues these corporations, calls upon them for information, proves, if possible, the extent of the evil, and then administers the remedy.

It is said that damages are not given. Well, sir, it is not so much the object of the first section to give damages as it is to provide restraint, limitation, regulation, and the exertion of the power of the Government over these corporations.

In the other section there is a civil remedy provided. When a man is injured by an unlawful combination why should he not have the power to sue in the courts of the United States? It would not answer to send him to a State court. It would not answer at all to send him to a court of limited jurisdiction. Then, besides, it is a court of the United States that alone has jurisdiction over all parts of the United States. The United States can send its writs into every part of a State and make parties in different States submit to its process. The States can not do that.

Now, sir, under these circumstances it is important to citizens that they should have some remedy in a court of general jurisdiction in the United States to sue for and recover the damages they have suffered. I think myself the rule of damages is too small. It provides double the damages and reasonable attorneys' fees. Very few actions will probably be brought, but the cases that will be brought will be by men of spirit, who will contest against these combinations.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. Is the Senator quite right in saying that without making some change in the law the United States court would have the right to send out its writs at large into the States?

Mr. SHERMAN. To what extent I do not know, but I think so. I suppose myself the writs of the United States courts would go to the several States. How far they may go is regulated by the law, and can be ascertained by an examination of the statutes.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will permit me, I think the statutory rule is that no man can be sued except in the jurisdiction where he resides, with one exception. There is a general exception, as I recollect the statute, and that is where the suit is to enforce a lien upon real estate or remove a cloud from title to real estate, in which case leave can be obtained from the court to serve process in another district and by publication.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then, clearly, here is a matter in which the honorable gentlemen of the Judiciary Committee can give us some relief. Let them frame a provision that will allow the process of the United States courts to go all over the United States. Why not, if that is necessary? I supposed that was provided for in existing law. It is in some cases.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio a question.

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator has alluded to the Standard Oil Company as one of the evils which are to be suppressed by this bill. I should like to ask him whether the Standard Oil Company is not a corporation created by the laws of the State of Ohio, and is that not all there is in it? As a combination, who else is to combine with it except its own stockholders in the corporation?

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator is greatly mistaken. I can show him by the papers—the Standard Oil Company was no doubt the original company—that it was organized in the modest sum, I think, of $200,000 capital, and it is running now an ordinary refining business, but other corporations all over this country—

Mr. GEORGE. What other corporation now besides the Standard Oil Company, located at Cleveland, Ohio, is in that Standard Oil combination?

Mr. SHERMAN. I am not prepared to say, but an examination was made into this matter by a committee of the other House, of which Mr. Bacon was chairman, and, I think, in the report which was made he gave a list of the corporations, and, if I am not mistaken, there are forty or fifty, all interlaced with each other, having different interests nominally, different incorporators, different charters. I think there are forty or fifty great combinations. I do not know the exact number, but perhaps some gentleman who has gone into the reading of that report may be able to answer.

So with the other combinations. I do not wish to single out the Standard Oil Company, which is a great and powerful corporation, composed in great part of citizens of my own State, and some of the very best men I know of. Still, they are controlling and can control the market as absolutely as they choose to do it; it is a question of their will. The point for us to consider is whether, on the whole, it is safe in this country to leave the production of property, the transportation of our whole country, to depend upon the will of a few men sitting at their council board in the city of New York, for there the whole machine is operated? I do not say anything against these men. Many of them are my personal friends and acquaintances. I only refer to them because they are the oldest of these combinations founded upon contracts which have been copied by the other combinations.

That is all I wish to say. If Senators find any difficulty in this bill, if they want to strengthen it in any way, in the name of Heaven let them offer their amendments. If they think it goes too far in any particular, let them strike out the objectionable clauses. If it does not go far enough, do not call it a quack medicine, because it is honestly gotten up, even if it is nothing but paregoric. If it is not strong enough, put some stronger element into it. That is the business of the Senate. What I have done is to aid it step by step. I was in favor of the broad declaration that certain contracts should be null and void, and invoking the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, but I have modified it to meet the fears and the timidity of others who were afraid we were going too far, and now, as I said the other day, the objection to the bill is its weakness, but it is weakness drawn into the bill because of the objections made in the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. I called the attention of the Senator from Ohio to certain propositions in his bill showing, in the first place, that it did not include a tenth part, and perhaps not a hundredth part, of the cases that would arise in the country; second, that it did not contain all the remedies which he supposed it did, and that it was defective in sundry other particulars; and if I have not misunderstood my honorable friend he has agreed with every one of these criticisms. He says in regard to the first one that he had the bill as I think it ought to have been; but changed that to please some one. Then he says in regard to the next one he thought there ought to have been a provision declaring unlawful contracts criminal and so punishable, but that he did not put it in because of somebody else. Then, he meets all the objections by conceding them, and he says in another place he thinks the bill is very admirable because the process will run all over the United States, and on asking him if he is sure of that he replies that on the whole he is not—

Mr. SHERMAN. I will take your word for it.

Mr. HOAR. And that he thinks some committee will propose a law which he does not provide himself. Then he answers, having agreed to all the objections, which, so far as I now remember, establish the fact that the bill ought to be strengthened, by an impassioned statement of the great evil which he wants to reach. We all agree with that, and we have trusted to him to give us a vigorous remedy. That is what we expect of him. Now, if a member of my family is suffering with an incipient cancer and a doctor comes in who proposes a piece of court-plaster as a remedy, and I ask him if he thinks court-plaster will cure that cancer and save that valuable life, and he says, "No, it will not," and then turns around on me with an impassioned and an eloquent statement of the horrors of the disease called cancer and how much it is going to ruin the lives of my family threatened with it, I am obliged to say—I do not know whether the phrase "quack medicine" would be a proper phrase to use—but I would rather call in another doctor, and if he were a doctor that I had thorough confidence in, like my friend from Ohio, I should ask him to substitute some other prescription for his court-plaster.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President—

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator yield to me to call up an appropriation bill and have a conference ordered upon it?

Mr. VEST. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. The urgent deficiency bill lies upon the table, and I ask that the Senate agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives and appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7496) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McPHERSON, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution for the printing of 500 copies of the Digest of Claims referred by Congress to the Court of Claims for a finding of facts under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, known as the "Bowman act," now in manuscript, prepared under resolution of the House of Representatives of March 7, 1888, the same when printed to be placed in the hands of the Clerk of the House for use of Senators and Members of the House.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to declare unlawful trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and production, the pending question being on the amendment of Mr. REAGAN.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, I deny the right of the Senator from Ohio to assume that there is no other way to reach this great evil of combines and trusts in this country except through his intellectual effort and through the bill that he has reported to this body. Illustrations as has been the career of that Senator, there is nothing in it which gives him the right to assume that he has discovered the only remedy and the only road to success in a contest against these combinations.

I object to his bill because, in my judgment, it will effect nothing; because, as a lawyer, I believe that the courts will not entertain it for one moment when it is brought before them. I object to it because it destroys all my ideas of the limitations of the Constitution. I object to it because it is against the spirit and letter of the judiciary act of 1789. I object to it because it is "sound and fury, signifying nothing." If I believed that the bill of the Senator from Ohio, coming from him or any other Senator here, would effect what he claims for it, I should vote and speak for it until my strength was exhausted in this Chamber. I am not here to claim that I have any pre-eminence as an enemy of combines and trusts, but I think, although my career has not been as long or as illustrious as that of the Senator from Ohio, but limited and slight as it has been, I have shown in my legislative labors that I am as much opposed to these combines as he can possibly be.

Sir, I object to the bill because I am certain, as a lawyer, that the Supreme Court of the United States will never declare it to be constitutional, and for the Senator to assume that he, and he alone, has found the remedy in this case, is, to say the least, transcending the limits of parliamentary modesty.

Now, Mr. President, I will ask the Secretary to read a bill that I think, although I am not the author of it (and I have been for over six months attempting to find some legislation that would meet this evil)—I freely accord to another gentleman the merit of having framed a bill that, in my judgment, comes nearer to furnishing a remedy than that presented by any other person, and I ask the Secretary to read the fifth, sixth, and seventh sections of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE]. That is a bill that has been offered in the House of Representatives, and was offered here as an amendment by the Senator, and I ask the attention of the Senate to it.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 5. That when any State shall declare, or heretofore has declared by law, trusts as defined by the true intent and meaning of this act to be unlawful and against public policy, it shall not be lawful thereafter for any person, firm, or corporation to cause to be transported into any product or article covered or embraced by such trust from such State to or into any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia.

SEC. 6. That any common carrier or agent of any common carrier who shall knowingly receive such product or commodity for transportation from such State into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five hundred nor more than ten thousand dollars or shall be imprisoned for any period of time not less than one year and not more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. And any person who shall knowingly deliver to any common carrier, or agent thereof, any such product or commodity to be transported into another State or Territory tory or the District of Columbia shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than five hundred nor more than ten thousand dollars or by imprisonment for any period of time not less than one year nor more than five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 7. That whenever the President of the United States shall be advised that a trust has been or is about to be organized for either of the purposes named in the first section of this act, and that a like product or commodity covered or proposed to be covered or handled by such trust, when produced out of the United States, is liable to an import duty when imported into the United States, he shall be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to suspend the operation of so much of the laws as impose a duty upon such product, commodity, or merchandise for such time as he may deem proper.

Mr. VEST. Now, Mr. President, there is a measure much more radical than that of the Senator from Ohio, far more effective, and not subject to any constitutional objection. Not even the most hair-splitting constitutional casuist, such as to-day has been denounced by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], can find any objection to that measure; and if my friends on the opposite side of the Chamber object to the seventh section because it deals with the question of import duties, if they do not want to give the President of the United States discretion to take off import duties when they protect a trust, let them strike it out.

If my friend from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] or my friend from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] objects to the sixth section because it interferes in any way indirectly with the interstate-commerce law, let him strike it out; but in the fifth section is the gist of all legislation upon the subject in the line indicated by the Senator from Ohio. We must rely, as I said on Friday last, in two jurisdictions: in the States and in the Federal Government; and, sir, when the States declare any article to be the product of a trust, when they declare any trust itself to be unlawful, or any combination or corporation or individuals to be unlawful, then let the Congress of the United States supplement that with the declaration, under the interstate-commerce clause of the Constitution, that the products of that trust, so put under the ban of State legislation, shall not be carried from one State or Territory to another.

That bill, more than any other bill introduced into Congress or ever invented, obviates constitutional objections and scruples and at the same time reaches, in my judgment, this great evil, if it ever can be reached by one act upon the part of Congress.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. President, I do not believe that by impassioned eloquence the defects of this bill are to be obscured. We have been told that if this bill should be passed into law the Federal courts might take jurisdiction of all the parties to one of these combinations and that the defect in the State law was that the State courts could only take jurisdiction of the subjects of the State, or whoever might be domiciled in the State; and before we get through with the discussion we are told that the process which is to be issued in a suit of that kind can not go out of the district in which the party is found. Where, then, is the difference between the jurisdiction and power of the State courts and of the Federal courts? The State courts take jurisdiction in the State.

In the State of New York we have three Federal judicial districts. Suppose the process can reach a party in the entire circuit; grant that it does extend to him; go as far as that; and are we to be asked on this bill inconsiderately to put in it a provision that process may reach the offending parties in the United States wherever they are, and disregard the settled practice in the United States since the foundation of the Government? An amendment of that kind would be too far-reaching to be adopted in this bill with the consideration that it would receive in this debate. So, then, under the bill we can go no further and we have no more power, it seems to be conceded, than the State courts have.

Now, then, let us look at the only remedy that the bill affords to an oppressed people.

Sec. 2. That any person or corporation injured or damaged by such arrangement, contract, agreement, trust, or combination defined in the first section of this act may sue for and recover, in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, without respect to the amount involved, of any person or corporation a party to a combination described in the first section of this act, twice the amount of damages sustained, and the costs of the suit, together with a reasonable attorney's fee.

A person sues the corporation or the combination or party to the combination. The combination is in twine, we will say, but the man who is injured is in Minnesota, and he is invited by this bill to travel to New York, where the combination, we will say, was created, or to St. Louis, where I think the last one was created, and commence his action in the circuit court of the United States and recover twice the damages that he has sustained. The middlemen will never commence these actions. I mean the parties who in the first instance purchase of the combination. That will be guarded against, and the people who are to suffer the damages are those who are distributed all over this broad land, the consumers of the article, the consumers of the merchandise, buying perhaps a hundred dollars' worth and damaged possibly $10, and they have the right to follow this combination or a party to it wherever he is domiciled and recover twice the amount of damages they have sustained!

Seriously, Mr. President, it is a fearful attack upon trusts! I am not going over the argument that I have made heretofore against the constitutionality of the bill. I am one of those who believe that because we have parties named in this bill that reside in the different States that gives us jurisdiction. It is only when the property is in commerce and in the course of commerce that we can take jurisdiction, and I say for myself, if I had made up my mind to vote for an unconstitutional measure and one which I believed to be unconstitutional, I should vote for the amendment of the Senator from Texas [Mr. REAGAN], because, unconstitutional as it is, in my judgment it would upon its face afford some remedy.

This bill, however, does not promise any relief, even if it is valid. But I shall not follow the example of the Senator who said that possibly he might vote for the Reagan amendment in some stage of our deliberations, although he believed it was unconstitutional, because I most heartily indorse the sentiment of the Senator from Massachusetts that it is always safe to predicate your action, here or elsewhere, upon the intelligence of your people, and not upon their ignorance.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not propose to allow the Senator from Ohio to presume that everybody who does not agree with him on this bill and what it will do is against the relief that he seeks. My real objection to this bill is that it is delusive. I do not know but that it may be of some benefit; possibly it may. As I said before, I do not know but that I may vote for it; but I want it distinctly understood, as far as I am concerned, that I am not very much moved by it.

Now, how does the bill reach the great evil against which it is aimed? The Standard Oil Trust has been spoken of. What is the Standard Oil Trust? A corporation in Ohio, a corporation in Pennsylvania, a corporation in Colorado, and so on through all the States. Each corporation is a creature by itself. Ohio can deal with the corporation in Ohio.

Mr. SHERMAN. But they have combinations in other States.

Mr. TELLER. And the Ohio Legislature can say that any corporation created by that State, which combines with any corporation in another State for this purpose, shall be dissolved. What can we do about it? If Ohio declines to do that, some other State may do that. But what can we do about it? We do not dissolve the corporation. What do we do? Anybody who is damaged can sue them. When they interfere with somebody who has sunk a well in Ohio and they run down the price of oil until they shut him up, he may have his remedy against them. But that is not what we are complaining of. We are complaining that that Standard Oil Company has a tendency to reduce and destroy competition, and thereby, by destroying competition, to put up improperly the price of oil. Who suffers by that? The sixty-five millions of people in the United States who use oil; and how do they suffer? How much damage have they sustained? It is inconsequential individually, but great to the whole mass of the people.

What remedy does this bill give the people for any such misconduct on the part of that corporation? None whatever, because it does not destroy the corporation, it does not attempt to destroy the corporation, and could not if it did. It will not dissolve it. It will remain, although a judgment may be rendered against it. On the contrary, in my judgment, it is a bill that may be seized upon to prevent just what everybody admits ought to be done in this country. It may seize, as I said before, the organizations of labor, the organizations of farmers; it may take hold of them, and while it will not dissolve them they are not the class of men that can afford to be brought into court once or twice even, while these great corporations do not care how frequently they are brought into court where the damages that the parties get are just simply twice what the individual who makes the complaint has sustained.

Mr. President, in France, up to 1884, there was no such thing as co-operation or association amongst the agriculturists of that country and very little among the laborers of that country. In the spring of 1884 there was a law passed in France that enabled the laborers to form associations something like our Knights of Labor, what are called in Great Britain the United Workmen, or associations of that character. It went further. It authorized and encouraged the agriculturists of that country to unite together and form an association for the express purpose of taking care of their interests, and I believe it is not disputed by anybody that that has been done all over France, and done for the benefit of agriculture in that country, and, of course, when it is for the benefit of agriculture it is for the benefit of the whole community.

I do not know—I am not absolutely certain—that under this bill the Knights of Labor, the Alliance, the Wheel, the National League, could be attacked, but it strikes me there is a great deal more probability of their being attacked than there is of these great, strong corporations being. They are the men who, if they keep on, will destroy these combinations in Chicago, these dealers in futures; they are the people who will take hold eventually of the interstate-commerce question in such a way as to make the railroads feel their power, because, after all, the farmers are the moving and the influential body of this country whenever they unite; they have the intelligence and the virtue and the control when they say so.

Mr. President, all other industries are nothing compared with the agricultural interests in numbers and in influence when they take hold, and if you give those who are opposed to their combination the slightest opportunity to interfere with them they will do it. I have not much faith in any national control over these associations. I do not believe it is possible, because, as I have said, we can not dissolve the corporation; we can not reach it; but the States can. Every corporation that is created is created at the will of a State, and the State can put upon it just such conditions as it sees fit. The State can say, "If you combine with anybody in this State, or out of this State, and do certain acts which we declare improper and unlawful, then your charter shall be taken away by a proper proceeding in court." We can not do that, and therefore it is not possible that we should meet the difficulty by any bill that may pass this body.

It is not to be said to me, because I do not agree with the Senator from Ohio that here is the remedy and here only, that I am not in favor of taking hold of this evil with a strong hand where it can be done. The Senator says if we can not do this then there is no remedy at all. Not so; even if we had the power, the bill, in my judgment, is not well drawn, though I might vote for it as the best thing that could be had. I was glad to hear from a Senator on this floor that the Judiciary Committee was dealing with this subject, and I think it would be well now to refer this bill to the Judiciary Committee and wait until we can hear what they propose, something that would be within the constitutional limits of Congress and at the same time would be vigorous and effective; that would take hold with a strong hand and do what I have no doubt the Senator from Ohio wants to do, but which he does not want to do any more than a majority of this Senate on both sides of this Chamber want to do.

Mr. INGALLS. I move that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, can not we have the vote now? I hope we may have a vote on this bill. We might as well have the vote now as at any other time.

Mr. INGALLS. If the Senator from Ohio desires to ascertain whether the Senate is ready to vote on the amendment of the Senator from Texas, I certainly have no objection; otherwise I shall insist on the motion.

Mr. GEORGE. There will be more debate on this matter.

Mr. VEST. I understand the Senator from Mississippi desires to address the Senate.

Mr. INGALLS. I insist on my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas moves that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After six minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 16 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, March 25, 1890, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate the 24th day of March, 1890.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

John F. Selby, of North Dakota, to be attorney of the United States for the district of North Dakota, as provided by section 21, chapter 180, laws 1889, volume 25, United States Statutes at Large.

PROMOTION IN THE ARMY.

Pay Department.

Maj. Thaddeus H. Stanton, paymaster, to be deputy paymaster-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, March 15, 1890, vice Smith, appointed Paymaster-General.

POSTMASTER.

Calvin L. Spaulding, to be postmaster at Brainerd, in the county of Crow Wing and State of Minnesota, who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate, August 2, 1889, in the place of John H. Koop, resigned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, March 24, 1890.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

WORLD'S FAIR IN 1892.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a privileged report. I report back from the Committee on Rules, with a favorable recommendation, the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Tuesday, March 25, immediately after the approval of the Journal, be set apart for the consideration in the House of the bill (H. R. 8393) to provide for celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus by holding an international exhibition of arts, industries, manufactures, and the product of the soil, mine, and sea in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois. And that, unless previously ordered by the House, the previous question shall be deemed ordered on the engrossment, third reading, and final passage of the bill at 4 o'clock p. m. of that day.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the adoption of this resolution.

Mr. BAKER. One word, if you please. It was the understanding on the part of the Committee on Territories that the Wyoming bill—

Mr. CANNON. I move the previous question upon this report. The Wyoming matter can come afterward.

Mr. BAKER. In connection with this matter I wish to state it was the understanding that the Wyoming bill should be called up to-morrow morning. It was deferred in order to give last week to the World's Fair Committee. I now desire to give notice that immediately after the conclusion of this world's fair bill I shall ask the House to consider the bill for the admission of Wyoming.

Mr. CANNON. I ask a vote on the adoption of the resolution I have reported.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. CANNON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I desire to make a privileged report from the Committee on Appropriations. I report back the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7496) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent that these amendments be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. The Committee on Appropriations recommend non-concurrence in nearly all the amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON] asks unanimous consent that the amendments of the Senate to the bill which he has indicated be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I ask that the report of the Committee on Appropriations be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7496) to provide for certain of the most urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for other purposes, together with the amendments of the Senate thereto, having considered the same, beg leave to report as follows:

They recommend concurrence in the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, 18, 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, and 35.

They recommend non-concurrence in the amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, 26, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, and 68.

They recommend concurrence in the amendment numbered 55 with an amendment as follows:

Insert after the amended paragraph the following:

"For plastering and finishing committee-rooms on the House side of the Capitol terrace, including steam heating of said rooms, $7,500."

The SPEAKER. The question is first upon concurring in those amendments of the Senate in which the Committee on Appropriations recommend concurrence.

Mr. BLOUNT. I should like to have some idea of what the amendments are.

Mr. ADAMS. So should I.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, the amendments made by the Senate to this bill aggregate $658,563.77. The Committee on Appropriations has unanimously agreed to recommend concurrence in amendments amounting to $37,201.62 and non-concurrence in the remainder. I will state the items in which we recommend concurrence: We ask the House to concur in the amendment for refuge station at Point Barrow, $3,000; for repairs to Treasury building, $9,450. I will state that the reason why the latter item was not put on the bill by the House was because we thought it might wait for the general deficiency bill; there is really no issue as to the necessity for the appropriation. We also recommend concurrence in the amendment appropriating $7,946.62 for completing public building at Leavenworth; for rent of extra room for Bureau of Statistics, $180; salary of Assistant Secretary of War (the office having been created by this Congress) for balance of the fiscal year, $1,125; for salaries of judicial officers in the new States, $500; for House contingent fund, $10,000. The amount originally appropriated for this fund was $10,000.

Subsequent to the passage of the bill in this House we found that at least $10,000 more would be made necessary by reason of certain orders adopted by the House to be paid out of this fund, and the Committee on Appropriations asked the Senate to so amend the bill, making it $20,000, and hence this $10,000 is put on at the request of the Committee on Appropriations of the House. In addition to this the amendment of $7,500 to complete certain rooms in the new part of the building is recommended to be adopted by the Senate. The Senate amendment was really a House amendment and will save an expenditure we are now paying for rent for committee-rooms outside of this building amounting to about $3,900 annually, besides giving to us additional committee-rooms without delay.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let me ask the gentleman where these rooms are located.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. In the new part of the building now being prepared.

Mr. ROGERS. Before the gentleman from Iowa leaves this part of the discussion, I desire to ask a question for information, as to what judicial officers he refers to for whom provision is sought to be made in the Territories and in regard to whom this amendment of the Senate has been incorporated in the bill. In other words, to be more specific, I would like to ask the gentleman if the Federal judges have been appointed for the new States?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. This appropriation is for the salaries of the judges in the new States provided for by law.

Mr. ROGERS. Have they been appointed?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. They have been.

Mr. ROGERS. District judges?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes, sir; and this is to provide for the salaries they are to receive by the law.

Mr. ROGERS. That was the information I desired to obtain.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I will state, Mr. Speaker, for the information of the House, because I think it ought to be known at this time, in view of the fact that there has been some criticism on this subject outside, that in this bill which carries an aggregate of $24,720,777.49, with all the Senate amendments added, the following amounts are given for the benefit of the soldiers of the late war, namely: For artificial limbs, $60,000; for the payment of pensions, $21,598,834; for soldiers' homes, $81,609.69; for clerks and new roll-books of pension agents, $14,175; for back pay and bounty, commutation of rations, and horses, etc., lost in military service, $1,123,629.75, making a total of this bill for the soldiers of the late war of $22,878,248.44.

Now, if there are no other questions that gentlemen desire to ask in regard to this matter, I shall move that the report of the committee be adopted and the conference appointed as suggested.

Mr. ADAMS. Before that is done, I should like to be heard for a few minutes.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. How long will the gentleman require?

Mr. ADAMS. Not exceeding five minutes.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois for five minutes.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, during the last Congress there frequently came to us reports from the Committee on Appropriations in regard to Senate amendments to the appropriation bills, which reports gave no information whatever to the House as to the nature of the Senate amendments. All we could possibly gather was a rapidly read list of amendments, in which the Appropriations Committee agreed to recommend concurrence or non-concurrence. I do not think that is a proper course for the Appropriations Committee to pursue in regard to this matter. I have great regard for the chairman and members of that committee, but it seems to me that Senate amendments to appropriation bills are just as much within the jurisdiction of the House as is the appropriation bill itself when it is before the House for consideration.

Mr. SAYERS. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Illinois, if he was not satisfied with the method of dealing with Senate amendments to appropriation bills, why he did not ask for information.

Mr. ADAMS. I am asking for information now. The gentleman from Iowa has announced that he was about to move the adoption of the report. The committee have given no information except as to the particular amendments in which they recommend concurrence. The explanation of the gentleman from Iowa was entirely satisfactory to my mind in regard to the amendments to which he has referred; but, as a member of this House, I would like to understand, and think it my duty to understand, when I come to vote to non-concur in a Senate amendment, what I am doing.

Mr. SAYERS. But the gentleman referred to the action of the Appropriations Committee in the last Congress.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say that I complained of that in the last Congress, and the result was, I may say also, that the next report which came in was admirable in shape and satisfactory in its explanations. It was a little longer than ordinary; it took a little longer for the Clerk to read it and it took the House a little longer to listen to it; but when the Clerk had read it and the House had listened to it, any member who had performed his duty in listening to it might form an intelligent opinion with the bill before him as to whether he should vote to concur or non-concur in the amendments; and I respectfully submit to the Appropriations Committee that that course ought to be pursued in the future. It takes only a little time and enables us to perform our duties properly.

With the greatest respect for the Appropriations Committee, I do not believe when a bill passes the House and is amended by the Senate that the consideration of such added legislation should be delegated by the House to the Committee on Appropriations or to any committee of conference from that body. The gentleman will, of course, understand that, if the House is called to vote on a conference report without some such guide before us, it is utterly impossible to get the deliberate judgment of the House on such report. The report of the committee on the amendments of the Senate ought to be brought in and read, not only by the number of the amendments, but by their character also. That was done in the last House; it is an orderly practice, and I respectfully submit that it should be always pursued in dealing with these great questions.

As to the present bill, in regard to the Senate amendments in which the gentleman from Iowa recommends concurrence, his explanation is entirely satisfactory to me; but as to those in which he moves non-concurrence, I know nothing, and have simply to vote on the statements of the conference committee, without knowing anything whatever about the amendments.

Mr. SAYERS. I would suggest that the gentleman might have required this bill to go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and then he could have had every amendment read and debated.

Mr. BLOUNT. Why not have the amendments read, if the gentleman so desires. That is his right.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I desire to say, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ADAMS], than whom no member of this House is more faithful in the discharge of his public duties and from whom we can always gather good counsel in the performance of our duties faithfully, that no such report as the gentleman refers to was made in the last Congress in advance of the committee of conference making their report—not one.

Mr. ADAMS. I think it was a District of Columbia bill, prepared by Mr. Hemphill; for I remember thanking him for making that report.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. There was none from the Committee on Appropriations. When the report of the committee of conference comes in these matters are given in detail.

Now, in order that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ADAMS] and the House may understand that the committee is not seeking to pass anything through without the fullest knowledge on the part of the House, I would like to call attention to the fact that on the 9th instant, when the Senate reported back the urgency deficiency bill with their amendments, I asked that the bill be printed with the amendments numbered. On the 19th that bill was ordered printed and the amendments numbered, and it has been within the reach of every member of this House who desired to inform himself touching the character of these amendments. My only object in taking the course I have done, and it is the usual course, was not to unnecessarily encroach upon the time of the Committee on the District of Columbia, in considering the business reported by that committee. Any other information desired I will cheerfully give; and if this House desires to have these amendments separately read, in advance of action, I am perfectly willing that they shall be read.

Mr. ADAMS. I would be content with a statement of the gentleman from Iowa as to the amendments in regard to which he desired non-concurrence. How many of them have involved in them a principle in regard to which this House would desire to have information before action?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I will take pleasure in giving all the leading ones.

Mr. ADAMS. The leading ones will be sufficient.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I will say, first, that the action of the Committee on Appropriations was, in respect to all amendments touching which we have no executive documents giving full information, to non-concur in order that we might ascertain the reasons which operated in the minds of the Senate in adopting their amendments. It is no indication that our final recommendation will be unfavorable; but the fact is that we felt it to be our duty to know the facts and data upon which the Senate acted before we recommended favorable action in the House.

Now, I will state briefly the leading items in the amendments of the Senate.

First, the paragraphs 1 and 2 are for the International Marine Conference, $35,000; paragraphs 3 and 4 for the Coast Survey, $9,000; for the Fish Commission an increase of $10,000; Manchester, N. H., public building, $5,000; publishing a list of overdue taxes in the District of Columbia, $5,000; publishing the Records of the War of the Rebellion, $50,000.

Mr. ADAMS. Why not agree to that?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Well, we did not have sufficient evidence in regard to it to know whether it should be put upon an urgency deficiency bill.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I did not hear the gentleman's statement sufficiently in regard to that appropriation asked for the publication of the War of the Rebellion matter, in which I feel some interest, and I would like to know whether a vote to approve the report now will be action of this House in opposition to that?

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. That does not follow at all.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course it does. It moves that the House non-concur.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Yes; we move to non-concur for the purpose of getting the desired information for the House. We feel it to be our duty to do so, that when we make a recommendation to concur in any of these amendments we can answer any gentleman on this floor by giving the reasons why it is so recommended; and our present motion is no indication that we may not finally favor these amendments.

And I give you the other items: For stores, etc., for new cruisers San Francisco and Philadelphia and the new gunboats Concord and Bennington, $50,000; for the public-land service, $44,462.15; for the protection and improvement of Hot Springs, Ark., $3,200; for the Department of Agriculture, several different items aggregating $72,000; for Senate expenses, $124,200. It is usual to recognize the wishes of each House in respect to its own expenditures; but as this seems so great a sum, almost equal to the amount of the original appropriation, we felt it to be our duty to ask the Senate for the reasons for this increase, for the information of this body. For public printing, $211,000. While we are clear that this sum will probably be needed, we wanted the data submitted by the Public Printer upon which the Senate has inserted that amendment.

Those are about all the amendments. If there is any other question which gentlemen desire to ask, I will be glad to answer; if not, I will renew my motion on the adoption of the report and the appointment of the conferees.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the gentleman a question as to what the appropriation in relation to the Hot Springs of Arkansas is for.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. It is an item, being amendment 25, found on page 15 of the bill as printed, to improve the Hot Springs of Arkansas, providing for the building and improvement of a free-bath house and bathing pool, $3,200. This is a new item in respect to which this House has not one particle of information, and we move to non-concur simply because we had no information in regard to it.

Mr. ROGERS. I want to make a single observation to my friend from Iowa, for I am without information upon this subject myself, and that is that some two or three years ago, probably two years ago, an appropriation was made for the construction of a free-bath house at Hot Springs, and so far as I am advised no progress has been made in the construction of that building. I should be very glad myself if the gentleman from Iowa could ascertain in some way from the Secretary of the Interior, not only the necessity for the appropriation which is now called for in that direction, but the reason for the unusual delay in the construction of that most important building to which I have referred.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Arkansas for the suggestion, and I will endeavor to get the fullest information for the House in respect to it.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon agreeing to the amendments of the Senate recommended to be concurred in by the committee.

The amendments were concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the amendments in which the committee ask non-concurrence.

The numbers of the amendments were again reported.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move that the House concur in amendments 60, 61, 62, and 63.

The SPEAKER. Those can be considered separately.

The amendments recommended by the committee to be non-concurred in, excepting the amendments 60, 61, 62, and 63, were non-concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on concurring in the amendments 60, 61, 62, and 63.

Mr. HOLMAN. I ask that the amendment be reported to the House. The amendment was read, as follows:

Page 14, line 8, after the word "ninety," insert "the sum of two hundred thousand dollars or;" so that the section will read:

"SEC. 2. That for payment of amounts for arrears of pay of two and three year volunteers certified to be due by the accounting officers of the Treasury, as set forth in House Executive Document numbered 144, Fifty-first Congress, first session, $284,000.25, and for the payment of such amounts additional thereto as may be certified to be due by said accounting officers on this account during the fiscal year 1890, the sum of $200,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated."

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a word in regard to that amendment. It will be remembered that there are in this bill four or five of these provisions of indefinite appropriations, involving $400,000 or $500,000; that the House bill made an indefinite appropriation for all the items of this character, and the Senate has fixed the sum at the amount of the estimate of the Treasury Department. That is to say, as to the pending item, instead of it being an indefinite appropriation, the amount is fixed by the Senate at $200,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary. The objections to indefinite appropriations have always been well understood, and were well pointed out when the subject was discussed when the bill was in the House, and I trust that this amendment will be adopted. If $200,000 is not sufficient let it be enlarged. All I insist on is that Congress shall make the appropriation and not turn over this power of appropriation of public money, which the Constitution has invested in Congress, to one of the Executive Departments.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, this matter was fully discussed by the Committee of the Whole when this bill was passed. As the House passed the bill it did provide for the payment of these claims for bounty and back pay that might be allowed during the remainder of this fiscal year a sum sufficient. The Senate strikes out "a sum sufficient" and puts in a definite sum, namely, $200,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary. Now there is just this much difference between the two propositions: Up to the sum of $200,000 payments would be made between this and the 1st day of July, and if no more than $200,000 of these claims are allowed they would all be paid; but if $1, or $50,000, or any sum more should be allowed, they would not be paid.

Now, I believe that the House was right and that the Senate is wrong. These claims have been waited for already twenty-five years, and it is as little as we can do to provide sufficient money to pay them as they are audited; and, of all men in this House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is the last one that I would suppose would move concurrence upon this point, for the reason that it was his boast the other day, when talking about pensions, that the Indiana Democratic delegation were always ready to do everything they could for the soldier. Yet now, in the face of that declaration, when a proposition comes which may keep the soldier from getting his bounty and back pay, which has been due him for twenty-five years, the gentleman from Indiana gets up and moves to concur in that proposition. I wanted to say just that, and that is all I wanted to say.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask the gentleman from Illinois if the Senate amendment to which he objects does not provide all that is estimated for by the Department.

Mr. CANNON. The House committee—

Mr. BLOUNT. I am not asking about the House committee.

Mr. CANNON. I answer the gentleman, yes. As I understand it, yes. But if this appropriation is to be definite the House committee wants to inquire whether that estimate is high enough. That is one thing we want to go to conference for. Another thing we want to go to conference for is to provide a sum sufficient for all these claims that shall be allowed.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will ask the gentleman another question. If he can not get from the Department a proper estimate, how is he going to get better information in the conference committee?

Mr. CANNON. We propose to inquire in the conference committee, and if I have my way about it when this report is made the House will appropriate a sum sufficient to pay every back-pay and bounty claim that will pass between this and the 1st of July.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to ask the gentleman if his real object is not to avoid specifying any given amount and to put the appropriation in general terms.

Mr. CANNON. Not at all.

Mr. SAYERS. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CANNON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SAYERS. Was it not the understanding that this should be a formal non-concurrence, in order to go into conference and ascertain what definite amount would be required for this purpose?

Mr. CANNON. Yes, that was one understanding. But while the members of the committee are unanimous in recommending non-concurrence the self-constituted soldiers' friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], who sometimes, I think, "thunders in the index," gets up here and moves non-concurrence, not being content with the action of his political brethren upon the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, the last gentleman in the House that I would expect to go back upon his long-established position of insisting on definite appropriations is the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], especially in view of the fact that I do not think he is quite as candid in this instance as usual. I think the gentleman from Illinois is entitled generally to the credit of being open and frank in his dealings with the House, but I really must question my friend's earnestness in this matter, and I think that his criticism of my course is hardly consistent with his own record.

What is the fact? Here is an estimate of $200,000 made by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Committee on Appropriations has generally assumed that the amount of the estimate for any given purpose is proper and sufficient. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] has always resisted every attempt on the part of Congress to create indefinite appropriations by which the Departments of the Government would be left unrestricted in their expenditure of the public money and money expended without the direct sanction of Congress; and he has been just as earnest in the matter when the question affected soldiers of the Union Army as with reference to any other branch of the service. For the first time in the gentleman's history in this House he is now seeking to make a series of indefinite appropriations, where the amount would not appear, instead of a definite appropriation of a specific sum of money in conformity with the views of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Now, the gentleman may name any sum he pleases—$200,000, $300,000, $400,000—and I will support the measure. I wish the appropriation to be ample, but I insist that his own policy and the policy of the Committee on Appropriations in the past shall be adhered to; in other words, that there shall be a definite appropriation of a given sum of money for the service intended.

Now, this particular appropriation is to cover the period from the passage of this bill up to the 1st day of July next. It covers no other period. The appropriation proposed by the Senate is in conformity with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. As I have said, if the gentleman wants to appropriate a larger sum, let him offer any amendment as to the amount he may think proper and I will cordially support him. I want a sufficient sum appropriated, but I want the amount to be named; that is all.

Mr. H. that who made to lost hors priations amount Hereto loved Treasury made. member. claims for special a as may be the approp

We ha ate until to be sur amply su is applic under th announce appropri the allow gentle the allow ury warn the allow these cir numskul is allowe A, B, and appropri that the

The co question the comm would be could no off), unti specific s ties of th House sh Mr. R. bate any ased for object is tion of underlyi amount t

In loo vided th No mon priations and exper

Just w as can be so that C Department for I am jurisdicti invite the provision

No mon ations ma

Now, propriati be audite money in think the word "a the gener the word signing to

Now, t money s ated. I a stronge Iowa [Mr him quot Mr. H. claims to

And for to be due l so much th Mr. R.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered that when this bill was under consideration in the House a motion was made to strike out the indefinite appropriation for back pay, bounty, lost horses, etc. In the bill as it came from the Committee on Appropriations we recommended a provision in substance that "whatever amount is necessary is hereby appropriated for this class of cases." Heretofore claimants have had to wait until their claims have been allowed by the Department and reported through the Secretary of the Treasury to the House, upon which report an appropriation would be made. That practice prevailed for a long time, as gentlemen may remember. The Senate has amended this provision in two ways. As to claims for back pay, bounty, rations, etc., the Senate has inserted a special appropriation of the amount estimated for, or so much thereof as may be necessary, aggregating $412,000, and has struck out entirely the appropriation for claims for lost horses.

We have thought it to be best to non-concur in this action of the Senate until we can confer with that body, for two reasons: First, we want to be sure that if this appropriation is to be made specific it shall be amply sufficient to meet these allowances and, secondly, if such a rule is applied, we want to avoid this difficulty: a large number of soldiers under this specific appropriation will get their pay the moment the announcement is made that their claims are allowed; but suppose the appropriation should be $200,000 or $300,000 short of the amount of the allowances (as according to my theory it will prove to be), then gentlemen will find in their districts that A, B, and C will be notified of the allowance of their claims and will at the same time receive Treasury warrants for their payment, while D, E, and F will get notice of the allowance of their claims, but with no Treasury warrant. Under these circumstances the "boys" will say: "What in thunder are those numskulls in Congress about? Why can't we all get our pay when it is allowed?" Why should not D, E, and F be treated the same way as A, B, and C? If we are to proceed on this principle of making a definite appropriation, we want to proceed in the right way; we want to know that the sum specifically appropriated is amply sufficient.

